FORMER QUINCY PASTOR HONORED BY THE POPE

Rev. A. F. Roche of Watertown One of Five Raised to Rank of Monsignore

New Domestic Prelate Labored in Quincy for Many Years

RT. REV. MGR. AMBROSE F. ROCHE.

The news that a former pastor of St. Mary's Church, West Quincy, was one of the five priests to be raised by Pope Pius IX to the dignity of Monsignore, was received with universal favor in local circles Wednesday, and all who had ever known him were loud in their praises of the merited honor conferred upon Rt. Rev. Ambrose F. Roche, who now enjoys the distinction of being a Domestic Prelate to the Pope. The announcement to this effect was made Wednesday in accordance with a time honored custom of the Vatican which always distributes distinctions among the clergy, when bestowing an especial honor on the head of the diocese.

The announcement of the five clergymen to receive this distinction was made by Cardinal O'Connell himself when he landed in Boston. The Cardinal paid a high tribute to each of the distinguished priests concluding by saying "I know that these appointments by the Holy Father will be received with acclaim!"

Other priests to receive the same honor as Monsignore Roche, include Monsignore Michael J. Splaine, D. D., rector of the Cathedral; Monsignore William O'Brien, rector of St. Patrick's Church, Lowell; Monsignore Peter Ronan, rector of St. Peter's Church, Dorchester, and Monsigore Patrick J. Supple, D. D., rector of St. Patrick's Church, Roxbury.

All of the aforementioned have performed signal service in various work connected with the archdiocese of Boston, the work of Monsignore Roche being especially conspicuous as a member of the diocesian council, Catholic Federation of Societies, in literary work of a general nature.

Rt. Rev. Mgr. Ambrose F. Roche is almost too well known in Quincy to need introduction. He was born in Boston, Oct. 8, 1854, and was educated in the public schools of Chelsea. He studied architecture, and was awarded the gold medal in his class, which was graduated from St. Bonaventure's College Allegany N. Y., June, 1876. He studied philosophy, theology, scriptures and other ecclesiastical branches at St. Joseph's Seminary, Troy, N. Y., where he was ordained priest in 1880. He was at once appointed assistant pastor of St. John's church, Quincy.

His first work on coming to Quincy was to organize a total abstinence society at Atlantic and the St. Mary's Catholic Total Abstinence society of West Quincy and immediately there followed a vigorous campaign against the conduct of the liquor dealers in Quincy which resulted in a complete rout of license and placed Quincy in the list of no-license cities, where she has since been, for it is generally admitted that at that time but for the strong vote against license by the Catholics, of the then town, the power of the liquor interests would not have been overthrown.

It was also Fr. Roche who in 1884 organized what was known as the St. John's Catholic Literary society,

NEW CONTRACT FOR FORE RIVER

Another large contract has been secured by the Fore River Shipbuilding Co. which with the contract for the dreadnought Nevada means a large amount of work, and employment to several thousand men for some years. This time it is to build a large molasses boat for the Cuban Distilling Co. of an improved type of the Currier, which was launched Sept. 29, 1910. The contract for the new boat was signed Wednesday and work upon her will be commenced immediately.

The dimensions of the new vessel are practically the same as the Currier. She will be a single screw steamship, constructed of steel, designed to be operated in either the molasses, bulk petroleum or general freight trades, a combination rarely met with in cargo vessels. Her capacity will be 1,600,000 gallons of molasses and she will cost approximately half a million dollars.

As stated above she is of an improved type of the Currier whose principal dimensions were 370 feet long by 52 feet beam.

TO TAKE OFFICE ON SATURDAY

It was announced this morning that the new city officials would take possession of their offices Saturday afternoon. City hall closes at noon on Saturday. At 2 o'clock however it is planned for the new officials to visit the Hall at which time the several office holders will turn over their books and papers to the new officials and then bid adieu to City hall. This plan will put the new officials in possession to commence work Monday morning without confusion, so that to the ordinary visitor to City hall it would not be apparent that any change had been made.

SILVER WEDDING.

Rev. Thomas Simms and Mrs. Simms will give a reception at the parsonage in Gorham, Maine, Friday evening, to observe the twenty-fifth anniversary of their marriage. Mr. Simms, who is pastor of the First Parish church in that place, was recently pastor of the Congregational church in Braintree, and both he and Mrs. Simms have a large acquaintance in Greater Boston.

WEST QUINCY SLEIGH PARTY

A large number of friends were treated to a sleighing party of a most enjoyable nature, given Wednesday evening by the Misses Emiline and Marguerite O'Brien of Furnace Brook Parkway, West Quincy. The party assembled at the home of the above mentioned early in the evening and proceeded along a most pleasant route, which included a journey through Weymouth, Rockland, Abington, and Brockton. Here the party emerged from the large sleigh in which the trip had been made and partook of an elaborate midnight supper, which was greatly enjoyed by those who were numbered among the gathering.

The trip was then resumed and the merry shouts and outburst of enthusiasm of those in the gathering were heard as the party advanced through Stoughton, Blue Hills, Mattapan, Milton and West Quincy, where the event, which proved to be most successful in every way, terminated. It was an early hour when arrival home was made, yet all were highly contented with the affair and pronounced it to have been about the best ever. Ice cream, coffee and cake were partaken of at the conclusion of the party at the home of the Misses O'Brien, and the appetities and enthusiasm of all who had made the trip were appeased to a superlative degree. Horns were used at random throughout the journey and merry-making of a varied nature prevailed as the party advanced from one town to another.

Those in the party included the Misses Vera, Mary and Bessie Burke of Bigelow Park, Helen Wilson, Annie Gilcoine and Lillian Barr, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel F. Donovan, John G. Coughlin, Richard Dalton, Dennis Coughlin, William Holt, John J. Doherty, John Fitzpatrick, Richard Barry, W. J. Casey, Henry Burke, Arthur Akerstrom of this city, and the Misses Annie Hanrahan of Cambridge, Mary Coleman of Concord Junction, Mary Donovan of Dedham, Jennie Shea of Haverhill, Mr. and Mrs. John F. Lynch, of Dedham, A. J. Splaine, of Cambridge, John V. Burnell of Dedham, and Herbert A. Durrell of Concord Junction.

MRS. CHARLOTTE F. PRATT.

The funeral of Mrs. Charlotte F. Pratt, widow of James Pratt and mother of Lester M. Pratt, formerly of Quincy, who died at Manchester, N. H., Jan. 30, in her 84th year, was held from Hall's undertaking rooms this noon. The services were conducted by Rev. Fannie E. Austin of the Universalist church. The burial was at Mt. Wollaston cemetery.

DRAMA GIVEN BY PHILATHEAS

"Rebecca's Triumph" Presented at Bethany Church

FINELY ACTED

There was a large attendance at Bethany chapel, Wednesday evening at the entertainment presented under the auspices of the Philatheas, a class of young ladies connected with the Sunday school of the church .

The entertainment consisted of the three act drama, "Rebecca's Triumph," which was full of amusing incidents and humorous situations, as well as sad and pathetic features

The part of Rebecca, a little child found in the arms of her dead father, is taken by Ruth Murray, who personated the character in an admirable manner.

Act first represented Mrs. Delaine's kitchen, where the cooking club met to make cake under the direction of Rebecca. While thus employed, Meg, who afterward proved to be Rebecca's mother makes her appearance, and meets with kindness and sympathy. Mabel Lovejoy takes the part of Meg with great ability.

Mrs. Rokeman a wealthy lady, is in langer of her life by a runaway horse. Rebecca saves her and is exceedingly modest about it. Mrs. Rokeman wishes to adopt her but Rebecca is true to her adopted mother Mrs. Delaine. Mrs. Rokeman's part is portrayed by Bertha Pierson and Mrs. Delaine's by Annie Pierson in a very able manner.

Margaret Gardner as Dora Gains; Agnes Souter as Sadie Morrell; Ida Mattson as Jennie Woodman; Elsie Fenly as Nellie Dunbar; Annie Birnie as Emma Stevens; Florence Pratt as Grace Greenwood; Elsie Lawrence as Maria Gray: Miss Brundridge as Alice Leeds and Gladys Ganzel as Gussie Green added color and zest to the play by their vivacious acting.

Act second, the picnic, was full of fun and merriment. Marion Mitchell as Katie Connor wished her love letter read, which Miss Gaines read to her gratification. Afterwards Augusta Crane, as Gyp, the colored girl, gives it an entirely different version very much to the disgust of Katy. Miss Crane and Miss Lovejoy were both very clever and the audience appreciated the situation.

Act third, is in the parlor of Mrs. Rokeman's house where everything terminates happily. Christine Booth as Clarissa Ordman, a spinster, announces she is at last going to marry a widower with nine children.

The young ladies are to be congratulated on the entertainment, all taking their parts finely, also thanks are due Mrs. A. Isabelle Davis for her very able assistance.

—The government got a lot of "get-rich-quick" people in the year that ended June 30 last, according to the government reports, but the swindlers got a lot of victims at that. It is estimated that even the swindlers captured got away with $77,000,000 before the hand of justice fell upon their shoulders and they were put out of business. How much more money was lost to the Wallingfords and others who were never caught at all no man has dared to try to estimate. It is painfully evident that this "sharp" nation of ours that prides itself upon its business acumen and its ability to take care of itself harbors among its well-to-do people large numbers of the easiest marks ever known to a green yet grasping world.—Brockton Enterprise.

REMEMBERS SNUG HARBOR IN WILL

The will of William Bailey late of Quincy, which was admitted to probate at the Dedham session Wednesday leaves his interest in three Metropolitan insurance companies to the Sailors Snug Harbor at Germantown. The will was dated Dec. 22, 1905. The value of the interests is not stated. Mr. Bailey was a mariner and was an inmate of the Sailors Snug Harbor for several years. He was taken ill and removed to a Boston hospital where he died Dec. 16, 1911. The records at City Hall state that his parentage and birthplace are unknown.

KITTREDGE—CRANE.

The wedding of Miss Eleanor Crane, daughter of the late Clift Crane, and Winfred Kittredge, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Kittredge of North Weymouth was soleminzed at the residence of the bride's mother, Mrs. Carrie J. Crane, South street, Quincy Point, Wednesday evening, Rev. Charles L. Marshall, pastor of the Washington Congregational church officiating. The bride is well known to the young people of the Point and popular, always taking an active interest in church work, and assisting in the choir, having a very fine voice. She is a member of the Quincy Choral society.

The wedding was a very quiet one only the immediate families being present. The bride was becomingly attired in blue voile trimmed with fur.

The young people were the recipients of many pretty and useful gifts. Ice cream and cake were served.

Mr. and Mrs. Kittredge left on a wedding trip. On their return they will reside with the bride's mother, where they will be pleased to welcome friends.

PLENTY OF GOOD THINGS TO EAT

Many at Get-Together Supper at Hall Place Church

ENTERTAINMENT

A most enjoyable and profitable evening was spent at the Hall Place M. E. church, Wednesday evening, at the "Get-together" supper given by the Ladies' Aid society of hte church, and in spite of the inclement weather a good number were present. Dr. Tupper, Industrial Secretary of the Y. M. C. A., of the state invoked divine blessing.

An excellent supper of ham, meat loaf, baked beans and salad, rolls, all all kinds of pie and coffee was served, and beside plenty of good things to eat there was an abundance of wit and humor.

After supper, Rev. T. C. Martin, introduced Dr. Tupper, asking him to speak on the situation at Lawrence.

Dr. Tupper said doubtless a good many of his hearers had come to believe as he did regarding the strike at Lawrence, that the situation is being greatly exaggerated. He said he was acquainted with many of the leading men on both sides and while he had not spent a great deal of time at Lawrence, nevertheless he had studied the situation and was in a position to know.

He spent an afternoon in Lawrence last week. Everything on the train was very quiet and also around the station. When walking toward the Common he had the first intimation of anything unusual and soon realized that the strike was on. There was an unusual commotion on the streets and many people were walking toward the Common. When he reached the Common there were between five and six thousand people gathered about the grand stand. There seemed to be great excitement when the leaders began to speak. These leaders spoke in different languages, Polish, Syrian, Italian and English. He was deeply interested in what Mr. Ettor had to say. He told the people to remain true to the strike, that it was practically won, but there was great need of remaining firm. This was followed by the singing of songs.

The people took American flags and formed in procession. All were good natured, no unkind things were said

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Mr. Taft attended three banquets in one evening, all of which helped conserve the White house butter supply.

The governor general of Canada has been visiting in New York. Rather too bad to skip out just when he is needed at home to shovel snow off the side-walk.

Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont is going to start a woman's daily paper. The style news from Paris should be featured with the big headlines, in place of Washington news and base ball.

Any presidential candidate who wishes to command public confidence must visit Wall street quite frequently and throw a three cornered railroad rock through several of the front windows.

Mr. Roosevelt has taken to driving his own automobile, in spite of all the pleasure he could get by hitching Dobbin into the Concord wagon and driving into the Outlook office twice a week.

INAUGURATION DAY.

The movement is again taking shape at Washington for an inauguration day to come at a time that shall be reasonably safe from blizzard weather.

Elsewhere it is of very little importance whether the inauguration takes place in a snow storm or a summer thunder shower. If a lot of our statesmen, by standing around bare headed in cold weather, contract pneumonia, the conditions are bad. But all the public necessities of the case could be met by having the exercises take place inside a building.

In most of the states the inaugurations take place about Jan. 1, which permits the new officers to get about their work promptly.

The present arrangement by which Congress does not meet, unless called for a special session, until thirteen months after it is elected, did very well for a time when travelling was by stage coach and when the business could be handled in a six weeks' session. Whatever is done about inauguration day, the time is probably not far distant when it will become the regular custom to assemble Congress early in the spring. If that were done, there would be less objection to complying with Washington's desire for a grand outdoor picnic to begin the new term

THE GROUND HOG.

Perhaps one reason for the attention given to the traditional movements of the ground-hog on Feb. 2 lies in the intimate relation that has always existed between him and the farmer's boy. As the large majority of our people are still country bred, the greater part of the American people have recollections of the part he played in early life on the farm.

There is a defiant self assertion in the ground-hog that stirs the lust of pursuit in the heart of every live country boy. Other animals of his size seek more retired homes in the shelter of the forest. The woodchuck burrows within reach of your garden. At unguarded moments and amid the shimmer of moonlight he sallies forth, and adds to his already superfluous fat by gorging himself on your beans and corn.

If cornered he will fight anything and anybody. But daring as he is, it is rare that Towser catches him unprepared. Usually his twinkling brown heels reach the hole several feet ahead of his pursuers. Then Brer Ground-hog turns about, protrudes his head for a second with a laughing chuckle, then retreats to the recesses of his home, to enjoy the sleep of the just while boys and dogs make futile endeavors to drive or smoke him out.

The trap is about the only way to catch Brer Ground-hog. But even if caught, with a indomitable resolution he gnaws off his leg, and lives many a day from the fat of your garden.

With so resourceful and indomitable a foe in his back yard, it is not strange that irreconcilable antagonism exists between him and the farmer's boy. Digging out a woodchuck hole is the normal celebration of a country holiday, like attending the motion picture shows in the city.

Well do we recall the emotional excitement of an old village character of our youth on one such occasion. After hours of excavation he would keep putting down his ears to the hole, say "I can almost hear him dig, I can almost hear him dig."

A creature so wise, so resourceful and so bold must surely know the inner secrets of nature. We adivse the Weather Bureau to drop their charts and reports on Feb. 2, and watch the ground-hog!

THE RISING GENERATION.

The writer of "a letter to the rising generation" charges the present day with a socialistic philosophy that believes that men must necessarily be made better by porcelain bathtubs and high schools. This brand of Socialism she says, "is made up of a warm heart, a weak head, and an unwillingness to assume responsibility for yourself or anybody else—in short, a desire to shirk."

Here is something for the young people to think about, and their parents and teachers to think about—and considering that teachers and observers of youth are saying practically every day something of the same sort, if not in quite so picturesque language, the need to think about it is evident.

Whether the rising generation cannot spell, whether it is louder voiced and more bouncing than its predecessors, whether its manners and grace are inferior are interesting as subjects of consideration, and unfortunate if the charges are well founded; but if it is true, as here suggested, that the young of today are too soft, afraid of enduring hardness, living in an atmostphere of cheap altruism that really knows nothing of self-sacrifice, without energy or that which leads to sturdy character, for goodness sake won't somebody lend a hand to save the rising generation?—New Bedford Standard.

TELEPHONE EFFICIENCY.

If there is any one public service or "utility," established and conducted by private enterprise, that should be a monopoly under strict public regulation, it is that of the telephone. Two lighting companies or traction companies supplying the same areas or the same transit lines cannot furnish the needed service as economically and cheaply as one with adequate facilities. Competition between them could only result in the ruin of one or the other or the merging of one in the other. What is needed is one properly organized and managed and under proper regulation by public authority.

The peculiar character of the telephone service makes competition especially impracticable. To duplicate a local service would double the expense of installing and of conducting it, and if the rival companies could possibly work together with success it could only be by having separate customers and by each maintaining higher rates than would be necessary for one covaring the whole ground. But neither service alone could possibly be satisfactory. The two companies would have to have the same customers to a large extent for the customers of each would have to have communication with those of the other in order to receive the full benefit of the service. They would not only have to pay the charges of both, but it would be a constant exasperation, a daily nuisance, to distinguish between them and get the proper connections. Attempts at local competition in telephone service would be nothing less than an absurdity and ought not to be privileged or even permitted.

The same principle applies in the larger field. It is desirable to have local telephone systems connected so that there may be intercommunication between them. This gives rise to the long-distance service, which may unite adjoining fields of operation and extend over the country. Here economy, efficiency and convenience require a single harmonious system. Their advantages could not be attained by having different long-distance services connecting with a variety of local systems in different parts of the country. That would be vastly more costly and less satisfactory than a single uniform system, all parts of which can be reached from every point over the same network of lines. It is a case where monopoly brings the best results, but that makes it also a case where public regulation and supervision are a necessity, to prevent the abuses to which monopoly is always liable. That regulation should be such as to preserve the incentives and benefits to be derived from the use of private capital and personal enterprise, and not involve the deadening and demoralizing effect of direct Government ownership and management.

So far as long distance service connects systems in different States and becomes a matter of interstate communication it is subject to Federal regulation, which should be made effective for its purpose in this as in other related matters. That is quite different from attacking the company which has built up the system and controls and directs its operation, as an unlawful combination and seeking its dissolution. That, if accomplished would result in a chaotic condition and would certainly not be in the interest of the public. Whatever may be needed to make the telephone service more reasonable or more satisfactory in local communities or over long distances, the remedy does not lie that way.—New York Journal of Commerce.

ANNEXING ONE'S NEIGHBORS.

Our esteemed Plymouth contemporary, the Old Colony Memorial, solicitously inquires: "Why doesn't Brockton get into the annexing game and take over the intervening territory, and then tag on Boston as a finis, and call the whole of it 'Greater Brockton?' Boston will soon reach out Brocktonwards, seemingly, if something isn't done about it meantime."

There are several reasons why Brockton has no present ambition to absorb Boston. It would require too much reforming to bring it up to the Brockton standard. It would be out of tune with this section along a variety of lines. For one thing it would just as like as not have its streets and sidewalks cleaned up after a snow storm while folks in the wards around here were still slipping and sloshing around. It is embarrassing enough to a Brocktonian as it is to start for the Hub encased in goloshes and land there to find the pavements as dry and clean as they would be in October. If this happened within the confines of greater Brockton he would surely put up a vigorous protest. For another thing lager beer and other liquid devices calculated to make the imbiber wobble as he treads the straight and narrow path are reputed to be sold openly and without shame at many places in that ungodly metropolis. Out here the tanglefoot may be seen taking the air on pony express wagons, but always carefully boxed or barrelled, and according to popular tradition it is simply passing through town and is never offered for sale to the unwisely thirsty in our midst. Depot conveyances in Boston, as many may have noticed, are not to be compared for a moment with those provided here. The same thing might be truthfully said as regards hotels.

We appreciate the Memorial's neighborly interest, but beg to assure it that Boston will wait quite a while before it is invited to tag on to this town. We're some particular about whom and what we adopt.—Brockton Enterprise.

MINCE PIE, ITS MAKE-UP.

They say that whoever attempts to analyze the component parts of boarding house hash runs the risk of unpleasant surprise. This may be a base libel on the boarding-house cook. It may be every whit as unreasonable to have doubt of the make-up of mince pie concocted outside the ken of personal knowledge. But that doubt does sometimes creep in is evident from the fact that for some reason or other mince pie has come up for analysis or defense before the supreme court of the United States. To the mind of this high tribunal, mince pie is no aggregation of indigestible concomitants, conducive to nightmare and an early grave. On the other hand, mince pie is generally understood, decrees the court, "to be a mixture of ingredients each of which may be regarded as a disinct article of food and drink." That is as much as to say that we do not expect to find things unfit for food in pie meat under whatever conditions offered or sold. He might have gone on to say the same faith reposed in the public breast in regard to sausage meat, but that would have been to encroach upon another story Mince pies were the sole subject under consideration: and after ruling on the general understanding as to its component parts, the court justifies human faith by ruling that "the purchaser of the pie is not thinking of each particular ingredient but only of the pie"—yes, and doubtless smacking his lips in anticipation of a good juicy bite, in the which he is lucky if he be not disappointed, in this degenerate day of ready-made foods. But whether it was for purposes of enforcing the pure food laws or what not that the mince pie came up for judicial consideration, the consumer will be glad to have the burden of responsibility for its ingredients put elsewhere than upon his conscience, even though it may rest upon his digestive system.—New Bedford Standard.

ENDEAVORS TO BLOCK PROBE

Being Made by Big Financiers of Wall Street

CONTROL AMERICAN CREDITS

Washington, Feb. 1.—Chairman Henry of Texas of the house rules committee declared without reservation that Wall street is trying to prevent an effective investigation of the alleged money trust. He said that he believed that the investigation would be ordered, and that it would be by a select committee, rather than by the house standing committee on banking and currency.

But he said also that the contest is intense, and that no means is being overlooked to turn the proposed inquiry from its original design—to lay bare the truth as to whether there is a central coterie in Wall street which controls American credits.

"Wall street," Henry said, "is using every possible effort to prevent the investigation. It is desperate, and I openly charge that it is exerting its every influence to stop the proposed action. I charge that on my responsibility as a member of congress and chairman of the rules committee. I make the charge emphatic. I have in my possession indisputable evidence that that is true and the nature of my evidence is direct and convincing.

"We have succeeded in winning the first battle, for the house will undoubtedly order the investigation. This is admitted; but the effort now is to refer the investigation to the standing committee on banking and currency, with the idea that if that committee is entrusted with the duty it will do nothing more than conduct a formal probe, and not go deep into the important facts."

Four members of the banking and currency committee say they believe the inquiry should not be made by that committee; that if it were to be, the investigation would not be productive of the salient facts.

Mr. Henry says that he is confident the caucus to be held next Wednesday will order the select committee, but that if that is to be the friends of the investigation will have to keep busy up to the moment of the caucus assembling.

FRANKLIN CHIEF WITNESS

Will Be Called to Give Testimony Against Attorney Darrow

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 1.—Despite the absence of any official statement to that effect, it is generally accepted that Bert H. Franklin, the former chief of detectives for the McNamara defense, now facing trial on the charge of jury bribing, will be the principal witness for the state in the prosecution of indictments against Clarence S. Darrow, for similar alleged offenses.

To offset his testimony, it is understood the Darrow defense will endeavor to prove that Franklin, if not actually in the employ of William J. Burns, at least was in the service of the state while employed as confidential agent of the defense in the McNamara case.

PUBLIC LIBRARY NOTES.

For the past year there has been an increase in the popularity of the stereoscopic views at the library, the circulation of 13,218 in the Main hall showing how greatly they have been appreciated. More than 1350 of these photographs are comprised in the collection, including practically all European countries, United States, Egypt, and even far-away Japan. Guide books with a number of sets make them of special value. Fifty of these views may be borrowed for one week, with or without the stereoscope.

Because of the interest that has lately centred in China in view of the rebellion, a complete list of books on China has been compiled, and will appear in the Ledger and Patriot of Saturday. FEBRUARY MAGAZINES.

SUBURBAN LIFE for February is of untold value to the prospective house-builder. In it, men who know, giev their reasons why 1912 is an opportune time to build that house which you have long contemplated, but postponed until a more convenient time. Not only does it tell why to build, but describes, by pen and picture, houses built of various materials. This number, of course, is not by any means devoted entirely to the man who is building, and there are articles of interest to every suburban dweller. "Using the Hotbed to Best Advantage" and "Getting the Garden Things Started Indoors" contain valuable information for the man who loves growing things. "Mechanical Hints for the Woman Motor-Car Driver" will be appreciated by the woman who finds pleasure in being her own chauffeur. "Keeping Poultry in Houses Without Yards" is the story of a commuter who had much success with his chickens, and will be welcomed by the man with little ground. "The Story of the Garden That Cured" tells how a small plot of ground did for a woman what doctors and drugs failed to do. And with all this, the half has not been told of the contents and value of this attractive number.

ENGINEERING MAGAZINE. The leading place for February is given to the second paper by F. Lincoln Hutchins on the various aspects of the Railway Problem, as deduced from twenty of the leading American roads. In the January number he discussed railway rates, unit costs, and efficiency, and presented a unique graphical method by which the relative expenditure of each road, in each of the six major operating accounts, may be compared with the standard attained by the most economical road reporting the same account. The paper for this month takes up the subjects of capitalization and regulation as developed from the figures so shown, and which are now repeated in tabular instead of graphic form.

Among the important illustrated articles may be mentioned the fifth installment of Robert L. Streeter's papers on the internal-combustion engine. The number also carries the full Review of the Engineering Press, and the Engineering Index.—The Engineering Magazine, New York.

Q.—Do you mean to say that the spirit of the Thief, who died upon the crosss when the Lord Jesus was crucified, remained in the grave with his body? If so, do the spirits of our dear friends, who turned to Christ in this life, remain with their bodies in the grave until the Lord's return? (D. D.)

Answer.—The inspired writers of the Bible tell us just what became of the spirit of the thief who died upon the cross. And they also tell us what becomes of the spirits of those who were devoted followers of Christ and were faithful unto death. It would not do for us to say what became of these spirits. Too many so-called leaders of religious thought have theorized and speculated as to what became of the spirits of the departed dead and have set forth the results of their vain imaginings. Let us not add to the awful confusion by presenting ideas of our own, but let us hear what the Scriptures declare, recognizing that the Lord God is surely able to guide us into the knowledge of the Truth. We read—"Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was; and the spirit shall return unto God who gave it." (Ecclesiastes xii, 7.) This text reminds us of the original sentence of death pronounced upon Adam for disobedience. He had been formed of the dust and therefore he should forfeit his life and return unto dust. He died. The breath of life (the spirit)—the energizing or life principle—was removed from the body and returned to God, who is the source or fountain of all life. The living soul, the intelligent being died. As the Bible says, "The soul that sinneth it shall die." (Ezekiel xviii, 4.) From these Scriptures it is evident that the spirit of the thief and of all who die returns to God. This animating principle (spirit), called life, is to be given to all of the faithful and obedient in the resurrection.

FEARS FOR TARIFF BOARD

Taft Says Its Existence Is Threatened by Democratic House

Akron, O., Feb. 1.—President Taft brought his three days' trip through northern and central Ohio to an end here last night, with a reception and a dinner given by the Akron chamber of commerce in his honor.

The banquet was held in a dancing academy, and shortly after it began the president donned his overcoat. He dined just as heartily in his overcoat apparently.

The president spoke on the tariff board at the dinner and gave his reasons for wishing its continued existence. This existence, he said, was threatened by a Democratic house of representatives for the first time in the memory of members of his party.

THE EDUCATIONAL FIELD

GENERAL SCHOOL NOTES.

The statistical report of the school department, which is now in the hands of the printer, shows some interesting facts. The table is published showing the school appropriations for a series of years, compared with the total amount raised by the city by taxation for all purposes. According to this table the amount raised by taxation in the city has increased from $375,123 in 1901 to $689,905 in 1911, while the school appropriation has increased from $108,365 to $160,190 in the same time. The most significant fact, however, is that the percentage of the annual sum raised by taxation, which has been granted the school department for the support of schools, has decreased in that time from 28.8 per cent to 23.4 per cent. In other words, the school department has been receiving a gradually diminishing share of the city's annual income. This is a fact of which the public is generally ignorant and is an explanation of the reason why the schools costs of this city have been lower than those of any other city in the state aside from Gloucester and Woburn. The recent increase in teachers' salaries will increase the per capita cost to some extent, but the past year's cost has been about $6 lower than the cost estimated for the entire state.

The reports on industrial training for boys and girls which were submitted to the school committee by the two special committees on Tuesday evening, are to be printed for official distribution and will be considered at a special meeting of the school committee to be held before the time of submitting the annual budget. While these reports only point the way for a beginning of industrial education, it is thought that the adoption of the recommendation contained in them will open immense possibilities for the future. The system of part-time education is being widely used abroad and increasing in this country. On account of its flexibility, it offers opportunity of co-operation to almost all kinds of industries.

The interesting part of the courses mapped out in one way is the exceedingly low cost at which they may be carried out. A boy in the Industrial school can be educated for considerably less than in the high school because of the state coming in as an equal partiner on the proposition. Furthermore, the boy has an opportunity to earn money while in school and he leaves school, prepared at once to earn a good living. Such a school would interest a group of boys as yet untouched and be the nucleus for future development.

It may be said that the reports of these committees to the school committee have already been discussed with representatives of the State Board of Education and have met with their approval. These representatives by the way have given the committees much advice and help.

The close of the evening schools shows another gain in attendance, both in totals and in regularity. The Adams' evening school register shows an enrolment of 19 different nationalities.

The second term of the drawing school closes next week after a session of 20 evenings. The attendance has been remarkably good, frequently reaching within two or three of perfect, which is rather unusual in evening classes.

Mr. L. A. Whitehouse of Boston, a monument designer, has been present two evenings each week and has given much help to the class in designing.

Two teachers have been absent this week for the purpose of taking the Boston examinations, Mr. Isaac Goddard of the High school and Miss Mercedes O'Brien of the Coddington.

Steps are being taken looking toward the organization of Parents' Associations in three of the school districts where such organizations are not yet in existence.

Exactly 175 new pupils entered school in the first grade on Monday, the largest class being at the Willard school. The half yearly entrance and promotion plan thus far is working smoothly and effectively.

HIGH SCHOOL.

The Sophomore—Junior Reception of Q. H. S. will be held on Friday evening, February 9.

There is to be a vaudeville entertainment given in the High School Hall, on Saturday evening, February 24, by the girls of the three upper classes of the High School. This entertainment is for the benefit of the Athletic Association. Among other acts there is to be a short farce entitled, "Miss Oliver's Dollars," in which eight girls will take part.

On Tuesday afternoon of last week, the teachers of the Sewing and Drawing Departments, with eight of the pupils in the Household Arts Course, went to the Boston Art Museum to see the embroidery. All had a delightful time; many of the girls took notes, which they found of great value in their work at school.

On Monday of this week about twelve girls from the Freshman class also went to town with the same teachers. After spending sometime in loking at the embroidery, they went through several of the other rooms in the Art Museum.

JOHN HANCOCK SCHOOL.

For attendance this year, Miss Strange's eighth grade was the best in September, Miss McNeally's second in October and November, Miss Moir's third in December and Miss Parker's sixth in January.

Nine children entered grade one, Monday. Three more will probably enter before another week.

LINCOLN SCHOOL.

For attendance this year Miss Gurdy's first grade led the building in September, with Miss Lamb's combination second and third in October, Miss Donovan's fourth in November and December and Miss Viden's fifth and sixth in January.

Eighteen children entered grade one, Monday.

The pupils of grade VIII are the guests of the Parents'-Teachers' Association this evening. Mr. Charles Johnson will give his stereopticon lecture on "Historic Quincy."

The pupils of grade VIII enjoyed a sleigh ride Wednesday evening. Miss Taylor and Mr. and Mrs. Goodspeed accompanied them.

WOLLASTON SCHOOL.

The following children, six years of age were admitted Monday January 29: Victor John Burns, Florence Alma Ferguson, Helen Jepson, Marjorie Antoinette Johnson, Ruth Kempton, Ruth Ann Linscott, Alexander Raymond MacDonald, Grace Mildred Seymour, George E. Welsford.

The pupils of grade VII enjoyed a sleigh ride Tuesday afternoon. Miss Warshaw and Mr. Goodspeed accompanied them.

Testing Coins.

"There goes another man suffering from degeneration of public manners," said the clerk in an aggrieved tone. "I gave him five pieces of silver in making change, and he tested every one of them to see if it was counterfeit right before my eyes. It is only lately that people who buy have got rude enough to do that. Clerks always did it with coin that customers gave them, but that was a prerogative of the trade. For the customer to assume the same privilege is a usurpation of ancient rights. The worst of it is most people nowadays are pretty good judges of bad money, and every little while a coin is refused because it is counterfeit. The only way tradesmen can teach customers the respect due them is to turn their own backs when testing money. That has always been the custom in England. No tradesman over there would dare fillip a coin under a customer's nose, and as a consequence no customer has ever taken that liberty with him."—New York Press.

Reply of a "Beardless Boy."

When Keppel, a commodore at twenty-four, was sent to demand an opology from the dey of Algiers for an insult to the British flag he took so high a tone that the dey exclaimed against the insolence of the British king for charging a "beardless boy" with such a message to him. Replied the beardless boy, "Were my master wont to take length of beard for a test of wisdom he'd have sent your deyship a he goat."—London Standard.

GUESTS PRESENT FROM QUINCY

One of the prettiest affairs of the season was the ladies' night of Braintree Council No. 1462, Knights of Columbus, held in I. O. O. F. hall, South Braintree, Wednesday evening to celebrate the second anniversary of the council. Among the decorations of the hall were noticed the cardinal globes in the chandelier and carnations of the same hue in honor of His Eminence, Cardinal O'Connell, were handed each lady as she entered.

The master of cermonies was Grand Knight Edward V. Heffernan of the local council and he was ably assisted by various members. Guests of honor were Rev. M. F. McDonnell and Rev. A. J. Fitzgerald of St. Francis church and some of the invited guests were State Deputy William J. O'Brien Secretary Louis Watson, Rev. J. J. Brannin of Holbrook, Rev. J. J. Casey of Quincy and the following grand knights:

James Moran of Seville council, Brockton.

Edward Barrett of Quincy council, Quincy.

Charles McGilvray of Ave Maria Council, West Quincy.

Thomas White of Weymouth council, East Weymouth.

Patrick J. Hart of Vera Cruz council, Randolph.

Mr. and Mrs. William H. Daly of Neponset were special guests of the council.

There were delightful selections by Cuff's orchestra, also readings by Miss Josie I. McCarthy which were loudly applauded. Harry Hudson rendered pleasing baritone solos and John Regan in humorous recitations was the real thing. Other entertainers unable to be present because of delayed trains were James Moran, tenor soloist, the grand knight of Seville council also John Carroll who is well remembered here for his inimitable Scotch dialect work and Thomas Neafsy with his coon songs and dances.

Addresses were made on subjects relative to the order by State Deputy William J. O'Brien and State Secretary Louis Watson. Two of the finest vocal solos of the evening were rendered by Mrs. William Daly of Neponset, who was formerly Miss Gertrude Berry of this town and is the possessor of a beautiful soprano voice of great range and power. After the program of entertainment was concluded, a delicious buffet lunch was served by Burley and Martin of Boston.

Next came dancing, to the music of Cuff's orchestra which was enjoyed until 11.30 o'clock. The concert was in charge of the lecturer, Walter S. Fouche, and the dancing was in charge of Edward P. Cuff.

The following committees helped to make the affair a success: arrangements, Grand Knight Edward V. Heffernan, Edward P. Cuff, Edward P. Hughes, Walter S. Fouche, Lucien Gaudreau, Moses H. McGaughey, John H. Sullivan, John B. Crowe and Charles E. Greelish.

Reception—Dr. C. A. Sullivan, Dr. Norbert Shay, Joseph T. Shay and Edward J. Sullivan.

PARSON JENNINGS.

Post office Inspector Jennings of Elm street, on more than one occasion has been taken for a clergyman and several times has been placed in rather embarrassing situations. The inspector throughout the federal building in Boston is known among his colleagues as "Parson," and down in the state of Maine, where Jennings formerly hunted postoffice yeggs, he is familiarly known as "Fr. John."—Boston Record.

FORMER PASTOR HONORED

which flourished for many years. He also founded a Catholic newspaper which was known as the Quincy Monitor, in which public improvements were strongly urged, such as electric lights, the purchase of the water works, public parks, etc. He then inaugurated a movement for lower fares on the railroad for workmen and with the aid of those who joined in the movement was successful in having a workingmen's train with low rates from all stations between Braintree and Boston.

In 1889 he was elected a member of the school committee and labored earnestly for better salaries for the teachers and janitors and for public meetings of the school board. He also vigorously protested against the method in vogue at that time in the selection of teachers. He stoutly maintained that English grammar should not be abolished from the grammar grades of the schools. During the labor troubles in the granite industry his sympathy was always with the workingmen.

He also served, during his residence in Quincy, on the board of managers of the Woodward Institute for girls. Genial, frank and open he was generally admired by all classes and there was general regret when it was known that he had been transferred as pastor of the church at Hingham, although he was heartily congratulated on his becoming a pastor.

When St. Mary's church was set off as a separate parish in 1899 Fr. Roche was named by the late Archbishop Williams as its first pastor.

One of his first acts on coming to the new parish was to move for a new church. The church at West Quincy at that time was much too small for the rapidly growing parish. It looked like a tremendous undertaking to build a new church but Fr. Roche took hold of the project with his usual determination with the result that before long work was commenced on the present edifice. He wisely deemed it unwise to try and erect, at one time, the church he desired and contented himself with first erecting, what is known as the basement of the church, believing that this should be first freed from debt before the main church was undertaken.

In 1908 he was again transferred, this time being to St. Patrick's church at Watertown where he is now located.

His many warm personal friends in Quincy unite in extending their congratulations to Rt. Rev. Mgr. Ambrose F. Roche in the new honor that has come to him.

EDNA ARCHIBALD.

The funeral of Edna Frances Archibald, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Archibald was held Tuesday afternoon from the residence of her parents, 114 Intervale street, and attended by a large gathering of friends and relatives. The services were conducted by Rev. Joseph Walther, pastor of the Wollaston Baptist church. The interment was at the Mt. Wollaston cemetery.

There was a large profusion of beautiful flowers, loving tributes of warm friends in cluding:

CARDINAL O'CONNELL IS WELCOMED HOME

Streets of Boston Are Crowded Despite Bad Weather

Boston, Feb. 1.—Boston gave William Cardinal O'Connell an enthusiastic greeting on his arrival from Rome. The weather was most unfavorable for an outdoor demonstration, with heavy snow falling from daybreak, yet thousands of men, women and children stood in the streets for an hour or two to pay homage to the distinguished churchman.

Business, especially over the line of the procession, from Long wharf to to the Back Bay, was at a standstill, many of the streets being roped off and blocked to traffic.

Before dismissing the great throng that gathered about his residence the cardinal, standing on his veranda, gave them his blessing.

One of the features of the parade to the cardinal's home was the showering of the cardinal's automobile with flowers by young girls on Commonwealth avenue. The flowers were thrown in front of the machine and into it.

PAINTED OUT HIS HEAD.

Revenge of Carolus Duran on His Pupil, Sargent.

When John S. Sargent, the famous portrait painter, studied in the atelier of Carolus Duran in Paris his teacher showed his fondness for him by painting in his head in the great ceiling of the Luxembourg palace. Even after he branched out for himself his master often sent for him to come over to his studio and pose, his hands having especially won the admiration of Carolus Duran.

The time came, however, when Sargent could no longer answer the beck and call of his teacher, for he was getting work of his own to do, which would not allow him to leave his studio at a moment's notice. One day, it is related, Carolus Duran sent a hurry call for him, and when he received a note saying that Sargent was compelled to decline his request owing to pressing work he was furious.

A few days later a friend, to whom he had confided his anger at his recalcitrant pupil, asked him: "Well, how is it with Sargent? Have you made up? How is he?"

"Ah, no," said the painter, and he looked sad and his shoulders went up. "How is it with Sargent? C'est fini!" Another shrug. "C'est fini! It's all over! I have been to the Luxembourg. I went and got a ladder, and I painted out his head!"

RESORT TO DYNAMITE

Riotous Strikers In Lisbon Putting Up Battle With Troops

Lisbon, (via Badajos, Spanish frontier), Feb. 1.—Fighting as furious as that which occurred during the overthrow of the monarchy has been going on here between republican soldiers and armed strikers. The strikers are using dynamite and have made threats to blow up all the government buildings and kill the president of the republic.

Scores of women, wives and daughters of the strikers, are fighting against the soldiers.

It is reported from Moita that a number of women were killed there. They were on the firing line in a battle between mobs and troops.

The government is maintaining a strict censorship, and this dispatch was sent by carrier to the Spanish frontier in order to circumvent official notice.

Cavalry are patrolling the streets, and infantry and artillery are camped in all of the parks.

RESTORE MUTE'S VOICE

Doctors In St. Louis Hospital Are Sorry They Were Successful

St. Louis, Feb. 1.—The city hospital physicians who spent four weeks practising scientific persuasive treatment on Ada Decker in an effort to restore her voice while she was an alleged hypnotic mute, are now sorry they succeeded.

When th egirl's voice was restored she emitted a volume of vituperation that caused a retreat of the physicians, nurses and attendants.

They were excoriated in vocabulary of the slums by the girl, who used adjectives in the superlative degree. Just for that and a disposition to be unruly otherwise, she was sent to the observation ward and locked up.

The girl was sent to the hospital about a month ago from the Convent of the Good Shepherd for treatment after she had remained mute for a week.

STEEL TRUST'S ANSWERS

Government Has No Right to Prosecute at This Late Date

Trenton, Feb. 1.—Absolute denial of alleged violations of the anti-trust law is made by the United States Steel corporation, its subsidiaries and directors, in the answers which were filed this morning in the United States district court here to the government's dissolution suit. Five separate answers were filed among thirty-three defendants.

The effect of its organization, the corporation declares, has been to cheapen production, effect economies and increase foreign trade from $8,000,000 to $60,000,000 annually, within ten years. So long has the government acquiesced in its existence, the answers say, that it is now too late, as a matter of equity, to insist that its organization was illegal.

SELANDIA A SUCCESS

Fine Performance of World's Largest Oil Motor Vessel

Copenhagen, Feb. 1.—The Selandia, the largest oil motor ship in the world, underwent a most successful trial trip here, during which she maintained a speed of twelve knots an hour. The leading Danish and British experts were on board and exhibited the keenest interest in the experiment.

The vessel displaces 10,000 tons and is equipped with two motors of 3000 horse power each. She belongs to the East Asiatic company.

$4,000,000 WILL BROKEN

Estate of Millionaire Friedenwald Will Go to His Son

Baltimore, Feb. 1.—A verdict in favor of Moses S. Friedenwald, who contested the will of his father, Joseph Friedenwald, a multi-millionaire of this city, was returned by a jury in the circuit court at Towson.

The jury found that the testator "was not possessed of testamentary capacity or of sound and disposing mind." The will disposed of an estate valued at $4,000,000. It is probable the case will be appealed.

Life Convict Pardoned

Boston, Feb. 1.—Walter A. Scott, serving a life term for the murder of James Slamin, a coachman, was pardoned yesterday by Governor Foss and the council. Scott and Robert West, also a life prisoner, had robbed Slamin's employer a few moments before they met Slamin.

BRIEFS

The annual meeting of the Quincy Yacht club is to be held this evening.

Enrico Barraja is to give a Chopin recital this evening at his studio in The Greenleaf.

Lena Morrow Lewis is to lecture tonight in Alpha hall in the Socialist Lyceum course of lectures.

The policemen all along the beat are anticipating a grand good time tomorrow night at their annual ball.

Mrs. Emma Marnock has been confined to her apartments in the Adams building with muscular rheumatism the past week.

Charles H. Johnson is to give his illustrated lecture "Historic Quincy" tonight, before the Parents and Teachers Association of the Massachusetts Fields school.

WHIST TOURNAMENT.

Eleven tables were in play Wednesday evening at the weekly whist tournament of the Granite City club. The usual twenty-five hands were played, after which an oyster chowder was served. The high scores for the evening were made by John W. Bell and William R. Thomas. The winners of the three monthly prizes were George F. Spooner, 66 per cent, John Curtis, 61 per cent while the consolation prize went to Charles H. Penniman who had 44 per cent.

MEN OF WEIGHT.

Only Three of This Notable Eleven Were Under 200 Pounds.

On Aug. 10, 1778, General Washington and ten other officers of the Revolutionary army were weighed at West Point, N. Y., and the result is preserved in an item from the English magazine Notes and Queries. Only three of the eleven weighed less than 200 pounds. The heaviest was Colonel Swift, whose 319 pounds made him lead the next, General Knox, at 280, by thirty-nine pounds, but Knox was only twenty-eight years old.

Then follow Colonel Michael Jackson, 252; Colonel Henry Jackson, 238; General Lincoln, then forty-five years old, 224; Lieutenant Colonel Humphreys, 221; Lieutenant Colonel Huntington, 212.

General Washington, forty-six years old, weighed 209 pounds and was followed at quite an interval by Lieutenant Colonel Cobb and General Huntington, who weighed 182 pounds each.

It is amusing to note that the heaviest man's name was Swift and that of the lightest General Greaton, who is credited with 166 pounds, 163 less than Swift's record.

The total weight of the eleven, 2,485 pounds gives 226 pounds as the average, but Swift being omitted the other ten averaged only 217 pounds.

They were certainly men of weight and substance and a heavy team—if we may compare them with a modern football eleven—that might well challenge comparison also with our modern military men.

ARBITRATION NOT TALKED OF

Big Strike Will Continue Until Demands Are Granted

MORE AGITATORS ARE COMING

Lawrence, Mass., Feb. 1.—Leaders of the textile strike, which now has lasted nearly three weeks, with 25,000 people out of employment, declare that the arrest of Joseph J. Ettor and Arturo M. Giovannitti will have no effect upon the situation and that the fight will continue until their demands are allowed.

There was no talk of arbitration at the meetings held Wednesday. Instead, William Yates, New England head of the Industrial Workers of the World, and in temporary charge, exhorted all the strikers to stand firm. In the previous statements issued there was no hint at compromise. Those on the inside, however, agree that much will depend on the action and attitude of the leaders who arrive today.

The cases of Ettor and Giovannitti, who are charged with being accessories before the fact of the murder of Anna Lopizzo, the Italian woman shot in the street Monday night, were continued until Feb. 9 in the police court.

Situation Still Critical

The situation in the city still remains critical. With the Syrian quarter seething with excitement over the death of John Ramy, the tailor who was bayoneted and killed by a soldier Tuesday, its angry population hissing the soldiers who have been ru ed here, the long threatened outbreak momentarily is expected.

In open windows at dusk men sat and gazed furtively at the passing squads of militia and hooted at the cavalry which passed back and forth through Elm, Oak and Lawrence streets. The arrest of Ettor and Giovannitti are being used to stir up antipathy against the officials.

Today William D. Haywood, Vincent St. John, national secretary of the Industrial Workers of the World and one of the most violent agitators of the country; William Trautman, another organizer of the I. W. W., and James H. Thompson, head of the I. W. W., are all expected to be here to take charge of affairs. Their coming adds a new aspect to the situation, which it was believed had been changed when Ettor and his lieutenant, Giovannitti, were arrested by the state police.

These arrests were expected to cause trouble. When none came during the day, the police and military officials looked serious. They admit that trouble is in the air, but they do not know where or when it will strike.

No Funeral Parade

Colonel Sweetser countermanded the order for the parade at the funeral of Anna Lopizzo. Then the cavalry rushed into Common street and dispersed the crowd which kept collecting, thousands strong, before the undertaking rooms where the body of the woman lay.

Undertaker DeCeasar was instructed to bury the body without any funeral exercises, other than the mass which was said at the Church of the Rosary in the morning.

All the forenoon and all the afternoon a continuous stream of people filed through the undertaking rooms and viewed the body as it lay bedecked in the funeral robes which had been bought and prepared by fellow workers.

In the afternoon the soldiers came and after an hour of marching and countermarching had cleared away all but those who lived nearby. Even these soon left their doorsteps, and retired within doors.

Then the candles which had been burning in the little back room were snuffed, the flowers set aside and the banner inscribed "From the Polish workers. The victim of capitalism" was rolled up and placed within the humble casket.

No Crowd About

An undertaker's assistant crept to the door and looked up and down the street. There were only a few civilians about with the soldier guards pacing back and forth. He returned within and, as if by prearranged signal, a hearse drove up and stopped.

Four men bore the casket from the shop. One slipped on the ice on the sidewalk and an end dropped, but was quickly recovered. Two of the men were crying. The doors of the hearse were slammed to. The horses started quickly and at a slow trot headed toward the cemetery.

Thus was the body of Anna Lopizzo taken to its last resting place, alone and unaccompanied by the mammoth following of 25,000 which Joseph J. Ettor had planned should escort it, little knowing that the death of this woman would be the cause of his own imprisonment.

Leaders In Jail

Joseph J. Ettor, leader and idol of the strikers, and Arturo M. Giovannitti, his lieutenant, will spend the next ten days at least in the Lawrence jail.

In the police court both were held without bail on a charge of being accessories to the murder of Anna Lopizzo, killed Monday night in a clash between rioters and police.

At the request of their attorney, George E. Roewer, Jr., Justice Chandler continued the hearing of the cases until Feb. 9, but he flatly refused to set bonds, declaring that such a course would be illegal.

While court was in session, the station was surrounded by a heavy guard of militamen and metropolitan police from Boston. Everyone coming near the building was challenged and examined before being allowed to enter. Local officers were stationed at all interior stairways leading to the courtroom.

State officers, newspaper men, and nearly 100 spectators attracted merely by curiosity, crowded the courtroom. Several people, regarded as suspicious looking, were excluded. Before Chandler called court an officer ejected all photographers.

House Votes Strike Probe

Boston, Feb. 1.—The Massachusetts house grabbed the reins of power yesterday afternoon and took charge of the entire Lawrence strike situation. It was all done so quickly that it swept the house leaders from their feet. An order was adopted by a vote of 114 to 81 which gives a committee of five, to be named by Speaker Cushing, the unquestioned right to dig clear to the bottom.

The house order shuts the senate out. At the last moment it was changed by Representative Sanborn, who presented it so as to read a house committee instead of a joint committee.

Following is a summary of the provisions of the order whereby the house assumes control of the Lawrence strike:

Committee of five to investigate industrial conditions, particularly wages, salaries, cost of living, living conditions, dividends, stock issues, earnings, effect of fifty-four-hour law, desirability of minimum wage law, any other kindred subject.

Committee may employ counsel, expert assistance, summon witnesses, compel production of books and papers, meet every day if necessary, and report at once.

Governor and council to approve expense items.

NO TIPS IN KENTUCKY

Bill Passed by Lower House Is Called an Emergency Act

Frankfort, Ky., Feb. 1.—Kentucky's proposed anti-tipping law passed the lower house of the legislature by a vote of 59 to 7, with an emergency clause attached, which read:

"Whereas, as members of the legislature are now paying out sums of money in the ways of tips, an emergency is, therefore, declared to exist, and this bill shall become a law as soon as signed by the governor."

The bill provides a fine for tipping waiters and porters.

BANK CLERKS FEEL BETTER

Dime on Deposit For Forty Years Is at Last Withdrawn

Orange, N. J., Feb. 1.—There was a sigh of relief among the employes of the Half Dime Savings bank at closing time yesterday, when an account of 10 cents was closed by a depositor. It had been on the books for the last forty years. The depositor, who is employed by a New Jersey newspaper, was a lad of 12 in 1872 when he deposited a dime, which he hoped would be the nucleus for a substantial account.

In the forty years the dime has been placed to the depositor's account it has figured in many balance sheets, and its worth has been consumed many times over in the ink, paper and time given it by clerks who had to keep track of it.

As no interest is allowed in Jersey savings banks on sums less than $1 the solitary coin in its forty years in bank did not increase.

PAPER BAG COOKING

Great System Perfected by M. Soyer, Famous London Chef.

SPECIAL FAMILY DINNER.

By Martha McCulloch Williams.

The following menu is suitable for a paper bag cooked dinner, to be served during winter months, when the occasion is more than ordinary, say on a national holiday, or some special family or community event:

Blue Fish or Sea Trout, Planked
Sliced Potatoes Buttered Beets
Cold Slaw
Baron of Beef, Roasted
Baked Squash Celery Salsify Stewed
Cold Baked Apples with Rum and Sugar
Romaine Salad with Cheese Balls.
Sharp French Dressing Biscuit
Plum Pudding, Brandy Sauce
Nut Candy Stuffed Dates
Homemade Citron

The fish will require a plank, oak, of course, and proportioned to the size of the biggest paper bag. Get it as thin as possible—half an inch, say. Scour it well, then grease with oil or butter, heat gently and wipe off all surplus grease while still warm. This before undertaking to use it. It must be heated very hot underneath the gas flame before the fish goes on it. Sprinkle rock salt thickly over it to prevent charring, dash it off and grease very thickly, then lay upon it your fish, opened flat, seasoned, and well-greased all over the skin side. Season it on top with salt, black and red pepper, a few toasted bread crumbs or a little grated cheese, thin slices of onion and raw peeled tomatoes. Lacking fresh tomatoes, put on a little tomato catsup. Squeeze lemon juice over all and dot plentifully with butter. Flatten well on the plank, then slip plank and fish inside a thickly-buttered bag and cook in a hot oven fifteen to twenty minutes, according to the thickness of the fish.

The beef baron—the double sirloin—needs only to be roasted in a bag after greasing it very well all over. Do not salt it. Roast according to weight—fifteen minutes to the pound for rare meat, twenty for well done. Make sliced potatoes as previously directed, also cold slaw. Beets should be boiled quickly, putting them on in cold water, peeled as soon as done, and buttered while still very hot. Season with salt and pepper, also a dash of either vinegar or lemon juice. Baked squash has been exploited, stewed salsify likewise.

Serve the cold baked apples as a sort of sorbet—a course to themselves. Peel and bake the apples in a buttered bag, with a teaspoonful of sugar to each apple. Put in the serving dish, and while still very hot pour over a desertspoonful of rum to the apple. Let cool and serve with wafer-biscuit toasted very crisp.

For the salad, break crisp romaine in two-inch bits, make a very sharp French dressing, putting in a little lemon juice with the vinegar, adding salt, celery salt, onion juice, Worcester sauce, black and red pepper, and a mere suspicion of mustard. Sour claret make take the place of vinegar and lemon juice—you must aim at a very piquant flavor to give a tang to the mild cheese balls and biscuit. Shape the balls with butter moulds from cream cheese softened with either a little oil or sweet cream. Roll them in finely ground nuts and stick a tiny sprig of parsley in each. Make very small biscuit to go with them, and bake so they may come to table very, very hot.

Plum pudding should be in hand; heat it well either over hot water or inside a bag.

For the nut candy, use either black walnuts, scaly barks or pecans—I give them in the order of preference. A mixture of all three is not so bad, but the crisp richness of fresh black walnut goodies appeals most to my taste. Crack the nuts and pick out the kernels in as big pieces as possible. Be careful not to let bits of shell fall among the meats. Measure them after picking out, for each heaping cup of nuts take a level cup of soft sugar and half a cup of water. Cook sugar and water together till it ropes from the spoon. Have the nuts in round, rather shallow vessel, well greased. Pour the hot syrup upon them and stir about until the candy hardens around the kernels.

Make your own stuffed dates. Pick out the largest, firmest fruit, wash quickly in cold water, drain, and take out the seed. Stick into the cut side either a nut, a bit of crystallized ginger, a little candied peel, or a bit of citron. Roll in confectioner's sugar and lay in a very lightly-greased bag, left open at the end, in a cool oven to harden. Drain strips of citron from their syrup, roll in sugar and dry off the same way.

The country-bred may like to have either squash or pumpkin served as a vegetable. Peel, cut up, bake soft and mash, then season well with salt, a little pepper and a tiny bit of onion juice. Make in a cake and lay in a paper bag mould or a well-buttered bag. Lay thin strips of bacon over the cake, seal an cook in a hot oven ten to twelve minutes. Turn out in a hot dish and serve with the beef. Pumpkin in particular, mashed and cooked in the gravy of roast fresh pork, is tempting and toothsome, to say nothing of being somewhat out of the common. As an accompaniment to roast suckling pig, it has no superior, unless it may be yellow yams.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

LUNCHEON HOT BREADS.

WHEN one is short of bread or a guest drops in unexpectedly fresh rolls, biscuit, muffins or gems will go far toward making a success of what might otherwise be a rather unattractive meal.

The merit of these breads lies in eating them when they are fresh, although any one who eats them too hot is taking dangerous liberties with his or her digestion.

Rolls and Gems.

Swiss Rolls.—Take two fresh eggs, six ounces of powdered sugar and the same of flour. Beat the eggs and sugar over a can of boiling water and then add the flour and a teaspoonful of baking powder. Bake in a moderate oven for a quarter of an hour.

Graham Gems.—Take a pint and a half of graham flour, one-half pint of cornmeal, one teaspoonful of salt, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder and one and one-quarter pints of milk.

Sift together the graham flour, cornmeal, salt and powder. Add the milk and mix into a moderately stiff batter. Half fill cold gem pans, well greased. Bake in a hot oven from ten to twelve minutes.

Biscuit, Muffins and Rusks.

Baking Powder Biscuit.—To a half cupful of melted butter, a little salt and two teaspoonfuls of baking powder add one quart of milk and flour enough to make a stiff batter. Do not knead to make into dough. Drop from a spoon into buttered pans and bake in a hot oven.

Health Muffins. — Take a quart of whole wheat flour, a teaspoonful of salt and two teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Sift these together. Beat three eggs, add to them three cupfuls of milk, a tablespoonful of melted butter, a teaspoonful of sugar and the flour. Beat, adding more flour if the batter is too thin, but taking care not to have it too stiff.

Pour into greased and warmed muffin tins and bake in a steady oven.

Coffee Rusks. — Take a piece of bread dough large enough to fill a quart bowl, one teacupful of melted butter, one egg and one teaspoonful of baking powder. Knead quite hard, roll out thin, lap it together, roll to the thickness of a thin biscuit, cut out with a biscuit mold and set it to rise in a warm place. From twenty to thirty minutes will generally be sufficient.

Bake them and dry thoroughly, and you will have an excellent rusk to eat with coffee.

BOY SCOUT ACTIVITIES

Likely to Be Aroused by the Visit of General Baden-Powell

New York, Feb. 1.—Lieutenant General Sir Robert S. S. Baden-Powell, K. C. B., K. C. V. O., hero of the Mafeking siege in the Boer war and founder of the British Boy Scouts, arrived in New York city on board the steamship Arcadian.

Baden-Powell's visit to this country is under the auspices of the Boy Scouts of America. He will meet the boy scouts, talk with them, tell them stories of scouting in war and in peace and will see what the boys in this country are doing. He is the hero of the British Boy Scouts.

Because of his magnetism, his interest in the boys, his love of adventure and of big deeds, he always has appealed to the boys wherever he goes. It is likely that still greater enthusiasm in boy scout activities will be aroused by the presence of the man whose genius has worked out the movement in such a remarkable detail.

FRECKLES

By Gene Stratton-Porter

COPYRIGHT, 1904, BY DOUBLEDAY, PAGE & CO.

SYNOPSIS.

Freckles, a homeless boy, is hired by Boss McLean to guard the expensive timber in the Limberlost from timber thieves.

Freckles does his work faithfully, makes friends with the birds and yearns to know more about nature. He lives with Mr. and Mrs. Duncan.

He resolves to get books and educate himself. He becomes interested in a huge pair of vultures and calls his bird friends his "chickens."

Some of the trees he is guarding are worth $1,000 each. Freckles' books arrive. He receives a call from Wessner.

Wessner attempts to bribe Freckles to betray his trust, and Freckles whips him. McLean overhears them and witnesses the fight.

Freckles' honesty saves a precious tree. He finds the nest of the vultures and is visited by a beautiful young girl.

She calls Freckles McLean's son. Freckles calls her "the angel" and helps the Bird Woman in taking photographs. McLean promises to adopt Freckles.

When the last wagon rolled away McLean sat down on the stump and Freckles told the story he was aching to tell. The boss could scarcely believe his senses. Also he was greatly disappointed.

"I have been almost praying all the way over, Freckles," he said, "that you would have some evidence by which we could arrest those fellows and get them out of our way, but this will never do. We can't mix those women up in it. They have helped you save me the tree and my wager as well. Going about the country as she does, the Bird Woman could never be expected to testify against them."

"No, indeed; nor the angel either, sir," said Freckles.

"The angel?" queried the astonished McLean.

The boss listened in silence while Freckles told of the coming and christening of the angel.

"I know her father well," said McLean at last, "and I have often seen her. You are right, she is a beautiful young girl. I do not understand why her father risks such a jewel in this place."

"He's daring it because she is such a jewel, sir," said Freckles eagerly. "Why, she's trusting a rattlesnake to rattle before it strikes her, and, of course, she thinks she can trust mankind as well. The man isn't made that wouldn't lay down the life of him for her. She don't need any care. Her face and the pretty ways of her are all the protection she would need in a band of howling savages."

"Did you say she handled one of the revolvers?" asked McLean.

"She scared all the breath out of me body," admitted Freckles. "Seems that her father has taught her to shoot. The Bird Woman told her distinctly to lie low and blaze away high, just to help scare them. The spunky little thing followed them right out into the west road, spitting lead like hail and clipping all about the heads and heels of them."

"Now, will they come back?" asked McLean.

"Of course," said Freckles. "At least Black Jack will. Wessner might not have the pluck. And the next time"— Freckles hesitated.

"What?"

"It will just be a question of who shoots first and straightest."

"Then the only thing for me to do is to double the guard and get the gang here the first minute possible. As soon as I feel that we have the rarest of the stuff out below we will come. The fact is in many cases until it is felled it's hard to tell what a tree will prove to be. It won't do to leave you here longer alone. Jack has been shooting twenty years to your one, and it stands to reason that you are no match for him. Which of the gang would you like best to have with you?"

"No one, sir," said Freckles emphatically. "Next time is where I run. I won't try to fight them alone. I'll just be getting wind of them and then make tracks for you. I'll need to come like lightning, and Duncan has no extra horse, so I'm thinking you'd best get me one, or perhaps a wheel would be better. I used to do extra work for the home doctor, and he would let me take his bicycle to ride about the place. And at times the head nurse would lend me his for an hour. A wheel would cost less and be faster than a horse and would take less care."

As they walked up to the cabin together McLean insisted on another guard, but Freckles was stubbornly set on fighting his battle alone. He made one mental condition. If the Bird Woman was going to give up the Little Chicken series he would yield to the second guard solely for the sake of her work and the presence of the angel in the Limberlost.

With McLean it was a case of letting his sober, better judgment be overridden by the boy he was growing so to love that he could not bear to cross him, and to have Freckles keep his trust and win alone meant to him more than any money he might lose.

The next morning McLean brought the wheel, and Freckles took it down to the trail to test it. It was new, chainless, with as little as possible to catch in hurried riding, and in every way the best of its kind. Freckles went skimming around the trail on it on a preliminary trip before he locked it in his case and started his minute examination of his line on foot. He glanced around his room as he left it. Off the moss in front of his prettiest seat lay the angel's hat.

"IT WILL JUST BE A QUESTION OF WHO SHOOTS FIRST."

He went and picked it up, oh, so carefully, gazing at it with hungry eyes, but touching it only to carry it over to his case, where he hung it on the shining handle bar of the new wheel and locked it in among his treasures. Then he went out to the trail with a new look on his face. He was not in the least afraid of anything that morning. He felt he was the veriest Daniel, and all his lions seemed weak and harmless.

Black Jack was not a man to give up his purpose or to have the hat swept from his head by a bullet and bear it meekly. Moreover, Wessner would cling to his revenge.

When Freckles gained his room he tenderly laid the hat upon his bookshelf and, to wear off his awkwardness, mounted his wheel and went spinning about the line again.

"Weel, I be drawed on!" exclaimed Mrs. Duncan an hour later.

Freckles stood before her, holding the angel's hat.

"I've been thinking this long time that ye or Duncan would see that sunbonnets werena braw enough for a woman of my standing, and ye're a guid laddie to bring me this beautiful hat."

She turned it about, examining the weave of the straw and the foliage trimmings, passing her rough fingers over the satin ties delightedly. As she held it up, admiring it, Freckles' astonished eyes saw a new side of Sarah Duncan. She was jesting, but under the jest the fact loomed strong that there was something in her soul crying out after that bit of feminine finery. He resolved that when he reached the city he would send her as fine a hat as the angel's if it took $50 to do it.

She lingeringly handed it back to him.

"It's unco guid of ye to think of me," she said lightly, "but I maun question your taste a wee. D'ye no think ye had best return this and get a woman with half her hair gray a little plainer headdress? Seems like that's far ower gay for me. I'm no' saying that it's no' exactly what I'd like to hae, but I mauna mak mysel' ridiculous. Ye'd best give this to somebody young and pretty, say about sixteen. Where did ye come by it, Freckles? If there's anything been dropping lately ye hae forgotten to mention it."

"Do you see anything heavenly about that hat?" queried Freckles, holding it up.

The morning breeze waved the ribbons gracefully, binding one about Freckles' sleeve and the other across his chest, where they caught and clung as if magnetized.

"Yes," said Sarah Duncan, "it's exactly what I'd call a heavenly hat."

"Sure," said Freckles, "for it's belonging to an angel!"

Then he told her about the hat and asked her what he should do with it.

"Take it to her, of course!" said Sarah Duncan.

"You think I should be taking it home?" he said.

"Of course ye must," said Mrs. Duncan. "Ye gang awa and take the blessed little angel her beautiful hat."

"Are you sure it will be all right?" urged Freckles. "Do you think if Mr. McLean came he would care?"

"Na," said Mrs. Duncan, "I dinna. If ye and me agree that a thing ought to be done, and I watch in your place, why, it's bound to be all right with McLean. Ought ye put on your Sab bath day clothes?"

Freckles stook his head. He knew what he had to do, but there was no use in taking time to try to explain it to Mrs. Duncan while he was so hurried. He exchanged his wading boots for shoes, gave her his club and went spinning toward town. He knew very well where the angel lived. He had passed her home many times, and he passed it again without even taking his eyes from the street, steering straight for her father's place of business.

Carrying the hat, Freckles passed a long line of clerks and at the door of the private office asked to see the proprietor. When he had waited a moment a tall, spare, keen eyed man faced him and in brisk, nervous tones asked, "How can I serve you, sir?"

Freckles handed him the package and answered: "By delivering to your daughter this hat, which she was after leaving at me place the other day when she went off in a hurry. And by saying to her and the Bird Woman that I'm more thankful than I'll be having words to express for the brave thing they was doing for me. I'm McLean's Limberlost guard, sir."

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

M'DERMOTT GUILTY OF MANSLAUGHTER

His Sister's Confession of Murder Fails to Save Him

New York, Feb. 1.—James McDermott was convicted of manslaughter in the first degree by a jury notwithstanding the testimony of his sister, Mrs. Theresa Martin, that it was she, and not the defendant, who stabbed to death Charles Muldoon in the back room of a saloon.

The woman made the confession Tuesday when promised immunity, but the judge charged the jury to take into consideration when weighing her testimony that she had lied to the coroner and that she was a participant in a saloon brawl.

The jurors informed the court that they saw through the efforts of Mrs. Martin to make the impression that she, and not McDermott, was guilty of the crime. They gave her credit for a brave sacrifice, but they said her story was not plausible. They explained that they were cognizant of mitigating circumstances, which resulted in their recommendation for mercy.

LOSS NEARLY $300,000

Auto Accident Starts Fire Which Destroys Attleboro Block

Attleboro, Mass., Feb. 1.—It is announced that the loss from the fire which destroyed the Bates block, in the centre of the downtown section, will amount to nearly $300,000.

A party of Brockton physicians, who occupied the car which caused the fire through an explosion, went voluntarily to the police station, and after hearing their story, Chief Wilbur allowed them to go.

The men had been attending the wedding of a former classmate in Providence, and had lost their way. While the driver was making inquiries at a restaurant, the machine suddenly backed through the plate glass window of a specialty shop. The gasolene tank exploded, setting fire to the building.

A WOMAN'S BACK

The Aches and Pains Will Disappear if the Advice of this Quincy Citizen is Followed.

A woman's back has many aches and pains.

Most times 'tis the kidney's fault.

Backache is really kidney ache;

That's why Doan's Kidney Pills cure it.

Many Quincy women know this.

Read what one has to say about it

Mrs. F. Curtis, 18 Quarry St., Quincy, Mass., says: "We used Doan's Kidney Pills in our family with good results and in 1908 publicly endorsed them. At the present time I am pleased to confirm that statement. A member of my family was in bad shape from kidney complaint. He used plasters and several well-known remedies, but did not improve until he began taking Doan's Kidney Pills, which were obtained at Cox's Drug Store. They effected a cure in two weeks and restored him to better health than he had enjoyed for years. I have also taken Doan's Kidney Pills myself and have found them excellent for strengthening the kidneys."

DEWEY LANDS IN A HOSPITAL

Eccentricities of Former Judge Have Astonished Courts

NOW ALLEGED TO BE INSANE

Boston, Feb. 1.—Judge Henry S. Dewey, whose eccentricities have amazed the courts for the past few years, was taken into custody at the courthouse on papers alleging that he is insane and was conveyed to Pierce farm, where he was placed in the psycopathic ward for observation.

Dewey resisted the efforts of W. K. Coburn, a constable of the probate court, and Charles Gaynor, institution registrar, to take him from the courthouse. The two officers were backed by police inspectors, however, and Dewey was dragged into a taxicab, which hustled him to Pierce farm.

Dewey's eccentricities have heretofore astonished judges, lawyers and court attendants, but until last week they were within reasonable bounds, though ludicrous at times. Last week, however, he appeared in court in the full uniform of a brigadier general, with side arms, boots and spurs, to plead the case of a client charged with carrying a concealed weapon.

At that time District Attorney Pelletier succeeded in inducing him to leave the courtroom. After that it was decided to detain Dewey upon his next appearance in court. Gaynor filed the complaint and Judge Grant signed the papers.

It was stated at the courthouse that employes at the office of the district attorney had feared an outbreak on the part of Dewey since he interrupted the session of the superior court last week.

At that time Dewey had been retained as counsel for Robie Skinner, who came into the court for sentence. Dewey wore the uniform of brigadier general, with sword, revolver and spurs that clanked as he entered the courtroom. He created a stir, especially when he slammed revolver and sword on the table in the bar enclosure. He was finally urged outside by the district attorney, who chatted with him for more than an hour.

Dewey was born in Hanover, N. H., in 1856. He was formerly a justice of the municipal court of Boston. While on the bench he made his famous decision in which he said staggering was a legal essential to drunkenness.

Dewey was twice candidate for mayor of Boston, first in 1905 and then in 1909. In the campaign he attracted notice by wearing full dress at his night rallies. On the common during his campaign he spoke continuously for twenty-four hours.

Ashamed.

"John, how much did you give the preacher when we were married?"

"Three dollars."

"Three dollars! I should think you'd have been ashamed."

"I was. That was all that kept me from asking him for 50 cents in change."—Chicago Record-Herald.

MEN SERVE TURKEY SUPPER

The turkey supper given by the men of the Memorial church of Atlantic Wednesday night was similar to what the men have done in years past. As usual the wives and sisters had their part to do while the men were at their daily work. But the men showed up fine at serving Lyndon T. Gurney and Charles R. Safford carved the turkeys and Henry Hallett and Samuel Philbrook took charge of the potatoes; William Buckley and Charles A. Hadlock of the turnips and squash; Charles Letteney of the cranberries; George Deans of the bread and rolls and Winthrop Safford of the pies. The coffee servers were William Northrup and Kenneth Blake.

The waiters were Councilmen E. E. Sodergren, H. Beaman, and Ex-councilman C. A. Hadlock, Messrs. Norton Stetson, Spencer Apollonio, Charles Newcomb, James Houston, J. Hamilton and Percival Hall.

Messrs. H. B. Wells, Charles A. Hall, Wm. F. Cummings, and C. F. Letteney acted as a reception committee and Deacon Edwin French took charge of tickets.

Mrs. Isabel Smith acted as head waitress to see that no man neglected any one by his inexperience, and the men appreciated her excellent oversight.

In the kitchen those women who were the best helpers, the cooks, were Mother Butler, Mrs. T. W. Davison, Mrs. Samuel Philbrook, Mrs. George Night, Jr., Mrs. Charles A. Hall, Mrs. A. H. Hall, and Mrs. B. F. Thomas.

The organist of the Ruggles Street Batpist church, Boston, played the new pipe organ and Rev. Mr Grace sang two excellent solos.

Miss Maud E. Read's selection was very timely and highly appreciated.

The young people all gave their assistance in helping to clear away the feast which made the work lighter for the men.

GET-TOGETHER SUPPER

and no missiles were thrown, yet underneath it all there was an undercurrent. Anybody could see it was merely a question of turning the wheel this way or that, before the entire mob would become infuriated. He could not help but think as he saw the American flag that these flags which mean so much to us were in the hands of men who could not speak English, nor understand it, yet they were men who believed they had a grievance, and he felt that our flag, to mean anything, must be backed by intelligence, it must stand for our best principles and for that which our fathers fought and died.

At the time the speaker was in Lawrence public feeling seemed to be with the strikers They feel that the people working there do not receive a living wage and as these people do not understand our method of life, miserable conditions exist.

Dr. Tupper said he interviewed Mr. Ettor and in spite of what we may read in the papers concerning him, he is one of the mildest, meekest, most unassuming individuals he had ever talked with. The people in Lawrence are completely under his influence, and do exactly as he tells them, and he has absolute control over the crowds.

The operators are striking for a great deal. The immediate cause of the strike being the change from 56 hours to 54, and deduction from their pay. They do not understand the law and feel that the overseers and mill owners are taking advantage of them. They want the same pay for 54 hours work as they received for 56 hours. They also demand a 15 per cent. increase over and above former wages and want to be taken back to work when the strike is settled without black listing. They demand a wage which will enable them to live in decency.

No united action by the churches has been taken in regard to relieving the situation.

A. F. Bromley, secretary of the Quincy Y. M. C. A., was present, with Dr. Tupper. Other guests who were invited failed to appear, presumably on account of the storm.

At the close of the address there were piano solos by Miss Marion Nicoll of Braintree; vocal solos by Mrs. Nason; readings by Miss Helen Martin; vocal duets by Miss Martin and Charles A. Goucher, and a duet by Miss Martin and J. Lawrence Martin.

The church was very prettily decorated with hemlock trees and pinks, the decorating being done by Mrs. F. L. Badger, and Rev. T. C. Martin. The society is indebted to Johnson Bros. of Quincy, for their kind donation of decorations and to Harry Loud of Hall place, for carrying them to the church.

The following committees were in charge: Entertainment, Mrs James R. McCormick and Mrs. F. L. Badger. Supper, Mrs. George Hawes, Mrs. William McCormick, Mrs. F. L. Badger, Mrs. Jose, and Mrs. J. R. McCormick.

A Fool For a Fool's Mission.

The government was contemplating the dispatch of an expedition to Burma, with a view to taking Rangoon, and a question arose as to who would be the fittest general to be sent in command of the expedition. The cabinet sent for the Duke of Wellington and asked his advice. He instantly replied, "Send Lord Cambermere."

"But we have always understood that your grace thought Lord Cambermere a fool."

"So he is a fool, and a —— fool, but he can take Rangoon."—"Collections and Recollections," by One Who Has Kept a Diary.

DEATH OF COUNTY COMMISSIONER

Silas Stone of Sharon, who is serving the second year of his second term as county commissioner, died at his home in Sharon Wednesday night, after a short illness of heart trouble, aged 68 years. Uncle Silas Stone, as he was familiarly known had seen long public service. He was a member of the board of Selectmen of Sharon for 21 years and had also served his district in the legislature. He was a member of St. James lodgeA. F. and A. M. of Mansfield and leaves a widow and one son. Funeral services will be held Saturday at 2.30 from his late home.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES.

The big Junior celebration will take place at the Y. M. C. A., Friday afteronon from 4 until 7. Bennett Springer of Baston has been engaged to furnish the entertainment. He is one of the best known magicians and sleight-of-hand performers in this vicinity and is sure to delight the 60 boys who are to attend. Following the entertainment there will be a supper served by the Boys' Work Committee of the Auxiliary .

The Saturday morning meeting in Y. M. C. A. promises to be one of the best of the season. The story will be one of life in the East side of New York and with the aid of 61 stereopticon views, the slums will be brought before the audience, in all their reality. The lives of two boys reared in this squaled section of the great city are traced from boyhood to youth and from youth to manhood and one can see the effect of the surroundings on each and can also determine the past character had to play in landing one on Blackwell's island and later in Sing Sing and the other in a comfortable home in good quarters of the city. No boy should miss this great story with its profuse illustrations.

WANT QUINCY GRANITE.

The Granite Manufacturers association and Granite Cutters union are making strenous efforts to have the government specify that Quincy granite shall be used in building the $350,000 addition to the Boston custom house. The original building is of Quincy granite and it is believed that the addition should be of the same granite This morning Alexander W. Russell, Secretary of the Granite Cutters union received letters from Senators Lodge and Crane stating that they had already taken up the matter of having Quincy granite used on the new addition, and that they would do all in their power toward accomplishing that end.

SPEED OF BATTED BALLS.

In Hard Infield Hits They Go at the Rate of Sixty Miles an Hour.

Ask any fan how fast an average grounder travels during its first hundred feet from the bat, and his answer will be anywhere from 20 to 200 miles an hour. Split second watches and careful timing of many ground balls have established the fact that the average speed of many ground balls—that is, those struck by the bat of the batsman from a fair pitched ball, which strike the infield before they land in a fielder's hands—go at the rate of almost sixty miles an hour.

Sixty miles an hour is eighty-eight feet per second. The bases are ninety feet apart. A man who can run 100 yards in eleven seconds, which is fast running for any one, but particularly so for a man with baseball shoes and uniform on, can run ninety feet in 3.3 seconds. Is it any wonder that a ball which is fielded in its first 100 feet of travel usually reaches first base just a fraction of a second before or after the runner sets foot upon it?

Every fan knows that the many close decisions at first base form one of the fascinations of the game. The speed of a batted ball, the speed at which a fielder can travel from his position to the point where he can meet and field the batted ball, the speed with which he can stop the ball, pick it up, set himself for the throw, make the throw, the speed of the ball across the diamond from his throw and the speed of the traveling runners are so nicely balanced that it is always a question of whether or not the runner will get there in time for the crowd to see the umpire's hands go down or whether he will face a thumb over a shoulder indicating that he is out.—Technical World Magazine.

THE STORE PROPERTY ROOM.

Holds Articles For Use In Window and Special Displays.

Every one has heard of the theatrical property room—the place where storied artificialities are laid carefully away to be ready for the call of the next emergency. But few persons know that every big store has its property room, too, and that its wonders are even more entrancing than those of the funny cupboards "back stage."

The shop's property room is filled with articles used for window display and special decorations, and, while the theatrical property is largely imitation, the store's property is real.

Rare old tapestries are laid away in the dim hidden chamber, to be used when occasion requires as backgrounds for Paris hats in the Broadway or Fifth avenue windows, as draperies hung beside a choice collection of new hand bags or slippers or fans. Priceless vases from Italy, strange carved chests, wonderful screens—all these lend enchantment to the background of the window display or bring a real intrinsic loveliness to the salon wherein is shown the season's newest millinery.

Many a fashionable New York shop decorates its windows now and then with but one hat, one costume, one piece of furniture. The rest is decoration, background, "property."

The property room is almost always in some queer, faraway corner of the store, a room badly lighted, well nigh inaccessible. But it is full of treasures. It calls back the atmosphere of medieval romance. It is comparable only to an ancient English attic.—New York Times.

COMING EVENTS CALENDAR.

Under this heading will be published every Wednesday and Saturday dates of forthcoming entertainments in the city. A one-line announcement will be inserted free of charge, but if any committee desires more publicity as to place, hour, date, admission, etc., it will be inserted at 25 cents per line each insertion. SPORTING "DOPE"

By B. A.

Don't Knock, Just Boost.—B. A.

Inspired with a confidence as a result of their 33 to 5 victory over the St. Mary's A. A. combination last evening, the much touted players of the St. Joseph's A. A. combination of the West End, will come to St. Mary's Hall, West Quincy, this evening in an endeavor to turn the tables on the Quincy A. A. for the defeat suffered recently at the hands of this latter aggregation. Any one who saw the last game between these contingencies, needs to be told nothing further concerning what is in store for this evening, for in view of the fact that both of the above mentioned teams are conceded to be the two best in the Greater Boston Basketball league, suffice it to say that the game this evening should be the best that has been played in the popular West Quincy rendezvous this season.

The work of the local association has been of a splendid order, most especially in the last few games and as the members of it are now firmly established in first place, a record breaking crowd should be on hand to enable them to adhere still more securely to the pinnacle on which they are now established. The price for admission is nominal and even the closing observance, when all present are given a chance gratis to dance to the light fantastic to the strain of popular music should prove an added incentive in bringing out local fans in large numbers.

I have been informed that the price of admission to the Quincy High games has been changed and that as a result the boys will henceforth be charged twenty cents and the girls fifteen. I regret to say that I cannot approve of this change, inasmuch as I deem such rates to be too high for the average student at the local High school, especially when it is considered that two games are played in the gymnasium of the school each week.

Of course there is no denial of the fact that the spirit existing among the students of Quincy High school, as regards the different athletic teams which represent the school, is not what it should be, and the basketball team of the present season has not been requited the support which it has condignly merited. But I believe that conditions could be better remedied by having recourse to some other methods than an increase in the price of admission. If the proper support is not forthcoming with the price of admission fixed at a low rate, surely it is not to be expected that it will be noticeable as soon as the price of admission is increased. Then too, how can it be taken for granted that all those who have attended the games played thus far, will still attend, now that the change in price of admission has taken place.

Athletics at the local High school could well be put on a paying basis, but not with the employment of the present tactics. In the first place, if the games were played in the evening, the basketball team, composed sa it is of players who are without peers in the interscholastic world, would prove such a drawing card, that it is safe to say that the financial condition of the athletic committee of Quincy High would be unexcelled by any High school athletic committee either in or about Boston. But to attempt to draw conclusions from such an argument would almost be foolish, for those who are in charge of athletics at the loacl school in question, would not tolerate this remedy for placing the athletics of Quincy High school on a successful basis.

But there is another means which could be adopted. Why could not games be played on Saturday afternoons, and thus afford numerous working people, who are at leisure at that time, a chance to witness games of a first class order? Our else, why could not season tickets be sold for a dollar apiece? It seems as if enough of them could be sold without entailing any unnecessary increase in the price of admission. But no, these steps have not as yet been considered and it is highly improbable that any one of them will be put into effect.

Consequently, it remains for the students to take more interest in the welfare of their athletic teams than they have been in the past. Quincy High is in a fine position to carry off the honors for schoolboy basketball players in Eastern Massachusetts, and it certainly is to be hoped that the members of the team will be given thes upport they deserved, for support is a most potent factor in encouraging a team when there is apparently the slightest chance of defeat. If the students once realize the importance of giving the team the proper support, they will then become aware of the part they play in being present at the different games.

The defeat sustained yesterday by Revere High and St. John's "Prep." basketball teams, which up to this critical stage of the season had clean records of victories, placed Quincy High more conspicuously than ever in the limelight for championship honors. The former was beaten by Oliver Ames High, team whose measure the local boys have already taken, by the score of 36 to 11, while the latter succumbed to the Salem Normal five to the tune of 21 to 8. Newton High now seems to be the one team that is pushing the local lads most closely for the honors, but the Granite lads have to date played more games than the above quintet in question. Keep up the good work, Quincy High.

Much anxiety has been expressed of late as to which team is the better, the second team of the Quincy A. A. or the Quincy High five. Many have expressed a desire of having the two meet, but I am unalterably opposed to any such game being scheduled. The High school has yet a long schedule of games to complete, and the present is no time to have its members play any team but one composed of High school students. The members of the Quincy A. A. second team also have a schedule, and they too will have their hands full without playing the High school boys as a side issue.

Schoolboys athletics should be confined to school students, for when High school teams have played with independent organizations in the past, the results have invariably proved most unfavorable. Let each team play in its respective class and then there will be no cause for complaint. Quincy A. A. second team may have the better combination and it may not, but the majority of fans in local circles want to see the laurels for schoolboy players of Eastern Massachusetts come to Quincy, albeit at the same time that they are no less eager that both teams of the Quincy A. A. should emerge in first places in their respective departments of the Greater Boston Basketball league.

Joseph F. Phelan and Everett Prout, both of the Cathedral Y. M. C. A., George A. Sullivan of the B. A. A. and Frank Bruce of the ItIalian American A. C., all prominent runners of the city have entered for the coming B. A. A. indoor run. The first two mentioned will also compete in the Boston College meet, which takes place in the college gymnasium next Monday evening.

The Massachusetts Police baseball league was re-organized yesterday, but as yet we have failed to see any members of our local force enrolled. What's the matter?

FOUR-ALARM FIRE IN BOSTON

Damage amounting from $50,000 to $75,000 was done at a four alarm fire early this morning in the heart of Boston's downtown business district. Guests at the Boston Tavern, Province hotel and Parker house were aroused by the fire and smoke and the occupants of the two former hotels were ordered into the street. The fire started from some unknown cause in an electrical shop at 7 Province court and the block was gutted. Many firemen were injured and it is thought that a negro watchman may have lost his life. The buildings were old and of long standing and were used for business offices and stores.

The report of the treasurer showed the receipts of the year to have been $6,061.63 and the expenditures $6,056.-40 leaving a small balance on hand at the beginning of the year.

The club voted to authorize all past flag officers of the club to wear the insignia of their rank with "Ex" over it.

Annual Banquet of the Board of Trade to be Thus Designated

FEB. 27 THE DATE

The special committee of the Board of Trade to whom was referred with full powers the matter of the annual banquet, met Thursday afternoon at the rooms of the Board in the Adams building at which time the preliminary arrangements were completed. The date for the banquet was fixed as Tuesday Feb. 27 and the place Music hall. In addition to being the annual banquet of the Board it was also decided that it should be known as a complimentary banquet to Admiral Bowles and officers of the Fore River Shipbuilding Co. in consideration of the company having brought $7,000,000 of work to Quincy during the month of January.

The committee also decided that the banquet should be for ladies as well as men.

The special guests of the evening will include President Bowles, F. C. Dumane, Harry Brown, J. Sedgwick, H. G. Smith and S. T. MacQuarrie of the Fore River Co.

As far as speakers, the full list is not as yet made up. President Bowles however has accepted the invitation and also Gen. Hugh Bancroft, chairman of the directors of the Port of Boston.

The other speakers are not certain as yet but the committee hope to secure Mr. Smith president of the Boston Chamber of Commerce and Edward A. Filene of the Metropolitan Planning Commission.

Both of these gentlemen have promised to attend if possible. This means that the banquet of the Board of Trade this year is bound to be one that will show the world that Quincy is very much in evidence on the map at the present time.

EVENING OF RARE PLEASURE

Chopin Reading and Recital by Barraja-Frauenfelder

THE PROGRAM

Those, whose privilege it was, to attend, through the courtesy of Mr. J. Barraja-Frauenfelder, the Chopin reading given by Mr. Enrico Barraja at his studio in The Greenleaf Thursday evening, enjoyed a rare pleasure. Mr. Barraja is a master of technique and the sympathy of trio interpretation cannot be excelled. This combination makes the perfect artist, therefore it is a delight for both laymen and musicians to listen to his playing.

The evening's program was prefaced by a short paper upon Chopin and his works, especially those which Mr. Barraja played later, written and read by Mr. Barraja-Frauenfelder. He spoke of Chopin's short life of barely 40 years, of his place among musicians saying that although he is numbered among the romantic musicians his work belongs to no particular school or nationality, but through his originality and scope of composition his was a universal genius. "A giant among the greatest musicians of all times and all nationalities." Mr. Frauenfelder then took each number on the program and analyzed it. Telling the circumstances under which each was written and of the manner in which the master himself played each composition. The audience then listened to the following program:

PART ONE.

a. Waltz in A minor, op. 34, No.2.
b. Waltz in D flat, op. 70, No. 3.

a. Mazurka in B minor, op. 7, No.3.
b. Mazurka in G minor, op. 24, No. 1.

a. Polonaise in C sharp, minor, op. 26, No. 1.
b. Polonaise in A major, op. 40, No. 1.

PART TWO.

a. Prelude, op. 28, No. 13.
b. Prelude, op. 28, No. 15.

a. Nocturne in G minor, op. 37, No. 1.
b. Nocturne in B minor, op. 72, No. 1.

Grand Polonaise in A flat major, op. 53.

From the first to the last number the guests listened with rapt attention, and from the first dainty waltz through to the masterful Grand Polonaise which completed the program, Mr. Barraja's interpretation was absolutely satisfying. The progrom had been arranged most artistically, permitting a wonderfud range of execution from the "velvet fingered" touch necessary in waltzes and preludes to the marvellous brilliancy and force required for the Polonaise

During the intermission it was a pleasure to listen to a series of songs, sung by Mr. Leone Stroppiana of Naples, who has just come to America. He has a fine robust tenor voice and has sung in opera in his own country, and his rendering of the following songs was greatly enjoyed and appreciated. Aria from Epilogue of Mefistofele, Bosto; A. Marchiarc, Tosti; Mamma Mia Nutole.

TO DEDICATE NEW BUILDING

New Wollaston School Building to be Dedicated Feb. 12

PUBLIC INVITED

Wollastonians are looking forward with anticipation to the date Feb. 12, when the city officials and the Wollatson Parents' and Teachers' association will unite in the dedication of the new Wollaston school.

On that date the building will have been practically completed and it is expected that hundreds will take the opportunity to inspect the school.

The public has been invited to the exercises of dedication on Monday evening, February 12th, at eight o'clock, and it is hoped that all residents of Wollaston will be present.

Following the ceremonies in which the Mayor, chairman of the school committee, superintendent of schools and others will take part, the meeting will be addressed by Henry Turner Bailey, his subject being "Then and Now."

Henry Turner Bailey is the editor of the "School Arts Book" and has for a long time been prominently identified with the State Board of Education. He is a brother of Charles W. Bailey of Wollaston and has many friends in this city.

The meeting will be in charge of Mrs. Walter S. Pinkham, president of the Parents' and Teachers' association of the school.

SOCIALISM THE ONLY RELIEF

Address of Lena Morrow Lewis in Lyceum Course

LAST OF COURSE

The last lecture in the Socialist Lyceum course was given Thursday evening at Alpha hall by Lena Morrow Lewis, one of the foremost platform orators of the day, Her subject was "Socialists at work." Aside from her ability as an orator she is a close student of affairs and a national organizer of the socialist party.

Aside from the subject matter of her lecture, she spoke at length on the Lawrence strike and other strikes, and judging from her implied opinions on the settlement of strikes, her views on the rights of the police and militia to protect property and to safeguard strike-breakers, were decidedly radical and out of harmony with the accepted rights of property owners.

At the outset she discussed social conditions and their relations to government, pointing out that governments are the outgrowth of certain given social conditions and that as those conditions changed governments had also changed. In conclusions to these premises she argued that conditions had so changed as to render the present form of government undesirable, and that the solution lay in the ascendancy of the Socialist party and the establishment of a government whose lawmakers would work in accordance with Socialist ideas and beliefs. She argued that the present political parties were the representatives of two classes of capitalists, the large capitalist and the small one, and that under present conditions there is no party which actualy represents the great masses of the people. Hence, as the Socialist party was formed with the idea of benefitting the masses and had always worked for their interests, the thing to do was to join the Socialist party and further its work and influence.

Mrs. Lewis said in part:

"The country was founded with the paramount importance of the right of man to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness in view. The literature of the first half of the 19th century is filled with references to and encomiums of this right. In the last half of the century we learned that aside

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

The potato crop having failed, people are urged to eat rice. Newly married couples can get several meals from the offerings made at their wedding.

W. R. Hearst has engaged eighteen rooms for the Democratic national convention. As he can go to bed in but one at a time, this is just seventeen too many.

Congressmen who are anxious for a nice summer trip begin to prick up their ears when this "international commission on the cost of living is mentioned.

The amount of time which Mr. Taft spends travelling around is more like a drummer selling political samples than a good agent for Uncle Sam to have on the job.

The expenditure of $20,000 for the Lake Champlain celebration is being criticised, but anything that keeps a number of congressmen out of mischief for several days is to be regarded tolerantly.

They are talking of putting a children's bureau into the department of commerce and labor. We hope Mr. Taft looks into it occasionally and makes the children keep their toys and under-clothes in order.

OLD TIME RADICALISM.

Many of our conservative people feel now-a-days that the foundations of the world are being shaken, by such laws as the inheritance tax and others affecting property rights. They regret the good old days when our statesmen all stood without hitching.

We were therefore much interested, in reading the article "Convictions of a grandfather," in the February Scribner, by Judge Robert Grant, to learn that inheritance taxes were used as far back as the times of Emperor Augustus, A. D. 6, and that the Romans borrowed the idea from the Egyptians, who practiced it still earlier.

This idea running so far back into history is getting a strong foot-hold on our systems of taxation. Many honest property holders feel that no other system of taxation works with such absolute justice. The tax on the living man's stocks and bonds will always be dogged. The honest man would rather pay a heavy impost on such property when he inherits it, than pay a fair tax by driblets while his neighbors are lying out of their burdens.

OLEOMARGARINE.

The old controversy over the taxation of oleomargarine is to be revived in Congress during the coming month.

Oleomargarine was originally invented as a nutritious food product for use of poor people. When made in good factories, it is just as wholesome as butter. Its manufacture is based on the theory that animal fat can be extracted from beef that shall be substantially like the butter-fat in milk that makes butter.

The friends of oleomargarine denounce the tax, which prevents the manufacturers from coloring their product to imitate butter. They think their little deception is no more harmful than the many pleasing little frauds used by the housewife, who knows that the eye must be attracted before the appetite responds.

There would be little feeling against coloring oleomargarine to represent butter, provided every package was clearly and truthfully marked, were it not that hotels, boarding houses, and restaurants would unblushingly place it on the table as the undiluted product of the churn

The travelling man would prefer a little less magnificence in chandeliers, if it meant that these have to be paid for by using doctored lard

The real product of the cow is climbing up to a point where poor people can't afford it. Unless they can persuade the unemployed to move out into God's country and keep cows a great deal more oleomargarine is going to be used. One ninth of all the butter consumed up to a few years ago, when butter was much lower, was of that kind

We read in R. H. Dana's "Two Years Before the Mast" the other day, how the Russians used to eat tallow just as if it were candy. Probably we are all rather absurd in insisting that butter must have the golden sunset tinge, which the butter mixer of the creamery knows much more about than the cow.

If white oleo looks too much like plain democratic lard, why not let the makers tint it brown, or some other good honest shade? But for the sake of the travelling man, we protest against yellow.

PLAUSIBLE SCHEMES

From time to time somebody comes along with some plausible scheme to interest the public and merchants the real object of which is to coin a substantial profit for the promoter. Most of these schemes are run by strangers who travel from place to place, repeating their successes. Having no place or standing in the community where they operate they have nothing to lose in the after reaction and dissatisfaction of those who are bitten. Plausible representations wholly devoid of truth are often made and the promoters are away to new fields before the truth is known. As to these various schemes the Framingham board of trade has begun to protect its members says the Framingham News by banding together to leave all such schemes alone until they have been passed upon by the board's committee. It is a safeguard to be adhered to and encouraged

ROOSEVELT FAVORS PENSIONING MOTHERS

Tells Mrs. Robert E. Park of Wollaston He Cordially Approves of State Helping Dependent Mothers of Large Families.

A letter from Theodore Roosevelt, favoring the pensioning of dependent mothers of large families, was read before the legislative committee on legal affairs, by Mrs. Clara Cahill Park of Wollaston, in advocating the passage of her resolve for a commission to study the question of the support of widows, with dependent minor children, to report as to the advisability of providing for contributions by the commonwealth to such support.

The Roosevelt letter:—

"Of course I most emphatically and cordially approve of pensioning mothers under the circumstances you name. A pension given to such a mother, the mother of a large family who has had to be both father and mother and has done her duty as well, is as much a matter of right as any pension ever given to the most deserving soldier. Good luck to you. I believe in you and the work you are doing with all my heart.

Sincerely yours,

"Theodore Roosevelt."

Mrs. Park's plan was to secure the appointment of an unpaid commission to determine to what extent the state is now losing the services of those who, with proper care in childhood, might have become wealth producers. She declared that mother's love is an asset of which the United States has made but little use, while in Germany it is regarded as such and fostered.

FEWER DAILY NEWSPAPERS

Statistics For Past Year Show They Are Diminishing in Number.

Philadelphia, Jan. 30.—The Newspaper census figures for 1911, compiled by the American Newspaper Annual and Directory, published here today, indicate that multiplication of daily papers in the United States has come to a halt. A year ago the number was 2,472; the 1912 Annual lists 13 less, showing that the trend is now in the downward direction. According to this authority, greater mortality than birth rate is explained by suspension or consolidation of newspapers in crowded and unproductive fields. New England has lost four dailies, New York four, middle west states nine, and the western states have thirteen less than a year ago. Gains have been heaviest in the southern states, while the middle Atlantic section has an increase of three.

Weekly and semi-weekly newspapers also seem to have reached their limit in numbers. The 1912 Annual names and describes 16,229 weeklies, 40 less than in 1911, and 605 semi-weeklies, as compared with 617 in 1911.

The 1912 Annual marks its forty-fourth year, contains more than 1200 pages describing 24,345 newspapers and periodicals, presents ten distinct items about each, including its circulation rating, and gives 1910 census populations for the 11,000 towns in which newspapers are published.

These statistics are gathered from returns by the press of the country and sifted, verified and arranged by the publishers of this directory, who are engaged in such revision throughout the year. The importance of the newspaper publishing industry, likewise the development and rapid increase of advertising, is impressively illustrated in the magnitude of this work.

SAD ACCIDENT

A very sad and most unfortunate accident took place Tuesday, which resulted in the instant death of Mrs. Charlotte Foster Pratt, of 761 Beech street, Manchester, N. H., a most estimable woman, advanced in years. Mrs. Pratt, who was 83 years, 10 months and 22 days old, was following her usual morning custom, shaking rugs at the side piazza door, when it is supposed she was seized with a dizzy spell, slipped and fell to the ground, striking her head on the corner of the side step, killing her instantly.

During this time her daughter-in-law, with whom she lived, Mrs. Lester M. Pratt, was searching the house, wondering where her mother had gone, glancing out upon the snow, she saw her lying motionless. She rushed to her, but there was no sign of life. The accident came as a great shock to the members of the household, and the news was received with deep regret by hosts of friends.

Mrs. Pratt, although nearly 84 years of age, was bright and active. She was born in Hingham, Mass., and had resided, in this city for the past four years, where she has many friends. She was a member of the Universalist church at North Weymouth, Mass. Mrs. Pratt had been in good health this winter, and her untimely death comes as a grievence to the entire community.

The surviving relatives are three sons, Lester M., with whom she made her home, Alton E. and James W. Pratt of Quincy, Mass., seven grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

Prize Snake Yarn.

The Prevaricators' Society of Ballarat and Woolloomoocloo was proceeding in peace and harmony till the snake story man spoke. "Some people," he said, "consider the snake hasn't got any sense; but they're wrong. For instance, once when I was in India, I saw a Hindu mother place her year-old baby outside the hut to sun himself, and to keep his spirits up she gave the little chap a big feeding bottle of milk. Well, as I watched, I saw a snake insinuate itself close up to that child. My heart was in my mouth. I feared for the baby. But, bless you, the snake was only after the milk! He just slipped the teat out of the child's mouth and into his own, and then the thoughtful and kindly reptile put the end of his tail into the child's mouth by way of a comforter!"

With a great sob the president of the society arose and handed the laurel which encircled his brow to the snake-story man.

And then they passed silently into the night.—Tit-Bits.

EDWIN HAWLEY

Long a Prominent Figure In the Railroad World

DEATH OF EDWIN HAWLEY

Railroad Magnate Had Suffered From Nervous Indigestion

New York, Feb. 2.—Edwin Hawley, one of the leading railroad magnates in this country, died at his home here after an illness of several weeks.

Hawley had been a sufferer from nervous indigestion for some time, and for the last few weeks had been confined to his house.

The fortune of Hawley is estimated at between $40,000,000 and $75,000,000. He was the dominant factor in more than a dozen railroad companies. He was particularly able as a financial physician for crippled roads. He was born in Chatham, N. Y., in 1850.

MASS FOR CARDINAL ATTENDED BY 3000

O'Connell Occupies His New Throne For the First Time

Boston, Feb. 2.—In the cathedral, aglow with lights and rich in artistic decorations, an elaborate religious ceremony of unusual pomp and splendor was solemnized in honor of the elevation of William Cardinal O'Connell. A congregation of over 3000 witnessed the ceremonies, saw the cardinal in the full robes of his new office, listened to an address of welcome by Bishop Anderson and heard the cardinal respond.

Solemn pontifical mass of thanksgiving was celebrated by Bishop Nilan of Hartford. The cardinal occupied his new throne for the first time.

In the congregation were representatives of the federal, state and city governments. Prominent members of the laity from almost every parish of the archdiocese were present. Several hundred clergymen were present and representatives of various religious bodies attended in large numbers.

"ABOLISH DIVORCE LAWS"

Privilege Has Been Misused, According to Michigan Judge

Ann Arbor, Mich, Feb. 2.—"Abolish the divorce laws of Michigan," is the advice of Judge Kinne, who has sat on the circuit bench of this county for the last quarter of a century.

"Hitherto as a rule I have administered the law as I found it on the statute books," said Kinne. "It seemed to me that divorce was the only escape from brutality, wretchedness and hopeless unhappiness, but of late the privilege of divorce has been misused and I have witnessed such flagrant disregard for truth, morality and decency that my former convictions have experienced considerable modification—if not revolution."

CALLED A "GOOD RISK"

Chicago Woman Leads Her Sex With Insurance of $1,200,000

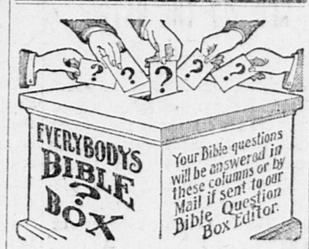

Chicago, Feb. 2.—Mrs. Charles Netcher, extensive owner of downtown property, is, so far as known, the holder of the largest amount of life insurance now carried by any woman. She has just taken out a policy for $200,000, making the total amount now carried by her $1,200,000.

After the death of her husband, in 1904, Mrs. Netcher took charge of his business affairs, and soon became what is called in insurance circles a "good risk."

Will Tear Down "Haunted" School

Warrenville, Ills., Feb. 2.—Stories of ghosts haunting the schoolhouse here, in which Sylvester Adams shot and killed Miss Edith Smith, the teacher, on Jan. 10, and afterward committed suicide, have frightened the children away from the building and now the residents of the district are going to raze the structure.

Q.—Is a lie ever justifiable? (H. V. D.)

Answer.—The development of character is the main purpose of our present existence. The importance of this work is manifest when we reflect that our interests throughout eternity depend entirely upon the kind of character we develop in this life. It is by contending against adverse influences that character is formed. Nearly all of the influences of the conditions of this life are opposed to the principles of righteousness. Those who are willing to fight the good fight of faith, struggling to rise against the downward tendencies of this present evil world, are assured of a high and heavenly reward in the life to come, as well as receiving the reward in this present time of a clear conscience and the glorious satisfaction of having lived a noble, honest life. Those who follow the lines of least resistance, drifting with the tide, may think theirs is the easiest way, but this is only vain delusion, for, after all, they have travelled the hardest way. "The way of the transgressor is hard." (Proverbs xiii, 15.) A lie is never justifiable; and not only so, it is unprofitable. It weakens one's character in proportion to the enormity of the offense involved in the relating of the lie. Every step away from truth will have to be retraced either in this life or the life to come. Throughout the Scriptures lying is condemned. Satan is called "A liar from the beginning." The character of the Lord Jesus is the Standard of righteousness set before us, and in all His earthly experiences He set forth the truth and condemned the error. He spoke the truth at all times, and when it was not expedient to tell the truth, He was silent.

BOY SCOUTS GREET HERO OF MAFEKING

He Has Become the Idol of Young New Englanders

Boston, Feb. 2.— Athousand Boy Scouts from all over New England wildly cheered Genereal Baden-Powell in the drill room of the Boston Latin school yesterday afternoon.

Baden-Powell, clad in his Scout uniform, stood before them and told them that he, as a Scout, brought them the heartiest greetings by the request of the Boy Scouts of England and the American Boy Scouts in Panama. He emphasized the furtherance of world peace through the Scout movement.

For fully five minutes the youngsters shrieked and cheered and whistled and showed in every way that the British general who is the hero of the siege of Mafeking has become their idol.

For over an hour Baden-Powell had watched keenly every demonstration given by the Scouts, and now and again asking details of those who came before him, why they tied a bandage knot in this manner, or commending them for some Scout feat they had done well.

Then he listened for part of a second hour to addresses by Scout officers, and it came his turn to speak. The general took occasion to drive home to the boys that one of their purposes is international peace.

BOLDUC JURY DISAGREES

Unable to Reach a Verdict After Being Out Twenty-Four Hours

Boston, Feb. 2.—At the end of twenty-four hours of deliberation the jury in the Bolduc case was discharged, as the panel had been unable to agree upon a verdict concerning any of the four defendants. Assistant District Attorney Laville announced that he would ask the court later to assign the case for another trial this month.

The four defendants are: Mrs. Annie W. Reed and Miss Mary O'Neil, charged as principals, and Dr. John D. Ferguson and Mrs. Jennie M. Shattuck, indicted as accessories.

Miss Marie A. Bolduc, 20 years of age, a Manchester, N. H., mill girl, was found dead at Mrs. Shattuck's apartment on Dec. 22, and the medical examiner testified in court that she had died, in his opinion, as the result of an operation. The trial lasted for two weeks.

LOSS OF OVER $1,000,000

Fire Quickly Wipes Out Big Sugar Plant In Halifax

Halifax, Feb. 2.—Fire last night destroyed the Woodside plant of the Acadia Sugar Refining company here, entailing a loss estimated at more than $1,000,000.

The fire started in a large wooden warehouse on the water front. The flames made short work of this structure and shot across the railway tracks to the seven-story brick building of the refinery proper. The spread of the blaze in this structure was so rapid that some of the workmen had difficulty in escaping with their lives, and one of their number, named Hennebery, is believed to have perished.

In a remarkably short time nothing was left of the big plant except the boiler house. The plant is in an isolated territory, and the rapid spread of the fire prevented the firemen from doing effective work in fighting it.

Penalty of Initials.

"It has been my observation," said the pretty girl, "that the greatest difficulty a girl experiences at a co-educational college is disposing of the quantities of shaving soap sent her by manufacturers who copied the names of the entire student body from lists where boys and girls alike are registered by their initials and distributed the samples of soap impartially with the request that the recipient write a testimonial to the effect that it is the best shaving soap she ever used."

Philosophical.

A German and his wife came into a nice little fortune through the death of the wife's father, who was sick a long time and suffered a good deal.

A neighbor tried to express his sympathy, but was interrupted.

"He suffered much," said Karl. "He's better off und so are we."

Architecturally Speaking.

"I am the architect of my own fortune," said Mr. Dustin Stax.

"Well," replied Mr. Holden Howes, "by being your own architect you're liable to get some curious effects, but you do save a lot of money on plans and specifications."

AMUSEMENTS

DOINGS ON THE STAGE OF

LOCAL AND BOSTON THEATRES

HOLLIS STREET THEATRE.

Romance of any period strikes a sympathetic chord in every breast, but it strkes more strongly when the romance deals with the early period of the United States for it is evident that the men and women of those times who felt every phase of life so deeply that they fought to the death for principle enjoyed real romance. It is in this period that the scenes and action are laid for "The First Lady in the Land," in which Miss Elsie Ferguson will appear for one more week only, at the Hollis Street Theatre starting Monday night. "The First Lady In The Land" is essentially a comedy, the laughter being rampant throughout, but there are sterner moments when the love story of Dolly Todd, the historical Philadelphia Quakeress who afterwards presided in White House festivities for nearly a score of years, are being unfolded. And it is a romance that will live in the memory of those who witness it; one of those strong stories fitting the times, and with a subtle current of genuine human nature running through it.

Miss Ferguson attained stardom in "Such A Little Queen," but she is said to be destined to attain greater fame in her new vehicle. It is a piece and character that fits her delightful personality to perfection. She has found the character of Dolly Todd to her liking, and makes a living pulsating heroine of history step from the pages of memory and history.

PLYMOUTH THEATRE.

The charming personality and popularity of Miss Viola Allen, combined with a play containing a timely theme appealing to all, makes "The Herfords," the current attraction at the Plymouth Theatre, Boston, one of the season's best plays. The manner in which the play has "caught on" gives promise that it will have a long prosperous run in Boston. What's more the play has already aroused a widespread discussion and many people who have witnessed this absorbing play of mother-love are convinced that the woman's place in life is her home and love for her children. At least this is what Rachel Crothers, the author of this fascinating play, characterizes in the big scene of the play. It displays obviously the danger elements of a woman's effort to achieve a business career and how she carelessly neglects that love naturally due her husband and children. Miss Crothers, who is also responsible for two other big successes "The Three of Us" and "A Man's World" makes a clear picture of the problem and answers it most satisfactorily in the last scene of the play. Still it is safe to say that a great many people may not agree with her. At any rate "The Herfords" is one of those plays that teaches a strikingly effective moral that no man or woman can afford to miss. Miss Allen, who is seen at her best in the role of the sculptress, who endeavors to outdistance her husband in her achievement of a high business career, is surrounded by one of the most notable casts seen in Boston in a long time, headed by Charles Waldron, who is well remembered for his brilliant portrayal of the managing editor in "The Fourth Estate."

B. F. KEITH'S

Thomas A. Wise, who was last seen in Boston as a co-star with Douglas Fairbanks in "A Gentleman From Mississippi," will make his first appearance in vaudeville in Boston next week at B. F. Keith's Theatre. For this engagement Mr. Wise has been unusually fortunate in the choice of a vehicle. He will appear in a one-act comedy entitled "A Chip of the Old Block," originally produced at one of the Lambs' Gambols in New York, and declared by all who have seen it to be one of the most genuinely funny sketches ever staged. Mr. Wise will be supported by a splendid company, and the engagement of this well known legitimate star should prove one of the most notable features of the season at B. F. Keith's Theatre. Another remarkable feature that is bound to be of especial interest to the thousands of people throughout New England who have laughed at the antics of "Mutt and Jeff," will be Bud Fisher. Mr. Fisher's cartoons are known from coast to coast, chiefly through their publication in the great Hearst chain of newspapers. He will demonstrate to the B. F. Keith audiences just how he draws these funny pictures. Belle Blanche, the mimic and prima donna comedienne, will return after a three year's absence, and other splendid features will be Lulu McConnell and Grant Simpson in a new comedy sketch.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

"The Product of the Mill" has started off with every promise of success on its run at the Castle Square. The theatre last Monday was crowded to the doors, and throughout the week there were very increasingly large audiences anxious to see this second annual Harvard-Radcliffe Prize Play. Remembering the great success of "The End of the Bridge" last season, many have been drawn to see this drama and none have been disappointed.

The realism of "The Product of the Mill" takes hold of the audience at the very beginning, and never relaxes for a moment till the close when the little boy is returned to his mother's arms after many adventures that hold the rapt attention. The love of father and mother for child, the most human and appealing of emotions, pervades the entire play, and it is lightened throughout with glimpses of humor, and best of all with a perfectly satisfactory happy ending.

The cotton mill scene is especially successful, and none the less are the other acts in which is shown the happy New York home at the beginning of the play, the exterior of the mill, and the poverty stricken cabin of the Hinks's. The child interest prevails continuously, and in the role of the little lost waif, Miss Henriette McDannel is recalling her popularity, although in a widely different role, as Peter in "The End of the Bridge."

It is its nearness to life and to humanity that gives "The Product of the Mill" its popularity. The acting, moreover, does its share, and with Mary Young as the mother, John Craig as the father, and George Hassell, Donald Meek, Walter Walker, Mabel Montgomery and Mabel Colcord in the other leading parts, a well rounded performance is assured. At one time, in the mill scene, there are one hundred people on the stage.

"BARON TRENCK"

All lovers of "The Chocolate Soldier," "The Merry Widow" and "The Balkan Princess" will await with pleasant anticipation the coming to the Shubert Theatre next week, of "Baron Trenck," which will be presented there on Monday evening, Feb. 5th, by the Whitney Opera Company, under the direction of Mr. F. C. Whitney, who presented "The Chocolate Soldier" in this country. "Baron Trenck" has been the reigning sensation of the European cities for nearly two years. The story is based on incidents of the wars between Marie Teresa and Frederick the Great. The music is by Felix Albini, the book by Henry Blossom, who wrote the "Red Mill" for Montgomery and Stone, and the lyrics are by Frederick F. Schrader and Henry Blossom.

A number of the members of the original European cast have been brought to this country to interpret and sing the principal roles. Heading the cast are: Fritz Sturmfels of the Royal Opera House at Leipsic; Blanche Duffield, prima donna, John Slavin, comedian, Ethel Dufre Houston and Perle Barti. There will be an orchestra of 40 soloists under the direction of Signor Antonio de Novellis. The action takes place in Silesia, in 1759. Needless to say the scene and the period give ample opportunity for wonderful costuming and picturesque scenery. The company numbers over 100 people.

BUFFALO JONES.

Motion pictures of unusual interest will be the leading feature of Col. Charles J. (Buffalo) Jones' lecture in Tremont Temple on the afternoons and evenings of Feb. 13, 14, 15 and 16. His subject will be "Lassooing Wild Animals in Africa" and he will tell of his exploits in the interior of that continent. Buffalo Jones followed much the same route as did Theodore Roosevelt during his celebrated hunting tour of Africa. He went right into the midst of the wild animals and their lairs, and he will give a vivid account of his perils, his dangers and his hairbreadth escapes. Seats are now on sale for the entire series at the Tremont Temple box office.

MOTOR BOAT SHOW.

Already the tremendous amount of business that has been transacted by the exhibitors at the ninth annual Motor Boat and Engine Show in Boston has demonstrated the great commercial value of the show, to say nothing of the great interest manifested by the general public.

This year's exhibition completely surpassed in every respect all its predecessors, and as a boat show, has never been approached in this or any other country. The building has been thronged daily since the opening night, and a large percentage of those that attended were prospective purchasers, or were directly interested in boat motoring. The diversity of exhibits and the many novelties shown delighted everybody, the laymen as well as the man who owns or runs a boat.

There was a crowd of enthusiastic admirers always to be found about the little yawl Sea Bird, which with her sails set, loomed up quite formidable among the smaller motor driven craft. However, she is certainly a small boat in which to tempt "Fate" on her trans-Atlantic voyage, which was made by Capt. Thos. Fleming Day last October, from Providence, R. I., to Rome, Italy. The "Wind Jammers" were enthusiastic over her.

The speed fiends found plenty to interest them in the June Bug, the little 14 foot hydroplane which has a speed record of 32 miles an hour and in the handsome speed launches and runabouts, with their high powered engines of magnificent construction. The cabin boats and sea-going cruisers, and the splendid line of gurnet dories created much interest. The engine display covers practically every type of marine motor while the self-starter and many new devices and accessories are shown for the first time.

All New England is interested in this wonderful show, and its boat loving public will no doubt throng Mechanics' building for the remainder of the show.

PASSES FIRST MILESTONE

Rand Class Celebrates Event Supper and Address

NEW OFFICERS

The passing of its first milestone was fittingly celebrated by the Rand class with a supper and election of officers in the chapel of the Wollaston Baptist church, Thursday evening

The speaker of the evening was Rev. Edward L. Cleveland, associate pastor of the First Baptist church of Malden and teacher of the large Morse class of that church, numbering in its membership over one hundred men.

His talk was along the line of class work and his remarks were a source of inspiration to all present.

The Rand class is an organization of the young men of the Wollaston Baptist church formed on February 5, 1911 and since that time has grown consistently

Its teacher James L. Rand left a thriving class of the same name in South Boston to assume charge of this class. Already the class has made itself a factor in the social uplift of the community and welcomes to its ranks any not affiliated with any other denomination. Its motto is "The other fellow."

The exercises opened with a few words of welcome by the president Charles M. Roach and were followed by a report of the year's work by J J. Floyd the secretary.

The report of the nominating committee was read by Earl Church and the following were unanimously elected:

Teacher,—James L Rand.
Assistant Teacher,— Charles M. Roach
President,—Charles M. Roach.
Vice President—William Bullock
Secretary,—Harold Neal
Treasurer,—Otis Wheeler
Membership Committee,—Nathan C. Drew, Lester A. Porter, John Hill, Devotional Committee,—William Bullock, Percy Foss, Alfred Luxton.
Social Committee,—George Drew, Ernest V. Roberts, Ralph W. Ford.
Athletic Committee,—J. J. Floyd, Murray McLoud, William Bartlett.

President Roach in a well turned speech spoke of the good work Mr. Rand had been doing and on behalf of the class presented him with a gold watch chain

Mr. Rand was taken completely by surprise "This is so sudden," he said, "There is a certain animal with a beard and horns that emits a peculiar noise Well—you've got mine." Mr. Rand spoke of the growing sympathy and friendship he had for the class and how he was getting better acquainted with the members individually.

In his address Mr Cleveland spoke of organization and the strength of organized classes. We should remember however that its primal object is not social, intellectual or physical but religious. Here in the class should the young men find expression for their religious life.

The secret of men's classes is to have every man at work at something for which he is adapted. We should aim to develop manliness in the affairs of the school and church and make the church what it should be.

In conclusion the speaker mentioned the value of consolidated interests and efforts and the results that might be accomplished collectively in a body.

Elford L. Durgan, superintendent of the Sunday school brought a few words of inspiration and spoke of the need of young men in the Sunday school.

Rev. Joseph Walther spoke his hearty congratulations upon the work the past year and the great nucleus they had to build earnest, straight, fair minded fellows of ability.

The evening closed with a flashlight picture of the class by Kendall F. Harriman of the Boston Herald staff

TWO SAVED AT MIDNIGHT IRE

Fire Apparatus Has Hard Time Climbing Cranch Hill

LOSS $500

The alarm from Box 24 at 12.05 this morning was for a lively blaze in the house of Mrs. Nellie Mitten at 7 Bedford street occupied by Albert W. Wilschier, his wife and son and Walter T. Good, brother of Mrs. Wilschier. The fire is supposed to have started from a barrel of rubbish in the cellar. It made considerable smoke and the fire worked up through the walls giving the firemen a hard fire to get at.

The family had all retired and the two men were aroused by the smoke. About this same time Axel Grant was passing, and saw the fire and rang in the alarm from Box 24.

The first thing the men did was to get the women to a place of safety. Mr. Wilschier took his son in his arms and carried him out and Mr. Good carried out his sister. They were taken to a neighbor's house.

The fire department has considerable difficulty in reaching the scene. The auto chemical climbed the slippery hill with ease and at good speed but the other apparatus had a hard time, although drawn by extra horses.

All of the apparatus with the exception of the Wollaston truck which was drawn by two horses, eventually succeeded in climbing the Cranch street hill. Had it not been for the auto chemical which carries hose, it is doubtful if the building would have been saved. At it was it was pretty well gutted inside, the loss being estimated at $50.

STANDING ROOM AT PREMIUM

A most successful meeting, with the largest attendance of the year, was held by the Parents' and Teachers' association of the Massachusetts Fields school, Thursday evening when Charles H. Johnson delivered his illustrated lecture on "Historic Quincy."

An audience that overflowed the seating capacity and made even standing room at a premium assembled. As guests of the association were the pupils of the Eighth Grade.

The meeting was in charge of the president, Sidney E. Smith and the program opened with selections by a quartet consisting of Roger Allen, Frank Fulton, Raymond Fowler and Archibald Briggs. Their numbers consisted of "He that hath a pleasant face" and "Which is the proper day to sing."

The lecture of Mr. Johnson was as entertaining and instructive as ever, being illustrated with over 200 fine stereopticon views. At the close "America" was sung by the audience at the request of the speaker. "Just being happy" and "Merry Ducks" were rendered by a quartet composed of William A. Mann, Raymond Fowler, Archibald Briggs and George E. Allen. Miss Gertrude Allen accompanied both quartets. The evening closed with a social hour.

Out From Obscurity.

Jones had had a leg up in the world and was mighty proud of his new position. Not long since he met a man who in his submerged days had been his chum, but who had remained in the old rut.

"Hallo, Brown!" said Jones, smirking at his friend. "You haven't been to see my new house yet. Can you come on Friday?"

Brown expressed pleasure at the thought.

"Yes," continued Jones, "we're having a small party. Er—my daughter's coming out, you know."

Brown scratched his head meditatively. His mind wavered. A stab of sudden recollection came to him.

"I've just remembered, old chap," said he. "Our Jim's coming out on Friday. He's had 15 days."

Jones looked pained.

"But," added his old friend, "how long's your daughter had?"—Exchange.

Out of the Ordinary.

An M. P. was discussing voting frauds—impersonation and the duplication of votes generally. He instanced one duplicator, an ignorant fellow who had the stolid and unmoved look of an animal.

"When they arrested him he asked what crime lay at his door.

"'You are charged,' said the policeman, 'with having voted twice.'

"'Charged, am I?' muttered the prisoner. 'That's odd. I expected to be paid for it.'"—Watchdog, London.

FARMERS' BALL.

Long's hall, Braintree, transformed for the occasion into a large barn was the scene of a merry party Thursday evening at the ninth annual farmers' ball under the auspices of the Braintree Club. Artistic arrangements of straw, farming implements, to say nothing of ducks and the prize heifer gave a true rural setting for the country lads and lassies in rustic costumes who came to trip the light fantastic.

The members of the orchestra, dressed as "Rubes" paraded the hall followed by several aspirants for prizes as a preliminary to the dancing. After a few numbers had been played, the floor was cleared and there was a procession of club members dressed as farm hands who acted as escort for those who came in fancy garb to compete for honors.

The following judges were chosen from the floor: Elmer E. Abercrombie, Colonel A. C. Drinkwater, Richard Cronin, Miss Katherine Glennon and Miss Gertrude Mahar. After a short consultation, the first and second prizes were awarded respectively to Miss Charlotte Barnicoat of Quincy and Mrs. L. Thurlow Torrey of South Braintree while L. Thurlow Torrey of South Braintree, Arthur Spargo of Quincy and Alden J. Belcher of Braintree were rewarded in the order named.

There was a large attendance at the ball and all seemed in merry mood dancing to the delightful music rendered by Dennehy's orchestra. A popular feature of the evening were the "moonlight" waltzes. Ice cream was on sale in "the harness room" for all who cared to indulge. At 10.30 o'clock the heifer, which was an interested spectator of the proceedings during the evening, was awarded to Mrs. Eva La Rose of Crescent avenue, South Braintree.

The gentlemen of the club in charge of the floor were as follows: Boss of the barn, Carl P. Lothrop, Assistant bosses, Walter H. Howland, Moses McGaughey, Seth Catlin, Jr. Chester Wilson, Farm hands, Dudley P. Howland, John B. Dyer, Dr. C. V. Harworth, Herbert Dennehy, Alfred DeCoste, James G. Cuff, G. Dallas Willis, Jr., Henry Barnes, Norton P. Potter, Wallace Wilson, Fred Weston, Chas. H. Bailey, Frank T. Lyons, L. E. Marshman.

from the sentiment that underlay this Democracy, the cold, hard fact remained that unless you have a job or a job to let to someone else, you have no right to live.

"We have seen the demands of economic conditions, the factor that determines government constantly change governments. Of this change brought about by economic conditions, and of the way in which men will change governments in order to preserve economic conditions, there is no better example than the Civil war."

The real reasons for the war between the north and south the speaker declared was, mainly the differences in economic conditions, that brought about the conflict and pointed out the real significance of the Emancipation Proclamation.

She concluded her lecture with an appeal for all those desirous to see the rights of the people taken care of, to join the Socialist party club and for those who voted the ticket and did not belong to the club to do so. In this connection she described the organization of the party in detail.

—Of course there are some papers in Massachusetts that cry out against the great plans for improving this port, though there is not a hamlet in the State that will not benefit just as much as will Boston, in proportion to its trade and inclination to get busy. Why cannot we all in New England try now to realize that to be great we must look at things in a large way? What is the use of forever playing the old dog-in-the-manger policy? Some New Englanders are willing to work very hard to keep this region small.—Hyde Park Gazette.

STRIKERS WILL FREE LEADER

Threat of "Other Means" If Habeas Corpus Fails

ENGAGE PROMINENT LAWYERS

No Permanent Chairman of Executive Committee Will Be Elected In Ettor's Place—Many Workers Returning to Lawrence Mills Without Hindrance—One Agent Fears That Mechanism of Plant May Be Put Out of Commission—Campaign For State-Wide Strike Being Planned

Lawrence, Mass., Feb. 2.—Plans for securing the release of their leader, Joseph J. Ettor, who is locked up awaiting a hearing on a charge of being an accessory to murder in connection with the death of Anna Lopizzo, have occupied the attention of the heads of the big textile strike.

Thursday was one of the quietest since the strike was inaugurated three weeks ago, and, although more operatives reported for work, observers declare that in no instance did any of the larger mills have more than 25 percent of their usual force on hand. Those who chose to go to the mills were unmolested, even the usual strike pickets being absent. The usual strict military rule was maintained throughout the city.

Secret sessions of the executive committee of the strikers were held during the day, and after an evening gathering it was announced that active steps would be taken today to secure the release of Ettor.

The latter is now being held without bail for a hearing Feb. 9, Judge Chandler, before whom he was arraigned, having declared that there was no precedent to allowing bail on such a charge.

Will Seek Habeas Corpus

The strike committee has secured the services of prominent attorneys, and it is understood that they will endeavor to have Chandler take the matter up again that they may cite to him some precedents for releasing the prisoner. Failing in this habeas corpus proceedings may be instituted.

William D. Haywood said last night that in case habeas corpus proceedings fail to get Ettor out of jail some other means will be resorted to. Haywood added that no permanent chairman of the executive committee will be elected in Ettor's place and that the direction of the strike and the conduct of committee meetings for the present will be in the hands of any leader who happens to be in the city.

William B. Powers of Middleboro was taken to the hospital last night, suffering from a wound which the police said was inflicted by a bayonet. Powers is said to have been mixed up in a disturbance near the Everett mills, but the military authorites refused to give any information about the incident. The hospital physicians said the wound was not serfous.

For State-Wide Strike

The campaign to spread state-wide the strike which is in progress here will be launched next week, when a corps of agitators are to visit all the big textile centres of Massachusetts.

James W. Thompson, head organizer of the Industrial Workers of the World, who arrived in this city yesterday afternoon from New York, declared that an immediate effort would be made to involve in the strike the thirty-six mills operated by the American Woolen company.

William D. Haywood left for New York last night. Before he went he declared that the general strike which is to be inaugurated will be assisted by the National Socialist party. He will return to Lawrence Wednesday. In the meantime he will visit Fall River, New Bedford, Woonsocket and Providence with the speakers who are to organize the textile workers in those centres.

Mill Owners Worrying

The fact that many of the workers have returned to the mills has created alarm among the mill owners. Fears are entertained that grave trouble may arise at any time, for it is believed that among the number to return are members of the I. W. W.

One of the most prominent mill owners in the city declared that for the first time since the strike was started he was thoroughly scared. This agent admitted that he feared some of the returning workers might successfully destroy enough of the mechanism in his mill to put it out of commission.

Joseph Ettor said before his arrest: "If you must be forced back by starvation, emery dust could be put in the oil and in the machinery."

Meetings of "Inner Circle"

Detectives and plain clothes officers brought word to the police and military officials last evening that a dozen secret meetings had been held among the leaders of what is called the "inner circle," and that they feared trouble as a result of these deliberations.

What specific information they obtained could not be learned. But Colonel Sweetser sent a detachment of troops to the waterworks plant and the electric lighting plant for guard duty. Orders were issued to close every alleyway and no one will be allowed to walk through them. These are points which have heretofore been left unguarded.

A large detachment of troops were held in reserve in the vicinity of Elm street during the funeral services of the Syrian who was killed by a bayonet thrust Tuesday night.

The body was taken yesterday afternoon to the little Syrian church, and, while the auditorium was packed to overflowing, the priests chanted their weird rites before the candle-lighted altar. A male choir sang Syrian hymns and nearly 100 hacks were in the funeral procession.

The same tranquility which has marked the past two days was evident throughout these proceedings and all day. The police officials say that it is like the calm before a storm. The secret meetings being held are taken as important signs.

DOG LIKES HIS PIPE

Not Cruelty to Have Him Exhibited In a Store Window

New York, Feb. 2.—It is not "cruelty to animals" to put a pipe in a dog's mouth and make him exhibit his proficiency as a petended smoker in public, according to a decision by Magistrate Kernochan.

A woman agent of a humane society complained against a cigar dealer whom she charged with cruelty in making an English bull dog stand on his hind legs in a show window and attract the attention of passersby by holding a pipe in his mouth.

"I don't think there is anything in that," said Kernochan. "Holding a pipe in my mouth is a pleasure."

The dealer told the magistrate that the dog was well cared for, and when the pipe was taken away from him he barked and begged for it. Kernochan dismissed the case.

NEW FEATURES IN OHIO CONSTITUTION

Relate to Civil Trials and Use of Name of the Deity

Columbus, O., Feb. 2.—The first proposal to amend the constitution, which has received committee indorsement, is that of Professor Elson of Ohio university, to provide that in civil cases a verdict may be returned by not less than three-fourths of a jury. At present it must be a unanimous verdict. The convention will pass upon it next week.

The convention evinces a disposition to avoid putting into the constitution anything of a legislative nature and lays down in it only basic principles by indefinitely postponing fifteen proposals of a legislative character.

It also indefinitely postponed a proposal to put the name of the Deity into the preamble and another to provide that the fact that a person is an infidel shall not affect his competency or reliability as a witness in court.

OWES WHITNEY $500,000

Rhode Island Coal Company Goes Into Hands of Receiver

Boston, Feb. 2.—A receiver was appointed for the Rhode Island Coal company upon the petition of Henry M. Whitney, the president of the concern.

John T. Burnett was appointed as the receiver by Judge Dodge of the United States district court.

Whitney stated in his petition that the company owed him $500,000, while there was only $135.39 in cash in the treasury.

The stock of the Rhode Island Coal company slumped badly the last week of last year. The stock dropped as low as 47 cents at that time, although at one time in the history of the company the stock, capitalized at $10 a share, sold as high as $12.50 a share. Yesterday the stock sold at 30 cents a share.

AS MEMORIAL TO HUSBAND

New York Woman Leaves $1,000,000 For Model Homes For Tenants

New York, Feb. 2.—More than $2,000,000 is to be distributed in charitable bequests provided by the will of Caroline Neustadter, which was filed yesterday afternoon. Half of the amount is left to trustees with which to found a corporation as a memorial to her husband, Henry Neustadter, to build and maintain model homes for tenants of moderate means.

Other bequests to public institutions include $100,000 each to the Hebrew Benevolent and Orphan Asylum society and Mt. Sinai hospital.

NEW INQUIRY IS NOW SOUGHT

Shoes, Shoe Machinery and Wool Are the Subjects

PROPOSAL OF DIFENDERFER

It Recalls Clash Between Him and Gardner of Massachusetts, In Which Pennsylvanian Charged Monopoly In Army Contracts—Resolution Favorably Reported by Rules Committee—Animosities May Be Repeated

Washington, Feb. 2.—The American Woolen company, the United Shoe Machinery company, the Herman Shoe company of Boston and others are attacked by a resolution reported favorably by the house committee on rules.

The author of this resolution is Representative Difenderfer, Dem., of Pennsylvania, and it is the outgrowth of a controversy between the Pennsylvania man and Representative Gardner of Massachusetts which took place on the floor of the house last spring, Difenderfer charging that the army and navy shoe contracts are monopolized by the Herman people of Massachusetts and Gardner declaring that he had never heard of Herman.

Should the house accord with the report of the committee on rules a special committee on expenditures in the war department will be appointed, with power to hold hearings outside of Washington and to take testimony under oath.

Mr. Difenderfer says that this investigation will disclose a bad state of affairs. He points out that the reports of the secretary of war show that the Herman Shoe company has furnished practically 100 percent of the shoes which the government has been buying during the last five years.

When asked specifically how the United Shoe Machinery company and the American Woolen company are involved, Difenderfer became somewhat mysterious and said that he had some facts which he would produce on the floor of the house later on. Questioned more specifically he mentioned blankets as an article which the government has been purchasing without a fair letting of contracts. Difenderfer replies to the suggestion that he represents some hostile special interest by an emphatic denial.

The Difenderfer resolution had a stormy time in the rules committee before being reported out favorably. Representative Dalzell urged that the committee on military affairs handle the investigation. This was stoutly opposed, however, because the friends of the resolution argued that the military committee has its hands full with the appropriation bill and that to commit the inquiry to this committee would mean that no action would follow.

It is expected that when the report reaches the house there will be a contest and the animosities of the Gardner-Difenderfer encounter last spring will be repeated. It is not known whether or not the committee will go to New England to take testimony.

POLICEMEN KILL BURGLAR

Eight Fire a Shot Each and Every Bullet Takes Effect

New York, Feb. 2.—Eight policemen took up the pursuit of an unidentified negro burglar after he had broken the plate glass window of a drug store on Seventh avenue near the new Pennsylvania station.

The negro carried a revolver in each hand and fired repeatedly into the air as he ran. Finally he turned on his pursuers, but before he could fire every one of the eight policemen sent a shot whizzing toward the negro.

The burglar dropped to the street and was dead when the first policeman reached his side.

Surgeons found eight bullets in the body, any one of which would have caused death. Both of the negro's guns had been emptied in his flight.

PAPER BAG COOKING

Great System Perfected by M. Soyer, Famous London Chef.

TWO DINNER MENUS.

By Martha McCulloch Williams.

Here is a dinner menu, easy but nourishing, not so costly, and capable of being prepared, cooked, and served inside two hours:

Roast Beef, Stuffed Rolled Round
Sliced Potatoes Baked Apples
Cold Slaw
Banana Puffs
Black Coffee Salted Peanuts

Have the round cut rather long and as thick as need be. Butter it on both sides, salt and pepper lightly, cover the upper side with bread crumb stuffing seasoned with onion, roll up, tie and seal in well-greased bag with a lump of butter or clarified dripping and a spoonful of water. Put in a hot oven for three minutes, slack heat, and cook until done, allowing fifteen to twenty minutes to the pound. If tomatoes are at hand, put one or two, peeled and sliced, in with the meat. The gravy will be better and the meat itself more piquant.

Slice peeled potatoes thin, drop in cold water, drain out, put in a greased bag after sprinkling very lightly with salt, add a little extra grease, seal and cook fifteen to thirty minutes in a fairly hot oven, the time depending on the quantity in the bag.

Wash the apples well, but do not peel, cut out specks and bruises, core, fill the bottom of the core-space with a lump of butter, over which pile sugar, and add a bit of cinnamon. A clove stuck in the side may take the place of the cinnamon. Seal inside a well-greased bag, and bake eighteen to twenty minutes in a fairly hot oven.

Make cold slaw in the usual way, and the salted peanuts as follows, after blanching and drying them: Put in a thickly-buttered bag, set in a very hot oven for half minute, then reduce the heat three-quarters, and leave nuts to brown for ten minutes longer. They will come out crisp and beautiful, needing only a sprinkling of salt.

To make the banana puffs, roll out good puff paste a quarter-inch thick and cut it in squares six inches across. Cover half of each square diagonally with bananas sliced thin and soaked for half an hour in sugar and lemon bag and bake twelve minutes in a hot oven. Bananas, always cheap, and among the most nourishing of the fruits, ought to be more used in cookery.

Here is another good meal for a winter day:

Pork Tenderloin, Roasted with Sweet Potatoes
Cabbage Pudding Stewed Carrots
Celery
Apple Dumplings, Cider Sauce
Coffee Cheese Crackers

Have the tenderloins split lengthwise and cut them in halves. Wipe with a clean, damp cloth, rub over with butter or dripping, season lightly with salt and pepper, and lay in a well-greased bag along with raw sweet potatoes, peeled and halved, or quartered if very large. Add a lump of fat, butter or dripping, rolled in a little flour, also a tablespoonful of water. Seal bag and cook in a hot oven thirty-five minutes to an hour, according to the quantity of food in the bag. Slack that after five minutes. Slow, steady cooking makes the meat tender, yet full of flavor.

Choose a tender cabbage for the pudding. Shred it fine, then drop in boiling salted water and cook uncovered at full boil, ten minutes. Drain out, run cold water through it, then mix it thoroughly through a pint of milk which has been beaten well with two eggs, and season with salt and pepper. If the cabbage is small, use one egg and half a pint of milk. Have the bag very thickly greased and sprinkle it inside with grated cheese. Put in the mixture by big spoonfuls, add a lump of butter and sprinkle in more cheese between the spoonfuls. Seal very tight, lay on a trivet, put in a hot oven for three minutes, then slack heat, and cook for at least an hour.

Scrape carrots as usual, cut them in pieces and put into a buttered bag with half a gill of stock, a dot of butter and salt and pepper to taste. Cook thirty-five to forty-five minutes at a moderate heat.

Apple dumplings are apple dumplings in or out of bags. Their goodness depends on three things—the paste, the maker and the cooking. The apple is hardly more than a vehicle to hold sweets and spices and accent the tang of them.

Make real puff paste for your dumplings, roll it a quarter-inch thick, fit it neatly around the apples, which should be liberally treated with sugar and butter, not to name lemon peel and cinnamon, put in a thickly-buttered bag with a small lump of butter and a spoonful of sugar, and cook for twenty to twenty-five minutes in a fairly hot oven.

For cider sauce, cream half a cup of butter, frothy light, beat into it a heaping cup of sugar, then set over hot water and add gradually a cup of fresh sweet cider, hot but not boiling. Beat hard together, grate nutmeg over, and serve very hot.

The cheese crackers are lightly buttered, sprinkled with parmesan, and heated inside a bag for about five minutes.

CONCERNING CORN.

THOSE who like corn are enabled to gratify their taste during the entire year on account of the many excellent brands of canned corn that may be purchased at the grocery. Indeed, used in many dishes, there is little difference in the taste between canned and fresh.

When opening a can of corn do as should be done when opening any canned food—pour the corn at once into a dish where the action of the air on the tin cannot affect it.

Imitation Oysters.

Mock Oysters.—Corn can be used to make a vegetable substitute for fried oysters. Proceed as follows: Take enough canned corn to fill a pint measure, add to it two tablespoonfuls of butter, the yolks of four eggs beaten smooth and enough flour to make a stiff batter; season the batter with salt and pepper and drop it by the tablespoonful into smoking hot fat. As soon as the mock oysters thus formed are light brown take them out of the fat with a skimmer and lay them on brown paper for a moment to free them from grease. Serve them on a napkin or with a garnish of parsley.

Fritters and Puddings.

Corn Fritters.—Take three cupfuls of canned corn. Mash and add two eggs, a little milk and just enough flour to mix it. Drop a spoonful of the batter into a frying pan and fry in butter.

Corn Pudding.—Take four teacupfuls of corn, mash the kernels, beat three eggs light, add to them a pint of milk, a tablespoonful of melted butter, the corn, a teaspoonful of sugar and salt and pepper to taste. Turn into a buttered pudding dish and bake in a steady oven until set and browned. Send to table in the dish in which it was cooked.

French Creamed Corn.—Put one can of corn through the meat chopper to mince finely and add one large onion, sliced, a sprig of parsley and a pint of water. Cook all together twenty minutes, being careful not to let it scorch, then press through a fine sieve, extracting all the pulp possible.

Melt two tablespoonfuls of butter, add an equal amount of sifted flour, one-half teaspoonful of salt and a dash of pepper.

Cook to a smooth paste, then add very gradually one quart of scalded milk. When thick and smooth add the corn pulp and juice and a level tablespoonful of sugar.

Add salt to taste and just before serving add one cup of scalded cream.

FRECKLES

SYNOPSIS.

Freckles, a homeless boy, is hired by Boss McLean to guard the expensive timber in the Limberlost from timber thieves.

Freckles does his work faithfully, makes friends with the birds and yearns to know more about nature. He lives with Mr. and Mrs. Duncan.

He resolves to get books and educate himself. He becomes interested in a huge pair of vultures and calls his bird friends his "chickens."

Some of the trees he is guarding are worth $1,000 each. Freckles' books arrive. He receives a call from Wessner.

Wessner attempts to bribe Freckles to betray his trust, and Freckles whips him. McLean overhears them and witnesses the fight.

Freckles' honesty saves a precious tree. He finds the nest of the vultures and is visited by a beautiful young girl.

She calls Freckles McLean's son. Freckles calls her "the angel" and helps the Bird Woman in taking photographs. McLean promises to adopt Freckles.

CHAPTER XI.

THE MAN OF AFFAIRS.

"WHY don't you take it yourself?" questioned the man of affairs.

Freckles' clear gray eyes met those of the angel's father squarely, and he said, "If you were in my place would you take it to her yourself?"

"No, I would not," said that gentleman quickly.

"Then why ask why I did not?" came Freckles' lamblike query.

"Bless me!" said the angel's father. He stared at the package, then at the lifted chin of the boy and then at the package again and muttered, "Excuse me."

Freckles bowed.

"It would be favoring me greatly if you would deliver the hat and the message. Good morning, sir," and he turned away.

"One minute," said the angel's father. "Suppose I give you permission to return this hat in person and make your own acknowledgments."

Freckles stood one moment thinking intently, and then he lifted those eyes of unswerving truth and asked: "Why should you, sir? You are kind indade to mention it, and it's thanking you I am for your good intintions, but my wanting to go or your being willing to have me ain't proving that your daughter would be wanting me or care to bother with me."

The angel's father looked keenly into the face of this extraordinary young man, and he found it to his liking.

"There's one other thing I meant to say," said Freckles. "Every day I see something and at times a lot of things that I think the Bird Woman would be wanting pictures of badly if she knew. You might be speaking of it to her, and if she'd want me to I can send her word when I find things she wouldn't likely get elsewhere."

"If that's the case," said the angel's father, "and you feel under obligations for her assistance the other day you can discharge them in that way. She is spending all her time in the fields and woods searching for subjects. By all means let her know if you find subjects you think she could use, and we will do anything we can for you if you will give her what help you can and see that she is as safe as possible."

"It's hungry for human beings I get," said Freckles, "and it's like heaven to me to have them come. When it comes to protecting them I'd risk me life, to be sure, but even that mightn't do any good in some cases. There's a good many dangers to be reckoned with in the swamp, sir."

There was no way in which Freckles could know it, but by following his best instincts and being what he conceived a gentleman should be he surprised the man of affairs into thinking of him and seeing his face over his books many times that morning. He stepped to the curb to mount his wheel and heard a voice that thrilled through and through him, calling: "Freckles! Oh, Freckles!"

The angel separated herself from a group of girls and came hurrying up to him. She was in snowy white—a quaint little frock with a marvel of soft lace about her throat and wrists. Through the sheer sleeves of it her beautiful, rounded arms showed distinctly, and it was cut just to the base of her perfect neck. On her head was a pure white creation of fancy braid with folds on folds of tulle, soft and silken as cobwebs, lining the brim, and a great mass of white roses clustered against the gold of her hair crept about the crown and fell in a riot to her shoulders at the back. There were gleams of gold with settings of blue on her fingers, and altogether she was the daintiest, sweetest sight he had ever seen.

"Oh, Freckles!" she cried. "I was wondering about you the other day. Is there any trouble? Are you just starting back to the Limberlost?"

"I came to bring your hat," said Freckles. "You forgot it in the rush the other day. I have just left it with your father and a message trying to express the gratitude of me for how you and the Bird Woman were for helping me out."

The angel nodded gravely, and Freckles saw in a flash that he had done the proper thing in going to her father. Then she was saying that she could scarcely wait for the time to come for the next picture of the Little Chickens series. "I want to hear the rest of that song, and I hadn't even begun seeing your room yet," she complained. "I wonder if I couldn't bring my banjo and some of the songs I like best. I'll play and you'll sing."

Freckles felt that if he lifted his eyes the adoration in them would frighten her.

"I was afraid your experience the other day would scare you so that you'd never be coming again," he found himself saying.

The angel laughed gayly.

"Did I look scared?" she questioned.

"No," said Freckles; "you did not."

"Oh, I just enjoyed that," she cried. "Those hateful, stealing old things! I had a big notion to pink one of them, but I thought maybe some way it would be best for you that I shouldn't. They needed it. That didn't scare me, and, as for the Bird Woman, she's accustomed to finding snakes, tramps, cross dogs, sheep, cattle and goodness knows what. You can't frighten her when she's after a picture. Did they come back?"

"No," said Freckles. "The gang got there a little after noon and took out the tree, but I must tell you and you must tell the Bird Woman that there's no doubt but they will be coming back, and they will have to make it before long now, for it's soon the gang will be there to work on the swamp."

"Oh, what a shame!" cried the angel. "They'll clear out roads, cut down the beautiful trees and tear up everything. They'll drive away the birds and spoil the cathedral. When they have done their worst all these mills about here will follow in and take out the cheap timber. Then the landowners will dig a few ditches, build some fires, and in two summers more the Limberlost will be in corn and potatoes."

"You like it, too," said Freckles.

"Yes," said the angel; "I love it. Your room is a little piece right out of the heart of fairyland, and the cathedral is God's work, not yours. You only found it and opened the door after he had it completed. Come get a cool drink before you start back. It won't take but a minute, and you can ride fast enough to make up for it."

Freckles looked into the beautiful face of the angel in sheer wonderment. Did she truly mean it? Would she walk down that street with him, crippled, homely, in mean clothing?

"I really must be off," said Freckles earnestly, "but I'm thanking you more than you'll ever know for your kindness. I'll just be drinking bowls of icy things all me way home in the thoughts of it."

Down came the angel's foot. Her eyes flashed. "There's no sense in that," she said. "How do you think you would have felt when you knew I was warm and thirsty and you went and brought me a drink and I wouldn't take it because—because goodness knows why!"

She deliberately slipped her hand under his arm—the right arm that ended in an empty sleeve.

"You are coming," she said firmly.

Freckles' head swam.

"Please don't, angel," he said softly. "You don't understand. If your father came on to me on the street in my station and dress with you on me arm he'd have every right to be caning me before the people, and not a finger would I lift to stay him."

The angel's eyes snapped. "If you think my father cares about my doing anything that is right and kind and that makes me happy to do, why, then you completely failed in reading my father, and I'll ask him and just show you."

She dropped Freckles' arm and turned toward the entrance to the building. "Why, look there!" she exclaimed.

Her father stood at a window, watching the scene with eyes that comprehended quite as thoroughly as if he had heard every word. The angel made a despairing gesture toward Freckles. The man of affairs answered her with a look of infinite tenderness. He nodded his head, and the veriest dolt could have read the words his lips formed. "Take him along!"

A sudden trembling seized Freckles. The angel turned on him with trimmbing eyes. She was highly strung and not accustomed to being thwarted. "Did you see that?" she demanded. "Now are you satisfied? Will you come?" Freckles went.

On every hand she was kept busy giving and receiving the cheeriest greetings. She walked into the parlors exactly as if she owned them. A long row of people stared with varying degrees of insolence and curiosity as Freckles had felt they would. He glanced at the angel. Now would she see?

"On my soul!" he muttered under his breath. "They don't even touch her!"

She turned the full battery of her eyes on the attendant.

"I want to mix a drink for my friend," she said. "He has a long, hot ride before him, and I don't want him started off with one of those old palate teasing sweetnesses that you mix just on purpose to drive a man back in ten minutes. I want a clear, cool, sparkling drink that has a tang of acid in it."

The angel compounded the drink and carried the brimming glass to Freckles. He said in the mellowest of all the mellow tones of his voice, "I'll be drinking it to the Swamp Angel."

And as he had said to her that first day the angel now cautioned him, "Be drinking slowly."

As the screen door swung behind them one of the men at the counter asked of the attendant, "Now, what did that mean?"

"Exactly what you saw," replied he rather curtly. "We're accustomed to it in here. Hardly a day passes this hot weather but she's picking up some poor, god forsaken mortal and bringing him in. Then she comes behind the counter herself and fixes up a drink to suit the occasion."

"Mighty queer specimen she had this time," volunteered another. "Wonder who he is?"

"I think," said a third, "that he's McLean's Limberlost guard, and I suspect she's gone to the swamp with the Bird Woman for pictures and knows him that way."

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

COON HUNTING ON DECLINE

Conservation Is Proving Very Unpopular to Those Who Delight in This Sport.

Coon hunting is on the decline over in southern Illinois, according to a report from Owensville, because the farmers and land owners have become timber conservationists and refuse to allow their trees to be cut.

It used to be that a coon hunt was not a success unless the coon was treed in a monarch of the forest, the tree subsequently being cut down by the ready axes of the hunters to effect the capture of the game. In days when timber was plentiful the land owners were not so particular, and it was not uncommon for a hunting party to chop down half a dozen fine trees in a single night. The hunting party that would commit such a trespass nowadays probably would find itself in serious trouble with the courts. For trees such as the coon hunters used to cut now have a big market value. They are growing scarcer all the time, and the wise land owner is realizing the necessity of husbanding his resources in the timber line.

"In the good old days" an incalculable amount of good timber was destroyed in this way. It was not missed at the time, for trees grew almost everywhere, and lumber was not so much of an item as it is at present. The forests had to go in order to blaze the way for agricultural development. There was no especial demand for timber, and vast areas of it were cut down and burned that the land owner might prepare for growing corn or tobacco. Much of this timber might have been saved if the farmer had cleared his land on any systematic plan, and would have made him independent in his later years. He did not realize the importance of conservation, so he cut and slashed indiscriminately, and the coon hunters helped him, along with the hickory nut hunters, the chestnut hunters, the grape gatherers, the seekers after slippery elm bark and a great variety of hunters engaged in denuding the wooded lands of their products.

It is well that the farmers of southern Indiana and the farmers elsewhere are beginning to take notice of the conservation movement. If the coon hunter must needs chase coons let him catch them on the level or climb the tree for his booty.

Thrifty Squirrel.

Alfred McHenry has a park of several acres, in which a score or more of gray squirrels have taken up their abode. The other day Mr. McHenry bought two bushels of walnuts to be fed to the squirrels during the winter. He left the bag with the nuts in the back part of his buggy, which was pushed into the carriage shed.

Two days later when the occasion required the use of the buggy again he went to remove the two bushel bag of walnuts, when, lo and behold! there wasn't half a peck of the walnuts there. But there was a hole in the bag and an excited squirrel that chattered on a beam overhead seemed to have more than the ordinary amount of interest in McHenry's movements. The latter watched the squirrel and when he discovered that it had its home behind one of the rafters he climbed up a ladder and investigated. He not only found the squirrel's nest but all the stolen walnuts as well. The squirrel had transferred the nuts from the buggy up under the rafters all within 14 hours of daylight.—Williamsport Correspondence Philadelphia North American.

TAFT'S TRIP TO BUCKEYE STATE

General Belief That He Has Greatly Helped Himself

ROOSEVELT BOOM CHECKED

No Working Agreement Between Progressive Candidates—Hilles Says He Has Studied Situation In All States and Confidently Predicts Taft's Re-election, All Developments Showing Trend Toward the President

Washington, Feb. 2.—Public men here very generally are expressing the view that President Taft has helped himself by his trip to Ohio. Supporters of the administration are plainly pleased with the tone of the president's speeches during this trip. They seem to be confident that his utterances in Ohio will do much toward solidifying the party behind him as a candidate for renomination.

The president will, it is understood, immediately give consideration to the suggestion that political headquarters in his interest be established here with Charles D. Hilles, who is now his secretary, or some other man in charge. Republican senators who have lately begun to take keen interest in the president's campaign for renomination are hopeful that he will approve this plan for headquarters, but they are more than half inclined to doubt if he will.

The pevailing view among public men is that the Roosevelt movement is not making much, if any, progress. On the other hand, it is asserted the supporters of the administration are everywhere getting together and forwarding the movement for the renomination of Taft. The third-term business, it is asserted, is one of the chief obstacles in the way of the Roosevelt movement.

The negotiations looking to a working agreement between the supporters of La Follette, Roosevelt and Cummins have not as yet produced any definite results. Senator La Follette seemed inclined to conduct his campaign independent of the Roosevelt propaganda. His friends say that he rightfully feels that if the party is to take up with an opposition candidate, he is the man they ought to look to.

In the first authorized statement he has issued in connection with the Taft campaign, Secretary Hilles predicted that President Taft would be nominated and elected. In the statement he said:

"President Taft's nomination in June is as certain as anything can be. I am confident that there will be comparatively little opposition to him in the national convention and when the nomination is made, the Republicans of the country will rally to the party standard and win a great victory in November. I should not make this prediction did I not feel that my information from all parts of the country warrants doing so. It is easy to make big claims and to try to deceive people, and I think that a man who does so without facts and figures to justify, is guilty of deception.

"A month ago, before I had got into touch with Republicans in all the states, I should not have said this much. In this month I have seen the lines drawn closer and closer. In the last week the situation has cleared wonderfully, with Republicans in all direction falling into line for the president and manifesting a determination to bring about his nomination.

"It is useless to speak in general terms or to undertake, at short notice, to go into conditions in each state, but developments in three of the big states within a few days ought to point conclusively to the present trend."

Mr. Hilles goes on to review conditions in New York, Ohio and Indiana, claiming that President Taft has received indorsements in those states which indicate they will give their delegations to him in their conventions.

"There has been lots of noise in Ohio," said Hilles, "but the substantial Republicans in every congressional district are determinned the president shall have the delegates, and he will get them, too.

"I have a telegram from Indianapolis saying that every single member of the Republican state committee elected in the thirteen congressional districts yesterday is for Taft. That is a big change from a committee whose chairman, Mr. Lee, went around Washington in December proclaiming that Indiana was hostile to the president."

QUINCY A. A. NOW HAS GOOD LEAD

Again Sends Strong St. Joseph's Team to Defeat 39 to 23

SECOND TEAM WINS

Urged on by the satisfaction of having sent them down to defeat on a previous occasion, and determined to exhibit that calibre of basketball characteristic of a championship aggregation, the Quincy A. A. basketball team opposed the much watched St. Joseph's A. A. combination of the West End, in St. Mary's Hall, West Quincy, last evening, and by keeping control of the situation at all stages, managed to emerge in triumph by the decisive score of 39 to 23. The second teams of both associations also clashed, with the result that the local players won by the overwhelming score of 47 to 15.

The game had been awaited with keen anxiety during the past week, and the fact that the hall was taxed with fully 400 fans, proved beyond a doubt that the game was the drawing card of the season. Every available seat was taken, and soap boxes, boards and other such devices, were used by a number, who stood on them in an endeavor to see the different plays. It was by far the largest crowd that has assembled in the popular West Quincy hall this season at a basketball game, and it was with great difficulty that the writer, viewed the game as it progressed.

The only time the visitors appeared dangerous was in the latter part of the second half, when they made a rally to increase their score, when the local players were no less awakened to the situation and lost no time in making their lead still more substantial.

For the greater part, the game had a tendency to appear one sided, yet it was interesting from start to finish. Roughness marked it at several stages, yet the work of the referee was of a commendable order.

The St. Joseph's players were especially desirous of securing a victory last evening and were sadly disappointed when they were compelled to return home, after having tasted of the spoils of defeat.

The work of the Quincy forwards was as conspicuous as ever and "Dan" Duggan, at centre, accredited himself in the same glorious manner as has been noticeable in all the games in which he has participated this season.

"Sid." Duggan took the lead in getting the greatest number of baskets, having 9 to his credit, while O'Rourke had 6, besides proving himself an adapt shooter for goals from free tries. Many of the goals from the floor, were spectacular, but the one feature of the game was contributed by "Joe" O'Rourke, who placed the ball in the net while lying on his back.

The backfield players of the local team did some excellent work in passing the ball, and should come in for their full share of praise. For the visitors the best work was done by McKenna and Maguire.

As for the second team game, suffice it to say that the local boys proved their superiority in all departments. Every player o n the team performed well, with "Brutus" Chapman taking the honors. Manning was the only player on the opposing team who showed up to advantage:

QUINCY BOY SCOUTS PRESENT

Twenty Quincy boy scouts, all clad in military uniforms, together with an equal number from the Wollaston division, participated in the reception given Lieutenant General Sir Robert Baden-Powell, of England, organizer of the Boy Scout movement. Over a thousand boys observed the occasion and the demonstration was about the best of its nature that has ever taken palce in Boston.

The local lads left early in the forenoon, to be present at the drill manoeuvres which took place at two o'clock in the afternoon, in the Boston Latin-English High Drill hall In the evening they attended the demonstration in Tremont Temple, and listened to many stirring addresses, all of a complimentary nature to the English soldier. The principal address of the evening was given by Gen. Baden-Powell himself, who spoke on "Scouting in War and Peace." His talk was illustrated by stereopticon views.

BRIEFS

All hands on deck tonight for the annual ball of the Quincy Police Relief association.

The hearing on the bill of Mayor Stone for an appropriation of $25,000 to dredge the Town river will be held Feb. 15.

An inquest was held before Judge Avery in the district court this morning on the deaths of Ernest Capetti who was killed by the cars at the Water street crossing and John Queeney who was killed near Presidents bridge.

Asking Too Much.

"So he refused to let you marry his daughter?"

"No; but he imposed conditions which I cannot entertain."

"What were they?".

"Said I'd have to go to work first."

Not Surprising.

"I know a man who is never troubled by the police through he openly deals in green goods."

"How is that?"

"He is a huckster."

A Common Experience.

"I had a dreadful experience yesterday which simply made me lose my nerve."

"Dear me. Where was this?"

"At my dentist's."

HELD FOR THE GRAND JURY

Trio of Thieves Were Arra'gned Before Judge Avery

HELD IN $1,000

Carl Carlson, aged 32 years, Charles Johnson, aged 27 years and Oscar Johnson, aged 26 years, all of whose residences are not definitely known, owing to the fact that they have been accustomed from time to time to ambulate from one place to another, were arraigned in the District Court this morning before Judge Albert E. Avery on three counts and wre held for the grand jury in April in $1,000 apiece.

The men were arrested in Boston on January 24th, charged with breaking and entering four places in Lynn and for larceny in various other places where it is alleged they have visited.

As far as Quincy was concerned, they were charged with the larceny of a gold watch from John Andersoa at 112 School street, of a silvr watch from Andrew Fahey of Broadway, and two coats, together with $40 in money from the house of Domenic McCormick of Spear street. The two watches were recovered by the local police in pawnshops in Boston. The men in question are of Norwegian descent, and it is said by the police that reports concerning them would indicate that they have been implicatd in fully a hundred cases of larceny of diverse nature.

The modus operandi of the three men has been to apply for board and after carefully surveying conditions, hire a room, at the same paying for a week in advance. It is said that a forth party, in the guise of a relative would then take a hand in the affair and that all men would dissapear on the following morning. As yet this fourth party has not been apprehended.

In the case of the Spear street incident, the man who hired the room claimed to be a draughtsman at the Fore River. He paid a week's board in advance and secured a key, saying that he would bring his trunk in the course of a few days. The trunk failed to arrive, but no time was lost by the person in question in looting the trunks of other boarders. The various charges preferred against them include breaks in Cambridge, Worcester, Brookline, Newton, Somerville and Spencer.

In the Lynn cases they were sent to the Salem jail from which place they were brought to Quincy this morning on a habeus corpus warrant.

HEAVY FINE IS IMPOSED

It cost Domenic Ghiozi of East Weymouth $62.40 in addition to the fee he paid his council for carrying a revolver without a permit at Weymouth. The case was first called in court two days ago. At that time Ghiozi stoutly denied having a revolver claiming what he had was a pipe case. At that time the officers did not have any witnesses as it was thought that Ghiogi would not contend the case. He did, however, and to such an extent that the officersasked for a continuence until this morning that they might summons witnesses.

This morning Ghiozi was represented by counsel but in spite of this the evidence of witnsses for hte government was such as to convince the court that he did have a revolver as was alleged and a fine of $50 was imposed. In addition to this Ghiozi was ordered to pay the costs to which the court had been put amounting to $12.40.

The promiscuous carrying of revolvers has reached such a stage that last year the legislature took a hand in the matter and enacted a law which places the minimum fine at $50. The law is a good one and the only fault that might be found is that the penalty is not severe enough. There have been too many shootings by persons carrying revolvers, with serious results following, that would doubtless have been prevented had the parties had no weapon.

—The town of Wynnewood, Ok., had a clean-up day last week and the board of health requested the school children to devote the day to gathering up old cans. By nightfall the children had gathered more than 70,000 cans.—Framingham News.

NEWS ITEMS FROM MILTON

A moement has been started among the students of the High school to form a school orchestra and from present indications it is probable that the endeavors along these lines will prove successful.

The annual town meeting will take place on the fourth day of March.

TAKE ONE OUT OF THE THREE

Oh ye fates! Oh ye furies! Will you ever stop pursuing the members of the Quincy Council K. of C. bowling team? It was expected, in view of the recent victory of the local five, that we would see great strides made in the future games, but no chance has been given us to arouse our intensity, for only last evening, at the Columbus club, the above mentioned fell in defeat before the bowlers of the James F. Hayes' Council.

It is a source of consolation, however, to state that the Quincy team took one out of three, this being the very first string. Keaton and Bliss played their usual star game, but with the work of the other team mates falling below the standard, it was impossible to annex a victory.

Appeal of the Afflicted.

It was Walter's first visit to church, and he tried hard to remember all the varied instructions he had received, such as not whispering, keeping his head bowed during the prayer, etc. But during the main petition of the service nature won a complete battle over memory and decorum. "Mother," shrilled the weary youngster, "when will it be time for me to straighten my neck? It's like to break if I don't do it soon!"

Preferred Jail to Marriage.

A country judge in England has just delivered the most sentimental decision ever heard of in his particular neck of the woods." He told a burglar he would suspend sentence on him if he would agree to marry and settle down or get a dog or canary in order to have something to work for. Oddly enough, the burglar couldn't see it that way, and took a year's imprisonment instead.

THE BOSTON AND SUBURBAN TELEPHONE RATE SCHEDULE

SOME RESULTS FOR 1911

While it will be at least six months before data will be available to furnish a comprehensive view of the workings of the new Boston and Suburban rate schedule, in respect to the proportionate adjustment of charges as between different classes of service, the closing of the company's books for the year 1911 supplies certain conclusive information as to the effect of the new schedule thus far upon the revenues of the company and its general benefit to the community as a whole.

The average gross revenue from exchange and toll service in the Boston and Suburban district for the year 1911 was $3.37 per telephone station less than for the year 1910.

As the number of stations in this district was approximately 130,000, it is clear that the com pany's revenue for 1911 was more than $400,000 less under the new schedule than it would have been under the old. That this saving to the community at large was the direct result of the new rate schedule and not the result of any general curtailment of the service on the part of subscribers, is evidenced by the fact that the number of calls per station was as great for 1911 as in 1910, although the average yearly cost to the subscriber was $3.37 per telephone less.

Of course this does not mean that the cost of telephone service to every subscriber in this district was exactly $3.37 per year less than the previous year. Many subscribers have found the cost of their service for the year 1911 reduced by a much larger amount. Others whose rates under the old schedule were considered equitable and accordingly were retained in the new schedule have paid the same under the new as under the old. Many others have voluntarily elected to pay slightly more in order to secure better grades of service, which are now available at lower prices than formerly.

The remaining small minority have, in a greater or less degree, found the cost of their service increased, because it has been impossible for them to secure, under the new schedule, the same amount and extent of service without paying more nearly in proportion to their use. These represent a very small percentage of the total number of subscribers. Most of them had, under the old schedule, the unlimited Boston and Suburban rate. It will be recalled that this was a rate furnishing unlimited service throughout the entire Boston and Suburban district for $162.00 a year. It was this rate which was responsible for some of the most glaring inequalities that developed between different classes of subscribers under the old schedule.

Subscribers to this service were located largely in the seven exchanges of the Central District. Although representing only 6 1-2 per cent of the telephones they made 43 per cent of all the calls originated in the district. If they had paid somewhere near 43 per cent of the revenue of the district, this class of service would have resulted in no unfairness to other classes of subscribers. As a matter of fact, however, they paid only 14 per cent of the revenue in return for 43 per cent of the service.

It is obvious that under any change in the rate schedule, which was intended to be a "readjustment" as well as a "reduction," these subscribers not only could not expect a share in any reduction, but, if the readjustment was to be fair to other subscribers, the cost to the users of this class of service must necessarily be increased. Most of these subscribers who have taken up this question with the company have expresed themselves as recognizing the justice of their paying, under the new schedule, more nearly in proportion to their actual use of the service. It is the belief of the company that the justice of this will appeal to practically all the others when they thoroughly understand the inequalities which prevailed under the old schedule.

As to whether the new schedule offers service and rates better adapted to the requiremnts of the general community than the old, it is perhaps significant that the gain in new subscribers in the Metropolitan district in 1911 was greater than in any other year in the history of the company.

Mr. Pollard has been and is today a faithful and energetic worker in the school; always performing his duties in a conscientious manner, thereby winning the confidence and approval of the parents and the deference and gratitude of his pupils. He has always taken a great interest in his pupils regardless of family or environment, and this trait in his character predominates in every condition attendant upon school work. Many a young man and woman today owe their standing in the community to his upright and laudable methods of teaching.

During these years of service Mr. Pollard has seen the old building removed where he commenced to teach, and a handsome, commodious structure built. And from a school of 250 pupils the numbers have increased to over 500.

He has displayed efficiency and entered into his work with zeal and spontaneity, and as the years rolled on with wider and increasing experience. And now as he rounds out the silver anniversary of his profession, words are inadequate to express the appreciation of his work in our midst and for the many influences for good he has disseminated.

In addition to his school work Mr. Pollard has found time to take an active interest in the many and varied affairs of the community, being a member of the Washington Street Congregational church, assisting in the choir; a worker in charitable organizations and he was one of the originators of the Quincy Choral Society and has been its president from the start.

Congratulations are being bestowed upon him by many friends, fellow teachers and present and former pupils.

About two months after Mr. Pollard came to Quincy he took unto himself a bride, one of Andover's fair daughters, and Mrs. Pollard has proved herself a true helpmate. Both are of the highest types of American manhood and womanhood. Hearty and cordial greetings are extended to them in their very successful twenty-five years' work.

Two hearings in which Quincy is interested are announced by the legislative committee on Harbors and Lands for Feb. 15, also by the Committee on Public Health for the same date. In room 431 the former committee will give a hearing on the bills for dredging the Town river and the basin in front of the Wollaston and Squantum Yacht clubs and in room 436 the Committee on Public Health will give a hearing on the petition and will be introduced by Representative Leslie for an appropriation of $1,000 to experiment on the exterminating of the mosquito pest.

ASSAULT CLAIMED.

Robert and William Walsh, father and son were arraigned in court this morning on a warrant charging them with assault at Quincy on James P. McLaughlin. The plaintiff claims that he came from Boston on the same train with the defendants Saturday night and that they accused him of taking a bottle of liquor from them. He claims that they followed him to Brewers corner where they attracted him and cut him in the head. He ran into a fruit store near by for help and notified the police. The cases were continued until Feb. 10.

POLICE AUTO IN SMASH.

The police auto was in a smash on Friday afternoon while returning to Quincy from Cambridge where it had been to have some repairs made. The wagon was in charge of chauffeur Cahill and when near the Dudley street terminal the wagon came into collision with an electric car, owing to the slippery condition of the streets. The result was that the front axle was sprained. The auto is now having its axle fixed at Scammell's.

RELIEF ASSOCIATION BALL AN UNQUALIFIED SUCCESS

Music Hall Presents Animated Scene at Sixth Annual Ball of Quincy Police Relief Association

Estimated That Over Thirteen Hundred Were Present. The Guests and Officers of the Affair

Just how many were present at Music hall Friday evening, when the grand march which opened the sixth annual ball of the Quincy Police Relief association was started, is hard to tell but various estimates placed the number as being not far from thirteen hundred. Certain it is that there was never such a large party in the hall as on this occasion. Every available seat in the balcony was filled with sightseers as was also the row of seats on either side and ends of the hall, while the active participants, at the entrance were so many that they occupied nearly half of the floor space.

That the ball was an unqualified success, goes without saying. In fact it can be said to have been the most successful event of its kind ever held. The weather was ideal, not extremely cold neither too mild, but just right, and when the moon came out, as it did early in the evening, it made conditions all that could be asked.

The hall looked particularly attractive, with its light colored bunting draped about the ceiling and walls while the platform was one mass of handsome greenery. In the centre was a floral Quincy police shield and at the right a police signal box to which was attached a bell, the sounding of which was the signal for the grand march to move as well as for the formation of the sets for dancing. Derringer had charge of the floral decorations and did his work well.

ACTING INSP. A. W. GOODHUE.

Aside from the Quincy friends of the association there were many prominently identified with police circles from other cities and towns as well as many closely identified with the administration of city affairs, including His Honor Mayor Stone and Mrs. Stone, Councilmen C. A. Ross, J. R. S. Ross, Gilliatt, Studley, Richards, Sandberg, Boyd, Ericson, Sodergren, Carruthers, Gouthier, and doubtless other councilmen whose presence was not noted in the grand march, ex-Councilmen Cherrington, Smith and Parlee, Representative Leslie, Lawrence W. Lyons, clerk of the District court, W. H. Teasdale of the Board of Health, T. L. Williams of the Park Commission, ex-Representative L. F. R. Langelier, President C. C. Hearn of the Board of Trade, Chief Engineer, A. L. Litchfield, Sheriff Field and Herbert F. Barker, recently of the School Board.

From out of town were noted Chiefs Loring of Braintree, Fitzgerald of Weymouth, Bates of Cohasset, and Pierce of Milton, Inspectors Daniel W. Hart, Edward C. Conway and Michael C. Shields of police headquarters, Boston and Officer O'Day of Station 10 Boston.

MAYOR EUGENE R. STONE.

Wilson's orchestra of eleven pieces furnished the music for the concert from 8 to 9 o'clock and also for the dancing. The concert program was an excellent one including the following numbers:—

March—"Ideal" Reeves
Overture—"Morning, Noon and Night" Suppe
Concert Waltz "Dreams of Childhood" Waltenfl
Selection—"The Pink Lady" Caryll
Duet for Flute and Clarinet—"The Butterflies" Bendix
Finale—"Hand and Hand" Krafft

While this was in progress the reception committee, headed by Chief Burrell were busy looking after the comfort of the guests. As each invited guest entered the hall a guest badge was affixed to the lapel of his coat and he was escorted to dressing rooms that had been reserved over the stage, at the same time being presented with the dance program.

The dance program was a unique affair. On its title page was a fine picture of Sergt. Mark E. Hanson, the oldest member of the department, the dates 1881 and 1912 showing that he has been a member of the department for 31 years. Mark, as he is familiarly known, was present but did not take an active part in the ball. With his daughters he occupied seats in the front row of the balcony, and was frequently pointed out as the original of the face that appeared on the front page of the program. His picture appearing on the order was a pleasant surprise to Mr. Hanson as he was not aware of it until the programs were distributed.

LIEUT. D. R. McKAY.

As many of the regular officers as could be spared from their beats were present with their ladies and were distinguished by handsome badges with boutonniers, and each man constituted himself a committee of one to look after the comfort of the participants.

A few minutes after nine six blows were sounded on the police signal box bell. This was a signal for the march to move. Owing to the large attendance the march was not as long as usual. There was just an even one hundred couples in the march and with the narrow floor space it was difficult to execute the evolutions as planned.

Leo J. McMaster was the director of the march and occupied a position at the head of the hall and under his skillful guidance there was no confusion in the march.

CHIEF F. E. BURRELL,

At the head of the line was Acting Inspector Alfred W. Goodhue, Marshal and President of the association and Mrs. Goodhue, Mayor Eugene R. Stone and Mrs. Stone; Chief Frank E. Burrell and Miss Elsie Burrell; Floor Director and Vice President John T. Larkin and Mrs. Larkin, Lieut. Daniel R. McKay and Mrs. McKay, Lawrence W. Lyons, clerk of the district court and Miss Gertie Reardon the Assistant Floor Directors, Patrick A. Milford, Jeremiah Hinchon, Daniel H. Doran and Henry F. Reiley several of the aids with ladies, President Hearn of the Board of Trade and Mrs. Hearn and other guests.

Usually at affairs of this kind it has been the plan to have the marchers come down the hall sixteen front but as noted above the march had to be curtailed to eight front. The applause that greeted the couples however showed the excellence of the marching and the alignment of the front rank.

Marc h over, dancing commenced opening with a waltz dedicated to "Welcome to our sixth" while the second number was dedicated to "His Honor the Mayor." Other numbers on the order of 20 numbers were dedicat-

HOLDS MONTHLY BUSINESS MEETING

The regular monthly business meeting of the newly organized class of the Swedish Baptist Church, was held last evening at the home of Florence Blomquist, Nightingale avenue. The secretary read the report of the previous meeting, and various matters were brought up for discussion. It was voted that the entertainment committee, together with the president arrange the programs for future meetings, in order to make them as interesting as possible. The matter of choosing a name for the society was left until the next meeting.

The members are very lesirous of making this organization a first class missionary society, and their hearty co-operation will make the society one of which to be proud. The attendance was good, and a profitable evening was spent, concluding with singing, and the serving of refreshments.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Our idea of a mollycoddle is that polar bear at the Washington Zoo who had to have the steam turned on in his den.

Atlantic City has collected $17,500 in fines from saloonkeepers thus demonstrating again the profit there is in the reform business.

The potato crop having failed, people are urged to eat rice. Newly married couples can get several meals from the offerings made at their wedding.

W. R. Hearst has engaged eighteen rooms for the Democratic national convention. As he can go to bed in but one at a time, this is just seventeen too many.

Congressmen who are anxious for a nice summer trip begin to prick up their ears when this international commission on the cost of living is mentioned.

The amount of time which Mr. Taft spends travelling around is more like a drummer selling political samples than a good agent for Uncle Sam to have on the job.

The expenditure of $20,000 for the Lake Champlain celebration is being criticised, but anything that keeps a number of congressmen out of mischief for several days is to be regarded tolerantly.

They are talking of putting a children's bureau into the department of commerce and labor. We hope Mr. Taft looks into it occasionally and makes the children keep their toys and under-clothes in order.

Many of us complain at times because our train happens to be late these cold days and we are held up at the station for a little while but we do not give a thought to the many citizens of Braintree employed by the railroad, especialy those who are members of train crews who are compelled oftentimes to spend the night away from home because of the nature of their trips. Many of them family men, they are obliged to lodge in the towns at the end of their runs, returning home perhaps in the early morning hours, sometimes on friendly freight trains. Their life is not the easiest one but yet they work uncomplainingly and do their part toward giving us the fine train service which we enjoy.

Those of us who recently stated that there wouldn't be much winter this year have been keeping very quiet of late. January was an exceptional month for wide variations of temperature and more than made up for the December mildness. We have heard many of the townspeople within the last few days discussing the coal question and wondering if their present supply would last until the coming of spring. January with its gales and low temperatures made great demands upon fuel and in most cases will render imperative the purchase of an additional supply. This will make the coal man smile and the ice dealer is also happy with his houses packed to capacity so we are glad that there are two satisfied lines of business that is bright.

The mantle of snow has kindly covered the desolate places in Braintree where once stood two handsome and historic buildings, the Town house and the First Congregational church. The site of the latter will be covered by a new church within a comparatively short space of time in all probability and we trust that at the forth coming March meeting, steps will be taken toward the erection of a new Town hall which will be beautiful and commodious. Braintree's fire losses have been very heavy during the past six months and it is to be hoped that the town will be spared any further catastrophes of this nature.

On Thursday eening the three-act drama, "The Blundering Mr. Brown" will be given in the vestry of the Universalist church by local talent. They will be assisted by Miss Dora Wentworth, pianist and Master Percy Ames violinist.

"Our Sweethearts party" is to be held Saturday afternoon, Feb. 10th, from 2 to 5 o'clock in the parish rooms of St. Chrysostom's church. Mrs. H. Kneeland Ellis has charge of this affair to which all babies from one month to ten years old are invited. There will be 25 prizes for beauty, knowledge and strength and a grand prize for the most beautiful baby under four years. Also refreshments and grab bags—all to help along the "mile of pennies" scheme.

A H. Hall spent several days in New York this week selling motor engines.

Patriotism, will be the subject of the meeting of the Y. P. R. U. Sunday night in the Wollaston Unitarian vestry with Miss Evelyn Cumimngs as leader. Mrs Herbert J. Gurney is to be the speaker.

The Sunday school of Memorial church is to conduct the evening service the first Sunday of each month, and will give a concert on Sunday evening at seven o'clock.

All Methodists of Quincy and Wollaston should be present Sunday morning at the Wollaston M. E. church. "A message of the 4th Ecumenical Conference" is the subject. The conference was one of the greatest events of last year. Sunday evening the pastor will begin a series of sermons for men. The sermons are based on the replies of the most prominent business and professional men of Quincy. All men and women are invited.

Rev. Chester A Drummond of Somerville is to preach on Sunday morning at First church. The monthly meeting of the officers and teachers of the Sunday school will be Monday night and an all day meeting of the Fragment society on Wednesday. Miss Georgiana Waldron and Miss Edith Lovejoy are the flower committee of the church for February.

Franklin Bristol of East Squantum street is able to be out, having been confined to his home since Saturday with an attack of rheumatism.

A COLD JANUARY.

Winter weather of unusual severity prevailed throughout January, with continued low temperatures and frequent precipitation. The mean temperature for the month of 17.7 degrees was 7.6 degrees below normal, and the lowest for January since 1888. In 1911 it was 28.5 degrees. There were few warm days, the maximm temperature being 49 degrees on the 18th. The lowest temperature reached was 11 degrees below zero on the 13th and this is the minimum for January since 1907. The temperature rose above freezing on eight days and fell below zero on six days.

The total precipitation of 3.85 inches was .27 inches less than the average amount and was mostly in the form of snow. The total depth of snow was 28 inches and this is the most in January since 1905, and nearly twice the normal amount of 15 inches. There were measurable amounts of rain or snow on 18 days and most in one day was 1.19 inches on the 15th. Snow and ice covered the ground continuously during the month, the greatest amounts being 10 inches on the 15th and 18th. There was nearly the average relative humidity, rather more cloudiness than usual, and somewhat less than the normal amount of sunshine.

There was much less wind than usual, the mean hourly velocity of 18.8 miles per hour being 2.5 miles per hour below normal, and the least on record for January at Blue Hill. The maximum velocity was 61 miles per hour from the west on the 9th. The prevailing wind direction was west. An aurora was observed on the night of the 15th. L. A. Wells, Blue Hill Observatory.

Washington, Feb. 3.—The annual pension bill, carrying with it an appropriation of $152,579,000, was passed by the house. The vote was 245 to 32.

The bill, which was reported by the house on Jan. 29, consolidates seventeen pension agencies throughout the country under a single agency in Washington.

Woman Set Fire to Hospital

North Adams, Mass., Feb. 3.—Believing that if she would cause her husband to lose his position as watchman at the Berkshire Hills sanitarium, she would receive more of his affectionate attention, Mrs. Emma Pratt, 32 years old, set fire to the sanitarium, according to a confession which she made to the police.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES AND JOTTINGS

A Regular Weekly Feature of the Quincy Daily Ledger

In a recent letter to Charles S. Ward, who is now raising money for the London Association, President Taft wrote as follows: "The value of the Young Men's Christian Association in the promotion of good morals and in furnishing wholesome associations and healthful occupation for young men during their leisure hours has been practically demonstrated in the Canal Zone where great benefit has been derived by the Government in the maintenance of clubhouses placed under its management. No less valuable in the direction of morality, health, and efficiency has its work proved among the enlisted men of the Army and Navy of the United States. It is a potent factor in the preservation of the peace of the world, and it deserves the approval of everyone having the best good of the world at heart. My best wishes go with all who work to promote the prosperity of the parent Association at the capital of the British empire, as this is a matter of world interest, and my best wishes go with all work to promote that prosperity." It may be remembered that Mr. Ward was the director of the great campaigns in and about Boston that were put through something over two years ago.

President Taft has had abundant opportunity to see the working of the Association, not only on the Canal Zone but in the Philippines as well. When men of Mr Taft's experience, says such things about the organization it surely is a worthwhile organization. In many ways it is a club for the young men who become members of it. While it offers many more advantages than does the ordinary club, still the cost is much less. This is made possible by reason of the contributions of people who receive no personal benefit.

In view of this condition just a few of the larger gifts are given herewith that the people of Quincy may know how some of the men and women of the country have been remembering the Associations with money: Elkins family, Philadelphia, $160,000; D. S. Atkinson, Greenburg, Pa., $150,000; Eleanore E. Widener and eGorge W. Elkin, Philadelphia, $150,000; Mrs. Elizabeth Eakin, Nashville, Tenn., (Educational Dept.) $120,000; Ball Bros., Muncie, Ind., $100,000 and P. A. B. Widener, Philadelphia, $100,000. and so the list might be lengthened. But probably the most notable gift that has come to the work in many years has been that of Julius Rosenwald, one of the leading Jews of Chicago, who some time ago offered to give $25,000 toward the building of each colored Association which would raise $75,000 more. Thus far he has been called upon to contribute $150,000 toward this end.

MUNICIPAL SUPPORT.

There are few enterprises of this sort that receive either government or municipal support as such. Some years ago the city of Los Angeles began an expensive enterprise in the way of a great water supply system. The ditches to be dug were many miles in length.. Here were hundreds of men, miles from home and civilization and without means of entertainment and the like. The Association in that city put up to the officers of the municipal government the plan of having a secretary who would devote his entire time to work among these men in travelling up and down the entire length of the pipe line. After due consideration they decided to take up the work and today this man is on his job. This has been a great testimony to the efficiency of the work done by the Association under extraordinary circumstances.

SMALL CITIES

Usually in the past it has been thought that unless the city had a population of from 10,000 to 15,000 it was too small to have a building for the exclusive use of the Association. Today in Fort Doty, Wash., a town of 800 inhabitants they have a nice little building. In these places buildings costing from $4,500 to $38,000 have been erected and a secretary employed. A building costing this latter amount has been erected in Columbus, Neb., a place of 5,000.

Recently Rev. S. Parkes Cadman wrote as follows: "The work opportunity is one of the most fertile terms in our speech. It means about as much as a single word can." He then goes on to say "If I could harness the wasted energies of men to the machinery of the Young Men's Christian Association I could solve the problems that affict us, and dismiss the evils that destroy us. It builds its temples of wisdom in the gates of the cities; it provides its Christ-ordained hostelries in town and village."

BOYS' WORK

The Asociation has a large opportunity with boys of foreign parentage. America is making criminals of many of these boys who are not prepared to wisely use the greater liberty which the new continent offers. Young men are being tied up to the clubs of foreign boys, teaching them English, interpreting to them the new country to which they came. If these boys can be reached in this way they will be greatly helped to not become the kind of men the very often have become.

In fact the Association has done no better work than it has done for the boys of the land If these boys can be started in the right direction there will be no question about the men they are to become. To this end, Friday afternoon about sixty members of the Boys' department, members of the Junior class, gathered in teh hall to see B. Springer, a magician form Boston. That the boys had a great time goes without saying. After the boys had "filled" up on magic under the leadership of Mrs. W. F. Cummings, chairman of the Boys' Work committee of the Auxiliary the boys filled up on fish chowder, cocoa, and ice cream. After this Mr. Sedgwick, of the Board of Directors filled them up with some mighty good thoughts, after which, under the direction of B. F. Hodgkins, Jr., the head of the Boy Scouts in Quincy, they marched down stairs and then went home. They had a great time and will long remember the event.

One of the great coming events, from the standpoint of the boys will be the talk given by H. W. Gibson of State committee Feb. 17. He will give them a talk on Camp Becket and will show some 150 views of the camp, some of the slides having been made from photographs taken by one of the members of the Boys' department of the Quincy Association. Every boy in Quincy is given a hearty invitation to this meeting.

One of the results of the great Boys' Scout meeting in Boston, Thursday has been to arouse a greater interest in the movement in this city. In a short time a meeting will be arranged to demonstrate to the boys who are not now members just what the organization is. Some people have in some way gotton the idea it was an organization started, or at least fostered by the great moneyed men of the country to train the boys in the art of war so as to be used against the working man in the event of a dispute the like of which is now being waged in Lawrence. In fact some writers have given choice to such ideas. There is little question but that a uniform does have a great attraction for a boy, and who of us have not felt just this very thing? Have we become soldiers? No. But the very best way to learn the facts in the matter is to see just what the boys do learn

There are a great many men today who greatly enjoy spending their leisure in the woods. In times past, and they are not so very far past either, when people have been supposed to be lost in woods, and searching parties have scoured those woods to find them. How many of those searchers knew how to leave marks that would make it possible for them to find their ways back over the same course they had first taken? They themselves might get lost. One of the things the boys learn is to blaze a trail through the woods. Sometime a very helpful thing to know. How many men if they were out in the woods, or out camping could build a fire on which to cook their food? It is sometimes an easy thing to light a fire in a stove that will do the cooking, but to start a fire in the open without a so-called, "oven" is a different thing. And yet this is one of the things they learn. How many can light a fire when the matches are gone or if they should be so wet as not to be of any use? This is another thing they learn to do.

They also learn to be polite to people, and some people will agree this is a very important thing to be taught to boys today. Another very valuable lesson they learn, which some boys have not seemed to learn, is obedience. In this country it may become only a "fad" but if it will serve some of the purposes just stated it will have served its purpose as many people will agree to. In any event, parents whose boy wishes to join the scouts would do well to look into the matter very carefully before saying no to the boy

—There really is no way, says the New York Sun, for consumers to secure lower prices than the retailers are able to give them unless the consumers form co-operative societies to buy products in bulk, to be sold to members in small quantities at cost. But to do this an organization is necessary; the consumers would have to go into business themselves, and most of them have neither the time nor the inclination nor the means to do it. If the middleman is an evil he is a necessary evil.—Taunton Herald.

Q.—At the transfiguration of Jesus Matthew xvii, 3 states that Elias and Moses appeared and talked with Him. Will you please explain how it was possible for the Apostles to recognize that these two who were with the Lord were Moses and Elias? (W. C. C.).

Answer.—As the Scriptural narrative does not contain the information as to the modus operandi by which the Apostles recognized the Patriarchs, we are forced to rely upon our own resources, and to accept that which would appeal to us as the most reasonable solution of the matter, without forming a too positive conclusion. There are two ways by which it would be reasonable to suppose the Apostles were made aware of the identity of the two who appeared with the Lord In the account it says. "There appeared unto them Moses and Elias, talking with Him." During this conversation it would be the most natural thing in the world for the Lord to address them by their names. Then again, as they were coming down from the mountain with the Lord, He may have informed them as to the identity of the two they saw in the "vision." They did not actually see Moses and Elias but merely a "vision" as stated by the Saviour when He said, "Tell the vision to no man until the Son of man be risen from the dead"—Matthew xvii, 9.

THIRTEEN ARTICLES

Embodied In Chinese Throne's Agreement to Abdicate

Pekin, Feb. 3.—The Chinese papers confirm the announced intention of the empress dowager concerning the abdication of the throne.

The agreement of abdication consists of thirteen articles. The first provides for the renunciation of all political powers and governmental authority by the throne forever, but stipulates that it must not be regarded as an enforced abdication, such as marked the endings of previous dynasties.

The other articles relate to the internal organization of the imperial clan and the treatment of the Manchus.

FOLK DANCE.

Mr. and Mrs. George O. Wales gave a most interesting and enjoyable dance at Cochato hall, Braintree, last Saturday evening. Arrangements were made to have three of the instructors from the Boston School of Folk and Gymnastic Dancing give an exhibition of the finished work to the guests and also instruction in some of the simpler steps which many of the guests enjoyed joining in on themselves.

Mrs. Cabot read an enthusiastic paper written by the principal of one of the Brookline schools in which folk dancing has been conducted systematically for the last two years, and in which attention was called to the satisfactory results in improved health and pleasure for the children. Mrs. Cabot then read a short paper explaining the work as it is being introduced so rapidly among all classes in this country.

Instruction was given in a Hungarian folk dance, an English country dance "Greensleaves," a barn dance "Boss Castle," Negro buck and wing etc. Exhibition dances were given as follows by the instructor. The Dublin jig by Mrs. Cabot, Miss Conant and Miss Schellinger. The Irish jig by Mrs. Cabot and Miss Conant. A Norwegian dance, "The Mountain Climbers" by Miss Conant, Mrs. Cabot and Miss Schellinger and a Spanish solo by Miss Schellinger.

Refreshments were served at the club and the party voted a great success by the guests.

BRITISH SUBMARINE GOES TO THE BOTTOM

Every Officer and Seaman on Board the A-3 Perishes

Portsmouth, Eng., Feb. 3.—Eleven seamen and two officers perished when the British submarine A-3 was sunk in collision with the British gunboat Hazard, off the Isle of Wight. The sharp prow of the Hazard stove a big hole in the submarine and she settled so rapidly the men on board could not get out.

The submarine lies on the Princess shoal, almost on the spot where the submarine A-1 was lost with all hands on March 18, 1904.

British submarines belonging to the "A" class have been singularly unfortunate. The A-5 had six men killed and twelve injured by an explosion on Feb. 16, 1905. The A-8 sank on June 8, 1905, when fourteen men out of her crew of eighteen lost their lives. The A-4 sank on Nov. 16, of the same year, but the whole of her crew were rescued with considerable difficulty.

COMING EVENTS CALENDAR.

Under this heading will be published every Wednesday and Saturday dates of forthcoming entertainments in the city. A one-line announcement will be inserted free of charge, but if any committee desires more publicity as to place, hour, date, admission, etc., it will be inserted at 25 cents per line each insertion. HANDEL AND HAYDEN CONCERT.

The Handel and Hayden Society of Boston has made announcement of concerts for the season 1911—1912 at Symphony hall, Boston, and there is great interest in the performance of "Arminius" to be given Sunday night, Feb. 11, at 7.30.

The society has been fortunate in engaging for this spirited work Mme. Isabelle Bouton, H. Evan Williams, and Marcus Kellerman. Of these artists Mme. Bouton and Mr. Williams are known to Bostonians and Mr. Kellerman, late of the Royal Berlin Opera is admirably adapted, both in voice and physique, for the part of the young Cheruscan hero

Poet and composer could hardly have selected a grander, richer, more thrilling subject than the successful uprising of the leading German tribes, in the year nine of the Christian Era, against their Roman oppressors. The solo characters are only three,—Arminius, bass; Siegmund, tenor; and Priestess, mezzo-soprano, the rest is orchestra and chorus. Its finest feature is to be found in its vocal effects. Herr Bruch scores magnificiently for the voices, and with a mastery rarely equalled and certainly not surpassed by any composer. His orchestration is solid and scholarly

The first performance of Arminius in the United States was by the Handel and Hayden Society at the Festival of 1883, the composer, Max Bruch, conducting. The score is dedicated to Georg Hennoschel, who on that occasion sang the principal part.

TROLLEY FREIGHT.

Speed and low cost are features greatly to be desired in a service designed to handle express and freight transportation, but even provided these advantages are equal among a number of companies, the one that exercised the greatest care in the handling of the matter entrusted to it would be considered the best service.

The Electric Express service provides not only the low cost of shipment and extreme rapidity but combines also the advantage of the use of exceptional care to prevent loss, stealing or damage of articles which it handles. It has reduced these troubles to a very low minimum.

With the Electric Express service all matter between warehouse and warehouse is handled absolutely and solely by the company's own men. It is checked up and loaded upon the car by the man who accompanies it to its destination, who then checks it up again as he unloads it. If a transfer is necessary the same plan is followed. The greatest care is chosen in the selection of these men they being picked from among the employees of the company who have proven their worth and dependability in the passenger service.

This service is now giving four round trips a day between this section and Boston and the amount of business handled with its steady increase shows that its quality is being appreciated.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

A BOSTON GIRL'S BUDGET.

Motherly and Fatherly High School Students Warn Children off the Car Tracks—Results of the Elevated Company's Prize Competition—Wearing Sweetheart's Picture on Slipper's Toe is Hubbite Fad—New England Well Represented among Nation's Living Immortals—Gala Display for Returning Cardinal.

Is it your sweetheart's or someone else's picture you are wearing on the toes of your slippers when you go to the opera? A picture, at all events, is said to be distinctly de rigeur nowadays. The report, credited to Boston opera goers, comes to be sure by way of New York, but perhaps it is not the less authentic. The idea, at any rate, is in keeping with the analogous fad of having one's sweetheart's countenance reproduced on one's highly polished finger nail and so treated with enamel that it lasts for days without fading.

Every Boston girl just loves the convening of conventioners in this historic old town, so that it is good news to learn of the probable magnitude of the most important convention of the century next September. In the early autumn will be witnessed the gathering of the international congress of chambers of commerce and allied commercial and industrial associations, with delegates present from all over the world. President Taft will probably open the convention in person, and a programme is in process of arrangement which is expected to outshine all previous efforts at entertaining in this city. The actual number of persons present may not reach that of other conventions held in the Bay State capital, but in importance and personnel it will be unique.

The Boy Scouts of New England have been interested participants in the events attending the visit to Boston of Lieutenant-General Sir Robert Baden-Powell, K. C. B., the Englishman who founded the Boy Scout movement. More than 3,000 Boy Scouts in uniform, from the Greater Boston Council and from all parts of New England, came to the city, many of them taking part in the demonstration, in the Boston Latin School drill halls, of what scouting really means.

Despite the continued snow storm which held New England in its grip the celebrations marking the return of Boston's first Cardinal, William H. O'Connell, were carried out in notable style. The gaily decorated building along the route of the parade indicated that Boston as a whole, regardless of individual religious faiths, is proud of the distinction which has thus come to her. Returning to his work bearing the highest honor but one which can be conferred by his church, Cardinal O'Connell will have renewed opportunities for the service, religious, moral, civic, which has brought him to his present position of eminence.

Charles Dickens' continued popularity in Boston and New England is evidenced by the interest which is being taken in commemorating his centenary. The libraries are being besieged for his books and many an amateur, and indeed professional reader is busily rehearsing scenes from "David Copperfield," "The Pickwick Papers" and other favorites. Schools, clubs and public gatherings have arranged for appropriate honorary exercises on February 7th, and the regret is felt everywhere that the noted writer's son could not have lived a few weeks longer to have participated in his father's 100th anniversary.

Twelve out of forty is not a bad proportion to the credit of New England in the list of immortals announced by the National Institute of Arts and Letters. It comes pretty near to being one-third of a number selected from the entire country, showing that the vaunted literary and artistic pre-eminence of our little corner of the world is not altogether a thing of the past.

Kling, klang, klong! If any child of school age in greater Boston has not had it impressed upon his infant mind these last few weeks that he had best not fool in front of the moving trolley car the fault does not rest with the Boston Elevated Railway Company and its prize verse competition whose results have been appearing in the local newspapers. It is a national movement among electric railway men, this of trying to get parents and children to think more frequently of the dangers of the highway. Such efforts are making in many cities. The great traction company which operates in the metropolitan district of Boston is convinced that rather remarkable success has followed its experiment of offering cash prizes to pupils of high school age for the most effective verses "concerning caution in the streets, particularly relating to street cars." The competition was announced with sufficiently generous and numerous awards to bring out over seven hundred manuscripts most of which represented serious attempts to produce a distinct admonitory effect. What the company was looking for, doubtless, was not so much high literary merit as a striking expression of the parental spirit of warning the little one against perils that have snuffed out many lives and made many cripples. Owing to the even character of the more meritorious verses submitted the list of the larger prizes was somewhat extended, so that there were two awards in each of the first four sections. Besides these larger premiums ranging from fifty dollars down to ten dollars it was arranged that 200 children who sent in reasonably good poems should be delighted with the receipt of two and a half dollars. The foremost prize winners owe their good fortune to the fact that they grasped the company's fundamental idea, which was to secure the kind of lines that should make younger children think. A fatherly or motherly quality crops out in all of them—as in the lines of a high school miss who, personifying the parent, tells her youngster that just as she taught him how to creep before he could walk, now she is trying to make him think before he talks, or, with a masculine peremptoriness in a boy's contribution, entitled "A Half-a-Dozen Don'ts" whose value is thus summed up:

"These half-a-dozen 'don'ts', my dear,
Would save a hundred lives a year
If well obeyed."

Ethel Angier.

Boston, Feb. 2, 1912.

Wash Day Afternoon in the Park.

Mrs. Com Plaint—"Did you see that Mrs. Smith pass by? Here it is wash day and she is trotting the children out for an afternoon in the park."

Mrs. Nocker—"I suppose her house is full of unwashed clothes. She ought to stay home and clean up, as we do."

Anty Drudge—"My dear ladies, Mrs. Smith's wash is all done and dried. She uses Fels-Naptha Soap. Do the same, and you will be able to go out to the park, wash-day afternoon, too."

Ask the woman who knows Fels-Naptha to go back to the drudgery of the old-fashioned wash-day.

Not she! Fels-Naptha means too much to her. She knows too well what a labor saver it is—what an economy.

Fels-Naptha actually does most of the wash for her.

Instead of boiling or scalding and hard rubbing in the old way, she simply soaps them well with Fels-Naptha, in cool or lukewarm water and soaks about 30 minutes. Fels-Naptha dissolves the dirt.

Her wash-day starts after breakfast and ends at noon instead of at supper time.

Fels-Naptha saves fuel; saves clothes.

And when the wash is done, she is fresh and happy and the clothes are far cleaner, than if she had boiled and hard-rubbed them for a whole day.

Be sure to use Fels-Naptha the Fels-Naptha way—in cool or lukewarm water.

Follow the directions on the red and green wrapper. Use any time of year.

FRECKLES

By

Gene Stratton-Porter

COPYRIGHT, 1904, BY DOUBLEDAY, PAGE & CO.

SYNOPSIS.

Freckles, a homeless boy, is hired by Boss McLean to guard the expensive timber in the Limberlost from timber thieves.

Freckles does his work faithfully, makes friends with the birds and yearns to know more about nature. He lives with Mr. and Mrs. Duncan.

He resolves to get books and educate himself. He becomes interested in a huge pair of vultures and calls his bird friends his "chickens."

Some of the trees he is guarding are worth $1,000 each. Freckles' books arrive. He receives a call from Wessner.

Wessner attempts to bribe Freckles to betray his trust, and Freckles whips him. McLean overhears them and witnesses the fight.

Freckles' honesty saves a precious tree. He finds the nest of the vultures and is visited by a beautiful young girl.

She calls Freckles McLean's son. Freckles calls her "the angel" and helps the Bird Woman in taking photographs. McLean promises to adopt Freckles.

Out on the street the angel walked beside Freckles to the first crossing, and there she stopped.

"Did you insist on fixing that drink because you knew how intoxicating 'twould be?" asked Freckles.

There was subtlety in the compliment, and the angel laughed gleefully.

"Next time maybe you won't take so much coaxing," she said.

"I wouldn't this if I had known your father and been understanding you better. Do you really think the Bird Woman will be coming again?"

The angel jeered. "Wild horses couldn't drag her away," she cried. "She will have hard work to wait the week out. I shouldn't be in the least surprised to see her start any hour."

Freckles couldn't bear the suspense; it had to come.

"And you?" he questioned, but he dared not lift his eyes.

"Wild horses me, too," she laughed, "couldn't keep me away either! Now, goodby."

Freckles was half way to the Limberlost when he dismounted. He could ride no farther, because he could not see the road. He sat down under a tree and, leaning against it, burst into a storm of sobs that shook, twisted and rent him. If they would remind him of his position, speak condescendingly or notice his hand he could bear it, but this—it would surely kill him! His hot, pulsing Irish blood could not bear it. What did they mean? Why did they do it? Were they like that to every one? Was it pity?

It could not be, for he knew that the Bird Woman and the angel's father must know that he was not really McLean's son, and it did not matter to them in the least. In spite of accident and poverty, they evidently expected him to do something worth while in the world. That must be his remedy. He must go to work on his education. He must get away. He must find and do the great thing of which the angel talked. For the first time his thoughts turned anxiously toward the city and the beginning of his studies. McLean and the Duncans spoke of him as "the boy," but he was a man. He must face life bravely and act a man's part. The angel was a mere child. He must not allow her to torture him past bearing with her frank comradeship that meant to him high heaven, earth's richness and all that lay between and just nothing to her.

There was an ominous growl of thunder, and Freckles snatched up his wheel and raced for the swamp. He was worried to find his boots lying at the cabin door. The children playing on the wood pile told him that mither said they were so heavy she couldn't walk in them and she had come back and taken them off. Thoroughly frightened, he stopped only long enough to slip them on himself and then sped with all his strength for the Limberlost. To the west the long, black, hard beaten trail lay clear, but far up the east side, straight across the path, he could see what was certainly a limp brown figure.

Face down, Sarah Duncan lay across the trail. When Freckles turned her over his blood chilled at the look of horror frozen on her face. There was a low humming, and something spatted against him. Glancing about, Freckles shivered in terror, for there was a swarm of wild bees settled on a scrub thorn only a few yards away. The air was thick with excited, unsettled bees making ready to lead further in search of a suitable location. Then he thought he understood, and with a prayer of thankfulness in his heart that she had escaped even so narrowly he caught her up and hurried down the trail until they were well out of danger.

CHAPTER XII.

WITH HIS SWAMP ANGEL.

SARAH DUNCAN had not followed the trail many rods when her trouble began. She was not Freckles, and not a bird of the line was going to be fooled into thinking she was. They kept whizzing from their nests and darting from all sorts of unexpected places about her head and feet with quick whirrs that kept her starting and jumping. Before Freckles was halfway to the town poor Mrs. Duncan was hysterical and the Limberlost had neither sung nor performed for her.

"I wouldna stay in this place for a million a month," she had said, and the sound of her voice brought no comfort, for it was so little like she had thought it that she glanced hastily about to see if it had really been she that spoke.

Her chin was quivering like a terrified child's. Almost into her face went a nighthawk stretched along a limb for its daytime nap. Mrs. Duncan sprang down the trail, lighting on a frog. The croak it gave as she crushed it sickened her. She screamed wildly and jumped to one side. That carried her into the swale, where the grasses reached almost to her waist, and her horror of snakes returning she made a flying leap for an old log lying along the line. She lit on it squarely, but it was so damp and rotten that she sank straight through it to her knees. She caught at the wire as she went down and, missing, raked her wrist over a barb until she laid it open in a bleeding gash. Her fingers closed convulsively around the second strand.

She was too frightened to scream now. Her tongue stiffened. She clung frantically to the sagging wire and finally managed to grasp it with the other hand. Then she could reach the top wire, and so she drew herself up and found solid footing. She picked up the club that she had dropped in order to extricate herself. Leaning heavily on it, she got back to the trail.

The wind rose higher, the changes from light to darkness were more abrupt, and the thunder came nearer and louder. In swarms the blackbirds rose from the swale and came flocking to the interior with a clamoring cry. "Tcheck, tcheck." Grackles marshaled to their tribal call. "Trail-a-hee, trail-a-hee." Red winged blackbirds swept low, calling to belated mates. "Fol-low-me, fol-low-me." Huge jetty crows gathered about her, crying, as if warning her to flee before it was everlastingly too late. A heron, fishing the nearby pool for Freckles' "find-out" frog, fell into trouble with a muskrat and let out a rasping note. Mrs. Duncan was too shaken to run far.

Several bees struck her and were angrily buzzing about before she noticed them. Then the humming swelled to a roar on all sides. A great, convulsive sob shook her, and she ran into the bushes, now into the swale, anywhere to avoid the swarming bees, dodging, dodging, fighting for her very life. Presently the humming seemed to grow a little fainter. She found the trail again and ran with all her might from a few of her angry pursuers.

And as she ran, straining every muscle, she suddenly became aware that crossing the trail before her was a great, round, black body with brown markings on its back, like painted geometrical patterns. She tried to stop, but the louder buzzing behind warned her she dared not. Gathering her skirts still higher, with hair flying about her face and her eyes almost bursting from their sockets, she ran straight toward it. The sound of her feet and the humming of the bees alarmed the rattler, and it stopped squarely across the trail, lifting its head above the grasses of the swale and rattling inquiringly—rattled until the bees were outdone.

Straight at it went the panic stricken woman, running wildly and uncontrollably. She took one great leap, clearing its body on the path, and then flew on with winged feet. The snake, coiling to strike, missed Mrs. Duncan and landed among the bees instead. They settled over and about it, and, realizing that it had found trouble, it sank among the grasses and went thrashing toward the deep willow fringed low ground where its den was until the swale looked as if a mighty reaper were cutting a wide swath. The mass of enraged bees darted angrily about, searching for it, and, colliding with the scrub thorn, began a temporary settling there to discover whether it was a suitable place. Mrs. Duncan staggered on a few steps farther, fell face down on the path, where Freckles found her, and lay still.

MAINE'S GRAND OLD MAN

Death of Ex-Governor Robie, After Life of Remarkable Activity

Gorham, Me., Feb. 3.—Former Governor Frederick Robie died at his home in this town. He was in his 90th year and had been in failing health for some months.

He was prominent in business affairs in Portland and only a few weeks ago retired from the presidency of the First National bank of that city. He is survived by a widow, one son and two daughters.

Frederick Robie was born in Gorham, Me., on Aug. 12, 1822, two years after the district became "The State of Maine," as it ever since has been called by natives. He was the "Grand Old Man of Maine," the last of a generation of great political leaders. He did not object in the least to being termed a politician, but he was a politician in the highest sense of the term.

A STEEPLEJACK'S STUNT

Stirs Crowd by Leaping From Top of Statue of Liberty

New York, Feb. 3.—A man slowly ascended the upraised arm of the giant Statue of Liberty out in the harbor, made his way to the outside of the great hand, then sprang into the air and shot toward the earth.

Pedestrians in Battery park, across the bay, gazed at the whizzing figure spellbound, then gasped with relief when a parachute opened and the figure settled lightly on the ground at the statue base.

The man was Frederick Law, a steeplejack. He had obtained a government permit to make the leap.

GRAND JURY READY TO ACT

Will Indict Thirty of More In Dynamite Plots

REPORT COMING NEXT WEEK

Indianapolis, Feb. 3.—Thirty indictments or more, growing out of the government's investigation into the dynamite conspiracy, have been drawn up, and the possibility that they will be voted on by the federal grand jury next week was admitted at the office of United States Attorney Miller.

After its six weeks' inquiry to ascertain who, besides John J. McNamara, James B. McNamara, Ortie E. McManigal and other men already indicted, were responsible for the hundred or more explosions which occurred from Massachusetts to California in the last four or five years, and which culminated in the blowing up of the Los Angeles Times building, the grand jury will report to Federal Judge Anderson.

The indictments, if any are returned, will be secret, although the number of indictments will be made public. Who are involved will be kept secret until arrests are effected. This will be accomplished after papers for the arrests are received in the federal districts in which the accused men are known to be.

That the grand jury had completed the examination of witnesses and was practically ready for action on its final report was announced by Miller when he adjourned the jury until Tuesday. Between now and Tuesday his clerks and assistant attorneys will be engaged in drawing up papers as directed by the jury.

It is said the three charges upon which the government based its search for evidence were:

Violation of the federal laws regulating interstate transportation of explosives.

Conspiracy to violate the laws regulating transportation of explosives.

Concealment of knowledge of the guilt of those who committed any of the other two crimes.

McManigal, who confessed to carrying dynamite and nitro-glycerine around in suit cases, and who became the government's chief witness in tracing the complicity of others, has left Indianapolis and is believed to be on his way to Los Angeles, Cal.

The importance of McManigal's information to the government, covering his career as a member of McNamara's "dynamiting crew" from June, 1909, down to his arrest last April, and his experience with others, it is said, will be emphasized by the jury's report.

QUINCY HIGH 36 HAVERHILL 20

Eighth Straight Victory for Quincy High Basket Ball Team

SPECTACULAR PLAYS

No triumphant banners fluttered to the breezes to remind us of the event, no splendor and grandeur such as are wont to exist in the welcoming home of the conquering hero characterized the occasion, yet the hearts of the hundreds who were in attendance were as fully contented and their long entertained anxiety as to a successful outcome was appeased to an equal degree yesterday afternoon, when the members of the Quincy High basketball team, a quintet that has annexed eight straight victories this season, maintained its prestige by sending down the much heralded Haverhill High combination to a 36 to 20 defeat in the gymnasium of the local school.

While it would not be fair to say that it was the best game that has been played on the Quincy High court this year, it can be safely asserted that it was about as good a contest as any lover of basketball could desire to witness. In the early part of the game, the struggle for the greater number of points was exceedingly close, and from the manner in which things started it must be frankly asserted that a victory for the local team seemed dubious.

Both teams were about evenly matched, although the weight of the visitors was slightly in excess of the weight of the Granite City players. The Haverhill players evidently were able to fathom the strong points in the Quincy High team, and succeeded in making the score stand 11 to 11 about the middle of the first half. But the prowess, the courage and the stamina, as well as the superiority of the local players to shoot baskets, were demonstrated by Captain Chapman's aggregation at this crucial moment of the game, and from then until the conclusion of the struggle, Quincy High managed to keep in the lead by a substantial figure.

Finlay was closely watched and guarded throughout the game, but it was not until the second half, when the coach of the opposing team had Davis and Brasseur shift positions, that the local star was prevented from securing baskets in his usual brilliant manner. The fouls called were comparatively few, considering the excitement which prevailed throughout and thanks to the announcement of referee LaRose, the game was devoid of the screeches and shrieks of the over-exuberant feminine rooters, who have hitherto given vent, in the height of their enthusiasm, to vociferous outbursts that frequently have a tendency to disparage the hopes of a visiting contingency.

The work of the entire Quincy team was of a commendable order, and every player on it must be complimented for the manner in which he has accredited himself. "Ducky" Holmes and Johnson demonstrated their ability as backfield players, to a high degree, and their efficiency was greatly attested to, owing to their remarkable work in passing the ball to their team mates who did the bulk of the shooting.

As has been the case in nearly every game this season, the opponent of Holmes has failed to exhibit a high class form, and yesterday, McKay the captain of the Haverhill team, conceded to be a star athlete at the school, had to rest contented with one basket from the floor and one from free tries.

Finlay and Trask played remarkably well and d id some fine work in placing the ball through the net, the former caging eight baskets, while the latter pursued him closely, with a total of seven to his credit.

Captain Chapman displayed his usual form, and while he was not so successful as were Finlay and Trask, in getting baskets, his work was of the same high order, for he followed the ball at all times, and gave a remarkable exhibition of pass work, time and time again being instrumental in placing the ball where it was possible for his team mates to score.

Many of the baskets were of the spectacular variety, and both Finlay and Trask contributed them at times from most difficult angles.

As for the losers, the best work was done by Child, who caged five baskets from the floor, two of which were contributed in sensational style. McKay and Davis also should receive praise for their ability as basketball players. The former, however, caused a number of fouls to be called on his team mates, owing to the fact that he persistently would hold his opponent, as the latter was in the act of trying for a basket.

The victory was a signal one for the local players, for the Haverhill boys were classed as the champions of Northern Massachusetts, and with this win, the Quincy High players are more firmly established for the championship honors of the state.

Great credit must be given referee LaRose, for the equanimity which he imparted throughout the game, for he has clearly proven himself an apt official, who knows the rules thoroughly and who renders decisions without fear or favor.

Next week the local players visit Reading, a team which they defeated here last Tuesday. Coach Staff appears highly elated with the manner in which the boys are performing and seems very optimistic as to their chances of acquiring championship honors:—

BOWLING RESULTS.

No victories were forthcoming to the local teams in the games played in Boston last evening in connection with the Pattern Makers' and Scottish Clans' leagues. In the later league, the Clan McGregor bowlers were defeated in three straight, two of which were exceptionally close. By a coincidence, the aggregate of the local team for both second and third strings was 400.

The high single string player was Morton of the McGregors who attained 98 mark, while he was a close second to Rattery and Thomas Stewart of the winners, for the highest sum total, having a pinfall of 261, the afore mentioned leading him by one point.

The Quincy Pattern Makers were defeated in two out of three at the Hub Alleys by the Roxbury team of the same league. Lee was the one man on the local team who showed up to advantage.

Roxbury Man Caught Coming From City Sq. Restaurant

FINED $15

Held in the cellar of the cafe of Anthony J. Thompson, in Quincy Square, by the chef, until the arrival of a policeman, William J. O'Brien, aged 24, years, of 307 Warren street, Roxbury, was arrested shortly after ten o'clock Sunday morning by Officer George Phillips, charged with the larceny of two chickens, a quantity of butter and some canned goods which he had in his possession at the time of arrest, stowed away in a large black leather travelling bag.

It seems the proprietor Thompson has been missing goods, consisting chiefly of chickens, butter, steaks and canned food, for the past three months, but owing to lack of any definite information, was unable until recently to place the blame for the loss. At first he was inclined to lay the stealing to various reasons, but all suspicions were dispelled Sunday on the arrest of O'Brien. According to the police, it was the custom of O'Brien to go into the cafe, sit at the counter and order a lunch. While waiting for his order, he would repair to the rear of the cafe, presumably to use the telephone, but in reality taking his bag and going into the cellar. In this way, it is alleged that he would fill his bag with such goods as he wanted, return to the counter, eat his lunch, pay for it and then depart.

Until four months ago, O'Brien had been employed by Benjamin F. Hodgkinson, a milk dealer of Germantown, for whom he had worked for over two years. In the capacity of milkman, it was the custom of O'Brien to leave milk in the cellar of the Thompson cafe each morning, and thus it was that he was able to familiarize himself

NEW SCHOOL SITE WANTED

Members of the City Council Committee on Public Buildings were at South Quincy Saturday looking over proposed sites for the new Adams school building which the citizens want the city to erect. The site first selected by the Parents' and Teachers' association was on Madison street. It is now said however that the site wanted is located on Pearl street. It takes in the Baxter property on Pearl street and the Gilfoy property on North Payne street and contains about 70,000 square feet.

SUNDAY FIRE.

The Central station auto chemical was called to City Square on a still alarm at 3.15 Sunday afternoon for a chimney fire in the Faxon homestead at the corner of Washington and Coddington streets. On its arrival it was found that ladders were needed and a telephone call was sent in for the truck. A line of chemical hose was taken to the roof of the house and the fire extinguished. The fire was discovered by occupants of the house, when several of the rooms began to fill with smoke. An effort was made to locate the fire but without much success. A telephone call was then sent in for the auto chemical. The damage was slight.

TODAY'S COURT.

William O'Brien was fined $15 for entertaining the premises of A. J. Thompson at Quincy with intent to steal.

Cornelius Maguire of Braintree was sentenced to two months in the house of correction for drunkenness.

The Changes in City Officials are Hardly Noticeable to the Ordinary Visitor at City Hall

Today is Quincy's second inauguration day That is the officials who have been serving under the administration of ex-Mayor Shea retire and the new officials appointed by Mayor Stone assume active duty. While most of the offices at City Hall will have new administrative officers there is to be no change in the clerical force of any of the departments so that visitors to the Hall will see some familiar faces.

The new officials at the City Hall are well known to the majority of citizens. In the first office on the right, on entering the building is the office of the Treasurer. Here in the place of John Curtis will be found Henry F. Tilden. In the next office, City Clerk Emery L. Crane will be found at the desk recently occupied by Charles J. McGilvray. Next on this side of the hall is the offices of Mayor Stone and the City Solicitor. The latter is John W. McAnarney, who served under Mayor Shea. The same is also true of the City Engineer's office Ezekiel C. Sargent being the same official as for the past four years.

At the left entering the hall is the office of the Commissioner of Public Works. Here the visitor will find Frederick E. Tupper who succeeds Randolph Bainbridge. In the office of the Tax Collector Herbert F. Child will be found in place of John J. O'Hara. In the Assessors' office, after today, will be found a new face in place of John A. Duggan, for Mayor Stone will tonight name the new Assistant Assessor.

Down in the basement there will be found few changes. James H. Elcock continues to occupy the office of the Overseer of the Poor; Warren S. Parker the office of Inspector of Buildings and James M. Cantfill the office of Sealer of Weights and Measures, his office being governed by the civil service rules.

In the office of the Board of Health there is an entire new board the new men being William H. Teasdale, Dr. Fred E. Jones and James Thomas.

The office of the Managers of Public Burial Places is also on this floor and there are some changes in the personnel of this board. The Inspector of Milk, who has a small office in the basement has the same occupant Edward J. Murphy, also the City Physician Dr. H. C. Hallowell.

The Chief of Police being a civil service office is the same as before Frank E. Burrell.

The Chief Engineer, whose office is at the Central Fire station is Amos L. Litchfield who succeeds Peter J. Williams.

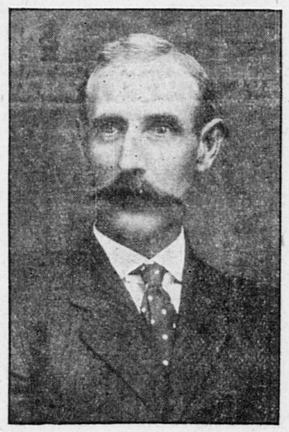

There are also some new officials in several of the other administrative boards but they seldom meet at City Hall.

Although the changes are quite a few and likewise important the machinery for running the city is so nicely adjusted and well oiled that to an ordinary person a change of officials would hardly be noticeable.

The principal officials at City Hall assumed charge Saturday afternoon. That is that afternoon at 2.30 the accupants of the several department offices turned over their books, etc., to the new officials. This was done to avoid any confusion this morning.

Nothing but words of praise can be said for the out-going officials. They have been careful and painstaking men doing their duty in a conscientious manner. It is one of the fortunes of war however that to the victor belongs the spoils, and while many have questioned the wisdom of this idea it still holds good, as it always has since Quincy became a city.

WARREN S. PARKER.
Inspector of Buildings.

MOCK TRIAL AT HOUGHS NECK

"The Parting With Forty Ways" is the subject of a mock trial to be presented tomorrow evening in Houghs Neck Union Chapel by the members of the church. Rehearsals have been going on for the past three weeks under the direction of Henry W. French, the originator of the production and it is expected that the affair will meet with great success. The money raised will be used in defraying the expenses of Union Chapel.

The much talked of question of separation will receive great attention in the mock trial and many a hearty laugh will be noticeable on the part of the audience from time to time, as the production itself is replete with jocosities of all sorts. Rev. W. J. Sayre, pastor of the church, will act in the capacity of judge, while the attorneys will be Henry W. French and Roy Wilcox, with William Hudson, marshal of the Houghs Neck constabulary, as court officer.

The number of witnesses includes a long list and the following will all take prominent parts: Florence Brown, Eva Leonard, Vera Leonard, Maude Tibbetts, Alice Stuart, Teresa Slaunwhite Ruth Thorne, Sadie Thorne, Ruth Horn, Alice Horn, Dorothy Gray, Ethel Urann, Dorothy French, Mrs. George Higgins, Mrs. William Slaunwhite, Ella Acorn, Mrs. Milledge Le Cain, Mrs. Clarence Rose, Mrs. Frank Catarius, Mrs. Emma Sumner, Mrs. Ellsworth Sweares, Mrs. A. B. Lincoln, Mrs. A. A. Brown, Mrs. N. G. Saylor, Mrs. Edward A. Goodey, Mrs Frank Downey, Rev. W. J. Sayre, Henry W. French, Roy Wilcox, C. R. Southwick, William J. Hudson, Beber Benn, Wallace Higgins, Franklin G. Saylor, Albert Acorn, Norman Saylor, Harry Hudson, John Townsend.

An entertainment will also be furnished and an enjoyable time is in store for all who attend.

A gang of painters were at work at City Hall Saturday afternoon varnishing the wood work in the main corridor.

PASTORS ACCEPT CALLS TO QUINCY CHURCHES

Letters Accepting Calls Read Sunday Morning at the First and Bethany Churches

Dr. A. L. Hudson to First Church, Rev. B. A. Willmott to Bethany

Rev. Chester A. Drummond of Somerville, one of the younger preachers of the Unitarian faith occupied the pulpit of First church, Sunday morning, preaching from St. Luke 12:6. At the close of the service he read the following letter from Rev. Dr. Hudson of Boston, who was recently extended a call to become pastor of the church:

Mr. Henry M. Faxon,

Chairman Parish Committee,
First Congregational Society,

Dear Sir:—

I have your letter of Jan. 28th enclosing the formal vote of the First Congregational Society of Quincy, extending to me a call to become its minister on March 1st, 1912.

Will you kindly convey to the people of the parish my hearty appreciation of their confidence in me, as expressed in this call to the ministry of a church which has such honored traditions, both in the pulpit and in the pews.

It will give me great joy to begin my period of service with you on the first of March. I shall do so with the earnest hope that, through our mutual interpretation of a common duty, the old First Parish of Quincy, may continue to be in the future, as it has coverering the past 273 years, a dominating influence for good in the life of the community.

Cordially and faithfully yours,
ADELBERT LOTHROP HUDSON

Dr. Asher Anderson, who occupied the pulpit at the Bethany church Sunday morning, read a letter from Rev. Benjamin A. Willmott of Lowell accepting the call from Bethany church, and he will commence his duties the first of April.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

It is a long cold spell that never warms up.

If a cold wave could only know when a hard-hit country has had enough!

The thermometer dropped to 58 in Louisana, and hundreds of people are being frostbitten.

This problem of what to "do to" our former presidents is getting more and more acute every day.

Political advertising has made its appearance in our suburban exchanges preparatory to the annual March town meetings.

EASY TO ADJUST.

The whole telephone matter is so absurdly simple that it is difficult to see how any child of school age should entertain any doubt concerning it. Nobody maintains that telephone rates should be unregulated, of course—for every monoply has to be a regulated one to be endurable. The point is that the public would fare much better to do its regulating directly, instead of punishing itself by loading up with a dozen different telephone companies and paying charges on the entire outfit. It's easy enough to regulate telephones rates, but it's impossible to get low rates by installing two or three systems in a given district, and paying each one for a partial service, almost as much as one formerly paid for a universal one In fact there is probably not a single serious student of industrial problems in the country who would defend the contention for competition in the telephone field as a sane way to obtain low rates. Little as may be said for the efficacy of competition in the railroad line, there is far less to be said for it in the matter of telephones. The latter is the one field which probably ninty-nine men out of every hundred see clearly has got to be operated by a strictly regulated monopoly for the public good.—Lowell Courier—Citizen.

PEOPLE'S FORUM

Another large and appreciative audience was in attendance at the Braintree People's Forum, Sunday afternoon to hear Meyer Bloomfield, speak on "Truth about so-called slum life." Mr Bloomfield is director of the vocational bureau, Boston and is well qualified to speak on settlement work and sociological problems. He said that times have so changed that slumming which was once a fad is now little short of sin because even the humblest want privacy in their homes and do not desire to have their home life exposed to public view.

He expressed the opinion that there are two reasons for slums, one is the landlord who makes them possible by not providing better quarters and the other is the tenant himself.

Strange as it may seem, Mr. Bloomfield finds that the worst form of slum is to be found sometimes in our small cities and even in villages rather than in some great metropolis as one might expect. Mr. Bloomfield stated that there were now in the United States over 400 settlement houses. He said that the foreigners who come here leave the slums for better quarters just as soon as they get well established and are earning fair wages, so that the population of these poorer localities is always changing.

He explained the reason for immigrants settling in cities in districts with others of their own race as a perfectly logical one saying that were we to move to a foreign country we would flock to those places where our own people dwelt. This is done because of a mutual desire for aid and protection and is the modern version of the old saying "Birds of a feather" etc.

Mr Bloomfield is greatly in favor of Sunday sports and games for the poor people of our cities because he believes that such recreation keeps them from drinking and gambling and at the same time gives them healthy outdoor exercise which they can get at no other time because of the long hours of labor The Sunday laws he contends defeat their own ends by bringing about those evils which they seek to prevent. Mr. Bloomfield deplored conditions which could bring on such a great strike as the one at Lawrence and described the State Board of Arbitration, hemmed in as it is by foolish regulations, as comparable to a jury holding an inquest over a barn after the horse has been stolen.

Mr. Bloomfield thinks that the movement for the better housing and care of the slum dwellers must be state wide and world wide and cannot be accomplished by private philanthropy however well meaning or influential. Many questions were asked Mr. Bloomfield which he answered very fully and at length.

Next Sunday Harry Phillips of London, England, will speak on "Human waste heaps and how to reduce them." Mr. Phillips is sometimes called the John B. Gough of England.

N. E. RECREATION CONVENTION.

The program of The Recreation Institute at Brookline, Feb. 15, 16, and 17, is about completed. Some of the best specialists in New England will take part in the discussions. Frank S. Mason of Charlestown, will speak of Boys' Clubs in the Community and Donald North of Springfield, will lead the discussion on that subject.

Lee F. Hammer of the Russell Sage Foundation will present an entirely new paper on Holiday Celebrations with a number of interesting features. Mr. Hanmer has had special experience along this line in stimulating much of the interest in the Fourth of July celebrations throughout the country. He has some new suggestions to make for the observances of other holidays.

The Boy Scouts will be represented by two papers, one by Ormond E. Loomis, who is the New England Field Secretary of that organization, and another on Scouting as a means of Developing Citizenship by Prof. Henry W. Holmes of Harvard.

Mrs. Davis Kirk, one of the founders of The Social Centers Association of America will speak on The Social Center.

Some of the newer aspects of The Drama on Community Recreation will be presented by Prof. George P. Baker of Harvard and Arthur Farwell, supervisor of muncipal concerts in parks and recreation piers, New York City, will present a topic "Music for the People." Mr. Farwell is a very well known composer. He conducted the music at the Fourth of July celebration in New York in 1911 and composed a Hymn to Liberty especially for the occasion. He is one of the men deeply interested in the development of American music. His own compositions deal largely with the music of the American Indian and of the negro.

Much interest is aroused by the demonstration of activities that will take place Saturday afternoon, Feb. 17. Mrs. J. J. Storrow will not only show folk dancing, but will invite the people present to participate with her. Several patrols of Boy Scouts will give an exhibition. Miss Madeline L. Stevens of the Guild of Play, New York City, will show how successfully children can take part in plays and games, although they have never previously seen the director

OLD FRIENDS.

David B. Sickle.

There are no friends like old friends,
And none so good and true,
We greet them when we meet them
As roses greet the dew.
No other friends are dearer,
Though born of kindred mold,
And though we prize the new ones
We treasure more the old.

There are no friends like old friends,
Where'er we dwell or roam,
In lands beyond the ocean
Or near the bounds of home.
And when they smile to gladden
Or sometimes frown to guide,
We fondly wish those old friends
Were always by our side.

There are no friends like old friends,
To help us with the load
That all must bear who journey
O'er life's uneven road.
And when unconquered sorrows
The weary hours invest
The kindly words of old friends
Are always found the best.

There are no friends like old friends,
To calm our frequent fears
When shadows fall and deepen
Through life's declining years.
And when our faltering footsteps
Approach the great divide,
We'll long to meet the old friends
Who wait the other side.

HAD FONDNESS FOR CHICKEN

with the layout of food in the cellar. It is said that O'Brien has some trouble with Mr. Hodgkinson concerning the methods he was adopting in delivering the milk, and it is alleged that O'Brien was discharged for such reasons.

Only recently, the dish washer of the restaurant claims to have had a tussle with O'Brien in the cellar. The former said that he saw O'Brien go down into the cellar and fill the bag with goods. The dishwasher attempted to stop O'Brien, who resisted and succeeded in throwing off the former and getting away with the goods. Last Thursday, Mr. Thompson himself noticed O'Brien coming from the vicinity of the cellar with the black travelling bag, and would have made an investigation of the matter then, had not the cafe been crowded with patrons, the majority of whom were members of a sleighing party, who had dropped in to take luncheon.

Sunday morning, it is alleged that O'Brien entered the restaurant at eight o'clock and took some goods. Close watch was then established for him, in the event of his coming again. He entered the cafe at ten o'clock and was seen to perform the trick. The Chef saw him in the cellar, and as he did, the door at the head of the stairs was closed so that O'Brien had no possible means of escape. Officer Phillips was then called and O'Brien was taken to the police station, where he remained over night.

When questioned by the police in the matter, O'Brien stated that he went into the cellar to get what he wanted because of the fact that the cafe was crowded at the time. He said that he knew Thompson all right and was going to pay for the goods. In his possession were found three beer steins, which O'Brien said he procured for a certain fellow in Houghs Neck. This latter was communicated with but denied having knowledge of the same.

What O'Brien intended to do with the goods is not definitely known, neither can it be ascertained where the goods have gone which he is alleged to have taken from time to time. O'Brien had not been working much during the past four months and it is thought that he has been making his residence with a family in Cambridge.

O'Brien has been a resident of Houghs Neck in the summer time for a number of years and was well known among the different clubs. The announcement of his arrest came as a severe blow to his many friends in local circles, who evidently considered him to be a young man of reputable character.

DISTRICT ENGINEERS.

Chief A. L. Litchfield who assumed command of the Fire Department at midnight Sunday night has appointed the following as district engineers. Frank C. Parkard, Daniel J. Nyhan and Louis K. Badger. Messrs. Packard and Nyhan are reappointments having served in the same capacity for many years. Engineer Badger of Ward Four takes the place of a son of ex-Chief Williams who has been serving as such since James Dillon has been the chauffeur of the auto chemical. These appointments also took effect at midnight Sunday.

COUNCIL MEETING.

A regular meeting of the City Council will be held tonight. There have been no committee meetings since the last meeting so that there will be but few committee reports. There is likely to be considerable new business come up however including a discussion on the matter of the bill for a Metropolitan plan Commission. At this meeting Mayor Stone will announce his appointment of an assistant assessor to fill the vacancy caused by the expiration of the term of office of John A. Duggan.

RED LETTER NIGHT.

Maple Lodge K. and L. of H. will have a red letter night at its regular meeting on Wednesday evening in Protection hall. The travelling triangle will be received by them by a delegation from Waverley Lodge of Charlestown The entertainment is in charge of an able committee.

PAYS FIRST BILL.

The honor of paying the first bill to the new City Treasurer belongs to Frank J. Shay, of Norfolk street, Wollaston, a politician of some note. The check which Frank handed the new treasurer was for water. In connection with this it is said that owing to a small pipe in Norfolk street, being near the surface of the street, that the pipe has been frozen up all winter and the only way water has been obtained is through the kindness of a neighbor.

STRIKER'S CRISIS NEAR AT HAND

Both Sides Are Prepared For Battle at Lawrence

PLANS FOR GENERAL STRIKE

They Will Be Put Into Execution Should Mill Owners Fail to Win Battle Today—State Militia Inadequate to Serve More Than Two Other Cities the Size of Lawrence—Strikers' Position Strengthened by Entrance of Federation of Labor Into Struggle—Ettor Habeas Corpus Proceedings Continued

Lawrence, Mass., Feb. 5.—With the fate of the great textile strike hanging in the balance of the developments of today this city is awaiting the day's action with deep interest.

Today the mills will make a last test to sound the strength of the strike. Today the strikers will attempt to hold a mass meeting and by another demonstration of strength flaunt back their challenge that their ranks are unbroken.

The declaration of the local leaders of the American Federation of Labor that they would back the strike and organize under their banner skilled workmen of the mills gives a new show of strength to the operatives.

The strike committee was asked by Governor Foss, through Colonel Sweetser and Adjutant General Pearson at the armory, to return to work and await for thirty days an arbitration of their grievances. This the committee declined to consider.

At the halls where the strikers assembled meetings were repeated all Sunday, at which speakers renewed the enthusiasm which marked the early days of the strike.

They all urged upon the strikers the futility of returning to work at this time of the conflict, and announced that a general strike was to be started to aid in winning the battle.

Should the mill owners fail to break the strike today one of the hardest industrial battles ever fought in the New England states will be on in all its fury.

In any event, two points will be decided definitely. With all the militia guards and police there cannot be any further talk of opeatives being frightened from their employment. The full strength of the organization which the strike leaders have been moulding in their fight for higher wages will be laid bare.

In case of a general strike throughout the state in the textile centres, the question of military protection will be a grave problem. Nearly half of the entire military strength of the state is now on duty at Lawrence. There is a total strength of about 4500 men, including every branch of service. These could not adequately serve more than one or two other cities the size of Lawrence.

A telegram has been sent to Vincent St. John, head of the Industrial Workers of the World, asking his permission to call a general meeting of the executive board of the organization for a general strike vote, which may affect textile industries even outside New England.

When the reply from St. John is received, the I. W. W. board will convene and then the big industrial battle will be launched. It has been settled that within the week some other strikes will be started, but the points to be attacked have not been made public.

Although the American Federation of Labor now controls less than 400 of the Lawrence operatives, it is planning to effect an organization of all the so-called skilled craftsmen in the mills, estimated to number between 2000 and 3000.

The entrance of the older labor body into the struggle is expected by mill owners to strengthen materially the position of the strikers.

The strike leaders are confident that Joseph J. Ettor will be freed when the hearing is held before the supreme court. With his presence in the field, a new turn will be given the situation.

Habeas corpus proceedings for the purpose of securing the release on bail of Ettor and Giovannitti were continued until tomorrow afternoon because of a failure to serve the order of notice on Jesse F. Brown, keeper of the Lawrence jail, where the two men are confined pending a hearing on charges of being accessories to the murder of Anna Popizzo.

District Attorney Atwill of Essex county was in the supreme court to represent the government, having learned through the newspapers that the petitions for habeas corpus had been filed. He believed from the nature of the proceedings that a speedy hearing would be desired and that he would be called upon to appear for Jailer Brown.

A new order of notice was issued by Judge Braley and will be served on the jailer. John F. Lynch and George E. Roewer, Jr., appeared for the petitioner.

Q.—What does the Apostle Paul mean when he says "Man * is the image and glory of God, but the woman is the glory of the man?"—I Corinthians xi, 7. (M. L. B.)

Answer.In the Gensis acount of the creation of man, it is stated that he was made in the "image and likeness of God." The words in the text would more properly be—"Man * * * is the glorious image of God." These words of the Apostle apply, of course, to the first perfect man, and not to man as he is to-day in his fallen, depraved, and degenerate state. The woman was created to be his "help-meet" (Genesis ii, 18) and ,in the proper relationship that should exist between the two, would be to his honor and glory. In the third verse of this chapter, the Apostle explains that the "head of the woman is the man" and this was to represent the Headship of Christ over the Church. (Ephesians v, 22-32.) The Heavenly Father has arranged that His Son, the Anointed Jesus, who is the "express image of the Father's person" (Hebrews i, 3), is to have a Bride, (Revelation 21-9.) This bride is to be made up of a class the elect overcomers of this Gospel Age. When completed and glorified, the Bride, the Church, will be the "Helpmeet" of Christ, and will be to His honor and glory.

SURPRISE IN COOK COUNTY CONVENTION

Roosevelt Is Turned Down and Taft Commended

Chicago, Feb. 5.—An effort to indorse Theodore Roosevelt for the Republican presidential nomination was defeated, while a resolution commending President Taft and his administration was adopted at the Cook county, Chicago, Republican convention.

Governor Deneen was indorsed for nomination for a third term and his administration was commended.

The session was marked by loud cheering when the indorsement of Roosevelt was proposed, but on roll-call the proposal was defeated by 864 to 198. The Taft resolution read:

"We heartily indorse and approve President Taft's course in firmly seeking to carry into effect by wise legislation the reforms to which our party pledged itself in the platform adopted by the Republican national convention of 1908."

The collapse of the Roosevelt boom furnished the surprise of the convention.

WANTS ACROBATIC SON

Ankle and Wrist Joints of Infant Are Broken by Greek Father

Cincinnati, Feb. 5. — Humane society officers here witnessed a private performance given by a boy 3 years old, whose ankles and wrists were broken when he was 10 days old, in order to make him an acrobat and wrestler.

The boy is the son of R. G. Neof, a Greek. Neof told the officers he had broken the wrists and ankles of his son when he was 10 days' old, and a month later he began training the baby for an athletic career.

In his performance the child dislocated his ankles and wrists at will. By bending backward with hands and feet on the floor in a wrestler's bridge, he supported 150 pounds on his chest.

—The children of Leicester and Cherry Valley at the expense of the parent-teacher association are being taught how to cane seat chairs. That is much better than learning the trade at the expense of the country, as some people do, and it is to be hoped that cane-seated chairs will not go out of style as soon as the youngsters become proficient in the industry. But if the association desires to dispose its funds toward a still more utilitarian purpose it might start a course of instruction which would teach Johnny how to seat his own trousers, instead of chairs.—Spencer Leader.

WOLLASTON M. E.

The announcement that Rev. Wesley Wiggins would preach on Sunday evening the first of a series of five sermons on letters received from the most prominent men of the city, attracted a large audience. The subject was "A Wollaston Man and his Church," from the text, "Quit you like men." I Cor. 16:13. Mr. Wiggin said in part: "A few weeks ago I sent 55 letters to the leading business and professional men of Quincy, with the exception of the clerymen, asking them to give a few suggestions as to why the great majority of the men of Quincy are not actively engaged in church work. To the letters were appended six questions as follows:

FIRST: Why are not more men members of the Church?

SECOND:—What are the most helpful features of Church life today?

THIRD: Why do not more men regularly attend church?

FOURTH:—What is the greatest need of the church?

FIFTH: What would you suggest to make the church more effective in reaching men

SIXTH: What are the benefits of the church to the city of Quincy?

No names will be mentioned or even a hint given as to wrote the articles that may be quoted in these sermons. Out of 55 letters sent, 26 replied, all of which are full of interest and helpful suggestions.

The object in preaching this series of sermons is to help men to sense their obligations and thereby give their influence, their lives and their services to spread the kingdom of God and lift men to a high moral standard.

To do this ,men need to be strong. The Church needs men of wise business sagacity, keen leadership and a statesmanlike grasp of present conditions. The Church is worthy of the best thought, the best service and the best that there is in us.

When we consider what the Church has stood for from its inception down to the present; when we realize what the church means to the individual; the home, the community; the nation and the whole civilized world; when we think what it cost to make possible the benefits of the Church and bring them within reach of the most humble child in any part of the world; do we not realize that every man owes a debt to the Church which cannot be paid except by a recognition of our individual responsibility, which will result in service for its maintenance, its progress, and its ultimate victory in the conquest of the world for Christ. To do this will necessitate that we quit ourselves like men, be strong "For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against the rulers of darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places." We need the whole armor on. We need the strength of sterling manhood. The force of manly character, the inspiration of strong men.

We shall deal with only two of the questions this evening:

1. Why are not more men members of the church?

2. Why do not more men regularly attend church?

The fact that these questions are asked is evident that quite too generally men do not attend church as once they did. The reason for this we are going to let the men speak for themselves this evening in the replies received to the questions sent to them bearing on this subject.

The reason that more men are not members of the church, or do not regularly attend church, is because men do not get interested."

"Indifference and laziness are given as reasons why men do not attend church. Need of personal solicitation as in social societies, lack of interest in appreciative reading of the Bible, now not much read, these are a few of the reasons given as to why men do not attend church."

"Again we are told that other matters attract. With so many causes claiming attention, nothing receives unanimous support in these days, whether of good or evil nature. All things considered, I question if the church will show an increase without a decrease in other attractions.

The reason that men do not regularly attend church is wholly up to the Pastor. As church services are now held, the sermon holds chief place on the program. The pastor alone can hold men to the church. Members may bring them, but if the program is not helpful, or distasteful, they cannot be held."

"Another says the main reason I attend church very little is because I prefer to make use of my Sunday as a day of rest and recreation rather than church attendance, which for me is neither. I believe that most men in these times put in six days of the week in pretty active work, and can help themselves better by a life in the open air on Sunday than by church attendance. This does not mean that the church is not needed, for I have no such idea. It ought to be supported, and I am willing to do my part, but as I feel today not to the extent of regular attendance on Sunday."

"The indifference of the modern man to the spiritual life is called by the author Protestant Christianity's biggest problem. He finds that there are 3,000,000 fewer men in the church today than there are women and girls, men who are sturdy in the home and interested in good movements, thousands of them, leaders in industry and commerce, who have either never become affiliated with the church or who have withdrawn from it for one reason or another."

"The reason that more men are not members of the church is because men do not sufficiently recognize their responsibilities and obligations and blessings. And men do not regularly attend church because men are too lazy to really appreciate its benefits.

Many do not feel the need of the church or anything the church can do for them."

"The average man is now living at such a pace in his business and social affairs that church attendance is considered only another burden, and it is the one which can most easily be neglected. They feel no responsibility towards the church."

"Personally I believe in the church, attend church, and support the church I wish that every one else would do likewise."

"That more men are not members of the church is because in so many instances everything is preached except the Bible. I often hear men say, "Oh yes that was a good talk, but there was nothing in it. I have noticed in my travels that the church where the most vigorous Bible sermons were preached that there was no lack of men. I attended church in Los Angeles, Cal. where there were three thousand attendants, and surely five-eighths of them were men. The sermon was just bristling with Bible facts and proofs. That more men do not regularly attend church is due to several reasons: First, they are not truly interested. Second, Some say it is the only day they have at home, and others say they are tied up all the week and want to get out in the air. Some have one excuse and some another, but in my opinion the first is the principal reason, not interested. The church is not put up to them as a real man's job, that takes work."

"There are many reasons why men do not attend church. Some goods are worthless. Men are so crowded with details of business in these days that they require one day of absolute relaxation and they absolutely need the day for out door recreation."

"Much of the preaching is poor and not up to the standard of the business brain of today."

"Very many ministers are not inspired and their preaching is not up to the standard of present intellectual attainments."

"There is an object lesson in the Catholic church which I think the ministers of every other church in Quincy can study to advantage. There is no Mass held at the Catholic church, whether it be early or late, but what is largely and regularly attended not only by women but by men, and failure to make at least a fairly regular attendance on the part of any member is rare. What does this mean? or rather indicate? To me, accustomed to handle business propositions, it indicates unity of action amongst the various churches with some regular system of reaching members, even from their earliest childhood. It indicates also a more strict personal relaxation between the head of the church and the man or woman, and the latter feel free to go to priest for information and advice."

"To your first question why are not more men members of the church I would say, We find with few exceptions a belief in the Fatherhood of God and the Brotherhood of man and a deep sense of regard and appreciation for the life and character of our Saviour, and the concrete opinion seems to prevail that His lash would be used in many of his so-called Temples today for the same reason as of old, that tainted money changers seem in many instances to dictate the policy, and following the teaching "by their fruits ye shall know them" we often hear the remark that many of the Pillars will hardly bear even casual inspection in the ordinary walks of life to wit, grinding employees with one hand, to starvation condition with the other hand, ostentatiously give out their crumbs in the sweet name of charity, the same conditions are assumed to prevail in civic matters in relation to tax assessments and very logically the impression exists that what they unjustly turn off in the name of their Creator the poorer brethern have to make up, hence it is creating in the average mind the question, Does this represent the teaching of Christ, and many search for it but cannot find justification for its Charity, Franklin said Charity begins at home. Many are impressed with the thought that the Christ Spirit should begin at the Church and the decalogue of many church men should be changed to read, Do as we do, not as we say."

There are two reasons why there are not more men members of the church, the first being pure indifference and nothing worse, there being no longer any hostility felt toward religion; the second reason being a sense of appreciation of the fact that church membership implies, or ought to imply excellence of character and a disinclination on the part of the average man to pose in a place where he may through his failings bring reproach upon the faith he professes. Fewer rather than more church members is what it needed. The average church member caricatures rather than represents truly the attributes of the christian life.

Men do not attend church for the simple reason that a sermon as a rule takes them into things metaphysical, the things that are in a measure incomprehensible to them. Another reason is, men want to be entertained. The minister who is true to his calling will not try to entertain. He will preach the truth and let it go at that. The people must come to the church; the church cannot compromise its dignity for the sake of getting a hearing.

There are more women in Massachusetts than men hence the reason for the majority of women attending church. The formal method of preaching does not appeal to the average man.

The Sunday Newspapers have more or less good reading matter leaving the various subjects to the choice of the reader.

The appeal to life in the open has been very great during the past ten or fifteen years and many men who were accustomed to attending the church from their early youth have in their later years acquired a desire to motor, golf and tramp about and apparently have adopted the view that as long as they lead a moral life and do not interfere with the observance of Sunday by other people, they are maintaining a standard of life which they regard as proper.

Many contribute to the support of the church who are seldom in attendance. They recognize that the church safeguards the community, yet feel no direct personal interest in it. The matter is summed up in the one word, indifference."

The way to get men interested in the church is to get them doing something, and they will learn that in service to others they will find a certain comfort and interest which will grow on them and in time make them active members and regular attendants. If a man knew there would be one good service at 10.45 to one o'clock he might be more inclined to go and then have the rest of the day with his family, but when there is something doing all day, he puts it off until evening and then it is easy to put it off altogether. City men should not be expected to follaw the same line as their brothers on the farm. They are away six days in the week and some time should be allowed for them with their family and bodily recreation is sometimes good for the soul.

Many of these men who have replied to these questions I do not know, some of them I do know. They are men of wide business experience and many of them are members of the church hence their replies should be carefully considered. They contain many helpful suggestions which are worthy of thoughtful consideration. If we had time we would like to reply to each point considered but we will not trespass on your patience.

Said a leading business man of Chicago to a church committee seeking a pastor to draw people "What you need is not a man that can draw but a church that can hold.

That men do not generally attend church is not the concern of one church but it is the problem that is being considered both in America and England for in a leading article in an English weekly not long ago we read, "It is a deplorable fact that not only in America but in our own churches there is too few men in attendance at the Sunday services."

Every Wollaston man should cultivate the habit of church attendance because it is a duty.

I. He owes it to himself. We need strong men, well equipped, thoroughly furnished unto every good work. Every man owes it to himself to develop his physical and mental powers. Why should he not seek to develop his moral and spiritual powers or at least to throw his influence on the side of the highest good. If for six days man has toiled with hand and brain ought he not for his own personal good spend one hour on the Lord's Day in the house of God? Where else can he find a better place for relaxation, rest and new vigor?

II. He owes it to his family. The man is the head of the family. For the sake of the influence on the home life; for the sake of the example for the children and the influence of the home life on the moral tone of the community, every man should at least spend time enought to attend one service on Sunday.

III. He owes it to the community. Man is a citizen, as such he is responsible for the moral tone of the community in which he resides. He should give some portion of his time in support of the services that have for their object the worship of man's Creator.

IV. He owes it to God. God created man in his own image, endowed him with reason, faculty of speech, power of discernment, organs to hear, mind to think, and bid him go forth to multiply, and till the soil that it might yield a harvest to feed man and give him physical strength and vigor for daily toil.

Man has been an object of God's care and thoughtful consideration all these years. It is because He is that we live and move and have our being in Him. In view of all this do we not owe Him at least one hour in which we may assemble in His house for worship. Quit you like men, Be strong.

OUR COVENANT

"In the Love of Truth and in the Spirit of Jesus Christ we unite for the Worship and the Service of Man."

The Wollaston Unitarian church was well filled at the morning service of worship and the Rev. Carl G. Horst took his text from Romans 12-1, using the new version "Present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable to God, which is your spiritual service."

This offering of the well-bounded completed life of man as a spiritual service to God, was shown to be a great advance over the old custom of offering, in sacrifice, the dead body of an animal slain to appease the wrath or to gain the favor of an arbitrary God. Religion today includes the giving of one's best to the nearest duty, and to give one's "body a living sacrifice" must be interpreted as meaning a perpetual giving of the whole pensonality in a rational service to God and to the large interests of humanity. True religion is pervasive, entering like light, shedding warmth and radiance on homely duties, and relating us closely to the Eternal.

The call to a religious life does not imply a sacrifice of common sense nor the acceptance of mysticism and to carry one's religion into the smallest interest of life does not make that religion worldly, rather does it make our worldliness religious.

At the Y. P. R. U. meeting last evening Mrs. Herbert J. Gurney gave an inspiring address on "Patriotism" and Miss Evelyn Cummings led the devotional service. At the next meeting the Rev. Joel H. Metcalf, Ph. D., the well-known astronomer will give a stereopticon lecture on "A Pilgrimage to the home of St. Francis."

Midweek Lenten services will be held, as is customary, and among the special Lenten preachers are the Rev. Julian C. Jaynes of West Newton, Rev. Sheed Anderson of Roxbury, Rev. Thomas Van Ness of the Second Church in Boston, Rev. Joseph P. MacCarthy, Ph. D. of Waltham, Rev. Palfrey Perkins of Brighton.

Rev. Carl G. Horst's former church in Athol, where his daughter was christened was destroyed by fire last week, Sunday night. The church has voted to rebuild at once.

The Boston Young Men Christian Union, which unlike the Y. M. C. A welcomes to its membership young men, not only of so-called evangelical churches, but of all churches, will formally open to the public the new additions to its building, 48 Boylston street, tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock. All the members and friends of our church are cordially invited to attend.

The regular vesper service, largely musical and lasting just sixty minutes, will be held next Sunday afternoon at 4.30 o'clock. Please be in your seat five minutes before the service.

Will all those in our parish, who hold office in any charitable or philanthropic society in Quincy or in Greater Boston, kindly send their name to our minister?

The Earnest Workers Lend-a-Hand club meets with Louise Emery, 22 Winthrop avenue, Tuesday, at three o'clock.

The Junior Lend-a-Hand club will meet with Dorothy Atwood, 557 Hancock street, Tuesday, at 4 P. M.

Mrs. Frank W. White, 129 Winthrop avenue, will open her home for a Bridge Whist Party Wednesday, Feb. 7, from 2 to 5 P. M.

The Unitarian Church-Helpers meet at the home of Mrs. Roy C. Baker, 29 Everett street, Thursday, at 2 o'clock.

The monthly sociable will be held Thursday. Supper at 6.30. The entertainment of the evening is a farce entitled "The Joint Household," in which two of the popular young women of Wollaston, Mrs. Harold Green and Mrs. Gorham Nickerson, take part.

The Women's Alliance birthday party last Wednesday was a most enjoyable social affair. It was for members only and eighty enjoyed this red letter day.

Our minister will give an address before the Women's Alliance in Attleboro on Wednesday.

BETHANY CHURCH.

There was a good attendance at Bethany church, Sunday morning, notwithstanding the severe cold. Dr. Asher Anderson occupied the pulpit, and took for his text, St. John 9 chapter, 2d verse: "And his disciples asked him, saying, Master, who did sin, this man, or his parents, that he was born blind?" Dr. Anderson said in part, the problem of pain, is one of the most serious questions of life, and the manner in which the question is put to Jesus by the disciples, makes us wonder at the mysteries of life.

We are prone to say if any great disaster occurs or any serious epidemic comes upon us, "Why did God allow this?" And again if we are in some terrible shipwreck or a rail road accident—and our lives are spared, we say, "God was merciful to us." Some people think God takes pleasure in putting trouble upon his children because he loves them, when often times it is brought about by their own indiscretion "The sins of the father, shall be visited upon the children even to the third and fourth generation."

God is good, God is love. If we sin against His goodness and love in our human ignorance and wilfulness, then we must go to him as little children, and the Great Physician alone can heal us. Our faith is to take a firm hold on God. Shall not the judge of all the world do right? God's light and love shines over all the world, and out of trials and tribulations, noble souls are developed, shedding joy, peace and sympathy to sorrowing hearts.

Have faith in God, that faith brings success; He has put us into this world not to play, to dream, to drift, but to do hard work, to lift loads, and He who brought light to the blind man will at last bring us into the light of His imperishable love.

The evening service was held under the auspices of the Y. P. S. C. E. Dr. Anderson gave a special address, taking for his topic, "Christian Endeavor Ideals." He spoke eloquently and as this was the thirty-first anniversary of the society he thought the members had good cause for rejoicing and gratitude. Appropriate music was rendered.

CHURCH PROBLEMS IN LOWELL

The calling of Rev. B. F. Wilmott of the First Congregational church, Lowell, to Quincy and of Rev. James E. Gregg of the Kirk Street church, to Pittsfield, last week is taken to foreshadow a posible re-organization of the Congregational churches in Lowell. There are four downtown churches of the denomination, three of them within speaking distance of one another, and a recent conference of all the Congregational churches in the city resulted in a recommendation, after a proper study of the situation that one and possibly two of them be disbanded. While this plan had the approval of a majority of the clergymen,it did not meet with acceptance on the part of the various church boards. The First Church for example, claimed the right to remain because it was the parent church and had the largest church edifice. The First Trinitarian claimed to have become an institutional church, and pointed out a special field of service among the foreign residents of the city. The Kirk Street church brought forward the interesting fact that in sixty-six years of existence it had raised and expended $715,066, of which $311,116 went to charitable purposes, and it submitted this as proof of the fact that it was a live church. It is reasonable to assume that even with two churches looking for new pastors, there will be a remote possibility of consolidation, much as it is to be desired in theory, and important a bearing as such action would have on the Congregational churches in other cities.

It is interesting to note that while the increase in the number of churches in Lowell has been steady for seventy-five years, eighteen have been disbanded within that time, nearly every denomination losing one.

MURDERER HAS A GOOD START

Eighteen Hours' Leeway After Killing Four Persons

ROBBERY WAS THE MOTIVE

One Woman and Man Who Were Slain Believed by Police to Have Been Engaged In Plot to Rob Maroon, Who Was Hacked to Death In Lawrence Tenement—Theories as to Manner of Slaughter

Lawrence, Mass., Feb. 5.—That Schaef Maroon, the young Syrian, was lured into the Valley street tenement of Joseph Savaria Thursday evening for the purpose of robbing him of the $485 he was known to have drawn from the Essex Savings bank a few days ago, is the opinion of both the state and local police who have been engaged in investigating the many clews connected with the murder of Maroon, Savaria, the woman known as the latter's wife, and Mrs. Evelyn Dennis.

There is no clew to the identity of the murderer, who had about eighteen hours' start on his pursuers. The murders were committed, it is thought, about 3 a. m. Friday; the bodies were found in the Savaria rooms at 8 Friday evening.

Maroon, around whom the murder mystery centres, had been at work in the Washington mill up to a couple of wees ago, when he went out with the strikers. Desiring to have ready money in his pocket, he called at the bank last Monday and drew out $485. The teller gave him two $100 bills, one $50 bill and the balance in $10 and $5 bills.

The young Syrian was regarded by his countrymen as fond of show, and one of his closest friends asserts that if he owed anybody 1 cent and had $1000 in his possession he would exhibit the entire amount before reaching the cent, so great was his desire to make an impression on those who frequented the places where he spent his leisure moments.

The police have worked along two lines of investigation, searching for the persons known to have been last in his company and endeavoring to learn where the two bottles of whiskey, which were emptied in the apartment, were bought.

One of the bottles had contained a Canadian whiskey and the other a Syrian brand known as "Arrik," which is said to be very potent.

The Canadian bottle bore the name of a New York distributor, but no local retailer's name appeared on the label. The other bottle did not have any label.

The police were told by Maroon's brother that Schaef was a total abstainer, and for that reason are convinced that the man who bought the Syrian whiskey was the murderer.

Maroon was known to gamble, and this gives rise to the feeling that he was engaged in a card game in the Valley street house, where the four murders were committed, as cards were found on the table in addition to a glass containing a few drops of the Syrian liquor.

The local inspectors and state police are firm in the belief that the murderer, Savaria and perhaps one of the two women now dead were engaged in the plot to rob Maroon and went about it in the manner they are known to have operated in times past.

Mrs. Dennis, whose husband is now serving time in the county jail, had been charged with taking men to her rooms and the police also assert that Savaria and Kate Clark, whom he called his wife, had been suspected of the same acts.

The police contend that Savaria or Mrs. Dennis, or both, were well aware of the plan to rob Maroon of his $485, a $50 gold watch and a gold ring, which are missing, and for that reason they retired earlier than the others, who were presumably engaged in the card game.

That there was a desperate struggle between the murderer and Maroon is shown by the twenty knife wounds found on his head, neck and body by the medical examiner.

After the murder of Maroon what followed is problematical, but the police reason that Mrs. Savaria was attacked in her bed, where she and Savaria had retired. She then staggered to the kitchen, where the murderer stabbed her to death.

The police theory is that Mrs. Dennis got out of her bed to go into the room where the murderer was, and was then attacked.

A terrific slash, two inches deep and six inches long on the left side of Savaria's neck, indicates that he was standing when attacked. The wound is like that of a hunting knife.

There is abundant evidence that the murderer was cool throughout the terrible slaughter.

THREE SWEPT TO DEATH

Thrilling Attempts at Rescue as Great Niagara Ice Bridge Breaks

Niagara Falls, N. Y., Feb. 5.—The great ice bridge that has choked the river channel between the cataract and the upper steel arch bridge below the falls, for three weeks, broke from its shorings at noon Sunday and went down the river, taking with it to their death Elbridge Stanton and his wife of Toronto, and Burrell Heacock, 17 years old, of Cleveland. Four other persons were on the ice at the time but managed to get ashore in safety.

Had the accident happened an hour later hundreds would have lost their lives.

Desperate efforts were made to rescue the Stantons and Heacock, but somewhere deep in the great whirlpool lies Stanton. He thrust aside chances of rescue to remain with his terror-stricken wife, and in the shadow of death spurned assistance for himself and tried vainly to bind about the woman's body a rope, one end of which dangled from the lower steel arch bridge.

And Heacock was cast in the same mould. Had he not turned back on the ice to assist Stanton, he, too, might have made the shore.

IN EACH OTHER'S ARMS

Former Mrs. Suydam and Noble Take Own Lives With Gas

New York Feb. 5.—Clasped in close embrace, the bodies of Frederick W. Noble, the plumber's apprentice, and his bride of three weeks, Mrs. Louise W. Noble, with whom he eloped in September last when she was the wife of Walter L. Suydam, the millionaire fisherman of Blue Point, L. I., were found lying upon the floor of the kitchenette in their apartmens in the Regina Sunday morning.

Both had been suffocated by gas which flowed from a half dozen wide open jets of a gas range before which the bodies lay.

The double suicide evidently had been prearranged, and the plan carefully worked out so as to insure complete success. The tragedy is believed to have been due to bitter criticism directed against the couple.

"CRYING JOHNNY" PLEADED POVERTY

Larder In House of Thief Is Found to Be Well Stocked

New York, Feb. 5.—The tearful plea of John McCullough, arraigned on the charge of attempted burglary, that he entered the home of William P. Schoen, a lawyer, to find food for his starving wife and baby, fell flat upon the ears of his accuser when three three detectives appeared and said they wanted McCullough on three different charges of robbery.

When first arraigned, several days ago, McCullough's wife and child were in court and they wept so pitifully that Schoen asked to have his charge against the husband withdrawn, saying he was convinced that McCullough was an honest man.

Now he has learned that the man is known in police circles as "Crying Johnny" McCullough, that he is wanted for burglary in many cities and that an investigation had shown his home stocked with porterhouse steaks, quantities of vegetables and wine. The court gave the detectives from Brooklyn precedence in having McCullough rearrested.

STATE MUST TURN OVER SECURITIES

Royal Arcanum to Get Back Fund of $5,902,100

Boston, Feb. 5.—Judge Braley of the supreme court ordered a mandamus to issue in the petition of the supreme council of the Royal Arcanum against State Treasurer Stevens directing him to turn over to the petitioner securities worth $5,902,100, comprising an emergency fund which was deposited under the law.

Under an act passed by the legislature last year provision was made for the fund, but the act omitted to state that the same should be held by the state treasurer as was provided under the old statute.

In view of this omission the petitioner claimed that it was not intended that the state treasurer should hold the fund and an order was asked to have it paid to the supreme council.

PAPER BAG COOKING

Great System Perfected by M. Soyer, Famous London Chef.

FOR THE SCHOOL BOX FROM HOME.

By Martha McCulloch Williams.

Are you numbered among the many mothers of this great nation who have boys and girls away at school or college? Then you know what a great delight it gives the children to receive from "Mother" a box of home-cooked things to eat, from solid meats, like turkey and chicken, to the frothiest of sweets.

Right here, good mother, you will find the paper bag a very present help. A plump chicken, a small fine turkey, bag-roasted and well drained and popped inside another bag, lightly greased, packs well, can be eaten without a qualm, and makes a mighty fine cornerstone for the upbuilding of a proper box.

The box from home is the cornerstone of the season's supreme school or college "spread." Wherefore, make it one to honor alike your child and your housewifery. Besides the turkey or the chicken, or the brace of ducks, or the nest of smaller birds safe in their own gravy, put in cakes, pies, tarts, tartlets, sundry small and piquant meat turnovers, indeed, the very choicest things amongst all those heretofore set forth as suitable for paper bag cooking. Make, too, in quantity pricked biscuit—they will be good much longer than the average college boy or girl can keep them.

Here are a few candy suggestions worth consideration even by a "woman" freshman—or sophomore.

Fondant, which is the basis of many candies, is variously made; this is as good a way as any I have found: To each cup of sugar allow a drop of acetic acid and one-third cup of cold water. Cook in a very clean brass or enamel kettle, stirring constantly until it begins to boil. Wipe off any dry sugar from the sides of the kettle, add the acid, cover the kettle and cook without further stirring at gentle heat until the syrup, dropped in cold water, forms a soft ball. Pour out then in a flattish dish, wet with very cold water. When cool, not cold, work with a paddle back and forth until white and creamy, then put in something deep, cover with a clean damp cloth, and set away to ripen. This formula is adapted from observation in a famous candy factory, where huge tubs of fondant stood month after month until the trained sense of the heads said it was just right for use. When ready to use, cut out a good lump, put in an earthen vessel and liquefy over boiling water. Then flavor and color to taste, and either dip into it blanched nuts, dates, figs or crystallized fruit or small rounds of hard fondant. After the first dipping, set them upon a wire rack over a bowl to drain and harden. Dip a second time if you want the candies very superior. If there is not time for this, roll while still soft in powdered sugar and set on waxed paper to dry and harden.

Fondant thus liquid, colored pink, green or yellow, flavored with mint and dropped from a spoon-tip upon waxed paper, makes delectable mint cream. Any other flavor can be used instead of mint. With orange or lemon flavor, after dropping the creams, sprinkle while still soft with finely ground nuts, or stick a tiny bit of cocoanut in the center. Cocoanut cut to shape and cream nuts, shelled whole, make fine candies if they are first covered with stiff fondant and then dipped in the melted stuff, which has been made rich with chocolate. Here, as elsewhere, put in a very little brandy with the chocolate, as a means of accenting its flavor.

Fruit squares are good. To make them, take equal quantities of seeded raisins, well chopped dates cut small, figs steamed and cut up fine, shredded citron, shredded candied peel, shredded fresh cocoanut and shredded blanched almonds. Stir all well together and spread without packing evenly over a well buttered flat dish. Pour upon the mixture boiling hot a taffy made by boiling until it crackles in the teeth, two cups sugar, with one-half cup vinegar and water mixed and one tablespoonful of butter. Let stand till the surface hardens slightly, then with a well-greased knife mark in squares. Break apart when cold and wrap in waxed paper. Pack the wrapped squares inside a paper bag.

Lastly, be sure that almost the biggest cake bagged for the box is a Lady McMillan, which to my mind quite discounts Lady Baltimore. Take for it three and a half cups sifted flour, two cups sifted sugar, one cup blackberry jam, one cup sweet milk, two-thirds cup creamed butter, five whole eggs or yolks of twelve, two teaspoons baking powder, one teaspoon cinnamon, one teaspoon mixed cloves and allspice. Cream butter with part of sugar, add yolks beaten light with rest of sugar, sift flour with baking powder and add alternately with milk and stiff beaten whites. Add spices mixed in half cordial, then jam. Bake in layers put together with icing filled with seeded raisins and chopped English walnuts. Use plain icing on top and sides. Or bake in a large sheet inside a bag, cut square and put together as directed. The essential thing is to fill a big bag with it, so that the spread it graces shall be a huge success.

SOME SALMON DISHES.

CANNED salmon is on the emergency shelf of every housekeeper, but plain canned salmon after a time palls on the taste. Almost any dish in which fresh salmon is an ingredient may be made with the canned salmon.

When buying canned salmon always insist upon a perfect can. Those that are dented or that bulge out anywhere are open to suspicion. Also notice whether the paper on the can looks bright and fresh. Cans that have been in stock for a long time are not desirable.

When a can of fish is opened pour it at once into a glass or earthen dish. The air will act on the tin if the fish is allowed to stand in the can and spoil the food. Serious illnesses have resulted from eating salmon thus allowed to remain in the can.

For Luncheon.

Salmon and Toast.—Take salmon picked apart in small flakes. Heat one cupful of white sauce or drawn butter, add to it half a cupful of cream, the flaked fish, one teaspoonful of chopped parsley, a few grains of mace, with pepper and salt to taste. Pour over slices of buttered toast and serve at once.

Salmon In Gelatin.—Take one can of red salmon, one small onion, one dozen of green olives chopped fine, two stalks of tender celery, one teaspoonful of salt, half a teaspoonful of chili powder and half a cupful of cracker crumbs. Bake for half an hour. When cold lay slices of lemon over it, cover with unsweetened gelatin and serve cold.

Salmon Pudding.—Put two tablespoonfuls of butter in a saucepan and melt without browning. Add a tablespoonful of flour, stir until frothy, then pour in a cupful of hot milk. When thickened and smooth add the yolk of one egg, one cupful of flaked salmon, a tablespoonful of cream and a tiny bit of pepper and essence of anchovy to season. Mix carefully, fold in the white of one egg, beaten until stiff and dry, fill the shells three-quarters full, brown in a medium oven and serve hot. Chopped parsley may be added to the mixture if desired.

Savory Sandwiches.

Salmon Sandwiches.—Pound some boiled salmon in a mortar and pass it through a wire sieve. Season it with pepper, salt and cayenne and then mix to a fairly stiff paste with some thick mayonnaise sauce. Cut some slices from a loaf of bread and cut them out into rounds of a convenient size, butter them and then spread them with a layer of the pounded salmon. Scatter a small quantity of chopped pickled walnuts over the paste, then put the rounds together for the sandwiches.

After reading the public statement of this fellow-sufferer given below, you must come to this conclusion: A remedy which cured years ago, which has kept the kidneys in good health since, can be relied upon to perform the same work in other cases. Read this:

J. Fortin, Montello St., Brockton, Mass., says: "I was troubled for over two years by attacks of backache. If I arose from a sitting position or stood any length of time, I was caused great pain. There was a feeling of weariness present and if I did a hard day's work, I was bothered by Lameness and soreness across my back. I finally saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised, for such complaints and I got a box and began their use according to directions. They went directly to the seat of my complaint, relieving me of severe backaches and restoring me to good health. It has given me pleasure to recommend this remedy on several occasions." (Statement given June 13, 1905.)

A SECOND STATEMENT.

On July 26, 1911, Mr. Fortin was interviewed and he said: "I willingly verily my former endorsement of Doan's Kidney Pills. You may continue to use my reference, as the relief this remedy brought me has been permanent."

FRECKLES

By Gene Stratton-Porter

COPYRIGHT, 1904, BY DOUBLEDAY, PAGE & CO.

SYNOPSIS.

Freckles, a homeless boy, is hired by Boss McLean to guard the expensive timber in the Limberlost from timber thieves.

Freckles does his work faithfully, makes friends with the birds and yearns to know more about nature. He lives with Mr. and Mrs. Duncan.

He resolves to get books and educate himself. He becomes interested in a huge pair of vultures and calls his bird friends his "chickens."

Some of the trees he is guarding are worth $1,000 each. Freckles' books arrive. He receives a call from Wessner.

Wessner attempts to bribe Freckles to betray his trust, and Freckles whips him. McLean overhears them and witnesses the fight.

Freckles' honesty saves a precious tree. He finds the nest of the vultures and is visited by a beautiful young girl.

She calls Freckles McLean's son. Freckles calls her "the angel" and helps the Bird Woman in taking photographs. McLean promises to adopt Freckles.

Freckles and the angel become very friendly. Assisted by the Bird Woman, they drive Wessner and Black Jack, timber thieves, from the Limberlost.

McLean fears more trouble, but Freckles insists upon being the sole guard of the timber. Freckles calls upon the angel's father.

The angel receives him as her equal, and her father is kind. Mrs. Duncan has exciting adventures in the Limberlost.

Freckles worked with her until she drew a long, quivering breath and opened her eyes.

When she saw him bending over her she closed them tightly and, gripping him, struggled to her feet. He helped her up, and, with his arm about and half carrying her, they made their way to the clearing. Then, brawny Scotswoman though she was, she keeled over again. The children added their wailing to Freckles' panic.

This time he was so near the cabin that he could carry her into the house and lay her on the bed. He sent the oldest boy scudding down the corduroy for the nearest neighbor, and between them they undressed her and discovered that she was not bitten. They bathed and bound up the bleeding wrist and coaxed her back to consciousness. She lay sobbing and shuddering. The first intelligent word she said was, "Freckles, look at that jar on the kitchen table and see if my yeast is no running over."

Several days went by before she could give Duncan and Freckles any detailed account of what had happened to her. She could not rest until she sent for McLean and begged him to save Freckles from further risk about that place of horrors. The boss went down to the swamp with his mind fully made up to do so.

Freckles laughed. "Why, Mr. McLean, don't you let a woman's nervous system set you worrying over me," he said. "I'm not denying how she felt, because I've been through it meself, but that's all over and gone. It's the height of me glory to fight it out with the old swamp and all that's in it or will be coming to it and then to turn it over to you, as I promised you and meself I'd do, sir. You couldn't break the heart of me entire quicker than to be taking it from me now when I'm just on the home stretch. You mustn't let a woman get mixed up with business, for I've always heard about how it's bringing trouble."

The Bird Woman and the angel arrived on time for the third of the series and found McLean on the line talking to Freckles. The boss was filled with enthusiasm over a marsh article of the Bird Woman's that he had just read. He begged to be allowed to accompany her into the swamp and watch the method by which she secured an illustration in such a location.

The Bird Woman explained to him that it was an easy matter with the subject she then had in hand, and as Little Chicken was too small to be frightened by him and large enough to be getting troublesome, she was glad of his company. They went to the chicken log together, leaving to the happy Freckles the care of the angel, who had brought her banjo and a roll of songs. The Bird Woman told them that they might go to Freckles' room and practice until she finished with Little Chicken, and then she and McLean would come to the concert.

It was almost three hours before they finished and came down the west trail. As they reached the bushes at the entrance the voice of the angel stopped them, for it was commanding and filled with much impatience.

"Freckles James Ross McLean," she was saying, "you fill me with dark blue despair! You're singing as if your voice was glass and liable to break at any minute. Why don't you sing as you did a week ago? You are a fraud! You led me to think that there was the making of a great singer in you, and now you are singing—do you know how badly you are singing?"

"Yis," said Freckles meekly. "I'm thinking I'm too happy to be singing well today. The music don't come right only when I'm lonesome and sad. The world's for being all sunshine at prisint, for among you and Mr. McLean and the Bird Woman I'm after being that happy that I can't keep me thoughts on me notes. It's more than sorry I am to be disappointing you. Play it over, and I'll be beginning again, and this time I'll hold hard."

"Well," said the angel, "it seems to me that if I had all the things to be proud of that you have I'd lift up my head and sing!"

"And what is it I've to be proud of, ma'am?" politely inquired Freckles.

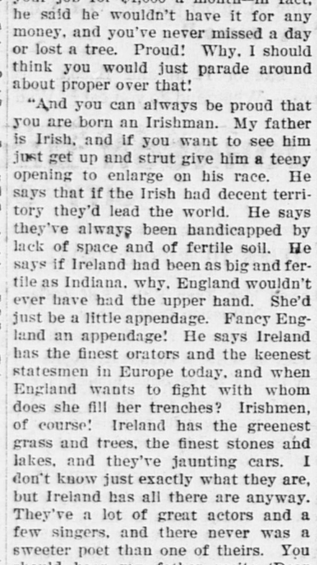

"Why, a whole worldful of things," cried the angel explosively. "For one thing, you can be good and proud over the way you've kept the timber thieves out of this lease and the trust your father has in you. You can be proud over the way every one speaks of you. I heard a man say a few days ago that the Limberlost was full of disagreeable things—positive dangers, unhealthy as it could be, and that since the memory of the first settlers it has been a rendezvous for runaways, thieves and murderers. This swamp is named for a man that got here and wandered around 'till he starved. That man I was talking with said he wouldn't take your job for $1,000 a month—in fact, he said he wouldn't have it for any money, and you've never missed a day or lost a tree. Proud! Why, I should think you would just parade around about proper over that!

"And you can always be proud that you are born an Irishman. My father is Irish, and if you want to see him just get up and strut give him a teeny opening to enlarge on his race. He says that if the Irish had decent territory they'd lead the world. He says they've always been handicapped by lack of space and of fertile soil. He says if Ireland had been as big and fertile as Indiana, why, England wouldn't ever have had the upper hand. She'd just be a little appendage. Fancy England an appendage! He says Ireland has the finest orators and the keenest statesmen in Europe today, and when England wants to fight with whom does she fill her trenches? Irishmen, of course! Ireland has the greenest grass and trees, the finest stones and lakes, and they've jaunting cars. I don't know just exactly what they are, but Ireland has all there are anyway. They've a lot of great actors and a few singers, and there never was a sweeter poet than one of theirs. You should hear my father recite 'Dear Harp of My Country.' He does it this way."

The angel rose, made an elaborate old time bow and, holding up the banjo, recited in clipping feet and meter, in rhythmic swing and a touch of brogue:

"Dear harp of my country" (the angel ardently clasped the banjo), "In darkness I found thee" (she held it up to the light); "The cold chain of silence had hung o'er thee long" (she muted the strings with her rosy palm); "Then proudly, my own Irish harp, I unbound thee" (she threw up her head and swept a ringing harmony), "And gave all thy chords to light, freedom and song" (she crashed into the notes of the accompaniment she had been playing for Freckles).

"That's what you want to be thinking of!" she cried. "Not darkness and lonesomeness and sadness, but 'light, freedom and song.' I can't begin to think off hand of all the big, splendid things an Irishman has to be proud of, but whatever they are they are all yours and you are a part of them. I just despise that 'saddest when I sing' business. You can sing! Now you go over there and do it! I'm going to come down the aisle playing that accompaniment, and when I stop in front of you you sing!"

"IN DARKNESS I FOUND THEE!"

The angel's face wore an unusual flush. Her eyes were flashing, and she was palpitating with earnestness.

She parted the bushes and disappeared. Freckles, straight as a young pine and with the tenseness of a war horse scenting battle, stood waiting. Presently, before he saw she was there, she was coming down the aisle toward him, playing compellingly, and rifts of light were touching her with golden glory. Freckles stood as if transfixed.

The blood rioted in his veins.

The cathedral was majestically beautiful, from arched dome of frescoed gold, green and blue in never ending shades and harmonies to the mosaic aisle she trod, richly inlaid in choicest colors and gigantic pillars that were God's handiwork fashioned and perfected down through ages of sunshine and rain. But the fair young face and divinely molded form of the angel were his most perfect work of all. Never had she looked so surpassingly beautiful.

She was smiling encouragingly now, and as she came toward him she struck the chords full and strong.

The heart of poor Freckles almost burst with dull pain and his great love for her. In his desire to fulfill her expectations he forgot everything else, and when she reached his initial chord he was ready. He literally burst forth:

"Three little leaves of Irish green
United on one stem.
Love, truth and valor do they mean.
They form a magic gem."

The angel's eyes widened curiously, and her lips fell apart. A heavier color swept into her cheeks. She had intended to arouse him. She had succeeded with a vengeance. She was too young to know that in the effort to rouse a man women frequently kindle fires that they can neither quench nor control. Freckles was looking out over her head now and singing that song as it had never been sung before for her alone, and instead of her helping him, as she had intended, he was carrying her with him on the waves of his voice away, away into a world she knew not of. When he struck into the chorus, wide eyed and panting, she was swaying toward him and playing for dear life to keep up.

"Oh, do you love? Oh, say you love,
You love the shamrock green!"

At the last note Freckles' voice died away and his eyes fastened on the angel's. He had given his best and his all. He fell on his knees and folded his arms across his breast. The angel, as if magnetized, walked straight down the aisle to him and, running her fingers into the crisp masses of his red hair, tilted his head back and laid her lips on his forehead.

Then she stepped back and faced him. "Good boy!" she said in a voice that wavered from the throbbing of her shaken heart. "Dear boy! I knew you could do it! I knew it was in you! Freckles, when you go out into the world, if you can face a great audience and sing like that, just once, you will be immortal, and anything you want will be yours."

"Anything?" gasped Freckles.

"Anything," said the angel.

Freckles found his feet, muttered something and, catching up his old bucket, plunged into the swamp blindly on a pretense of getting water. The angel walked slowly across the study and sat down on the rustic bench and through narrowed lids intently studied the tip of her shoe.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

REPENTS HIS RUNNING AWAY

Linehan Sorry That He Did Not Remain In Boston

AGAIN IN GRASP OF THE LAW

Former Senator Said to Have Been Run Down Through His Friendship For a Woman, but He Protests Love For His Family—Police Get First Trace of Him In Colon and Land Him In New Orleans

Boston, Feb. 5.—Ex-Senator Frank J. Linehan, who disappeared from this city only a few days before Thanksgiving, when his case was ready for trial, was brought back by Inspectors Wolf and Loughlin of police headquarters.

On the trip north from New Orleans, where he was apprehended a few days ago, he conversed with the inspectors on general subjects, but refrained from talking about his case.

Linehan was arrested in New Orleans as a fugitive from justice and was held there until the arrival of the Boston officers. He is wanted here to answer indictment warrants charging forgery, larceny and unlawfully receiving stolen property and also conspiracy to steal.

Despite the report that Linehan was found in consequence of a letter or postcard which he sent from the south to a woman in Cambridge, the ex-senator broke into tears as the train neared the South terminal and declared his devotion to his wife and children. Almost frantically he repeated to himself: "Why did I run away from Boston?"

Linehan had kept his nerve on the long and tiresome ride from the southern city, but when he arrived within hailing distance of Boston, where he has lived for years and where the family he forsook still resides, he appeared shaken, and for the first time since the officers took him from the New Orleans jail he broke down and wept.

Linehan had made a strong effort, it appears, to avoid capture after leaving this city a few days before his case was to be called for trial late in November. He went to New York and from there to Philadelphia, where he says he ate his Thanksgiving dinner. Then he journeyed south and went to New Orleans. From there he went to Colon and it was there that the Boston police got the first trace of him.

James J. Schull of Chelsea, one of his bondsmen, offered a reward of $500 for the apprehension of Linehan after the latter's departure from Boston. Every effort was made by the local police to locate him and circulars were sent broadcast. It is said that, finally, a trace of Linehan was learned through a letter or postcard he sent to a woman living in Cambridge.

Inspector Wolf was directed to follow up the clew, and went to New Orleans, and from there to Colon. It appears that at the time Linehan was in Colon, but hearing that the Boston detective was there in search of him, suddenly left, and went back to New Orleans, and put up at the Y. M. C. A., where he lived under the name of Frank J. Spencer and where he was subsequently arrested.

When he was booked at police headquarters he gave his age as 46 and said he lived at 712 Morton street, Dorchester. He described himself as a contractor. After being held in the office for a short time he was taken to the Charles street jail.

SAFE HOME AGAIN

King and Queen of England Reach Portsmouth From Durbar Trip

Portsmouth, Eng., Feb. 5.—King George and Queen Mary, who left Portsmouth on Nov. 11 for India, returned from their durbar trip Sunday. The Medina was convoyed by the cruisers Cochrane, Argyll, Defense and Natal, which accompanied their majesties to the far east. A heavy snowstorm obscured the view from shore and the Medina slipped in without ceremonial or salute. She went direct to her appointed moorings between the lines of the welcoming fleet.

THOUSAND CENTURIES OLD

Skeleton of "Essentially Modern" Man Unearthed in Brickyard

London, Feb. 3.—A human skeleton which scientists declare to be the oldest yet discovered, dating back probably 100,000 years, has been found in a brickyard near Ipswich, Eng.

The strange fact is that this man who walked the earth a thousand centuries ago, when the polar regions were inhabitable and the mammoth was still common in Europe, was of essentially modern type. The thigh bones and bones of the forearm and hands are absolutely the same as in the modern Englishman. The leg bones are of peculiar form, differing from those in moderns.

This Ipswich man was 5 feet 10 inches high. The skull was small in proportion and was flattened and elongated in the rear, but indicated a high order of intelligence.

BOTH ARE WELL FORMED

Child Born to a Cambridge Woman Has Two Heads

Cambridge, Mass., Feb. 3.—The embryological department of the Harvard medical school is greatly interested in the birth of a baby, with two distinct heads, to Mrs. William Karnow of 4 Harvard place, Cambridge.

The baby was born Thursday. So far both mother and child are doing well. Dr. Heaton, who attended the mother and child, believes that the baby will live.

Both heads are well formed, although the normal head has better defined features than the extra one. They face in opposite directions, the extra head facing backward, back to back with the normal one.

The hair on the extra head is already grown and a very fine fuzz, like minute hairs, covers part of the features. The heads set on the one neck, although the extra head is lower toward the shoulders than the normal one.

THE GARDENS OF FEBRUARY.

The pessimist jeers when he observes the rotund fruits and lavish flowers of the seed catalogue. These glowing hopes ignore the factor of insect pests and human idleness. The garden family has its black sheep and its drones, like the human race, so that the acutal product looks little like the gardens you raise over the evening lamp of February.

But far be it from us to say a word against the rainbow hopes incited by the seed catalogue. The most normal instinct of the human mind is the pleasure that comes from seeing things grow. It means out door life, lower living expenses, beautification of your home.

If you will talk with the seed catalogue man he will tell you that the promises offered by his literature are not to be had merely by sticking his seeds into the ground and leaving them to the dubious mercies of nature Fine gardening used to be an art very vital to the old time home. In the long winter evenings one of the stock subjects of country neighbors was the exchange of information on gardening. Do our women of 1912, in the excitement of motors, bridge, moving picture shows, and church fairs, ever stop to swap advice about why the lazy dahlias won't blossom? For the life of us, we can recall no such conversation exchanged among our female relatives and friends, who all claim to adore flowers.

POVERTY PARTY.

A large number were present at the poverty party held by the Wollaston Tennis club in Wollaston hall, Saturday evening.

This was the third of the season's social events for the club and was a decided success.

The most eccentric costumes were in evidence and millinery of the past vied with clothing that would have been spurned by a knight of the road.

The affair was in charge of the social committee consisting of Roy C. Baker, G. Ernest Carr and Harold Green. The committee are planning for a dance inMarch and a masquerade in April.

THE SAME HOG.

Edward Meeker, a farmer, and his son were asleep when a loud knocking wakened them up. A stranger stood at the door.

"What do you want around here at this time o' night wakin' everybody up?" asked Meeker.

"I'm sorry to disturb you," respond the man, "but I was driving from up the country to market with a nice fat hog, and as I was passing your house he jumped out of the cart and ran toward your barn. I didn't know what you might do if you saw me running out there, and, besides, I can't catch the hog alone. Can't you give me a hand?"

Farmer Meeker called his son, and the three caught the hog, after chasing it for half an hour. It weighed 330 pounds and was hoisted into the cart after a struggle. The stranger thanked Meeker and drove off.

"I'll bet that hog is almost as big as our'n," said the son to his father as they went upstairs to bed. In the morning young Meeker ran into his father's room. "Oh, dad," he exclaimed, "the hog's gone. That fellow stole our pig, and he made us help to catch it."
—London Tit-Bits.

At Last.

"Bill," said his long suffering sweetheart, "I'm tired of your shiftless ways. Got a job yet?"

"Nope," he grunted; "I'm still waitin' fur somethin' to turn up."

"Well, here it is, Bill. Take a good look at it and clear out."

Whereupon she turned up her nose at him.

QUINCY GYM GIRLS WIN OUT

The Quincy Gymn Girls came back strong Saturday afternoon and defeated the Needham High Independent Girls in a most interesting game by the score of 12 to 4. Every girl on the local team played remarkably well, and the brilliant blocking and pass work prevented the home team from shooting with any accuracy. The guards and centres of the local team showed up to especial advantage in this respect.

Mildred Smith was the conspicuous star, getting five goals from the floor. The all round work of the Beale sisters was of a commendable order, while Ruth Cahill contributed the feature playing for the losers. The summary:

SUNDAY IN OUR CHURCHES

HALL PLACE M. E.

At the morning service at the Hall Place M. E. church, Rev. T. C. Martin, pastor read an address from the Ecumenical Conference held at Toronto, to Methodist churches. The sacrament of the Lord's supper was observed. "He shall feed His flock" was sung by the choir.

Sunday school was held at the close of the morning service. The Junior League met at 3 P. M. Miss Hilda Francis led the Epworth League at 6.15 on the subject, "The false security of the unrighteous."

At the evening service the pastor preached on the life and character of John Wesley. He took for his text "There was a man sent from God whose name was John." St. John 1-6. Mr. Martin said, "these words were of course spoken of John the Baptist but anyone who knows the life of John Wesley, the founder of our church, knows that they are eminently appropriate as a text or description of him; "There was a man sent from God whose name was John Wesley."

He was born at Epworth, England, (Epworth from which our Epworth League is named) 209 years ago on June 17. He was 88 years old when he died, and was an incessant worker up to within a few days of his death. For more than half a century he was an itinerant preacher riding on horseback most of the time. It was before the days of railroads or even coaches. He also told of his ancestors and especially of his mother Susannah Wesley and her love and devotion and careful training. When only six years of age a fire destroyed the rectory at Epworth, the home of the Wesleys, and John was rescued from the burning home by being passed from an upper story window. From that time on his mother always looked upon him as a "brand plucked from the fire." Zech. 3-2.

He dwelt at some length on his character and methodical habits, (from whence the name "Methodist" sprung) and upon his work as it grew and spread until now the Methodist church is the largest Protestant church, and of his words as he exclaimed "The world is my parish." John Wesley preached forty thousand times, often preaching five sermons a Sunday.

A meeting of the Sunday school board is called for at the parsonage this evening, also a meeting of the committees appointed by the Sunday school and Epworth League to take up the matter of securing new singing books.

Thursday evening a grand benefit concert will be given in the vestry of the church by the Copley Square School of Music. This will be one of the finest and best concerts ever given in this city. An elaborate program will be given by eleven men and thirteen women musicians in the ensemble led by Prof. Davis, and nine different musical instruments.

The regular monthly business meeting of the Epworth League will be postponed one week.

Prayer meeting will be held Friday evening at 7.30.

MEMORIAL ATLANTIC

At the Memorial church, Sunday morning, Rev. T W. Davison preached the second of a series on "Spiritual Ideals". The text being taken from I Cor. 2;16 "Who have the mind of Christ."

Mr. Davison said in part: One needed to approach Christ from a sympathetic standpoint. Too often we approach Christianity like the Pharisee bigoted, self-righteous, intolerant in our narrowness; or like the Sadducee just as narrow and bigoted in our supposed liberal views; or like the lawyer, wise in our conceits.

If we approach Christ with eyes to see, we will see that he served God by blessing and ministering to humanity. Christ saw fields white to harvest, offering a great opportunity to those who worked for God. He saw the masses as sheep without a shepherd. If we had eyes of divine intuition and as Christians we should have, we would see the great unchurched masses today as God's children, waiting for the friendly approach the followers of Christ.

The speaker said there was a discontent and unhappiness that came from a lack of service. He said that we were not doing our part in the world of men. That the workers in the slums of our cities were happy. That the missionaries when home on a furlough from the heart of India, the center of Africa, or superstitious China were contented and joyful. They were serving, and know they are doing something.

Our need today is to get free from religious castes, and social respectability and do as a church, from the religious standpoint, what the schools are doing educationally for the poor, the vile, and the ignorant.

We talk of immigration laws when we need an aggressive Christian consciousness that will make our lives a force for good to those who come to our shores

In concluding Mr. Davison said the church needs a sublime view of its mission, that will make us clear as servants of God. Clearness will make us drop mock humility and we will not say our poor weak efforts, and our little endeavors, but we will use apostolic phraseology, a servant of God, an apostle of Jesus Christ

The monthly Sunday school concert Sunday evening was gratifying to the Superintendent and teachers. The new hymn books were used. The committee in charge were Mrs. Ayers Polsom, Mrs. Isabelle Smith, and Mrs. Lyndon Gurney, and the program consisted of recitations, "Speech is Silver," Christine Kenneberg; "Persevere," James Kennedy; "At the Door," Louise Carter; "A Frozen Brook," Ruth Osgood; "The Divine Lullaby," Mildred Wilmore; "In the Firelight," Malcolm Cook; "Nowhere Land," Evelyn Luke; "Steps to Heaven," Georgia Chenny; and "Goodnight," Catherine Priest; and the choir sang "The Lord is My Shepherd."

The Christian Endeavorers have postponed their sleighing party to Wednesday evening, as they were not not able to get enough sleighs to accommodate the whole society on either Monday or Tuesday.

ATLANTIC M. E.

Special services are to be held this week at the Atlantic M. E. church on Wednesday, Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday nights with the following speakers: Wednesday Rev. Elmer Leslie, A. B., of Illinois State University; Thursday Rev. Heber Harper of Alleghany college, Friday, Rev. H. E. Hurd of Boston University; Saturday, Rev. Mr. Kinsey of Depauw University and Sunday, Rev. H. E. Hurd.

WOLLASTON BAPTIST.

Two good audiences assembled Sunday morning and evening in the Wollaston Baptist church. Rev. Joseph Walther the pastor preached at both services, morning subject: "Paul's Master Passion and Purpose." Evening subject: "The Man who Disregarded."

The Sunday school was well attended. In the men's department Rev. Chas. Tenny of Japan gave a short but interesting address on the country in which he is laboring as a missionary and George Critchley rendered a cornet solo in an excellent manner. The Junior Endeavor Society met at 3.30 with Miss Ethel M. Campbell in charge. A large number were present. Rev. Chas. Tenny of Japan delighted all with his interesting stories of child life and child Christians of the country of his labors.

Charles M. Roach, president of the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor led the regular meeting of that society at 6 o'clock. It was the anniversary service of the Christian Endeavor Society and over forty persons were present. The subject was "Christian Endeavor Ideals" and the meeting was unusually helpful and interesting.

This evening at 8 the Whatsoever Circle of King's Daughters will hold a special meeting at the home of Mrs. George Thompson, Arlington street.

Tuesday morning at 10 the monthly sewing meeting of the Social and Benevolent Society will be held in the ladies' parlor. As a barel is to be packed, members are asked to bring or send all articles pledged at the last meeting and in the afternoon at 3 the monthly business meeting of the Social and Benevolent Society will be held in the chapel. In the evening at 7.45 the regular church social will be held in the chapel. An address will be given by Mr. C. E. Jennings, Post Office Inspector. Subject: "The Pathetic Side of a Post Office Inspector's Experience." All the members of the church and congregation invited.

WOMAN WITNESSES KILLING

Section Foreman, Insane, Commits Double Murder and Suicide

North Adams, Mass., Feb. 5.—Suddenly becoming insane, it is believed, Andrew Cullen, aged 42, section foreman of a force of Hoosac tunnel laborers, murdered John Balzerini, aged 28, and Edward Williams, aged 63, members of his crew, during the night, and later killed himself by shooting. The affair occurred at Balzerini's home.

The only witness to the crime was Mrs. Balzerini, wife of one of the victims. From her story to the police, it is not supposed that the men had engaged in a quarrel, but rather that Cullen went insane.

After killing Balzerini instantly, and wounding Williams so that he died soon afterwards, Cullen left the house, and entering the Hoosac tunnel near by, fatally shot himself.

A Determined Sportsman.

He had returned from a long, weary, unsuccessful fishing trip. A dog ran across the road, barking fiercely.

"Aren't you afraid he'll attack you?" asked the friend.

"I wish he would. I'd take almost any kind of a chance to be able to go home and say I had just one bite."

TRIES TO MURDER WIFE

Lowell Man Then Kills Self After Discussion Over Money

Lowell, Mass., Feb. 5.—Joseph F. King, aged 40, a chauffeur, committed suicide by shooting himself yesterday afternoon, and made a desperate but unsuccessful attempt to murder his wife, Lena, aged 27, at her sister's home here.

According to the stories told the police by witnesses the shooting was entirely unexpected and King gave no inkling of what he was going to do. The couple had been conversing with each other all day on money matters.

Although King was employed at the time of his marriage, he gave up his position shortly after the wedding and since that time has not worked. He had told his wife that he had money deposited in a Boston bank, and it is thought that it was her insistence that he draw some of the money which was the motive of the shooting.

Authors Interested?

A new society has been organized in France under the title "The League Against the Lending of Books." It is asserted that the movement is really in the interest of authors, as every borrower may be considered as one buyer less.

ANNUAL BANQUET OF ST. MARY'S C.T.A. AND M.R.S.

Thirty-Seventh Annual Banquet of Well-Known Society Largely Attended

Well-Known Clergymen Deliver Stirring Addresses

Amid walls decked with colored streamers, that added lustre to the affair; with the stars and stripes and banners, emblematic of the true American citizenship, strewn from one side to the other, entwined with other decorations of a variegated nature; with the picture of John White, its first president, showing forth conspicuously on one side and the picture of Hon. William T. Shea, a foremost member, occupying the same position on the other, one hundred and fifty members of St. Mary's Catholic Total Abstinence and Mutual Relief Association assembled in St. Mary's Hall, West Quincy, Monday evening, on the occasion of the thirty-seventh annual banquet. To add to the attractiveness of the affair, the banquet tables were arranged in splendid order, potted plants and ferns adorned the platform in artistic manner, and a banner, bearing the inscription St. Mary C. T. A. and M. R. Society, founded 1875, was easily discernible overhead, in the very centre of the hall.

An informal reception took place at eight o'clock, during which many acquaintances were renewed, especially with the guests of the evening. A half hour later, Rev. Henry T. Grady, pastor of St. Mary's Church, offered grace and the gathering then sat down to a most enhancing banquet prepared by Burleigh and Martin, the well-known caterers.

The head table was situated near the platform. Here sat the guests of the evening, together with the president of the association, Daniel Duggan, and William H. Teasdale, the sole surviving charter member of the society. The guests included Rev. Andrew J. O'Brien D. D., a West Quincy boy, now Professor of Dogmatic Theology at Brighton Seminary, Rev. Henry T. Grady and Rev. William J. Duffy, pastor and assistant respectively of St. Mary's Church, ex-city clerk Charles J. McGilvray, Joseph McGilvray, John T. Shea, president of the Total Abstinence Union of the archdiocese of Boston, Leo Kenney, Dr. John H. Ash, James F. Burke, vice president of the Federation of Catholic Societies and Peter Morissette.

It was expected that Rev. John J. Coan, pastor of St. John's Church, Rev. John P. Cuffe, pastor of the Sacred Heart Church and Hon. William T. Shea would be in attendance and considerable regret was expressed when it was learned of their inability to be present.

The following menu was partaken of:—

Escolloped Oysters
Roast Stuffed Turkey, Cranberry sauce
Potato Croquettes
Delmonico Potatoes
Chicken Salad
Lobster Salad
Potato Salad
Rolls
Assorted Light and Fancy Cake
Frozen Pudding
Sultana Roll
Claret Sauce
Orange and Raspberry Sherbet
Coffee

The banquet concluded, the post prandial exercises were then in order, and amidst an aroma of cigars that had been abundantly distributed, Daniel Duggan, president of the society, arose and in a few well chosen remarks, welcomed those present in a happy manner, and after paying a grand tribute to the only living charter member of the organization, introduced William H. Teasdale as the toastmaster of the evening. Mr. Teasdale readily proved himself equal to the occasion and lost no time in launching forth into words of a happy nature, reviewing the history of the society and imparting the benefits that had been derived during its period of existence. He made his remarks brief and to the point, owing to the long list of speakers and entertainers on the program, and drew his remarks to a close by introducing Rev. Henry T. Grady, pastor of St. Mary's Church.

Rev. Fr. Grady spoke on "Intellectual Attainments." and imparted much advice to those who were present. He congratulated the society on its large membership and flourishing condition. He urged the reading of clean and wholesome literature, in order that the young men of the society might become conversant with the great questions of the day, in order too, that they might be able to safeguard themselves against the invidious attacks of most obstinate enemies. He paid a high tribute to His Eminence, Cardinal O'Connell, and spoke of the three volumes of books that the distinguished ecclesiast gave to every priest of the diocese at the banquet held Monday afternoon, laying down at the same time the wonderful fund of information contained therein.

In conclusion he depicted the influence wrought by such a society on the community, and said that he hoped in the near future to learn that St. Mary's Hall was not large enough for the members enrolled in the cause of the great virtue of temperance.

Fr. Grady was loudly applauded for his remarks, and was followed by John T. Shea, president of the Total Abstinence Union of the Boston Archdiocese. Mr. Shea is a speaker of much note and gave a most instructive

FINANCIAL CONDITION OF CITY TO BE INVESTIGATED

Council Adopts Resolution for Committee to Investigate Finances and Make Recommendations

Mayor Wants Advisory Board of Five Citizens to Equalize Real Estate Valuations. Other Important Business

A recommendation from the Mayor that he be empowered to appoint an advisory board of five citizens to give attention to equalizing the valuation of the real estate of the city, and the adoption of an order for the appointment of a special committee of five to investigate the financial condition of the city were the two important matters, above all others, that came up at Monday night's meeting of the City Council.

Every member answered to his name at roll call, which is in a way remarkable for usually several members are not in their seats at roll call.

Councilman Studley, who has been absent from the city nearly the whole month, was present and he was duly sworn in by City Clerk Emery L. Crane.

SEWERS.

The Mayor forwarded a communication from the Commissioner of Public Works requesting that the receipts from house connections with the sewer be appropriated for connecting estates with the sewer. Referred to Committee on Sewers.

APPOINTMENTS.

Communications were received from the Mayor appointing Chester J. McClintock a constable and the following as public weighers. Thomas J. Henry, James McRea, Walter L. Bates, Francis Sweeney, Louis Egan, Thomas Trainor, William Cashman and Peter T. Fallon. Confirmed.

SIDEWALKS.

A communication was received from the Commissioner of Public Works returning the cost of permanent sidewalks on Granite street, $3,280.50; Whitwell street $128.56; Glendale road, $232.35; Edison street, $262.08; Liberty street, $768.53; Water street, $967.04; Copeland street $1,516.35; Brooks avenue, $439.50; Beach street, $723.57; Lincoln avenue, $724.67; Rawson road, $1,036.53; Newbury avenue, $238.69; Billings street, $601.67; Walker street, $723.05; Russell park, $222.06; Cottage avenue, $261.23; Grand View avenue, $342.84; Brook street, $237.50; Whitwell street, $436.64; Goffe street, $80; Phipps street, $610.66. Referred to Finance Committee.

ASSESSOR.

A communication was received from the Mayor appointing Eben Stocker as an assistant assessor for three years. Placed on file.

APPORTIONMENTS.

A communication was received from the Assessors inclosing applications for street betterment apportionments. Referred to Finance Committee.

DEFICITS.

A communication was received from the Mayor stating that there was a deficit in the Board of Health appropriation for contagious diseases amounting to $1,906. Referred to Finance Committee.

From the Mayor stating that there was a deficit of $493.93 in the appropriation for care of buildings. Referred to Finance Committee.

ADVISORY COMMITTEE.

The Mayor in a communication said: "I am of the opinion that it is advisable to have a board of five citizens give attention to the matter of equalizing the valuation of the real estate of the city. I believe there are many instances in the city where real estate of the same general character and location are assessed upon entirely different bases and I think if this is remedied the burden of taxation will be more equitably distributed. I do believe this work can be successfully done by the Board of Assessors. This advisory board could make a comprehensive study of all the real estate values of the city and submit the result of their study to the Board of Assessors for their assistance and after having performed their duties be discharged from further service to the city in that respect. I believe that each member of the board, except the chairman, should receive a salary of $200 and the chairman should receive $300. I recommend that an order be adopted authorizing me to create and appoint such a board and sufficient appropriation be made to cover their salaries and such incidental expenses as they may incur."

Referred to Finance Committee.

PENSIONS.

The Mayor forwarded a communication from Capt. Charles P. Costa of the fire department asking to be retired under the ordinance relative to retiring members of the fire department. Referred to Committee on Fire Department.

The Mayor forwarded two communications from ex-Chief Peter J. Williams of the fire department. One sets forth that he has been in the department for twenty years and is incapacitated from duty and asks to be pensioned under the law. The second asks that he be "Indemnified for expenses and damages sustained by him while acting as a member of the Fire Department of the City of Quincy."

These were also referred to the Committee on Fire Department.

The request for damages is made under the provisions of Chapter 26, section 21 of the revised laws which reads as follows:

"Any city may indemnify a police officer, fireman or a member of the fire department or a person required to assist a police officer in the discharge of his duties, to an amount not more than the amount recommended by the board or officer authorized to appoint police officers, firemen or members of the fire department of such city, for expenses or damages hitherto or hereaafter sustained by him while acting as a police officer, fireman or member of the fire department or as such assistant, or which were incurred by him in the defence or settlement of an action brought against him for acts done by him while so acting."

The section under which the ex-Chief applies for a pension provides that a member of the fire department who has served faithfully for not less than twenty years, and who is either 65 years of age or over or incapacitated for useful service, may be pensioned.

ADDING MACHINE.

A communication was received from the Auditor asking for an appropriation of $291 for the purchase of an adding machine. Laid on the table until later when Councilman Richards offered an order appropriating that sum to be transferred from the Excess and Deficiency Fund. Adopted.

TRANSFERS.

A communication was received from the Auditor asking authority to make transfers in the Fire Department appropriation. Laid on the table until later when the necessary order was offered by Councilman Richards. Adopted.

INDEPENDENCE AVENUE.

A petition was received from residents of Ward Three asking that Independence avenue be resurfaced from the Braintree line to the junction of Franklin street. Referred to Committee on Streets.

A petition was received from the Wollaston Central garage for a license to keep and sell gasoline. Referred to Committee on Licenses.

A petition was received from the Congregational Men's club at Wollaston for a permanent sidewalk on streets adjoining North Central avenue and South Central avenue to accommodate school children. Referred to Committee on Streets.

A number of applications for minor licenses were received and referred to Committee on Licenses.

An application for an auctioneer's license from Charles H. Johnson was laid on the table until later when Councilman J. R. S. Ross offered an order granting the license which was adopted. His bond was also approved.

METROPOLITAN PLAN.

The special committee appointed to confer with committees from other cities and towns relative to the proposed Metropolitan plan bill reported that while in the opinion of the committee the idea of comprehensive planning was a good idea the committee believed that the proposed bill would entail a considerable expense upon the city and they recommended the adoption of a resolution requesting the Mayor and City Solicitor to oppose the passage of the bill before the legislative commitee. Adopted.

Councilman Richards offered an order transferring the balance in the highway appropriation amounting to $493.03 to the appropriation for care and repair of public buildings. Referred to Finance Committee.

Councilman Craig offered an order for a tar concrete sidewalk on Brooks avenue. Referred to Committee on Streets.

Councilman Forde offered an order for $50 for a fire alarm box on Forest avenue. Referred to Committee on Fire Department.

FINANCIAL INVESTIGATION.

Councilman Cunningham offered a resolve for a special committee of five to investigate the financial condition of the city and make such recommendations as they think advisable. Adopted.

President Hobbs appointed as that committee Councilman Abele, Bailey, Boyd, Murray and Craig.

MONTCLAIR AVENUE.

Councilman Sodergren offered an order for the acceptance of Montclair avenue from Squantum street to the Montclair depot. Referred to Committee on Streets.

Many orders were offered for street lights in the several wards of the city. They were as follows:

By Devaney to change the light on Quincy avenue opposite Scammell's shop to a cluster light.

By Craig for a light on Ritchie road.

By Carruthers for a light on Germain avenue.

BODY MAY BE IN BLACK'S CREEK

The rumor which came to light this morning to the effect that Mrs. Ball, the woman who disappeared suddenly from her home at Norfolk Downs last January, was seen in the vicinity of Merrymount Park, has led to the belief that the missing woman may be lying beneath the ice of Black's Creek. Relatives have searched diligently for her, but to no avail.

Last Saturday, her son-in-law visited the different hospitals, institutions and morgues in and about Boston, in quest of her, but failed to find any trace of the missing woman. Another search was made Monday, but proved fruitless and a thorough search will be conducted in the Black Creek vicinity as soon as the ice melts away.

SLEIGH PARTY.

A sleighing party was observed on Monday evening by forty members of St. John's Dramatic society. The gathering assembled at the corner of School and Hancock streets about eight o'clock, boarded a large sleigh and proceeded on a trip through Milton Reservation, thence to Mattapan, where luncheon was partaken of at Thompson's cafe.

Return was made by the same route and the party reached Quincy about midnight, after having been treated to an evening's enjoyment of the rare order. Songs, jokes and cheering of all sorts prevailed throughout the journey and the affair was pronounced a huge success. The committee in charge of the trip comprised Miss Nellie Desmond and Miss Eleanor Moriarty.

WANT PLAYGROUND

A petition for a public playground in Wollaston Park is having broad circulation and a large number of signatures are being attached. This proposes taking the land beside the Massachusetts Fields school, bounded by Willett street, Rawson road and Hampden Circle for a public playground. Behind the movement is the playground committee of the Parents' and Teachers' Association of the Massachusetts Fields school.

MEN'S CLUB.

A business meeting was held by the Men's club of St. Chrysostom's Parish in the parish rooms on Monday evening. Plans for the coming club show were taken up and routine business transacted. The evening closed with a series of views on the reflectorscope and a social hour during which refreshments were served.

—Senator La Follette's principal reasons for believing in "votes for women" are, he says, the 7,000,000 American women wage-earners who "have a moral right to have a voice in the questions of sanitation and all that goes to improve living conditions of the home, which are governed by legislation."—Boston Common.

DELIGHTFULLY ENTERTAINED

Pleasing Program at Meeting Quincy Catholic Club

CHAFING DISH LUNCH

A regular meeting of the Quincy Catholic club was held Monday evening at the rooms of the Knights of Columbus club in the Savings Bank building and was largely attended. After the business of the evening the meeting was turned over to the music and hospitality committees who delightfully entertained

A very pleasing musical program was given which included a piano duet by Miss Rena Bizzozero and Mrs. Nellie Hart Reardon; a violin solo by Miss S. Pauline Bourgerou with Mrs. Rose Lizotte McCarthy as accompanist; readings by Miss McGaughy and piano solos by Miss Manley.

Special mention should be made of the violin solos of Miss Bourgerou. Her selections were rendered in a manner that showed careful study and that she was a perfect master of this beautiful instrument. Her playing was exquisite.

While the entertainment was in progress the chafing dish committees, who included Mrs. J. W. Walsh, Mrs. J. J. McAnarney, Miss Elizabeth Walsh, Miss Agnes Crowley, and Miss Anna J. Walsh were busy and at its conclusion served some very appetizing concoctions.

This was followed by a social hour.

BOARD ORGANIZES.

The Managers of Public Burial Places met in Room 11 at City Hall, Monday evening and organized for the year with Albert W. Fay as chairman and John Q. Cudworth as secretary. James Nichol was re-elected as superintendent of public burial places.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Five Equador generals were lynched the other day. They probably took the generals because they could not find any privates.

Mrs. Paul Sorg of New York had a $15,000 sable coat stolen last week. Times are certainly hard when it costs that amount to keep warm.

Sculptor Harvey committed suicide because his work was not recognized If he had been making bricks or houses instead of statues, he might be well and happy today.

The government proposes to save $5,500,000 by abolishing sixteen army posts, utterly ignoring the fact that a number of grocers supplying these posts will have to go out of business.

No Wall street money will be taken by any presidential candidate this year, but we believe any one would be justified in taking it for a ham sandwich if the man was starving.

Marse Henry says he was the innocent bystander in the Wilson-Harvey row, but like other innocent bystanders, he seems to have a genius for being on the spot when something gets started.

The beef packers say the high price of meat is due to the retailers, and the retailers say it is because Hubby is no longer willing to carry a brown paper parcel through the street.

IS IT THE RETAILER?

That the high cost of food is largely to be charged up to the retailer was the burden of testimony delivered in the beef packers' trial the other day. A recent writer in the Independent from Carey, Kansas, seems to agree. He says that in that town of 5000 people there are ten grocers—not an unusual number for a town of that size. Each of the ten has a delivery wagon. The writer says that one central store with four wagons could easily do all the work.

W. G. Puddefoot recently wrote to the Independnt, saying that in a certain New England town a farmer recently drove three fat steers into the village. But none of the butchers dared buy them, for fear they could not get their customary supplies of the regular wholesalers.

A contrast to the conditions now prevailing in the town of Carey is suggested by the habit of the grandfather of the writer of this article. Every few days on his way home from work, he used to bring in his own hands to his home in the outlying country, quarters of lamb, beef bones, and all kinds of household supplies, bought at a market in town where no delivery teams were run.

A Pittsburg wholesale grocer says the cost of thousands of articles would be reduced twenty per cent were it not for the credit system and the installment plan. He also comments on the high cost of fancy bottles, and labels done by high paid artists. The modern consumer seems to be more easily convinced by an appeal to the artistic eye than to the business judgment.

A writer from Wahoo, Nebraska, says that "40 years ago we used to see Saturday nights, men leaving the railroad camps, carrying flour, sugar, and other groceries on their backs, to outlying little houses where they had garden spots, a cow, hens, and pigs. Today the same plots of land contain buildings and equipment worth $5000 to $25,000, and the people travel by $2500 automobiles." Somebody has to pay for it, but the retailer is not to blame for all that.

But our system of retail distribution must be admitted to be expensive. A recent writer in Good Housekeeping compared the product of a 40 cent sack of flour cooked in her home, with 40 cents spent for baker's bread. She figured a gain of 22 cents on the home-made bread, after charging for all other material used, and making no account of flour used for one loaf of cake, two and a half dozen biscuits, one batch of cookies, and two cupfuls for corn bread.

THE UNDERWORLD.

The attempt to hold a tramp convention at Cincinnati naturally resulted in failure, owing to the order of Mayor Hunt forbidding the "hoboes" to gather. To most people the idea of a tramp convention seems absurd, and yet gatherings of several thousand of them have been held in recent years. Certain secluded but accessible islands in the Mississippi river near railroad junctions, are a more favorable place. In spite of all their bravado, they are little inclined to court an encounter with the police.

The most notable event in trampdom for the past year has been the enactment in New York of a law establishing a tramp farm colony. While it is admitted that authentic cases of reforming professional tramps have so far been rare, yet it is believed that the tramps can be rounded up off park benches and lockup cells, and made to quit tramping for a time at least. Belgium, Holland and Switzerland have in this way practically eliminated the tramp.

The new colony will put the tramps to work on abandoned farm lands, the product of which will not cause the antagonism among the labor unions that is excited by setting them at mechanical industries

It is high time for some positive action, for the tramp evil is attaining the proportions of a deluge. Some estimate that 500,000 men and boys are tramping in this country. While not over 100,000 are supposed to be "good people" (the name given to themselves by strictly professional tramps) yet the "gay cats" and "mush fakirs" who alternate tramping with occasional fits of working, umbrella mending, or spectacle peddling, are at heart addicted to a vagrant life. The loss to the railroads alone by tramps is placed at $25,000,000 a year.

Parents who have boys inclined to be unruly should look out how they loaf around the tramp hang-outs to be found near all large towns. Railroad water tanks, on which are bulletins of tramp information in hieroglyphics, are often meeting places for hoboes that attract many restless boys. There they hear glowing tales from the knights of the road, the fascination of which drags many boys yearly into the great and growing underworld.

RETURN FROM TRIP TO INDIA

King George and Queen Mary Safely Reach London

AN ENTHUSIASTIC WELCOME

Greeted by Large Assemblage of Notables as Train Pulls In—King Stands Up In Carriage and Salutes Stars and Stripes—Thousands of People Join In Singing In Front of Buckingham Palace

London, Feb. 6.—King George and Queen Mary returned to England from the most memorable journey ever undertaken together by a king and queen of Great Britain and Ireland. After an absence of three months, during which they have been crowned Emperor and Empress of India and had received the homage of many of their princely vassals in the vast eastern empire, they were given a hearty welcome back to London.

Their present stay in the British isles will be only a short one, as they are due to pay a round of state visits to European courts this spring and summer.

After breakfasting on board the Medina at Portsmouth with the queen mother, Alexandra, the Prince of Wales and the other royal children, their majesties landed and were saluted by the guns of the forts around Portsmouth. On the quay were drawn up guards of honor of bluejackets and soldiers, who presented arms while a military band struck up the national anthem.

The royal party boarded a special train and traveled to London through country covered thickly with snow. All the stations along the route were decorated with flags.

A large assemblage of notables was waiting at Victoria station when the train pulled in yesterday afternoon. An archway bearing the words "Welcome home" in gold lettering on a blue ground was erected across the platform.

Premier Asquith and other members of the cabinet, members of the diplomatic corps, prominent officers of the army and navy in brilliant uniforms, the lord mayor and the sheriffs of London and the lords mayor of the principal cities of the British isles, all wearing their regalia, were present to welcome their majesties.

An interesting little incident happened in Victoria street as the king's carriage passed the American embassy. King George stood up in the carriage, turned toward the embassy and saluted the Stars and Stripes flying over the entrance.

The enthusiasm of the crowds reached its climax at Buckingham palace. After their majesties had entered the thousands of people who had assembled around the railings sang successively "God Save the King," "Auld Lang Syne," "Home, Sweet Home" and "He's a Jolly Good Fellow." Their majesties responded by appearing on the balcony of the first floor.

Religious services of thanksgiving for the safe return of the king and queen were held yesterday afternoon in Westminster abbey and the churches throughout the British isles.

ARRESTS IN TWELVE CITIES

Expected as Result of Indictments In Dynamite Plot

Indianapolis, Feb. 6.—Warrants will be served simultaneously in twelve cities of the east and central west following the return of indictments in the national dynamiting plot.

Though reports emanating from semi-official sources say that thirty indictments will be returned, some estimates run as high as sixty. The true bills probably will be handed up late today in the federal court.

It is probable that the full list of indicted labor men will not be given out at once in order to guard against flight.

MRS. HERBERT F. DOBLE.

We can but speak a word of a beautiful life that has recently passed out of this into the world beyond, that of Eunice Clyde Doble.

She will be sadly missed by a large circle of friends, especially those in that part of the city in which she had lived since she came to Quincy a bride, thirty-eight years ago. And to those closer and more intimate ones, who have known her in her home life and in her church, and seen her through the long months of suffering, her life can be but a beautiful inspiration and example.

Words cannot express her loss to the family she has left. Always a devoted wife and mother, her family stood before her first, above all else, her mind always filled with unselfish thought for its welfare and comfort in every way. To her family her life will be a fine and noble example, one to be imitated and followed. Through all her long suffering she murmured not one word of complaint, but bore it with gentleness and sweet patience. Like some clear star shining out brighter than the others so stands out her strongest characteristic, unselfishness, always thought for others throughout her life, even in hours of greatest suffering. This great spirit of unselfishness together with so many other beautiful traits of character can but suggest these lines of Whittier.

"Yet shall we cherish not the less
All that is left our hearts meanwhile:
The memory of thy loveliness
Shall round our weary pathway smile,
Like moonlight when the sun has set—
A sweet and tender radiance yet."

Q—If the "Sons of God" (Genesis vi, 4) were the angels who left their former habitation, or first estate—the spiritual realm (Jude 3)—how is it that they could marry the "daughters of men" and have children, since it is understood from the Master's words (Matthew xxii, 30) that the angels are sexless (L. T. H.)

Answer.—From many scriptures it is apparent that the angels, or spirit beings, have the power of materializing as human beings. This materialization is complete, as the following Scriptural citations indicate, showing that these materialized beings could eat and drink and perform all of the functions of the natural being of the earthy plane of existence. (Genesis xviii, 8 xxxii, 24, 25; Zechariah i, 9; v, 5; Luke i, 30; Acts xii, -10;) It is evident that the angels in their proper habitation, the spiritual realm do not possess the powers of reproduction. It would, therefore, be impossible for them to have angelic progeny. It is only as they materialize as human beings that they could exercise the powers belonging to the race of mankind, and thus bring children into the world of the fleshy nature. Because some of the angels did this without the Divine sanction, they were punished by being restrained in chains of darkness unto the Judgment day.

TOO MANY RETAILERS OF FOOD PRODUCTS

Belief That Is One Reason For High Cost of Living

New York, Feb. 6.—The most ambitious attempt yet made at solving the problems of the higher cost of living will be begun here by the New York food investigation committee, appointed by act of the state legislature. Under the law it has the power to subpoena anyone whose testimony it desires. A statement from Horace D. Bruce, who is in charge of the new offices, is as follows:

"The commission will learn what profit goes to the producer, the jobber, the retailer, the commission man, the local shipper and also what percentage of the price of the foodstuffs is paid for freight and cartage. Then it will determine where the fault, if any, lies, and wherein our present system is wrong.

"I am inclined to believe that there are too many retailers in this city. There are 13,000 retail dealers to a population of 5,000,000. Three thousand retailers could supply the needs of the city. We want the testimony of the consumer, as well as the producer and jobber."

DIVORCE FOR SINCLAIR

Judicial Decision on Report of Second Referee Is Reserved

New York, Feb. 6.—Marshall S. Marsden, the second referee appointed to take the testimony in the suit for divorce brought by Upton Sinclair against his wife, filed his report in the supreme court, favoring the decree.

Judicial decision on the report was reserved. In his application for divorce Sinclair named as corespondent Harry Kemp, the "tramp poet." The first referee recommended that a divorce be granted, but the court ruled Sinclair had been allowed to testify about certain matters contrary to law.

BRIDE OF BOSTON ARTIST

Mrs. Claudia Hains Becomes the Wife of Reginald Bolles

Boston, Feb. 6.—Mrs. Claudia Hains, the Winthrop woman who was the central figure in one of the most sensational army scandals and murder trials in a generation, was married last night to Reginald F. Bolles, a Boston illustrator, at the home of her parents in Milton.

Rev. A. A. Berle, formerly pastor of the Shawmut Avenue Congregational church, now a college professor, performed the marriage service.

The bride looked younger than when, three years ago, Captain Peter C. Hains had shocked the country by shooting down William E. Annis on the float of the Bay Side Yacht club at Flushing, L. I., and followed his sensational act by accusing his one-time friend of stealing his wife while the soldier husband was in the Philippines fighting for his country.

HONOR SYSTEM A FAILURE

College Professor Points Out Where It Is Harmful to Students

Philadelphia, Feb. 6.—Asserting the moral standards of students are lowered by the honor system as applied at the Wharton school of the University of Pennsylvania, Professor Schelling, head of the English department, in a letter to The Pennsylvanian, the daily student publication, declares that the system is a failure.

Under the "honor system" the students are required after each examination to sign a statement that they have neither given nor received aid.

To ask a student to sign this statement, Schelling asserts, is to assume not only the possibility, but the probability that he will cheat, and therefore destroys his reputation for honesty as well as his sense of honor.

THE MEXICAN SERENADERS

Entertainment Under Auspices of the Boy Scouts

SPIRIT OF SCOUTING

Large numbers attended the entertainment held under the auspices of the Boy Scouts in the Wollaston Congregational church by the Mexican Serenaders Monday evening.

They were assisted by Erastus Osgood who contributed several mirth provoking readings. An address was also given by Ormond E. Loomis, field secretary of the Greater Boston council of the Boy Scouts.

Mr. Loomis spoke of the "Spirit of scouting" and corrected the impression that the scouts was a military organization.

The movement is non sectarian and is for active boys who like to be out of doors. It is principally for boys of from 12 to 18, taking them at the critical period of early adolescence when they need the friendship of an older person.

The Boy Scout movement appeals to the boys because it touches their natural interests. They need the outdoor life.

From 12 to 14 the normal boy is naturally a savage. The Boy Scouts show how a boy can be used to be an asset in community life instead of a menace and annoyance.

The spirit of scouting lies in being prepared, in ability to act, thinking on your feet. It aims for the use of common sense and resourcefulness.

It teaches observation and a desire to serve in a way that does not make a lad a mollycoddle.

The evening opened with a Mexican overture by the Serenaders consisting of mandolin, mandola and guitar. It was followed by a xylophone solo "Massa's in the cold, cold ground," by Walter Vreeland.

The Serenaders were in the native Mexican costume and made quite a hit with those present. "Miss Callahan's pink tea" was the title of Erastus Osgood's monologue which proved highly amusing

A banjo solo "Gypsy Rondo" by Hayden was given by P. H. Foley and a selection from "Lucia" on the mandolin by Sig. Carlo Carciotto was enjoyed.

"The darkies carnival," a recitative piece was given by three Serenaders and closed the first part of the program.

Following the address of Secretary Loomis, who was introduced by Scout Master Hammel, Walter Vreeland, contributed a guitar solo entitled "Love's Joy."

The Mexican musical discs were played by P. H. Foley and found favor.

They were followed by a trio in a medley of popular airs.

"Hank Becker's dancing school" was the offering of Erastus Osgood and was followed by a trick violin piece entitled "Gymnastic."

The Serenaders characteristic "Southern smiles" closed the evening's program which was one of length and interest to those present.

The entertainment was in charge of F. J. Hammel and George Brown scout masters and Theodore DuPlessis assistant scoutmaster.

They were assisted by a committee consisting of Franklin Seiders, George MacDonald, Sherman Brokaw, Howard Baker, Sidney Baker, Dorford Bruce, Charles Johnson and Robert Hamlin.

The ushers were: Allen Stearns, Harold Seavey, Everett Sutermeister and Gilbert Hamlin.

The local branch of the Boy Scouts was organized in Wollaston last October.

It is a live organization and at present numbers nearly two score.

AN UNUSUAL DISEASE

Flesh of Woman Who Is Slowly Dying Is Turning Black as Ebony

Elgin, Ills., Feb. 6.—A disease never before recorded in this vicinity has attacked Mrs. Abel Hare and is slowly causing her death.

It is known as Raynaud's disease, a vascular affliction, accompanied by gangrene and local asphyxia. It is turning the flesh on her hands and arms into a black substance, hard, immovable and without feeling.

The disease has spread from the fingers to the elbows in a week, and the hands resemble ebony in appearance. Physicians say it results from contraction of the coverings of the blood vessels.

ANNUAL BANQUET

talk on the total abstinence movement and portraying the many evils which were caused both directly and indirectly by the use of liquor, either moderately or excessively. Great applause was accorded him.

Joseph Ecker, the well-known baritone soloist of Dorchester then favored those present and was forced to respond to a couple of encores. Daniel F. O'Connell furnished accompaniment.

The walls of the popular West Quincy hall resounded as never before, and thunderous applause was in evidence for fully three minutes, when the toastmaster, after pronouncing an encomium upon him, introduced Rev. Dr. Andrew J. O'Brien. All stood up in greeting him and words fail to express the demonstration he was requited. Rev. Dr. O'Brien was deeply affected by the tokens of esteem and lost no time in recording his abiding gratitude, as he himself expressed it, "from the innermost recesses of his heart." "The Secret of Life" was dwelt on by Fr. OBrien and he spoke with the same degree of force and eloquence that characterized his work as a member of the Fulton Debating Society of Boston College.

The speaker brought out many points by means of comparisons and examples. He spoke of the days he spent in West Quincy, of his playing on the baseball team, and the endeavors made in the national pastime by the West Quincy players, at the same time taking occasion to pay a tribute to William Duane, who was always known as plain "Bill." The speaker then went on to show how returns had been made to the bench and the bat dropped, thereby causing the battle of life to be on in earnest. He spoke of the never ending friendship which was entertained by all present, declaring that it would grow riper and riper "until one and all meet in eternal friendship around the great throne of the Father on High." Rev. Dr. O'Brien told of his studies in Rome and of the observation he had made, concluding by stating what he had found to be the secret of life, namely, "In this sign, the sign of the Cross, you shall conquer."

Thomas Connors, of the Metropolitan Police force, then recited his original selection entitled "Duke McDevitt's Campaign," in a manner that elicited the greatest of applause.

Dr. John H. Ash spoke in his usual oratorical manner on the cause of total abstinence, and said that a man espousing such a noble cause, would be armed with an escutcheon competen to overthrow almost any impending adversity.

Daniel F. O'Connell next rendered two songs that caused him to receive great applause. He was accompanied on the piano by Leo Kenney.

Rev. William J. Duffy wave a most eloquent discouse on "Catholic Education." Fr. Duffy brought out the need of having pupils and students imbued with learning consistent with the true ideal—God, and concluded by asserting that any teaching in which God was excluded, fell short of the very fundamental principle of education. He too, was heartily applauded.

William R. Teasdale responded to a couple of encores, with Leo Kenney furnishing accompaniment.

Ex-city clerk Charles J. McGilvray was the next speaker, and brought out the many things that had come under his observation, which he thought would be of benefit to the organization. He spoke of the various obstacles encountered in the battle of life, and commended the members of the society for their great work.

He was followed by James F. Burke, who spoke in his usual strain on the many things necessary on the part of young men, in order that they might be equipped to combat the adversities that arise from time to time, in an effort to attain success. He brought out the secret of success in the business world and urged those present to be mindful of the lessons taught by the different speakers of the evening.

A quartet, composed of Joseph, Peter and Paul Morissette and Daniel F. O Connell then rendered a number of selections, at the conclusion of which the most successful annual banquet of St. Mary C. T. A. and M. R. Society was brought to a close

In Masquerade

In striking costumes of historic periods, the belles and beaux of New York society made socially memorable the Daisy Masquerade Ball, given by Mrs. William F. Draper, in honor of her debutante daughter Margaret. Two costumes that were greatly admired are shown in the illustration.

MUST BE WORN WITH GRACE

Enormous Fur Scarf Is Decidedly a Thing of Beauty or It Is the Reverse.

The most striking fur fad of the season is the enormous scarf, usually straight but occasionally pointed at the ends, very supple and light, very wide, long enough to wind round the body in any manner desired and still fall almost to the ground. The graceful wearing of these fur scarfs is an art and difficult of mastery. Perhaps that is why the Parisienne has taken up the cult so enthusiastically. She loves a mode that must be taken seriously, that fails lamentably if not carried off with verve and understanding, and these great scarfs afford opportunity for subtle skill in draping and in handling. When not worn gracefully they are bunglesome and awkward. To be able to buy one is not all. One must be able to wear it becomingly, coquettishly, after it is bought. Here is another of the styles for the slender woman. The fat woman and the new fur scarf are hopelessly incompatible.

Graceful Ruffles.

Ruffles have come into fashion again.

Slender women and young girls will welcome these dainty trimmings for their evening dresses.

Some of the newest frocks from Paris have a narrow ruffle around the bottom of the skirt.

Many show the same mode of adorning plain bodices.

A pretty model for a debutante, especially if she be a slender slip of a girl, is a frock of figured net made up over a slip of satin in a delicate shade.

Narrow ruffles are being applied to the new gowns in many different ways.

The surplice effect is obtained sometimes with a broad piece of embroidery laid on over the shoulders and edged with a narrow ruffle of lace or hemstitched batiste or handkerchief linen.

Ruffles of embroidery or lace sailor collars, cuffs and the broad brim of lingerie hats.

Frocks for Growing Girls.

The mothers of growing daughters should be very careful about the fit of their frocks, especially to have all parts loose enough, for girls in their teens are apt to pine for a small waist and will endure tortures from a tight band rather than own up to any discomfort. This as a matter of course leads to lacing, and they will contrive in some way to pull in or make smaller even the corded waists that they wear. The shoulders of a frock should also be loose, to prevent stooping.

Popularity of Veils.

Veils are being worn with all kinds of hats and also toques. The most fashionable are in net with lace patterns, but different kinds of craquelin net are fancied in colors as well as black and white, the latter being often preferred even for dark hats and toques made of fur. Veils are arranged so as to come well down under the chin and to cover the ears and the throat, and are fastened at the nape of the neck as well as to the hat.—Millinery Trade Review.

EVENING DRESS.

This design has an under-dress of soft satin in a deep shade of mauve, this is quite plain; fawn-colored ninon forms the tunic and over bodice; it is fulled in at the waist and the lower edge is finished with deep mauve fringe. A dainty trimming of chiffon flowers and foliage is sewn above; this also trims the upper edge of bodice, which has a tucker and under-sleeves of cream ninon. The sleeves are left unsewn at the outside where pieces of ribbon and buttons connect them. A sash of satin ribbon is taken round the waist; fringed ends are left hanging down the left side of front.

New Jumper.

Blessed be the one who invented the jumper. It serves such a multitude of needs; it fits in with so many occasions. The newest one is quite smart and looks so different from the ones we have had that it could easily be passed off under a new name.

It is not round at the neck, nor does it have kimono sleeves; it is V-shaped back and front and its two fronts cross over just above the waist and go to the back, where they finish in a flat bow.

It is worn over a blouse of dotted net or shadow lace, which is either unlined or dropped over a slip of flesh-colored pink chiffon cloth or china silk.

Spring Model.

A new waist counted among "advance spring models" has a deep V which is edged all around with a wide flat net plaiting which is cut in sharp points. The waist is made of chiffon on any color to match the suit, and it has a yoke of chiffon and shadow lace. The elbow sleeves have deep pointed frills like the V neck.

KNEW HE WAS COMING.

When little Dorothy Walworth was introduced to her new baby brother at her home in Yonkers she manifested interest, but was not astonished. She did not even ask questions.

"What do you think of your baby brother Dorothy?" the nurse inquired.

"Oh," she replied, "I knew he was coming."

"How did you know it, dear?"

"I was down to Bronx Park and saw the stork. I recognized him by the black stripes on his wings that papa said were there. Well, I just went close to the stork, when he was standing on one leg, and whispered that I wanted him to bring me a baby brother. I knew he would do it, too." And the little girl looked wise and very mysterious.

"What made you think he would do as you asked, Dorothy?"

"'Cause he looked straight at me and winked his eye," was the emphatic response.—New York Herald.

Girl Who Loved Sunshine Finally Finds Material for Cushion That Won't Fade.

"My big south bay window seat is the dearest part of my room," said a real "home girl," who is gaining much useful experience since her monthly allowance has been counted on for the adornment and "replacements" of her pretty, sunshiny bedroom, "but for a few months the matter of keeping it respectable threatened to keep me poor. All the sunshine there is I want, so it comes in without hindrance, and right across the seat cushions and the pillows that I set up to lean against. The consequence was the denim covers faded almost as I looked at them. It took seven yards of 30-inch denim to re-cover the tops of those seat cushions and I couldn't get anything respectable in appearance under twenty-five or thirty cents a yard.

"I would take a half day off and have a beautiful 'spree' putting on the new covers, shaped to fit. The room would brisk up and be twice as livable as ever before, so it seemed. Then one day I would lift up one of the loose cushions and find that under it the denim was six shades brighter than out where the sun had shone on it. Nothing that I could afford seemed proof against fading until one day, when I was studying over the problem, I happened to notice that the plain ingrain filling around the edge of the big rug was just the color I wanted and always had been.

"It got just as much sun as the window seat, in that part of the room, and had not altered its hue. It took me no great while to figure out that ingrain carpet filling, even if I paid a dollar a yard for it, would outlast a dozen sets of denim covering and save the work of recovering every few weeks. So I saved up and saved up until I could afford the carpet. Work? It does! It is as nice and fresh looking now as when I put it on, six months ago."

FIREMEN WANT WAGES RAISED

Demand Complicates Strike Situation at Lawrence

CONTROL LIGHTING OF CITY

Walkout Would Result In Darkness In Streets as Well as In Mills—Mill Owners Disappointed at Small Number of Workers Who Return—Campaign For General Strike Continues—Present Force of Militia Is Augmented—Large Relief Fund Received by Strike Committee

Lawrence, Mass., Feb. 6.—By an adroit strategic move the strikers have scored a point which may lead to a settlement of the big textile struggle here when the Stationary Firemen's union voted to demand a 15 percent increase in wages.

The stationary firemen are affiliated with the American Federation of Labor. Should they strike, the city of Lawrence, as well as the mills, would be crippled.

This union controls the mechanical working of the lighting, as well as traction plants. If the members decide to stand by the other strikers the city will be plunged into darkness and its motive power shut down.

So critical is their position that the mill agents will confer with the labor leaders today in an effort to effect a compromise.

The situation here is most critical. The mill owners were disappointed when, after their strenuous efforts, less than 15 percent of the mill operatives went back to work.

As far as it is possible to ascertain, less operatives were at the mills yesterday than Saturday. The solidarity of the strikers raised the hopes materially of their leaders.

The campaign for a general strike was continued with undiminished vigor. William D. Haywood, who was served with a subpoena by the state police officials for his appearance at the trial of Joseph J. Ettor, Friday, after speaking here at several meetings, went to Fall River to spread the propaganda of a strike in that city. From there he will go to New Bedford. With the strike on in these centres and the militia spread over such a large area, there is no telling what will happen.

The habeas corpus hearing for the release of Ettor on bail will be heard in the supreme court at Boston this afternoon.

The strikers will also ask an injunction to prevent the militia and officers from interfering with their meetings on the common and in connection with this they may also ask for a warrant for the arrest of one of the prominent officials of the American Woolen company on the charge of being an accessory before the fact to the killing of John Ramy, the Syrian who was bayoneted by a soldier. This action is expected to be taken in retaliation for the arrest and imprisonment of Ettor.

A battalion of militia was relieved from duty this morning, and in their place another battalion, with an additional colonel for headquarters, will arrive. Colonel Cutting of the Fifth is the one who augments the present force.

The impression of the police is that the strikers are remaining inactive until the cases of Ettor and the strikers arrested and convicted in the lower court for violence are disposed of.

Although a large fund has been received by the strike committee, they will not give out figures or tell how this money is being disbursed. They claim it is the business of those who contributed and themselves alone.

Hereafter there will be two colonels to direct operations of the militia which is maintaining order in Lawrence. Colonel Cutting of the Fifth will assist Colonel Sweetser of the Eighth, who has been in charge since the beginning of the strike.

The event of a new officer makes a change in the troops now on duty. Cutting was accompanied by a battalion of the Fifth, which relieved the battalion of the Eighth commanded by Major Perry. The companies to leave are H of Salem, G of Gloucester and I and D of Lynn. The four relief companies will reach Lawrence this afternoon. They have not been announced.

The molestation of militiamen on picket duty by two strikers resulted in fines for the offenders yesterday in police court.

"Two Children Are Enough"

Boston, Feb. 6.—"The two-hour cut in wages which occasioned the Lawrence strike is large or small, according to the point of view," declared Rev. Arthur Barber of Trinity Congregational church, Lawrence, before the Congregational ministers' meeting in Pilgrim hall yesterday. His subject was "A True Inside View of the Lawrence Strike."

"Both sides are to blame. The workingmen have their faults, as well as the capitalists. For every capitalist despot there is a labor despot. I don't believe more than one man in twenty wanted to go out on strike.

"The capitalists have shown bad generalship. They have a legal right to ride through the hungry crowd down there in their automobiles, but only a fool will wave a red rag at a bull.

"The laborers themselves are not blameless. You hear a great deal about the difficulty of a man bringing up a family on $5 or $6 or $7 a week. But there is more to the family question than Teddy Roosevelt's race suicide theory. Parents have sometimes another duty than to be prolific. Therefore I say to the woman who complains that she cannot take care of twelve children, that she should be ashamed of herself. For the $7 a week man two children are enough. In God's name, shut out that crowd from the city of Lawrence for five years and give us a chance to breathe."

CAPTURED FROM OFFICERS

Negro Lynched and Taken to Negro Quarter of City and Burned

Macon, Ga., Feb. 6.—Carles Powell, a negro who assaulted and robbed a young white woman here, was taken from officers and lynched by a mob. County officers had sought to prevent the lynching and had removed Powell from the jail about which the mob gathered.

Members of the mob used automobiles and overtook the negro and his two guards four miles from the city. He was tied to a telegraph pole and hundreds of bullets were fired into his body At noon, a crowd loaded the body into a wagon, carried it to the heart of the negro section of the city and burned it.

"Parties unknown" are held responsible by the coroner's jury, which held an inquest at the scene of the lynching.

INVENTOR SCORNS THE USE OF DUMMY

Killed by Fall From the Eiffel Tower While Making Test

Paris, Feb. 6.—An Austrian tailor named Reichelt was killed while testing an automatic parachute cape intended for the use of aviators. The cape was of his own invention and Reichelt was authorized by the police to carry out tests with a dummy first from a stage on the first story of the Eiffel tower.

Having absolute faith, however, in the efficacy of his invention. Reichelt secretly determined to dispense with the dummy and try the experiment in person. He rapidly donned the garment and leaped into space before he could be stopped.

"For some reason the cape failed to open and Reichelt dropped for a distance of 187 feet like a stone. Hardly a bone in his body was left unbroken.

PUTS "CYCLONE" TO MAT

Mahmout, Gotch's Protege, Easily Disposes of Burns

Boston, Feb. 6.—Mahmout, the Turkish exponent of the gentle art of wrestling and side kick to Frank Gotch, lived up to all his advance notices and then some in his match with Cyclone Burns, the local boy, at Mechanics' building, last night.

It came to straight falls for the Turk, and he showed everything that appertains to the art. Speed, agility, and the whole reprtory of tricks in the calendar are apparently his, whether or not he chose to use his entire list for the benefit of the large gathering that took occasion to look over the man rated as the next best man to Gothch in the business and give Burns the benefit of the major portion of the applause accruing to the best match ever seen in Boston.

DICKINSON IS HELD

Suspected of Having Killed Mrs. Taylor by Use of Bomb

New York, Feb. 6.—The investigation by the police into the mysterious murder of Mrs. Helen Taylor, who was killed by the explosion of a bomb in her apartments in West Seventy-Seventh street Saturday night, produced some evidence which they regard as significant as bearing upon the recent movements of Charles M. Dickinson, who was with the woman when the explosion occurred.

Dickinson, who is said to have been infatuated with the woman and had been warned to keep away from the flat, is being held for a hearing.

SAMUEL L. SHANK.

Mayor of Indianapolis, Who Aims to Reduce Food Prices.

SHANK'S ASPIRATION

Middleman's Foe Wants to Become Governor of Indiana

Indianapolis, Feb. 6. — Mayor Shank of this city, arch-enemy of the middlemen, trusts and combines, admits he will be a candidate for the Republican nomination for governor of Indiana.

Mayor Shank owes much of his nation-wide fame to the Irish potato. He sprang into prominence when he made war on the middleman by selling tubers direct from the producer to the consumer on the public market and cut the price almost in half.

The mayor's sales became popular and he branched out into vegetables and poultry, and during the holiday season sold Christmas trees and mincemeat at reduced prices.

RHODE ISLAND BANK PAYS UP DEPOSITORS

Union Trust Stockholders Will Be Also Reimbursed

Providence, Feb. 6.—With the payment yesterday of $1,750,000 in redeeming the final 10 percent contingent certificates, the Union Trust company, which suspended during the panic of 1907, completely liquidated its indebtedness to its old depositors.

Since the reorganization of the company and the reopening of the institution, payments to the former depositors have been made at intervals, and when the holders of the certificates presented them for redemption yesterday they received every cent they had in the bank when it closed.

The only obligations which now remain from the financial difficulties of 1907 are the deferred certificates held by the old stockholders, representing about $500,000, and these will be retired at par as soon as the directors believe the bank is in a position to do so.

AS MAN IS ELECTROCUTED

Condemned Inmates of Death House Join In Singing Hymn

Ossining, N. Y., Feb. 6.—While the condemned inmates in the death house in Sing Sing prison softly sang "Safe In the Arms of Jesus," Charles Swenton, a negro, was executed in the electric chair for the murder of Isaac Lee.

It was the first time in the history of the prison that the condemned have ever sung while another has paid the death penalty. Swenton went to his death cheerfully. After two shocks he was pronounced dead.

Charles Swenton shot and killed Isaac Lee on the night of Nov. 3, 1910, at the latter's home in New York city. Both were negroes.

MILLIONS IN DOUBT

Will of Edwin Hawley, the Railroad King, Cannot Be Found

New York, Feb. 6.—Although it is understood that he left an estate valued at approximately $40,000,000, it has become known that the will of Edwin Hawley cannot be found. His private papers have been partly searched, but so far the document has not been discovered.

Until it is found, the disposition of Hawley's vast estate, including his great railroad interests, will remain in doubt. He made the will in 1903, naming as executor his partner, Frank E. Davis.

Priests Honor New Cardinal

Boston, Feb. 6.—In the banqueting hall of the Hotel Somerset yesterday afternoon 500 priests of the archdiocese of Boston toasted Pope Pius X. and enthusiastically welcomed William Cardinal O'Connell. It was the first luncheon ever given by priests alone in the history of Boston. Every parish in the archdiocese was represented.

PAPER BAG COOKING

Great System Perfected by M. Soyer, Famous London Chef.

INSURES ECONOMY OF FUEL.

By Martha McCulloch Williams.

Paper bag cooking economizes fuel—the fact is demonstrable, beyond a doubt. Particularly if the fuel is gas. The figures to follow are given for gas, but are easy of translation into coal heat or even oil.

The oven of a gas range turned on full, burns twenty feet of gas an hour for each flame-bar. Commonly there are two bars—thus, the hourly consumption at full head is forty feet. The giant burner on top likewise, at full head, consumes twenty feet an hour, the small burners, each ten feet. Thus a stove in full commission for pot and pan cooking consumes ninety feet an hour.

Now, for paper bag cooking the oven must be lighted and turned on full for eight minutes before anything goes into it; it must also burn full strength forseven minutes longer. Thus, it consumes [illegible] feet of gas at the outset. Turning out one burner to reduce the heat one-half at the end of the seven minute period reduces consumption to fifteen feet for the rest of the hour, making a total of twenty-five feet against forty. But roasting does not demand that a burner goes full—turning it down might save five feet in the hour. Thus the net hour-saving of gas on the oven account is ten feet.

But there are other accounts. By help of paper bags, you can not merely roast in the oven, but cook at the same time a couple of vegetables and bake a pie or pudding. With a small roast you may even cook three vegetables, thereby leaving unlighted three upper jets, which would mean a saving of thirty feet of gas an hour.

Cooking thus solely in the oven means a saving of fifty feet of gas an hour.

Nor is this even all the story. Mysteriously, things cook more quickly in bags than out of them. The saving in time is one-fifth to one-sixth. Putting this at the lowest, and estimating the whole range consumption of gas at ninety feet, there is a saving of fifteen feet. Add them to the fifty feet already in credit, and the sum is flattering, indeed, to the paper bag.

A Little Story of Pie Baking.

I had baked a pie a la Soyer and found it good. Notwithstanding, I resolved to show myself exactly the worth of the bag-cooking.

I made up puff paste enough for three pies, rolled out the crusts and filled a pan, using cooked fresh peaches for a filling. I put it on to cook, in its naked majesty, noting the time accurately. It took ten minutes to roll crusts, fill, and put in a greased bag the second pie. The oven was so hot by that time that I slacked the heat a minute after putting in pie number two. After twenty minutes—thirty minutes from putting in the first pie—I looked in the oven. The naked pie was cooking creditably enough, yet was pale-faced, and the crust still dentable to the touch. Further, there were bubbles of syrup along sundry spaces of the edge.

I turned on a little more heat and left the two pies to cook fifteen minutes longer. The naked one was then a pale, delicate brown on top, with rather a hard undercrust. The bag was brown all over and so crisp the corners crumbled at the touch. But from it came a pie beautiful to behold—light, not pale brown, crisp and flaky as to crust, ready to leave the pan at the first tilt, for a plate.

SAVORIES FOR SUPPER.

By Nicholas Soyer, Chef of Brooks' Club, London.

Fish Roe a la Soyer.—Place half the roe on top of a piece of buttered toast, put peeled mushroom on top, add salt and pepper to taste, and a little piece of butter. Place the other half of the roe on top of the mushroom, add a little cayenne pepper, a pinch of grated cheese (Parmesan, or any other kind), a few bread crumbs and another piece of butter. Place in buttered bag, seal up and place on broiler. Allow ten minutes in a hot oven.

Savory of Lobster.—Cut a small lobster from head to tail. Cut the flesh into small dice. Put in small stewpan with one tablespoonful of white sauce, one tablespoonful of cream; add salt and cayenne or other pepper to taste, and one teaspoonful of grated Parmesan. Mix up well, and place in the cavity of the shells. Put a little grated Parmesan on top, and a little bread crumb and butter. Put in a paper bag. Place on broiler. Allow ten minutes in hot oven.

Savory Oysters.—Take two tablespoonfuls of white sauce, one teaspoonful of grated cheese, one tablespoonful of cream, the liquor from the oysters and seasoning to taste. Take half a dozen deep oyster shells. Put a little of the above mixture at the bottom; then put the raw breaded oyster in the middle. Add a little more of the sauce on top, with a little bread crumb and a small piece of butter. Place your buttered bag on the broiler, put your oysters carefully inside, seal up and allow eight minutes in a very hot oven.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

THE WAY WITH LIVER.

WHEN cooking liver care should be taken to avoid the mistake of cooking it too much. Fried liver should be a nice golden brown when placed on the table.

Many housewives object to handling it because of the disagreeable character of the meat, but if it is dropped into boiling water the blood will not ooze out as it does when the meat is first cut.

Calf's Liver and Bacon.—The liver is generally fried in butter. The liver sliced moderately thin is first cooked and the rashers of bacon afterward. Serve garnished with the latter.

Calf's liver may also be thus fried alone.

Dip the slices into seasoned beaten egg and olive oil and fry quickly.

Like Goose.

Pig's liver can be cooked to taste much like goose. Here is the way to prepare it:

Poor Man's Goose.—One pig's liver, one-half pound bacon, two pounds potatoes, two tablespoonfuls of flour, one-quarter teaspoonful of pepper, one of salt, two powdered sage leaves, one onion and one teacupful of water.

Mix the flour, pepper and salt. Slice the liver and bacon and dip each slice in the seasoning.

Parboil the onion, chopping it finely, and mix the sage with it. Put the meat in layers in a pie dish, each being sprinkled with sage and onion.

Parboil the potatoes, slice them and fill the dish with alternate layers of meat and potatoes.

Pour the water over the whole and bake for an hour and a half.

The liver and bacon should be sliced very thin.

The English Way.

Calf's Liver, English Style.—Cut the liver into thin slices, dip them in flour and put it into a frying pan in which some bacon has been cooked.

Saute the liver until it is brown and a little crisp, then take out and place on a dish with the bacon.

Dredge with a spoonful of flour or enough to absorb all the fat in the pan, then add enough water to make a thin sauce. Season with mushrooms.

When the liver is done trim into cutlets and serve with parsley as an entree.

FRECKLES

By Gene Stratton-Porter

COPYRIGHT, 1904, BY DOUBLEDAY, PAGE & CO.

SYNOPSIS.

Freckles, a homeless boy, is hired by Boss McLean to guard the expensive timber in the Limberlost from timber thieves.

Freckles does his work faithfully, makes friends with the birds and yearns to know more about nature. He lives with Mr. and Mrs. Duncan.

He resolves to get books and educate himself. He becomes interested in a huge pair of vultures and calls his bird friends als "chickens."

Some of the trees he is guarding are worth $1,000 each. Freckles' books arrive. He receives a call from Wessner.

Wessner attempts to bribe Freckles to betray his trust, and Freckles whips him. McLean overhears them and witnesses the fight.

Freckles' honesty saves a precious tree. He finds the nest of the vultures and is visited by a beautiful young girl.

She calls Freckles McLean's son. Freckles calls her "the angel" and helps the Bird Woman in taking photographs. McLean promises to adopt Freckles.

Freckles and the angel become very friendly. Assisted by the Bird Woman, they drive Wessner and Black Jack, timber thieves, from the Limberlost.

McLean fears more trouble, but Freckles insists upon being the sole guard of the timber. Freckles calls upon the angel's father.

The angel receives him as her equal, and her father is kind. Mrs. Duncan has exciting adventures in the Limberlost.

CHAPTER XIII.

FRECKLES' BUTTERFLIES.

OUT on the trail the Bird Woman wheeled on McLean with a dumfounded look.

"Do you thing the angel knew she did that?" she asked softly.

"No," said McLean. "I do not. But the poor boy knew it. Heaven help him!"

The Bird Woman stared across the gently waving swale. "I don't see how I am going to blame her," she said at last. "It's so exactly what I would have done myself."

"Say the rest," demanded McLean hoarsely. "Do him justice."

"He is a born gentleman," conceded the Bird Woman. "He took no advantage. He never even offered to touch her. Whatever that kiss meant to him, he recognized it was the loving impulse of a child under stress of strong emotion. He was fine and manly as any man ever could have been."

McLean lifted his hat. "Thank you," he said simply and parted the bushes for her to enter Freckles' room.

It was her first visit, and before she left she sent for her cameras and made studies of each side of it and of the cathedral. She was entranced with the delicate beauty of the place, and her eyes kept following Freckles as if she could not believe that it could be his conception and work.

That was a happy day. The Bird Woman had brought a lunch, and they spread it, with Freckles' dinner, on the study floor and sat about, resting and enjoying themselves. But the angel put her banjo into its case, silently gathered up her music, and no one mentioned the concert.

The Bird Woman left McLean and the angel to clear away the lunch and with Freckles examined the walls of his room and told him all she knew about his shrubs and flowers. She analyzed a cardinal flower and showed him what he had all summer wanted to know—why the bees buzzed ineffectually about it while the humming birds found in it an ever ready feast. Some of his specimens were so rare that she was unfamiliar with them, and with the flower book between them they knelt, studying the different varieties. She wandered the length of the cathedral aisle with him, and it was at her suggestion that he lighted his altar with a row of flaming foxfire.

As Freckles came up to the cabin from his long day at the swamp he saw Mrs. Chicken sweeping away to the south and wondered where she was going. He stepped into the bright, cozy little kitchen, and as he reached down the wash basin he asked Mrs. Duncan a question.

"Mother Duncan, do kisses wash off?"

"Lord, na, Freckles!" she cried. "At least the anes ye get from people ye love dinna. They dinna stay on the outside. They strike in until they find the center of your heart and make their stopping place there, and naething can take them from ye—I doubt if even death. Na, lad, ye can be reet sure kisses dinna wash off."

Freckles set the basin down and muttered, "I needn't be afraid to be washing, then, for that one struck in."

"I wish," said Freckles at breakfast one morning, "that I had some way to be sending a message to the Bird Woman. I've something down at the swamp that I'm believing never happened before, and surely she'll be wanting it."

"What now, Freckles?" asked Mrs. Duncan.

"Why, the oddest thing you ever heard of," said Freckles. "The whole insect tribe gone on a spree. I'm supposing it's my fault, but it all happened by accident-like. You see, on the swale side of the line, right against me trail, there's one of these scrub wild crab trees. Where the grass grows thick about it is the finest place you ever conceived of for snakes. Having women about has set me trying to clean out those fellows a bit, and yesterday I noticed that tree in passing. It struck me that it would be a good idea to be taking it out. First I thought I'd take me hatchet and cut it down, for it ain't thicker than me upper arm. Then I remembered how it was blooming in the spring and filling all the air with sweetness. The coloring of the blossoms is beautiful, and I hated to be killing it. I just cut the grass short all about it. Then I started at the ground, trimmed up the trunk near the height of me shoulder and left the top spreading. That made it look so truly ornamental that, idle like, I chips off the rough places neat, and this morning, on me soul, it's a sight. You see, cutting of the limbs and trimming up the trunks sets the sap running. In this hot sun it ferments in a few hours. There isn't much room for more things to crowd on that tree than there are, and to get drunker isn't noways possible."

"Weel, I be drawed on!" exclaimed Mrs. Duncan. "What kind of things do ye mean, Freckles?"

"Why, just an army of black ants. Some of them are sucking away like old topers. Some of them are setting up on their tails and hind legs, fiddling away with their fore feet and wiping their eyes. Some are rolling around on the ground, contented. There are quantities of big bluebottle flies over the bark and hanging on the grasses about, too drunk to steer a course flying, so they just buzz away like flying and all the time sitting still. The snake feeders are too full to feed anything, even more sap to themselves. There's a lot of hard backed bugs—beetles, I guess—colored like the brown, blue and black of a peacock's tail. They hang on until the legs of them are so wake they can't stick a minute longer, and then they break away and fall to the ground. They just lay there on their backs, fably clawing air. When it wears off a bit, up tipy get and go crawling back for more, and they so full they bump into each other and roll over. Sometimes they can't climb the tree until they wait to sober up a little. There's a lot of big black and gold bumblebees, done for entire, stumbling over the bark and rolling on the ground. They just lay there on their backs, rocking from side to side, singing to themselves like fat, happy babies. The wild bees keep up a steady buzzing with the beating of their wings.

"The butterflies are the worst old topers of them all. They're just a circus! You never saw the beat of the beauties! They come every color you could be naming and every shape you could be thinking up. They drink and drink until if I'm driving them away they stagger as they fly and turn somersaults in the air. If I lave them alone they cling to the grasses, shivering happy-like, and I'm blest, Mother Duncan, if the best of them could be unlocking the front door with a lead pencil, even."

"I never heard of anything sae surprising," said Mrs. Duncan.

"It's a rare sight to watch them, and no one ever made a picture of a thing like that before. I'm for thinking," said Freckles earnestly.

"Na," said Mrs. Duncan. "Ye can be pretty sure there didna. The Bird Woman must have word in some way if ye walk the line and I walk to town and tell her."

Freckles took his lunch and went down to the swamp. He could find no trace of anything, yet he felt a tense nervousness, as if trouble might be brooding. He came around to his room and cautiously scanned the entrance before he stepped in. Then he pushed the bushes apart with his right arm and entered, his left hand on the butt of his favorite revolver. Instantly he knew that some one had been there. He could find no trace of a clew to confirm his belief, yet so intimate was he with the spirit of the place that he knew.

He was most sure about the case. Nothing was disturbed, yet it seemed to Freckles that he could see where prying fingers had tried the lock. He stepped back of the case, carefully examining the ground all about it, and close by the tree to which it was nailed he found a deep, fresh footprint in the spongy soil—a long, narrow print, that was never made by the foot of Wessner. The feeling rose that he was being watched.

Growing restive at last under the strain, he plunged boldly into the swamp and searched minutely all about his room, but he could not discover the least thing to give him further cause for alarm. Every rod he traveled he used the caution that sprang from knowledge of danger and the direction from which it would probably come. Several times he thought of sending for McLean, but for his life he could not make up his mind to do it with nothing more tangible than one footprint to justify him.

He waited until he was sure Duncan would be at home, if he were coming for the night, before he went up to supper. The first thing he saw as he crossed the swale was the big bays in the yard.

There had been no one passing that day, and Duncan readily agreed to watch until Freckles rode to town. He told Duncan of the footprint and urged him to watch closely. Duncan said he might rest easy and, filling his pipe and taking a good revolver, went down to the Limberlost.

Freckles made himself clean and neat and raced for town, but it was night and the stars were shining before he reached the home of the Bird Woman. As he neared the steps he saw that the place was swarming with young people, and the angel, with an excuse to a group that surrounded her, came scurrying up to him.

"Oh, Freckles!" she cried. "So you could get off? We were so afraid you could not. I'm as glad as I can be."

"I don't understand," said Freckles. "Were you expecting me?"

"Why, of course," exclaimed the angel. "Haven't you come to my party? Didn't you get my invitation? I sent you one."

"By mail?" asked Freckles.

"Yes," said the angel. "I had to help with the preparations, and I couldn't find time to drive out. But I wrote you a letter and told you that the Bird Woman was giving a party for me and we wanted you to come sure. I told them at the office to put it with Mr. Duncan's mail."

"Then that's likely where it is at present," said [illegible] Duncan only comes to town once a week and at times not that. He's home tonight for the first in a week. He's watching an hour for me until I was coming to the Bird Woman with a bit of work I thought she'd be caring to hear about. Is she where I can see her?"

The angel's face clouded.

"What a disappointment!" she cried. "I did so want all my friends to know you. Can't you stay anyway?"

Freckles glanced from his wading boots to the patent leathers of some of the angel's friends near by and smiled whimsically, but there was no danger of his ever misjudging her again.

"You know I cannot, angel," he said. "I am afraid I do," she said ruefully. "It's too bad. But there is a thing I want for you more than to come to my party, and that is to hang on and win with your work. I think of you every day, and I just pray that those thieves are not getting ahead of you. Oh, Freckles, do watch closely."

MONEY IN UNITED STATES

Statistics Show We Ought Each to Have the Sum of $34.61

Washington, Feb. 6.—An equal division of all the money in the United States would result in each man, woman and child possessing $34.61. That amount is the per capita circulation, according to the calculation of the treasury department, which estimates that the population of the country has grown from 91,972,266, as determined by the census of 1910, to 94,958,000 Feb. 1, 1912.

The stock of money in America is fast climbing up into the billions. Feb. 1 there was $3,624,572,121 in the United States. Of this $338,302,481 represents the assets of the government and $3,286,269,640 was in circulation. Thirty-three years ago the entire amount in circulation in this country was $816,266,721.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

THE COLLAPSE OF LA FOLLETTE

Wisconsin Senator Decides to Seek Health Abroad

A TWO MONTHS' VACATION

Declines to Consider His Presidential Campaign Closed and Intends to Re-enter Political Arena Before Chicago Convention—Temporary Withdrawal May Be More Important In Senate Than In National Politics

Washington, Feb. 6.—Senator La Follette of Wisconsin, progressive Republican candidate for president in opposition to William H. Taft, is expected to start on a trip abroad of at least two months, because of nervous collapse.

At progressive headquarters it is stated that the senator's breakdown, due to overwork, is complete and that his friends will insist that he go away and make no attempt whatever to give his attention to public affairs.

The senator has declined to regard his presidential campaign as closed and no doubt hopes and intends to re-enter the senate and political field before the Chicago convention, but his friends advise him that it will be time enough to think of the future when he is restored to health.

The effect of La Follette's temporary withdrawal bids fair to be more important in the senate than in the field of national politics. Its first result will be to kill any chance of adoption of the Newlands resolution to enlarge the committee on finance by one progressive Republican and one Democrat ever had. A recent canvass of the senate has demonstrated that even with La Follette in his seat the Newlands resolution stood slight chance of passing.

As the time of election draws near the senate insurgents are dividing into two factions, one led by La Follette and consisting chiefly of himself, and the other composed of men like Cummins, Borah and Dixon, who, while opposing the Taft administration and some of its policies, yet are fearful of political results to themselves if they go too far in antagonizing the Republican party as such.

The result of the election in the Seventh Kansas district, in which the late E. H. Madison was succeeded by a Democrat, was a revelation to some of the progressives in indicating that while no doubt "regular" Republicans could be defeated for nomination or election in some places, progressives could not be sent to congress in their places.

THE STUDY OF BREADMAKING

Second Demonstration Lecture by Mrs. Janet M. Hill

NEXT LECTURE FEB. 12

Thes econd of the series of five demonstration lectures under the auspices of and for the benefit of Wollaston Kindergarten was given Monday afternoon in Brasee hall, Wollaston and was well attended many who had bought a single ticket purchased a ticket for the full course after the lecture.

Mrs. Janet McKenzie Hill was introduced by Mrs. Carroll E. Bates. Mrs. Hill said it gave her pleasure to see so many familiar faces in her audience and announced that her lecture was on bread, rolls and fancy yeast mixtures. Bread she said was the most important article of food adopted by mankind. She gave a brief sketch and history of bread making as done hundreds of years ago. Many processes have been employed in making and baking and as a result from the first flat cake baked on a heated stone before an open fire, has come the perfect loaf. The study of bread making deserves more attention than it receives and should be done by the mother of the house. Mrs. Hill explained that yeast is a microscopic plant of fungus growth and is the lowest form of vegetable life, by budding and division the germs multiply very rapidly under favorable conditions and produce fermentation and she told of the chemical changes which must take place and the temperature and time etc., for the raising of bread. She spoke of the different kinds of flour the proportion of liquid and flour, showed the manner of mixing, the amount of salt, and sugar should be used just enough to restore the natural sweetness which the flour loses in fermentation, she showed the kneading process and shaping of two loaves to a pan, and how the time of baking should be divided into quarters etc, and it was a good loaf of bread which came from the oven. Mrs. Hill made a Swedish tea ring, in which she put sultana raisins and blanched almonds cut in pieces, after rolling to form a ring she carefully fastened the ends securely and concealed the joining, cutting with scissors through the ring to the centre about two inches apart to show layers of fruit, it was then brushed with beaten yolk of egg and baked a beautiful brown. The "Lady finger rolls" were of uniform size well shaped. "Baba" a hot desert of Polish origin was a delicious concoction; it was made and baked in a Turk's head mold and was as light as a feather. A raspberry sauce was poured over it and as it was absorbed more was added and it appealed especially to those looking for a new dessert. The lecture was especially instructive and Mrs. Hill's answering of all questions was much appreciated.

A demonstrator from the Citizen's Gas Light Co., explained and answered questions in regard to the Gas stove in use at these lectures. After the lecture Turtle brand coffee was served. Mrs. Hill's cook books and magazines were on sale as were also all kinds of utensils used in cooking Mrs. Bates announced that the next lecture by Mrs. Hill on Feb. 12 at 2 o'clock would be pastry and cold desserts instead of the Paper bag Cookery which will be demonstrated on Feb. 19

Seek Rest in Churches.

"Quite astonishing is the number of male and female derelicts who float into church at this time of the year," observed a veteran New York sexton. "Particularly on stormy days is the attendance big and there is a line already formed before we unlock the doors in the morning. These unfortunate humans seek rest and refuge from the inclement weather. Why, it often happens that I have to awaken these friendless beings from sound slumbers. Not content with sleeping while in attitude of prayer, they frequently stretch themselves full length on rear pews, and I get my cue from the well-developed snores."

Happy Family.

Mrs. Scrappington (in the midst of her reading)—This recall of judges that the newspapers are making so much stew about nowadays—

Mr. Scrappington—Well, what of it?

Mrs. Scrappington—What is needed a great deal worse is the recall of husbands!—Puck.

SQUIRRELS OR TREES?

SERIOUS PROBLEM CONFRONTS EXPERTS IN FORESTRY.

Little Animals Cause Serious Trouble Wherever Forest Service Has Tried to Reforest Cut-over or Burned Areas.

Whether we have squirrels or forests in the United States is a question that is now presenting itself urgently to the department of agriculture. Dr. H. H. Henshaw, chief of the biological survey, has just returned to Washington after a tour of the west, where the forest service is worried over this problem.

The squirrels that are forcing themselves into the balance against the trees are the gray squirrels of the west and the Pacific coast. There has been an immense amount of trouble wherever the forest service has tried to reforest either cut-over or burned areas from the small rodents that ate the seeds before they sprouted. The gophers, field mice and ground squirrels have been the worst offenders, and it has been found necessary to exterminate these little pests over large areas before reforesting was at all successful.

This has been done in some cases with the aid of the biological survey, and in cases where from 75 to 80 per cent. of the seed were formerly eaten within 36 hours after planting, it has been found possible to kill off the small ground animals and get a good stand of new timber. In fact, in the Cochapaw forest of Colorado it is probable that the stand of young trees will have to be thinned out to give room the trees ought to have.

But now comes the gray squirrel and presents a new problem to the forester. In most of the reforesting areas the seed of the yellow pine is the most desirable seed to be planted. The gray squirrels, it is found, not only eat the seed that are planted, but if the seed crop is at all light they eat the seed before the foresters can collect them for planting. The rangers have tried the experiment of watching the squirrels and find they frequently can locate the hoards of the little red squirrel, getting as much as a bushel of seed sometimes from a single granary. But the gray squirrel does not hoard the seed. He either eats as he goes or else buries scattered seed so it is useless to look for them.

The biological survey does not want to exterminate the squirrels, and does not intend to poison them, at first at any rate, but will send out hunters to kill them off by shooting in the worst infested regions to see whether they can be held in check till the new trees get a start.

Doctor Henshaw said he made a visit to the national bison range, where 20,000 acres have been fenced on the Flathead Indian reservation, and found the herd of bison installed there doing well and taking kindly to their new surroundings. The Flathead Indians have several thousand acres of land they want to irrigate, and they cannot readily get water to do it without running an irrigation ditch across the bison park. They are willing to do the work of ditch digging themselves or pay the department of agriculture for having it done, but the department does not want to risk this invasion of the bison territory, and the method by which the question shall be settled has not yet been worked out.

Golden Gate Fogs.

The fogs of the Pacific, and especially those on the coast of California and Washington, present some characteristic features of their own. They are low lying, dense and of frequent and regular occurrence, and have been the cause directly and indirectly of a large percentage of marine disasters in the vicinity of San Francisco. Owing to the general movement of the air from the sea toward the land, and the climate of the great interior valley, fog is frequent and well marked. In summer the afternoon sea fog varies in depth from 100 to 1,700 feet, but it rarely reaches far inland.

On some afternoons the velocity of the wind at San Francisco rises with almost clocklike regularity to about twenty-two miles an hour, and a solid wall of fog, averaging 1,500 feet in height, comes through the Golden Gate, causing a fall in temperature to about that of the sea—namely, 55 degrees Fahrenheit.

The upper level of the fog can be plainly seen from the hills in the vicinity. Above the fog level the air is cloudless, and the afternoon temperature ranges from 80 degrees Fahrenheit to 90 degrees Fahrenheit.

Chance for Profit.

Considering the accommodations the young doctor thought the rental asked for the office exorbitant. He enumerated the drawbacks: no sunshine, limited space, stuffy elevator, threadbare and insufficient furniture. The agent listened in tolerant silence, then he turned and looked out of the window at the frenzied crowds dodging to protect life and limb from the onslaughts of trucks and four different car lines that crossed at that corner.

"Yes, sir," he said, "I admit all that, but just look at the opportunity for accidents."

Problem in Natural History.

"Evolution tells us," said the scientist, "that the ear is modified breathing apparatus of the fish."

"Don't believe it," replied the superficial person. "It's utterly impractical. How could the fish manage to snore without waking himself up?"

SPORTING "DOPE"

By B. A.

Don't Knock, Just Boost.—B. A.

Various reports have been spread broadcast of late, and great publicity has been given by the Boston papers concerning the disruption of the Greater Boston Basketball League, which, it has been maintained, seemed apparent at any moment. It has been claimed that the failure of certain managers of teams connected with the league, to send in the $10 required in case of forfeitures has led to this latest rumor, but the interview held last Saturday between Manager Flynn of the Quincy A. A. and President Riley of the A. A. A. U. seems to puncture and dispel all reports of such a nature.

It must be admitted that things have not been going among the different managers as smoothly as they should, yet this has been invariably the fault of one or two who have not been satisfied with the showing of their respective teams, and who have become disgruntled owing to the fact that they could not run the league according to their own choosing. In the interview above mentioned, it was stated by the head of the amateur association that the league would continue and that no petty adversity would be tolerated from any manager, but that if the same manager persisted in trying to disrupt the league, he would be allowed the privilege of withdrawing his team from the league Heretofore the great dissatisfaction tending towards the disbandment of the league, has existed between Chairman Murphy and Secretary Magee.

Dr. Burnett is the latest to threaten disbandment. He has been constantly finding fault with matters that have come up from time to time, but I daresay that if the Cunningham Gym team were in the leading place in the league, there would not be forthcoming any complaints of a disparaging nature from the Milton quarters. The Milton team is not a heavy contender for the title and consequently it would be just as well to have it drop out of the league. If adverse criticism is to be continually cast forth, it would be better for the league also that those teams that find fault should be dropped from enrollment.

All matters were settled Monday evening and there is no fear, judging from the sentiments of the majority of managers, but what the league will continue to exist and the schedule of games be played.

Although the management of the Newton High basketball team has been compelled to cancel all home games, the many local admirers of Quincy High will be pleased to learn that the former will invade the gymnasium of the local High school on the afternoon of Washington's Birthday. Newton and Quincy are the two foremost contenders for the championship honors of the state and to date are the only teams that have a clean record of victories. Even in this respect Quincy High is a shade the better, for the Granite City lads have played more games than Newton High and consequently have a better claim to the championship. At any rate the game will be a warm one and there is sure to be a large attendance on hand for the event.

The local players will contest outside of Quincy this week for the first time this season. Reading High, which has already been defeated, will be encountered at Reading, also Franklin High and Weymouth High. Franklin High will be played Tuesday evening at Franklin, conclusions will be tried with Reading High on Thursday and Weymouth High will be encountered on Friday. Thus it can be seen that a strenuous week is before the local boys. Little difficulty should be experienced in disposing of Franklin High and Weymouth High, while Captain Chapman and his team mates will have to exert themselves to their utmost to beat Reading—that is assuming that the latter combination exhibits the same form that was noticeable on its appearance on the local court.

In Miss Frances Curtin, who has been forced to quit basketball, owing to parental objections, the Quincy Gym Girls have lost a most valuable player and one whose place cannot be easily filled. She has been one of the mainstays of the local girls' contingency and has accredited herself in grand style in every game. It is to be regretted that she will not be able to aid the local team in its endeavor to bring home laurels to this city.

On the programme of the meet under the auspices of the Italian-American A. C. which will be held in the Coliseum, Feb. 22, will be three open events, one closed and a relay race, the open events being a 30-yard dash, 600-yard run and 1000-yard run, the closed event being a two-mile run with entries limited to Italians registered in the A. A. U.

The relay race will be a two-man affair, wtih teams from the North Dorchester A. A., Brookline Gym. A. A., Italian-American A. A. and Lynn Y. M. C. A. entered to run a 10,000 yard distance. Frank Bruce of the Italian-American A. C. will receive entries up to and including Feb. 1 9, at 61 Canal street, Quincy.

In addition Clarence DeMar, the marathon record holder, will compete in an exhibition race.

James McGill was fined $10 for drunkenness at Braintree.

Three Curious Wills.

Becoming a woman hater because as he said, his wife deserted him after inducing him to assign half his property to her, an Evansville (Ind.) man stipulated in his will that none but men should attend his funeral.

By the will of an Upper Sandusky Ohio, man the income of $15,000 will be used for the benefit of church and university work. He provides for a fund to maintain preaching services each Sunday and Sunday school as well. The testator requested that a copy of a portion of his will be printed in large letters and hung in the church.

After directing that her body be cremated and the ashes scattered around the rose bushes in her garden a Quakeress of Moorestown provides by her will that $5,000 shall be held in trust, the income of which shall be paid annually to the National Woman's Suffrage association until such time as women shall have the right to vote at all elections in all the states. At that time the principal of the trust fund is to be paid to a niece of the testatrix.—Case and Comment

ARRANGEMENTS FOR ELKS' BALL

Many Unique Features Planned Will be Grand Event

COMMITTEES

The general committee in charge of the arrangements for the Elks' ball to be held in Music hall, on the 16th have reported that all details have been attended to, and that the ball promises to be the best ever given by the organization. This committee is headed by James W. Sweeney, as general chairman, and has been at work for the past two months.

Special attention has been paid to decorations, lunch, music. etc. As usual, the decorative effects in the hall, will receive special attention, while the various novelties are to be kept as a surprise, it is safe to say that they will be the best ever seen in this city. The work will be done by the Atlantic Decorating Co. which has done this work for large affairs in Mechanics' hall, Boston, such as the Motor Show, the Auto Show, etc. As usual a buffet lunch will be served from 10.30 p. m. until 2 by Caterer Whittemore. Special arrangements have been made to care for the large attendance, to avoid the crowding usually experienced.

The music will be furnished by Wilson's orchestra. This band has been enlarged for the ball and be depended upon to furnish an incentive for the guests to participate in the evening's entertainment. After the ball, special cars will be provided to all points in the vicinity of Quincy, such as East Milton, Braintree, Houghs Neck, Weymouth Landing, Nantasket and Neponset.

The principal officers in charge of the floor will be: Chief Marshal, Robert J. Williams, E. R.; marshals, William R. Thomas, P. E. R.; George A. Jordan, E. L. K.; John W. Sweeney: trustees, John H. Johnson, Edward L. Bean, and George W. Nightingale; chairman committee an arrangements, James W. Sweeney; chairman committee on reception, Hon. Eugene R. Stone; chief of aids, Joseph A. Monahan, Esq.

As the proceeds from this ball are applied to the charity fund of the Lodge, members are making a special effort to dispose of the tickets, and from the enthusiasm already shown in the work a large attendance is anticipated.

MAYOR ASKS FOR HEARING

Wants to be Heard in the Matter of Grade Crossings

WRITES COMMISSION

As has been previously stated in the Ledger it looks as though the special commission on grade crossing elimination would report what is known as the railroad plan. At the time Mayor Stone was president of the Board of Trade he was practically given that information by John L. Bates, chairman of the commission. At that time Mayor Stone asked for a hearing before the final settlement, and was informed that while the public hearings had been concluded he would be given an opportunity to be heard, although it was intimated that it would be of but little use.

The expected hearing however has not materialized and now Mayor Stone is again moving in the matter. Tuesday he sent a letter to Chairman Bates asking that the citizens of Quincy be given a public hearing before the finding was made and if a public hearing was not possible that a hearing be given the Mayor.

Quincy is very much opposed to the railroad plan of elevating the tracks through Quincy and the Mayor intends to use everything in his power to have the tracks depressed. If satisfaction can not be had from the commission it is probable that an appeal from the finding of the commission will be made to the supreme court, or to the legislature for relief. At any event it is not intended that there should be a Chinese wall through the centre of Quincy if it can be helped.

COMPLAINANT HAD REVOLVER

Carmen Gannelli was arrested at 118 Washington street, Tuesday afternoon by Inspector Goodhue on a warrant from Everett, where he was wanted on a statuatory offence. As the officer stood at the patrol box waiting for the wagon, Salbatore Cirino, the complainant in the Everett case, approached and it looked as though there would be trouble as Inspector Goodhue discovered that Cirino had a revolver in his pocket. He was therefore placed under arrest for carrying a revolver without a permit and in court this morning was fined $50.

INSPECTOR IS A BLESSING

Post Office Inspector Jennings at Wollaston Church

SOCIAL HOUR

At the social of the Wollaston Baptist church on Tuesday evening, Post-Office Inspector C. E. Jennings of Quincy spoke on "The pathetic side of a post-office inspector's experience."

"To many who read the accounts of the work done by post-office inspectors," said Mr. Jennings, "it may be a surprise to think of the word pathos in connection with them. But human nature is the same wherever we go."

The original province of a post-office inspector was an instructor and help to the incompetent postmaster. To the honest postmaster the inspector is a blessing and this was the original design of Congress.

With the increase of business however thefts crept in and some became depredation inspectors whose duty it was to track the crime.

The post-office inspector is different from the police in that he deals with a class of representative people to begin with. They are of a high class and have won their position by complying with regulations for an established mental and physical ability.

Mr. Jennings drew many pictures of the pathos and sadness in dealing with such cases as these where the temptation was held out by the public and the tempted one dropped by the wayside.

The police court was brought vividly before those present with the magnificent prisoner ,the swooning wife, the son choking as he told of the goodness of his father in the past.

The speaker brought up the question whether in such cases as this, justice might be best served by a maximum sentence, a minimum sentence or by filing the case.

With the modern safeblower, the yegg, stringent measures should be used. Society demands that such men be incarcerated or electrocuted. When there is a human fester in society the law should deal with it severely and all sentiment should be thrown to the winds.

Inspector Jennings told in detail of the perfected organization of the yeggmen and the finesse with which they operate. His description comprised a thorough course in the art of safebreaking from the survey of the prospective job to the manufacturers of nitro glycerine and the blowing of the safe.

The great body of post-office employees are honest and when we think that out of such a vast number just now and then one goes wrong we realize it is a wonderful department.

Nearly every man and woman in the department is proud of the fact that they are a part of Uncle Sam. It is not so much the wage they think of, as the desire to do their duty as they see it.

Following the address, a social hour was enjoyed and refreshments were served under the direction of a committee composed of: Mrs. Charles M. Roach, Mrs. L. M. Talbot, Mrs. C. G. Sheppard Mrs. M. P. Salsman, Mrs. H. H. Hill, Mrs. Sears, Mrs. Eben Hardy, Mrs. William Waring, Miss Laura Jones, Miss Isabel Albee, Mrs. E. B. Neal, Mrs. George E. Thomas, Miss Margery Rideout, Mrs. O. A. Blaisdell.

PARTING WITH FORTY WAYS

Mock Trial by Parishioners of Union Chapel Houghs Neck

JUDGE AND JURY

The Houghs Neck Union Chapel was taxed to overflowing Tuesday evening on the occasion of a mock trial, entitled "The Parting With Forty Ways" presented by a number of the parishioners. The production was originated by Henry W. French and was presented under his direction.

Criticisms of all sorts were handed out in abundance by the various witnesses and the much talked of town of "Seagirt" came in for its full share. From beginning to end the audience was kept in a continual state of mirth and laughter and the affair was pronounced a huge success.

The judge was Rev. W. J. Sayre, minister at the Chapel. Roy Wilcox officiated in the capacity of attorney for the defense, while the side of the government was upheld by Henry W. French. The Court officer was Harry Hudson who was kept busy throughout in an effort to observe quiet in the court. Bertram Hodgkinson was Court Crier.

During the evening, in the course of the procedure on the part of the court, witnesses were asked to sing in order to bring out such evidence as was desired. Those who contributed to this part of the program were Mrs. Frank Catarius, Mrs. Clarence Rose, and Wallace Higgins. The latter took the part of Dr. Tinker, and made a great hit as he sang in conjunction with the Misses Dorothy French, Dorothy Acorn, Ruth and Mary Horn, and Ruth Thorne.

The jury was comprised of women and the great suffrage question was weighed in the balance a number of times throughout the mock trial.

During the evening Mayor Eugene R. Stone, graced the occasion with his presence,as did also a number of ministers.

The long list of witnesses included Florence Brown, Eva Leonard, Vera Leonard, Maude Tibbetts, Alice Stuart, Teresa Slaunwhite, Ruth Thorne, Sadie Thorne, Ruth Horn, Alice Horn, Dorothy Gray, Ethel Urann, Dorothy French, Mrs. George Higgins, Mrs. William Slaunwhite, Ella Acorn, Mrs. Millege Le Cain, Mrs. Clarence Rose, Mrs Frank Catarius, Mrs. Emma Sumner, Mrs. Ellsworth Sweares, Mrs. A. ANNUAL OF UNITY CIRCLE

Election and Pleasing Entertainment Follow Supper

THE TOASTS

The annual meeting of Unity Circle on Tuesday evening was attended by a large number of members and guests and was thoroughly enjoyed from the first moment of business to the last of social intercourse.

At the business meeting beginning at five thirty in the afternoon the devotional service was in charge of Mrs. Albert L. Hayden. The election of officers' reports and the very beautiful service for new members followed the latter conducted by Mrs M. Wheatie Farley, state president and Miss Susan Brokenshire, state treasurer.

The supper at six thirty was arranged to accommodate one hundred and fifty members and guests, the table of each "ten" being presided over by the leader, whose duty it was to see that every one at her table was well served. A blessing was asked by Rev . A. M. Thompson, after which every one did ample justice to the good things provided by Henry Furnald, caterer.

A musical program by the Mazah Trio, assisted by Mrs. Edith Cary Page soprano, and Mr. Edward E. Bullock tenor, interspersed with toasts, followed the supper. Those responding to the toasts were: Mrs. Farley and Mrs. Bokenshire, Greetings from the State; Deacon R. D. Chase, Greetings from Bethany church; Mrs. J. Francis Abele, The Home Helpers; Mrs. Walter E. Blanchard, Honorary Members; Mrs. Arthur W. Ryder, The Past; Mrs. George L. Badger, and Miss Alice Hatch, The Present and Mrs. Charles Sampson, The Future of Unity Circle; Mr Theophilus King, Sons of the King; Greetings were also extended by the Charitable Tens circle and What-So-Eever circle of Wollaston. The unavoidable absence of Mrs. Saville, for many years president of the City Union of King's Daughters was deeply regretted The whole program was presided over with much dignity and graciousness by the leader of Unity Circle, Mrs. William G. Shaw.

The musical program was an especially pleasing part of the evening.

The Mazah Trio brings together three young musicians who are showing unusual talent and artistry. Roscoe R. Ricker violin, Miss Marion Moorhouse cello, and Miss Grace M. Farrington, piano, are musicians of much ability and their ensemble work is in every way commendable. Phrasing, delicacy of touch and expression, and an exquisite intimacy of musical thought are combined in their playing, which is sure to attract attention as they become better known to the general public They were received with enthusiastic applause and may be sure of a warm welcome whenever they appear in Quincy. Edward E. Bullock and Mrs. Edith Cary Page sang delightfully in two duets the blending of their voices, each of an usually beautiful quality giving much pleasure The group of songs rendered by Mr. Bullock, was a delight to the ear and the vocal numbers were all heartily encored.

The rooms were beautifully decorated and the tables artistically arranged by a special committee, under the direction of Mrs. S. I. Wood, Mrs. Frank J. Moore and Mrs. J. Q. Cudworth.

Nine new members were taken into teh circle and officers elected for the coming year are:

Leader—Mrs. Annie Shaw.

ANNUAL BANQUET BOARD OF TRADE

An important meeting of the Board of Trade is scheduled for tonight. The most important matter will be to act on the proposed amendment to the by-laws relative to dues, also to hear report of the committee appointed to consider possible changes in the by-laws. The committee on the annual banquet o fthe Board will also make its report in detail. The banquet this year promises to eclipse any that the Board has held. A good list of speakers has already been secured and the attendance promises to be large.

In accordance with a vote at the last meeting of the Board the initiation fee which has been $5 will go up to $10 as provided by the by-laws, the $5 initiation fee only being temporarily adopted some time ago.

It is understood that there are quite a number of applications for membership which will come up for action tonight. As it is a regular meeting any business will be in order.

—Commenting on the present and prospective troubles growing out of the new 54-hour law, the Hartford Times says: "No good reason existed for the passage of this law, which was a political move on the part of the governor and his friends in the Legislature of 1910. It should have been entitled a law to increase the cost of manufacturing in Massachusetts and to discourage the industries of the state."—Milford Gazette.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

We have no doubt that Mr. Roosevelt would take the office of president rather than see it remain vacant.

J. P. Morgan has been seen at Monte Carlo, and we hope he was not so reckless as to plank down a plunker on the green tables.

The colonel is a grandfather, but there is no sign of a disposition to stop going out evenings and settle down in the chimney corner.

If Col. Harvey will prepare a series of articles on Mount Chimborazo, we feel sure that no presidential candidate will call him down for it.

A Philadelphia woman has beaten an English champion at fencing, and if the latter is not satisfied, she might see if she could have better luck with her tongue.

It will seem rather dull to the Duke of Connaught to go out and do the chores, after consorting for several days with the higher ups of New York.

J. P. Morgan is going to bring home $60,000,000 worth of art treasures. The New York boys would find one of the pyramids as practical, as they could use it for sliding down hill.

Forty American Immortals are appointed by the National Institute of Arts and Letters, and John Franklin Baker, who made two home runs in the world's series for Philadelphia, is still denied just recognition.

Big Bill Edwards was turned out of a New York restaurant because he was not clad in evening dress. It certainly is tough if you must spend $50 for a dress suit before you can be permitted to pay fifteen cents for a piece of pie.

THE DICKENS CENTENARY

The Charles Dickens centenary is drawing forth a wide-spread expression of feeling from America that could hardly be elicited by the memory of any other foreign writer.

The Dickens novels have had a very keen appeal to the American heart because of their unique democracy. Too many of our clever writers of the present day migrate to the cities and are flattered and cajoled by the social higher ups and magnates of wealth, who are merely looking for social lions to grace their dinner tables. They insensibly form the conclusion that only the Four Hundred are living lives worth writing about.

No doubt Dickens encountered the same insidious temptation. But the only prominent place in his gallery of portraits given to the aristocracy, was assigned to "Lord Verisopht," whose name sufficiently described Dickens' opinion of his class.

Mr. Dickens used to say that he had letters from all over the American West, from solitary men in cabins, living in the deepest forest solitudes and the loneliest mountains, telling of the help and comfort that his warm human sympathy had given to them.

Of two of the most enthusiastic Dickens' admirers that we ever knew, one was a Maine fisherman, the other a sheep rancher on the plains of Colorado. The fisherman had a little dog whom he took on all his voyages, and he named him Boz in honor of the novelist, and the salty conversation of the old sea dog was seasoned with Dickens' allusions.

The American enthusiasm for Dickens has been so cordial as to overlook the harsh things he said about us on his first American trip. A characteristic remark was to the effect that American men are given to "lounging listlessly about bar rooms, smoking, spitting, and lolling in hammocks and rocking chairs, and are heavy, dull, and ignorant." But in his later American trip of 1868, Mr. Dickens admitted that American manners had undergone vast improvement.

STEPHEN M. BENNETT.

Funeral services for the late Stephen M. Bennett, who passed away, Friday night, Feb. 2, after an illness covering several months, were held at his late home 114 Newbury avenue, Atlantic on Monday afternoon. Mr. Bennett was nearly seventy years of age and was one of the older settlers of Atlantic, having lived there for the last 39 years. He was a Civil War veteran and highly honored and respected by all who knew him, and leaves a family of two sons, George R. and Stephen E., and one daughter Mrs. Walter P. Hill.

The services were conducted by the Rev. Frank Louis Bristol, pastor of the Congregational church, Riverside, R. I., who for many years has been a warm friend of the family, assisted by comrades from Paul Revere Post No. 88 G. A. R. who gave the commitment service.

The house was filled to overflowing with relatives and friends, and the floral tributes were many, beautiful and varied, and included, standing wreath of roses and pinks, from employees of the Bigelow & Dowse Co., spray of American Beauty roses from the firm of Bigelow & Dowse Co.; wreath of galax and white pinks from the lady employees of the Bigelow & Dowse Co.; six pointed star emblem piece, roses and pinks, from N. E. O. P. Lodge, No. 22 of which Mr. Bennett was a member; wreath of roses from his brother comrades of Paul Revere Post No. 88 G. A. R.; wreath of white and pink roses from Col. A. B. Packard Camp, No. 55 S. of V.; spray of hyacinths from the Women's Relief Corps, Quincy; wreath of roses and pinks "Brother" from Anson F. Bennett, Providence, R. I.; pillow of roses, pinks, and hyacinths "Father" from two sons and daughter; spray of calla lilies from his sister, Mrs. F. B. Clark and family, Rockland; spray of white pinks with ferns from Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bottom, Stonington, Ct.; spray of white and red pinks from Mr. Frank Gardner, Rockland; spray of pinks and tulips from the Ladies' Benevolent Society; spray of white and pink pinks from Mrs. E. Dunkerley and family, Braintree; spray of red and white pinks from Mr. and Mrs. Josiah A. Kendall; spray of pink and white Killarney roses from Dr. and Mrs. F. E. Carroll; spray of pinks from Mr. and Mrs. Frederick W. Zoller; spray of pinks from Miss Mary Macklin, Cambridge: Interment was in the family lot at Mount Wollaston cemetery.

SAYS HIS PLAN HAS MANY INDORSEMENTS

Henry Persists In Urging Probe of Alleged Money Trust

Washington, Feb. 7.—Democrats of the house are preparing for caucus over the method of conducting the proposed "money trust" investigation. Mr. Henry, whose resolution proposing a special committee is opposed by Mr. Underwood and other Democratic leaders, says he has received letters from many people favoring his plan for a special inquiry.

Former Representative Fowler, Republican, of New Jersey, who was chairman of the committee on banks and currency, wrote to the chairman of the committee on rules as follows: "it will be a crime against the American people not to pass your resolution."

Another letter urging the inquiry came from Arthur Stillwell, president of the Kansas City, Mexico and Orient railway, in which he claims to have been a victim of "the inquisition of the money trust."

FIGURES FROM WAR SECRETARY

Produced by Difenderfer to Sustain His Contention

CONTRACTS FOR ARMY SHOES

Washington, Feb. 7.—Representative Difenderfer of Pennsylvania precipitated a sharp two-hour fight in the house when Chairman Henry of the rules committee brought up the Difenderfer resolution authorizing the committee on expenditures in the war department to investigate army shoe contracts.

In stating his reasons for his action Difenderfer reviewed his charges, made last spring, to the effect that certain contractors have been favored and that bribe money has been paid. "I was challenged," he said, "by a gentleman on the other side (Mr. Gardner) to produce my facts. This resolution gives me the opportunity to produce my facts. It has been asserted that I am prejudiced but I have no quarrel with any individual, but I want to know whether the officials of our government are properly conducting the affairs of our country.

"The secretary of war states that this firm of Herman & Co., which Mr. Gardner says he does not know about, in 1903 controlled 33 percent of all shoes furnished the government, in 1904 96 percent, in 1905 100 percent, in 1906 100 percent, in 1907 100 percent, in 1908 64 percent."

Mr. Difenderfer also charged that since this time a combination had been formed which now controls the contract business.

Mr. Gardner then offered an amendment which provided that the committee on military affairs should take up the inquiry. Henry objected to this resolution. Gardner reviewed the controversy in detail and spoke of Difenderfer's efforts to secure a place on a committee where he would have part in the proposed investigation. He said also that Herman & Co. are small manufacturers and that he had no interest in or knowledge of the firm and that Difenderfer is the accuser in the case.

"I have no patience," said Gardner, "with the policy of investigation which pursues with a blare of trumpets a matter like the "Dick to Dick" letter and then lapses into timid silence when the accusers are dumfounded. I hope that this proposed investigation will be conducted on different lines.

"Painful as it must be to certain army officers, and to Mr. Herman and to their families, I hope that it will be pursued to the bitter end."

Mr. Difenderfer asked Gardner whether Herman is now quoted in Bradstreet and Dun as worth $300,000. Gardner replied that it was true, to which Difenderfer responded that it was apparent that Herman had grown in riches.

FIVE DIE OF GAS

Fumes From Broken Main Enter House by Way of Sewer

Philadelphia, Feb. 7.—Five persons were killed, three others were overcome and a score of lives were endangered when gas from a laky main entered homes in Carlton street. The tragedy resulted in wiping out the family of Paul Drazal, the dead persons being his wife, three children and a brother-in-law.

Drazal, who is employed in a bakery, was away from home at the time. The gas company found that a main had broken and that the gas found its way into a sewer and then into the houses.

GREAT BRITAIN INFLAMED

Germany's Sentencing of Englishman as Spy Is Resented

London, Feb. 7.—There is a rising tide of anger throughout England over the sentence to three and a half years' confinement in a fortress passed by the German imperial court at Leipsic upon Bertrand Stewart, a prominent London lawyer, on a charge of espionage.

The grave difference is that international instead of racial passions are now aroused and there is a possibility that the incident will prove to be the last straw in the long accumulating burden of Anglo-German hostility. The fact cannot be overlooked that newspapers representing both of the great political parties are clamoring for the government to act in Stewart's behalf.

The matter will be brought up in the house of commons in a very energetic manner as soon as parliament meets unless something should be done by the government in the meantime.

GOMPERS MAKES DENIAL

Says Utterances Were Not Intended to Aid or Abet Boycott

Washington, Feb. 7.—Samuel Gompers made an unequivocal denial of any intent to disobey the injunction of the supreme court of the District of Columbia when he took the stand in his own defense against the charge of contempt in connection with the Buck Stove and Range company boycott case. His testimony was not completed and he will be a witness again today.

Gompers insisted under oath that the editorials in the American Federationist and the utterances of himself and other officials of organized labor during the campaign of 1908 were not intended to aid or abet the boycott of the company. For these alleged acts, in violation of the court's order, Gompers was sentenced to one year, John Mitchell to nine months and Frank Morrison to six months in the Washington jail.

A HINT OF CRIMINAL PROCEDURE IS MADE

Court Restrains Destruction of Books of Steel Trust

Washington, Feb. 7.—Judge Gray, in the United States court of the third circuit, has issued an injunction restraining the defendants in the government's anti-trust suit against the United States Steel corporation from destroying books and papers desired by the government.

The injunction was issued on a petition of the department of justice, which alleges that several thousand papers and documents, which were used in the government's criminal prosecution of the "wire pool" last fall, have been destroyed.

The injunction, which is a temporary one, is to forbid the destruction of any more papers which the government may desire in the anti-trust suit.

One portion of the government's petition seems to be susceptible of the interpretation that criminal indictments and prosecutions of certain officers of the steel corporation and its subsidiaries are under consideration by the department of justice.

DICKINSON MAY BE FREED

Bomb Which Killed Mrs. Taylor Found to Have Been Sent by Mail

New York, Feb. 7.—The mystery surrounding the murder of Helen Taylor, who was killed by the explosion of a bomb in her apartments last Saturday night, grew deeper last night with the disclosure that the package containing the infernal machine apparently was sent by mail instead of having been delivered by messenger, as had been supposed.

The police and Coroner Feinberg both admit that their case against Charles M. Dickinson, who was with the woman when the explosion took place, has many weak points. It is intimated that unless more definite evidence comes to light Dickinson will be discharged.

LA FOLLETTE WON'T QUIT

His Announcement Is Followed by Desertion of McCormick

Washington, Feb. 7.—Senator La Follette of Wisconsin announced, through his campaign manager, that he would not withdraw from the race for the Republican nomination for president.

Following his declaration one of his most ardent supporters, President McCormick of the Illinois Progressive Republican league, issued a call to the Illinois progressives to desert the La Follette standard and to work for a solid Roosevelt delegation from Illinois in the Chicago convention. The two statements created a flurry in progressive political circles.

QUINCY WOMEN'S CLUB.

Members of the Quincy Women's club are purchasing so many guest tickets for the annual dramatics at Quincy Music hall on Tuesday afternoon that it looks like a crowded house.

Mrs. Edward B. Marsh of the Program committee is general manager of the play. Mrs. Bickford, stage manager and Mrs. Gurney the Coach.

The play chosen is "The Honeymoon" by John Tobin. It was written in 1770 and is rightly considered one of the most brilliant of the old English comedies. The part of Juliana has always been a favorite and has had many representatives in this country. Among them, as some of our older theatre-goers will remember, was Miss Fannie Morant, who gained great applause, both here and in England for her spirited enactment of this character. Mrs. Gurney was a pupil of Miss Morant's and studied the play with her and is, therefore, conversant with the best stage traditions. An excellent cast has been secured from the club membership and waiting list and it promises to be a very enjoyable afternoon for club members.

Mrs. Walter S. Pinkham and Mrs. Herbert J. Gurney still have the mite boxes open to receive contributions to the endowment fund. Have you contributed?

KEEP WITHIN YOUR INCOME.

Two women were commiserating a friend whose husband had lost his money, whose family had to move into a small house, and whose daughters had to work.

A third woman said: "You might as well save your pity. I met her yesterday and she looked more contented than I have ever seen her. When I began to sympathize with her she replied: 'I feel dreadfully about Tom and it is hard on the girls, but you cannot imagine the relief not to have to keep up appearances any longer.'"

Any one who is struggling to live beyond her means knows what the woman meant. There is nothing so wearing to the nerves, so ruinous to the disposition, so destructive to moral fibre, as trying to keep up appearances.

No one advocates wearing our heart on our sleeve or taking all the world into confidence about our financial mishaps, but even that is less hurtful than the silly struggle to be something one is not.

Americans are too prone to this pretense. Our ingrained love of luxury, our habit of living up to the income, make it all too easy to live beyond our means.

Then begins the struggle. Instead of curtailing expense and simplifying living, false pride steps in, debt, worry and discontent comes close on its trail. The family continues to dress, entertain, amuse itself while the harassed father works to make money.

To what end? It isn't as if the smash could be averted! And what is gained? Who save the silliest of natures is not more content in the small house than in watching the big one go to rack and ruin for lack of money to keep it in repair? What girl is not happier in a simple gown that is paid for than in a creation for which she is being dunned? Who save the utterly improvident or selfish woman fails to worry harder when she struggles to keep up appearances?

The very nature of this struggle makes for discontent. When we face issues and make the best of them we may not love the effort, but we are proud of our bravery and common sense. But let us ape our wealthy friends and the fret of the struggle sours and embitters us.

False pride is at the bottom of keeping up appearances. Economy is dreaded less for itself than for its effect on social position. Suppose one is invited to fewer parties, does she lose her place in the world because she does not pose as wealthy when she is hard up?

Two brothers of a firm got into tight places financially. The family of the one frankly acknowledged it and met it sensibly. The mother dispensed with all but one maid, and the daughters started to earn their clothes One tutored children, the other made cakes and desserts.

The family of the other brother tried to bluff it out. Outwardly they acted as if affairs were as prosperous as ever. The girls were as capable as they were silly. They made their own clothes, but pretended that an expensive dressmaker and milliner turned them out. The same number of servants were retained, but the family stinted themselves in food to pay their wages.

What was the result? The one brother helped by his family had courage to make a new start, while the other brother, harassed by growing debts, lost heart and died. The girls who did not keep up appearances lost nothing in popularity. Their friends admired their pluck and showed them so. The other girls lost in looks and spirits, and when the final crash came with their father's death, they had lost the respect of those who would gladly have helped them earlier.

It is foolish for any girl to feel she will lose caste by work. She may not have time for frivolities, but there will be pleasure a-plenty if she does not let the necessity to earn her living make her a sensitive recluse.

Let any woman who is engaged in fruitless effort to keep up appearances change her ways. The first step may be hard, especially if she be self-conscious and given to inflated notions of her own importance, but the after peace of mind is repaying. The woman or girl who faces life as it is and seeks to make the best of it loses no influence that counts; she gains in the respect of every friend.

LET THE CHILDREN WORK.

We talk sadly of the higher cost of living, but I wonder if we ever stop to think that this higher cost has been brought about by ourselves, and that we can today control it, and by what seem very small matters, says the editor of the Ladies Home Journal. For example the parents and grandparents of the present generation of youth were educated by doing the chores. This was commonly a matter not only of discipline, but of necessity as well. The chores had to be done, and the boys and girls had to do them. There were snow to be shoveled, wood to be split, fires to be made; there were rooms to be swept, clothes to be mended, meals to be prepared and served. The "hired man" had duties of his own, and the "hired girl" was busy. The young folks had to help out. They had a definite share of the domestic responsibilities.

The chores educated the children. They taught them habits of puntuality, of thoroughness and of perseverance. They made them think. They were an apprenticeship in the world's work. In the colonial days, when every gentleman could harness a horse, and every lady could make bread, the boys and girls matured early. We celebrate, for example, the birthday of George Washington, and teach our youth what a great man he was. But do we realize that Washington was already a man, doing serious work and giving orders, at an age when our sons are still schoolboys? The chores took the children out of the dependent class and made them partners in the domestic business—co-operative, self-reliant. Often the children hated them. So much the better! They thus learned one of life's greatest lessons: the lesson of doing what we don't like to do.

Then we changed the old conditions, and upon this change hang two of the ills that we complain so much about: the cost of living and the irresponsibility of children. The cost of living is increased by the employment of persons to do the work for which the children were formerly responsible. Of course those who are comfortably fixed in this world's goods are under decided difficulties in this matter. In the case of the children the chores would be an artificial imposition. The boys know that it is not necessary for them to stoke the furnace, and the girls know that it is not necessary for them to make the beds. But, after all, the well-to-do are in the minority. The rest of us may find it well worth while to dispense with some of our present domestic service and let the children do the chores.

Rabbi Gives a Hint of the Real Duties of Philanthropists

Kansas City, Feb. 7.—When a great mass of people clamor for bread it is idle to hope that they be calmed by reports of the tens of millions of dollars given for the study of Greek, Latin or Hebrew," said Rabbi Kraaskopf of Philadelphia, in an address here.

"In well regulated homes, cake and candy are not served before the staples of life. May we not expect of the philanthropists the wisdom displayed by the average housekeeper?

"Some day the philanthropists will recognize that there are other and nearer duties than endowing universities or founding libraries or other kindred institutions."

SIX MEN SERIOUSLY HURT

Gas From Metal Causes Great Explosion in Pittsfield Foundry

Pittsfeld, Mass., Feb. 7.—Six men were seriously injured in a terrific gas explosion which occurred last night, doing $30,000 damage in the foundry of the General Electric company in this city.

Gas, formed from metal, which was escaping from a leaky cupola, accumulated in the blow room beneath and was ignited. This room was air tight, and the gas in finding a vent blew a hole twenty feet in diameter in the thick concrete floor above.

Edwin Lambert is missing and it is feared he is buried in the debris.

☞The young people of the Universalist church have been rehearsing for many weeks upon the three-act drama, "The Blundering Mr. Brown" which they are to present Thursday evening, and an especially fine entertainment is assured.

SCIENTIFIC MOTHERHOOD.

Oh, deary me. Oh, deary me!
That such a thing should ever be—
That motherhood should come at last
And 'mongst the sciences be classed,
With chemistry, astronomy,
And ge and entom ology!
I'm mighty glad, you may be sure,
My Mother was an amateur.

The scientific mother jogs
Her infant like a thing of cogs;
And cradles now no longer rock,
Lest nervous systems they shall shock.
The child is placed within a sling—
A sort of antiseptic swing—
And not too fast and not too slow,
Fair science sways him to and fro.

The little babe's no longer pressed
Against his untaught mother's breast,
But held at arm's length, so that he
May gather girth expansively;
And when his little tummy's filled
With milk and pepsin thrice distilled,
He goes to dreamland by the rule
On couch of medicated wool.

The mother's kiss is obsolete,
As also is her hug so sweet:
Because that dearest kiss of youth
Holds microbes dangerous, forsooth!
And every show of mother-love,
With eyes lit like the skies above,
Is quite forbidden, lest it serve
To enervate the infant nerve.

No scientific mother cheers
With baby talk the infant ears,
But moulds his character with speech
Such as the icy purists teach;
And lullabies and soothing hand
To send him into slumberland
Cold science treats with sniffs and shrugs,
As merely sentimental drugs.

And when, perchance, the science kid
Hath done some thing that is forbid,
He does not feel the gentle tap
Face down across his mother's lap;
But, shivering with fear and awe,
Is taught the majesty of law—
That justice holds a flaming sword—
Though virtue's still its own reward.

And when the child of science plays,
'Tis all in scientific ways.
He may not pull his daddy's hair,
Or play his grandad is a bear—
A game like that would give, you see,
False notions of zoology:
And fairy tales are all tabooed
By scientific motherhood.

Poor little chap, by science bred,
On rule and regulation fed!
To go through all your baby time
With ne'er a song or nursery rhyme,
And not a bit of natural play
To cheer you on your baby way!
Great Scott! I'm mighty glad, I'm sure
My mother was an amateur!

THANKSGIVING SERVICE

Thousands Rejoice at Safe Return of King George and Queen Mary

London, Feb. 7.—A national thanksgiving service to commemorate the safe return of King George and Queen Mary from India was held in St. Paul's cathedral. Their majesties, with other members of the royal family, drove to St. Paul's through a chilly, damp fog and deep slush. Nevertheless immense crowds stood along the streets and cheered the procession, which consisted of five carriages and an escort of Household cavalry as it passed slowly toward the city.

The archbishops of Canterbury and York, with nineteen bishops and many other clergy, received the king and queen on the steps of the cathedral.

EXPLOITATION OF LANDS

Government Officials Said to Have Been Influenced by Speculators

Washington, Feb. 7.—Another investigation of the department of agriculture, involving orders of Secretary Wilson and Solicitor McCabe, similar in many respects to the recently concluded McCabe-Wiley controversy, but which embraces charges of suppressed reports and influence of land speculators over government officials, is to be instituted by the house committee on expenditures in the agricultural department.

Circumstances relating to exploitation of Florida Everglades lands, millions of acres of which have been sold throughout the country by syndicates, were revealed before the committee yesterday, following the summary dismissal Saturday from the government service by Wilson of C. G. Elliott, chief engineer of the drainage division of the department, and Assistant Engineer Morehouse, and the suspension of F. E. Singleton, an accountant, on a technical charge of transference of public funds.

BRIEFS

Commissioner Tupper is to have a Ford runabout. It is something that the department has long needed.

Mrs. Nathan G. Nickerson entertains the Elliot club this evening at her home, 14 Winthrop avenue, Wollaston.

Pickwick club has a Dickens costume party this evening with Miss Elizabeth Hubbard and Miss Marjorie Fay in charge.

When the grade crossing problem is settled the freight yard at South Quincy will probably be abandoned. Both the Quincy and South Quincy yards are now in charge of W. H. Spencer.

City Square is the stopping place of many sleighing parties and there is scarcely a night but one or more parties stop in the Square for lunch. It has been several years since there has been as good sleighing as at present.

Surveyors have been at work at South Quincy, probably in the interest of the New Haven railroad, and it looks as though there was a plan on foot to extend Pearl street across to Presidents avenue and thence to the depot.

This seems to be a winter of banquets. An unusual number have already been held and there are quite a few scheduled for the near future. These include the Merchants' Association, the Board of Trade, the Ward Four Improvement association and possibly some others.

INDEPENDENCE DECLARATION

Expected From Mexican State on Border of United States

ALL CHIHUAHUA IN REVOLT

Washington Officials Watching Events With Great Interest—United States Prepares For Emergency by Ordering Thirty-Four Thousand Troops to Prepare For Immediate Duty on Border After Long Conference

Washington, Feb. 7.—Another uprising in Mexico is impending, according to official dispatches received here, which cast grave doubts upon the loyalty of General Orozco to President Madero and intimate that in withdrawing from Juarez with the garrison of that place to Chihuahua, Orozco is about to begin a new rebellion and declare the independence of the state of Chihuahua.

Army circles are again agitated and preparations for immediate action are renewed.

The whole state of Chihuahua is now reported to be in revolt against the Madero government. The state assembly is expected to issue a declaration of independence.

Local representatives of the national government are said to be without support and afraid to appeal to the City of Mexico for help, fearing that any attempt on the part of the national government to send loyal troops into Chihuahua to enforce the decree of the Madero government would precipitate bloodshed.

As the state of Chihuahua borders on the state of Texas, its separation from Mexico would be a matter of deep concern to the United States. Officials here are watching developments with great interest.

So complete were the military preparations that nothing remained to be done but to send one message to every department army headquarters in the country to insure the prompt assemblage of a sufficient number of troops on the main border to prepare the United States for any emergency that might arise there.

Thirty-four thousand troops, virtually all the mobile army in the United States, were ordered to prepare for immediate duty on the Mexican border. The order was issued by Major General Wood, after a conference with Secretary of War Stimson.

The action of the war department was taken following the receipt of dispatches from Mexico, over which the secretaries of state and war had a long conference, and in the absence of any reply to the note sent to President Madero by the administration demanding that American lives and property be protected.

OLD LAWSUIT SETTLED

Had Been Pending In Massachusetts Court Forty Years

Boston, Feb. 7.—Justice Braley was informed in the supreme judicial court that a settlement had been reached in the case of Moore vs. Rawson, bringing to an end the oldest case on the docket of that court in Suffolk county. The litigation in the case has covered a period of forty years. It involved the settlement of a partnership account.

Rawson & Co. were manufacturers of boots and shoes and maintained a store in Boston. The bill in equity was brought by Moore on March 14, 1872.

Every person originally connected with the case is dead. The last survivor was the plaintiff, Moore, whose death occurred on July 6, 1911. The settlement of the case involves the payment of about $54,262.

"ANOINTED MAN OF GOD"

Former Shilohite Says He Is True Successor of Sandford

Brunswick, Me., Feb. 7.—An announcement that he is "the anointed man of God to take charge of the Hill-top" at Shiloh as the true successor of Rev. Frank W. Sandford, the former leader, who is in the federal penitentiary at Atlanta for causing the death of one of his followers through neglect, was made by Rev. Arthur Hersee, former Shilohite, who recently arrived from Vancouver, B. C.

He asserted that while at South Vancouver he received "a message from God, condemned with an overthrow," but Hersee did not explain the meaning of the message as worded. He declared that Sandford had been "deceived by the devil and taken captive."

New York, Feb. 7.—Theodore Roosevelt commented on the Slayden "third term" resolution, voted on in congress, with a prolonged laugh. He had no other comment to make upon the resolution, he said.

The former president also declined to discuss reports that the withdrawal of Senator La Follette from active work in his campaign for the presidential nomination would throw much of La Follette's strength to himself. He was sorry to hear of the senator's illness, he said, but beyond that he had no comment to make.

UNION LABOR MEN INVOLVED IN PLOT

Thirty-Two Indictments Are Returned In Dynamite Cases

Indianapolis, Feb. 7.—Union labor officials and agents, said to number between tirty and forty, whom the government holds criminally responsible with the McNamaras and Ortie E. McManigal for perpetrating more than 100 explosions which occurred in cities from Massachusetts to California in the last six years, and in which the wrecking of the Los Angeles Times building was an incident, were indicted yesterday afternoon.

Thirty-two indictments were returned. Capiases for arrests have been issued and all the men indicted are to be taken into custody on a day secretly fixed by the government, but known to be within a week.

March 12 has been set for the arraignment before Federal Judge Anderson in Indianapolis. The papers for the arrests designate the amount of bond which the defendants may give in the federal districts in which they reside for their appearance here. The amounts of the bonds in the individual cases were not made known, but it was said in the aggregate they would total $300,000.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

WHEN MAKING A SOUFFLE.

A SOUFFLE properly made is a delicious dessert. The secret of success is to have the eggs well whisked and to send the souffle to the table as soon as done. If allowed to stand it neither looks nor tastes so well.

Souffles are flavored to suit the taste and are generally named accordingly. Vanilla is the favorite flavoring.

A Plain Souffle.

Rice Souffle.—Take three heaping tablespoonfuls of rice flour, a pint of milk, five eggs, butter the size of a walnut, powdered and sifted sugar to taste, a quarter of a teaspoonful of salt and flavoring. Mix the rice flour with a little of the milk. Then put the remainder of the milk into a saucepan and add the rice and milk together with the butter, salt and enough powdered sugar to sweeten. Stir these ingredients over the fire until they thicken, then take the saucepan off the fire and allow it to cool a little. Take the yolks of the eggs and stir them, after they have been beaten, into the batter in the saucepan. Beat the whites to a firm froth, adding a few drops of flavoring, and mix with the other ingredients. Pour the batter into a souffle dish and bake for half an hour in the oven. Hold a hot shovel or salamander over the souffle. Then sprinkle it with sugar, place the souffle dish inside an ornamental one and send at once to the table.

Some Recipes.

Orange Souffle.—Peal and slice eight oranges, put in layers in a glass dish with sugar between and let stand several hours. Make a soft, rich custard and pour over the oranges. Spread over with a rich meringue.

Cheese Souffle.—Cook together a tablespoonful each of butter and flour, the latter heaping. Pour upon them a cupful of scalding milk and stir until smooth. Set aside until almost cool, then stir the sauce gradually into four eggs, beaten light, and whip in a cupful of grated cheese. Season with salt and cayenne pepper and pour into a deep greased pudding dish. Bake in a steady oven until light and brown and serve at once.

Vanilla Souffle.—Melt an ounce of butter in a saucepan, stir in a tablespoonful of flour and a half pint of milk. Boil until a thick paste is formed. Take off the stove and let cool a little. Stir in an ounce of granulated sugar and a teaspoonful of vanilla flavoring. Then beat in the yolks of three eggs one at a time. Whip the whites of four eggs to a stiff froth and fold them in lightly and quickly. Pour the mixture into a butter mold, which should be about two-thirds filled. Cover with the top or with buttered paper and steam for half an hour.

Woman Her Home, Her Interests.

A Towel Shower.

A towel shower for a recent bride was both practical and acceptable. There were 12 intimate friends, so they each contributed the price of a towel and the hostess purchased one dozen of the same pattern with the large papier-mache letters and cotton for marking.

On the afternoon for the "shower" all came with their thimbles and each girl embroidered a letter on a towel, so when refreshments were served 12 beautiful pieces of linen were placed before the bride.

Just a word as to the wearing qualities of these papier-mache letters, concerning which there seems to be a divided opinion. Personally, I have found them most satisfactory, having used a tablecloth and napkins for nine years that are marked in this manner. If they are closely and carefully worked they will outwear the original material and that is all that is necessary.

The refreshments consisted of lobster salad, hot cheese sandwiches, coffee, olives and salted nuts. A relative, who knew of the shower, sent two guest towels, a pair of bath towels and six wash cloths.

Shut-In Day Amusements.

As soon as a child, girl or boy, is able to handle round-pointed scissors provide a pair, with quantities of colored pictures to cut out. Then, if there is no handy man available, get the nearest carpenter to make a screen or the frame for one; tack cheap paper cambric on the back. Cover the youngster from top to toe with an apron, spread a sheet on the floor, give him a bottle, or better, still, a tube of library paste, (they dearly love to squeeze it), and you happily may go your way rejoicing, knowing that several hours will elapse ere the charm of cutting and the joy of pasting will have been lost.

When the screen is full take it out and replace with a fresh piece of cambric. This amusement gives the child ample scope to exercise its originality, and the enjoyment of not being assisted is keenly appreciated by the little soul. If a box of water color paints is added to the outfit, so much the better. And, by the way, those colors are made harmless for these embryo artists, so if the brush should find its way into the little mouth no serious consequences follow.

A Utility Shower.

A dozen girls planned this shower for a recent bride. It was rather unusual and very enjoyable. The hostess asked them all to meet at her house informally at 2 o'clock asking the bride-elect to be there at three. In this way she had time to explain her scheme which was as follows: She has materials to make these articles: a dust cap, three holders, a broom bag, ironing holder, laundry bag, a kitchen apron, clothespin bag, roller towel, several dusters of cheese cloth and a half dozen dish cloths. The entire cost was divided among the 12 and the materials wrapped in tissue paper and hidden throughout the rooms.

Upon the arrival of the honored guest they chatted awhile and then the hostess announced that a little fairy had confided to her that there were packages of value secretly hidsoft tones of the piano the same as for "Magic music." When all the packages had been discovered the girls all set to work upon which ever article they selected. They pronounced this a "utility" shower and it certainly was practical, for the guest of honor said her mind was so in the clouds that the articles presented had never been thought of. Delicious tea was brewed by the hostess, accompanied by thin bread and butter sandwiches filled with orange marmalade, bon-bons, and small cakes. The guests assisted in serving. The hostess was a bride of six months, so she knew from experience what a new housekeeper would need.

Fruit trimming for hats for early fall include tiny white apples, white raspberries and white peaches.

Rhinestone trimmings are by far the most showy and effective as well as beautiful trimming of the season.

Single ornaments of passementerie are attached to linen collars in some cases in place of ordinary ties or bows.

White, cream and fancy serges, comprising black hairline stripes on white grounds, are great favorites of the moment.

The new changeable taffetas come in double width and are most advantageous for cutting. Many exquisite combinations for blouses can be had—a popular one being gold and the new hydrangea blue.

A great favorite is the new material called velour de laine—a mixed suiting, almost like camel's hair. It is particularly effective in a white diagonal stripe and there are variations in tan, light blue and gray.

Why Mrs. Kuick Could Make Pies on Monday.

Anty Drudge—"What! baking on Monday? I should think you'd sooner get your washing done and out of the way."

Mrs. Kuick—"My washing is already done and most dry enough to come in off the line. You see, I use Fels-Naptha soap; that saves about half the time and labor."

Anty Drudge—"Oh! I see! I can't tell YOU anything about Fels-Naptha then."

Do you get your weekly washing off your hands before noon or do you do it the old long-drawn-out back-breaking way?

Try Fels-Naptha next week and you'll surprise your husband with good eating on wash day.

Fels-Naptha changes the color of Monday. Instead of "blue Monday" and yellow clothes, you'll have whiter clothes and a happier washday.

The clothes come out spick, span and snowy white. And you just use cool or lukewarm water.

No parboiling your face and hands over a steaming, sudsy wash tub. This ought to be reason enough for using Fels-Naptha even if you didn't get your washing done in just about half the time.

Yes, you say, but how about the clothes? Will they be full of weak spots and broken threads?

Not a bit of it! The Fels-Naptha attacks the dirt only. Dissolves it—then the water washes it away. Just as simple as A. B. C.

It's just as good for all kinds of household cleaning.

Follow the easy directions on the red and green wrapper. Use any time of the year.

EXTENSION OF GREAT STRIKE

Lawrence Leaders Agree to Invade Another Mill City

"BENEFIT BY PERSECUTION"

Lawrence, Mass., Feb. 7.—In a secret conclave of the leaders of the big mill strike in this city plans were perfected for calling a general strike in the textile centres of New England.

The date on which the first of the strikes is to be called has been determined, and the place which will be the first scene of uprising was settled. The centre to be be attacked will be a surprise. It will not be one of those which has been generally agitated.

It is said that the action in settling this question was precipitated by the refusal of the supreme court at Boston to release Joseph J. Ettor. The leaders of the strike each declare they are expecting arrest and are prepared to be arrested, as Ettor was, but that it would make no difference in the conduct of the strike.

"There are plenty of men to carry on this strike. We benefit by persecution. It is our opponents' method of fighting," said James Thompson last night. He is next to William D. Haywood in the councils of the Industrial Workers of the World.

It was originally planned to make the first drive in the general strike in ten days' time from last Monday. This date has been changed. The new one is being kept secret, but it is hinted it may be the first of next week.

Great indignation was expressed at the large number of meetings yesterday because Ettor was not allowed freedom on bail. Investigators acting for the I. W. W. are watching the movements of members of the Arkwright club.

It was intimated here that there has been a recent meeting of the club, at which the mill owners of New England were represented and decided to stand by each other in holding out against the demands of the strikers.

The strikers' committee decided to demand publication of the report of the congressional committee which investigated the conditions in Lawrence last fall, and which made no open statement of its findings.

To secure this publicity, the Socialist party will assist the I. W. W. It is hoped that this will benefit the strikers' cause by throwing a light upon the economic handicaps with which they have to cope.

It was not known until recently that a congressional committee ever had made an inquiry in Lawrence. The fact of the investigation was discovered recently by A. S. Stodel, who declared that a report had not been made public because it revealed such a horrible state of affairs in the community.

Mr. Stodel told of the withheld report last week at a meeting of the strike committee, and advised some action to secure its publication. According to plans now made by the strikers, a formal request was submitted to congress for copies of the committee's findings. These will be distributed broadcast over the country.

In his speeches yesterday Wilnam D. Haywood attacked President Golden of the American Federation of Labor, who recently visited Lawrence at the request of Mayor Scanlon. Haywood charged that Golden was acting against the interests of the strikers.

The solidarity of the strikers in the face of hunger and want is one of the greatest expressions of the depth of the strike.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

FRECKLES

By Gene Stratton-Porter

COPYRIGHT, 1904, BY DOUBLEDAY, PAGE & CO.

SYNOPSIS.

Freckles, a homeless boy, is hired by Boss McLean to guard the expensive timber in the Limberlost from timber thieves.

Freckles does his work faithfully, makes friends with the birds and yearns to know more about nature. He lives with Mr. and Mrs. Duncan.

He resolves to get books and educate himself. He becomes interested in a huge pair of vultures and calls his bird friends als "chickens."

Some of the trees he is guarding are worth $1,000 each. Freckles' books arrive. He receives a call from Wessner.

Wessner attempts to bribe Freckles to betray his trust, and Freckles whips him. McLean overhears them and witnesses the fight.

Freckles' honesty saves a precious tree. He finds the nest of the vultures and is visited by a beautiful young girl.

She calls Freckles McLean's son. Freckles calls her "the angel" and helps the Bird Woman in taking photographs. McLean promises to adopt Freckles.

Freckles and the angel become very friendly. Assisted by the Bird Woman, they drive Wessner and Black Jack, timber thieves, from the Limberlost.

McLean fears more trouble, but Freckles insists upon being the sole guard of the timber. Freckles calls upon the angel's father.

The angel receives him as her equal, and her father is kind. Mrs. Duncan has exciting adventures in the Limberlost.

She was so lovely a picture as she stood before him, ardent in his cause, that Freckles could not take his eyes from her to notice what her friends were thinking. If she did not mind, why should he? Anyway, if they really were the angel's friends probably they were better accustomed to her ways than he.

"Must I go for the Bird Woman?" she pleaded.

"Indade, you must," answered Freckles firmly.

The angel returned to say that the Bird Woman was telling a story to those inside and she could not come for a short time.

"You won't come in?" she pleaded.

"I must not," said Freckles. "I am not dressed to be among your friends."

"Then," said the angel, "we mustn't go through the house, because it would disturb the story, but I want you to come around the outside way to the conservatory and have some of my birthday lunch and get some cake to take to Mrs. Duncan and the babies."

The night was warm and the angel most beautiful and kind. A sort of triple delirium of spirit, mind and body seized upon Freckles and developed a boldness all unnatural. He slightly parted the heavy curtains that separated the conservatory from the company and looked in. He almost stopped breathing. He had read of things like that, but he had never seen them.

"Do you suppose heaven is any finer than that?" asked Freckles.

The angel burst into a laugh.

"Do you want to be laughing harder than that?" queried Freckles.

"A laugh is always good," said the angel. "A little more avoirdupois won't hurt me. Go ahead."

"Well, then," said Freckles, "it's only that I feel all over as if I belonged in there. I could wear fine clothes and move over those floors and hold me own against the best of them."

"But where does my laugh come in?" demanded the angel as if she had been defrauded.

"And you ask me where the laugh comes in, looking me in the face after that," marveled Freckles.

"I wouldn't be so foolish as to laugh at such a manifest truth as that," said the angel. "Any one that knows you even half as well as I do knows that you are never guilty of a discourtesy and you move with twice the grace of any man here. Why shouldn't you feel as if you belonged where people are graceful and courteous?"

"On me soul," said Freckles, "you are kind to be thinking it. You are doubly kind to be saying it."

The curtains parted, and a woman came toward them. Her silks and laces trailed along the polished floors. The lights gleamed on her neck and arms and flashed from rare jewels. She was smiling brightly and until she spoke Freckles had not fully realized that it was his loved Bird Woman.

Noticing his bewilderment, she cried "Why, Freckles, don't you know me in my war clothes?'

"I do in the uniform in which you fight the Limberlost," said Freckles.

The Bird Woman broke into a laugh. Then he told her why he had come.

CHAPTER XIV.

CAPTURED BY BLACK JACK.

As they talked the angel was busy packing a box of sandwiches, cake, fruit and flowers. She gave him a last frosty glass, thanked him repeatedly for bringing news of new material and then Freckles went out into the night. He rode for the Limberlost with his eyes on the stars.

The one thing Freckles knew that he could do was to sing. The Duncans heard him coming a mile up the corduroy and could not believe their senses. Freckles unfastened the box from his belt and gave Mrs. Duncan and the children all the eatables it contained, except one big piece of cake that he carried to the sweet loving Duncan. He put the flowers back in the box and set it up among his books. He did not say anything, but they understood it was not to be touched.

Then Freckles started for the swamp. As he rode he sang, and as he sang he worshiped, but the god he tried to glorify was a dim and faraway mystery. The angel was warm flesh and blood.

With the near approach of dawn Freckles tuned his last note. Wearied almost to falling, he turned from the trail into the path leading to the cabin for a few hours' rest.

As Freckles left the trail from the swale near the south entrance four large, muscular men rose up and swiftly and carefully entered the swamp by the wagon road. Two of them carried a big saw, the third coils of rope and wire, and all were heavily armed. They left one man on guard at the entrance. The other three made their way through the darkness and soon were at Freckles' room. He had left the swamp on his wheel from the west trail. They counted on his returning on the wheel and circling the east line before he came there.

A little below the west entrance to Freckles' room Black Jack stepped into the swale and, binding a wire tight about a scrub oak, carried it below the waving grasses, stretched it taut across the trail and fastened it to a tree in the swamp. Then he obliterated all signs of his work and arranged the grass over the wire until it was so completely covered that only minute examination would reveal it. They entered Freckles' room with coarse oaths and jests. In a few moments his specimen case with its precious contents was rolled back into the swamp and the saw was eating into one of the finest trees of the Limberlost.

As soon as Freckles was well down the east line the watch was posted below the room on the west to report his coming. It was but a few moments before the signal came. Then the saw stopped, and the rope was brought out and uncoiled near a sapling. Wessner and Black Jack crowded to the very edge of the swamp a little above the wire and crouched, waiting.

They heard Freckles before they saw him. He came clipping down the line at a good pace, and as he rode he was singing softly:

"Oh, do you love—
Oh, say you love"—

He got no further. The sharply driven wheel struck the tense wire and bounded back. Freckles shot over the handle bar and consted down the trail on his chest. As he struck Black Jack and Wessner were upon him. Wessner clapped an old hat over Freckles' mouth, while Black Jack twisted his arms back of him, and they rushed him into his room. Almost before he realized that anything had happened he was trussed up to a tree and securely gagged.

Then three of the men resumed work on the tree. The other followed the path Freckles had worn to Little Chicken's tree, and presently he reported that the wires were down and two teams with the loading apparatus coming to take out the timber. All the time the saw was slowly eating, eating into the big tree.

Why Bayona Played Badly.

Juan Antonio Bayona played the trombone badly the other night at the performance in a Madrid theater. The soprano was singing and Bayona's discordant notes disturbed her and the audience as well. Disturbed most of all was the conductor of the orchestra. He demanded an explanation and got it.

As Bayona was entering the theater that evening his cigar fell from its holder. In stooping to pick up the cigar his eye fell on a newspaper clipping. He picked that up also, and this is what he read:

A rich Spanish merchant has just died in California, leaving a fortune of $200,000,000. In his will he appoints his brother, Juan Antonio Bayona sole executor. Inquiries made at the consulate only prove that Juan Antonio Bayona lived in Valencia until 1882 and married in Madrid in 1884 where he died in 1901."

Juan A. Bayona, the trombonist, is the son of Juan A. Bayona, who answered the description in the clipping. Hence the agitation that produced the trouble with the trombone.

His Luncheons.

Woodbury Pulsifer, at the Maine society's reunion in New York, praised the sturdy perseverance of Maine's sons.

"Perseverance, pluck, self-denial," said Mr. Pulsifer, "those are the qualities that bring Maine boys success.

"It was a Maine boy in Paris—he is a successful sculptor today—who was sought out in his garret in the Rue Boissonade by a rich friend who wished to invite him to a New Year's luncheon.

"The rich friend, who hadn't yet decided on the hour for the luncheon, said:

"'I don't know whether to set it for 12 o'clock or 1. By the way, old chap, when do you lunch as a rule?'

"'Thursdays,' said the Maine boy.

Safe.

Flubdub—Why have you never married, Singleton?

Singleton—Well, the women have always regarded me as an unfortunate fellow who wasn't bad enough to need reforming or good enough to make a desirable husband.—Life.

No Cash.

"Did you get that old miser to spend much at your charity bazar?"

"Oh, yes; he spent our time."

A Masculine Surmise.

Hudson—How would you explain the inscrutable Mona Lisa smile?

Judson—Some one has told a funny story and the poor woman is smiling in the wrong place.—Harper's Bazar.

CLUB PRIZES ARE PRESENTED

Annual Meeting Wollaston Y. C. New Commodore

CUP WINNERS

At the annual meeting of the Wollaston Yacht club in Wollaston hall on Tuesday evening, following a vote to indefinitely postpone action, it was unanimously voted to reconsider the matter and raise the club dues from eight to ten dollars a year.

The vote followed a lengthy discussion during which the finances of the club came up for a thorough investigation and discussion pro and con.

It is believed that with the added revenue the club can be put on a firm financial footing and the necessary improvements be carried forward.

The officers elected for the season of 1912, were:

Commodore—E. A. Bean.
Vice Commodore—Charles Austin.
Secretary—Arthur N. Potterton.
Treasurer—Carroll E. Bates.
Executive Committee (three years)—C. A. Pinkham.
Executive Committee (2 years)—Charles H. Backus.

The new Commodore is an ardent yachtsman being owner of the Sphinx. He is prominent in Wollaston where he has resided for many years, and is proprieor of the Sphinx hat store of Boston. He succeeds Louis E. Crosscup who has served the club for two seasons.

An interesting event of the evening was the award of the club trophies, presentations being made by Commodore Bean, and each accompanied by a fitting word or story They were as follows:

CLUB CHAMPIONSHIP.

Class A—Eleanor, W. L. Jefferson.
Class C—Elizabeth, Leverett Brown.
Class D—Kitten, W. H. Ellis.
Ocean Race. First prize (Schultz Cup). Eleanor, W. L. Jefferson.
Second Prize (Austin Cup). Louise, Charles Richardson
Third Prize—Thordis. Dr. F. E. Dawes.

It was voted to change the date of the annual meeting to fall on the first Tuesday in November.

Representative William J. Leslie was among those present and in response to a call from the chair said a few words upon the bill he had introduced for dredging the channel to the yacht clubs.

He urged that a joint committee from the Wollaston and Squantum clubs be appointed to work for it. Mr. Leslie spoke of the value of an organized body who know just what they want. Statistics concerning the channel followed.

Commodore Drew of the Squantum Yacht club and William N. Chase both spoke briefly on the merits of the channel.

Vice Commodore Austin, Charles H. Backus and Captain Joseph Fenno all responded briefly in well chosen words.

Frank F. Taylor spoke on the social side of the club. Everything was on good ground and the members were all on a pleasant footing. A vote of thanks to the outgoing officers brought the meeting to a close.

His Need.

The aviator made his prayer
For what he felt his dearth:
He cried aloud, "Oh, give me air!
I do not want the earth!"

Sufficient Reason for Refusal.

Clerk—I'm afraid I can't let you have that drug, sir.

Customer—Why not? Do I look like a man who would kill himself?

Clerk—Well, I wouldn't go so far as to say that, sir; but if I looked like you, I would be tempted.

ADAPTABILITY.

"I thought you intended raising chickens on your place?"

"So I did, but as it is frequently under the water I raise ducks instead."

QUINCY HIGH'S FIRST DEFEAT

Falls a Victim of Franklin High in Fast Game

26 TO 18

With eight consecutive victories to its credit the Quincy High basket ball team journeyed to Franklin Tuesday, with a strong determination to add another scalp to its belt. Fortune was against them however and instead of victory they suffered defeat. There was unbounded enthusiasm in the ranks of the Franklin rooters when the game ended with a score of 26 to 18 in favor of the home team and equally long faces among the Quincy boys.

There was an attendance of upwards of 400 at the game, who included many of the Quincy rooters who cheered and encouraged their favorite but without avail. It was one of the fastest and cleanest games ever played in Franklin. For the first fifteen minutes Quincy High led by a few points but during the last five minutes of the first period Franklin took a brace and the period closed with a score of 9 to 8 in favor of Franklin

This seemed to cause Quincy to lose their grit for during the second period the Quincy boys seemed to be considerably weakened, as though they had spent their full energy in the first period. Fruitless efforts on the part of the rooters were made to rally the Quincy boys but all to no effect and it was not long before Franklin had gained a good lead, and then there seemed to be nothing to it but Franklin.

During the first three minutes of the second period Capt. Fitzgerald boosted his score by caging four goals from the floor. The Fitzgerald brothers scored 18 out of the 26 points made by Franklin but Jim Fitzgerald was so closely covered by Holmes of Quincy that he was unable to get a goal from the floor making his six points on free tries.

For Quincy Trask lead in the scoring making eight out of the 18 points.

Quincy with eight victories to its credit was evidently a little over confident. It had won so many games that it looked as easy to them to take Franklin into camp as it had been with Revere and Newton. Franklin however realized what it was up against and went into the game determined to win. Added to this they were playing on their own floor which of course gave them a little advantage.

—Those who doubt that peace, as well as war, can produce heroes, would do well to review the accounts of many recent conflagrations. The three firemen who made their way along an eaves-trough in Boston, high above the ground and liable to break off under them, while those who were rescued struggled in hysterics of fear, revealed as much courage and self-devotion as any record of battle can show, and that without any of the pomp and circumstance of glorious war. The psychologist who may try to analyze their motives into the effect of discipline, the love of glory, or what not, must do the same with the bravery of the soldier. He reckons ill concerning human nature who leaves out the love of sacrifice as well as of self.—Christian Register.

THE TITLE OF MONSIGNORE

What the Elevation of Fr. Roche to That Office Means

BIT OF HISTORY

It will, doubtless, interest Ledger readers to learn the significance of the title "Monsignore" which belongs by right to the honor of Domestic Prelate which has been conferred upon Right Reverend Ambrose F. Roche, now pastor of St. Patrick's Church, Watertown, but formerly of Quincy.

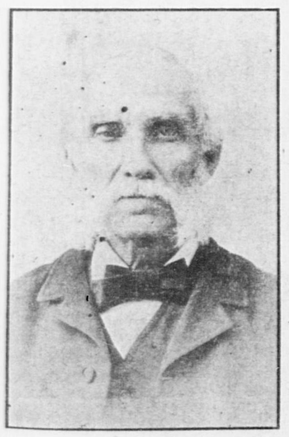

"Monseigneur" is primarily a French title applied to princes, nobles, Marshals of France, Bishops, Archbishops, Cardinals, and to the Dauphin the heir presumptive to the throne It has been in use since early in the 14th century. In 1640 Pope Urban decreed that Cardinals should be addressed "Your Eminence" and from that time, Patriarchs, Archbishops, and Domestic Prelates are correctly addressed as "Monsignore."

The distinction of "Domestic Prelate" is confered exclusively, by the Pope, and those who enjoy this honor belong to the official family and retinue of the Supreme Pontiff. They are entitled to be present in the Pontifical Chapel when the Pope himself celebrates Solemn Mass, and to participate in all public ceremonies purely religious and ecclesiastical, at which the Pope, the Cardinals and the papal retinue assist.

To the ecclesiastic chosen as Domestic Prelate, the Pope sends a special Brief, stamped with his official seal, and signed personally by the Cardinal Secretary of State. An appropriate costume is prescribed which closely resembles that of a Bishop.

OPPOSED TO PLANNING BILL

Cities and Towns Unite to Oppose Proposed Bill

RESOLUTION

Councilmen Ericson, Sandberg, Studley, Beeman, Devaney, Carruthers, Sodergren, Richards and Craig were among those present Wednesday evening at the Exchange club Boston at the dinner given by the representatives of the cities and towns of Metropolitan district, who are opposed to the Metropolitan Plan Commission as proposed in the bill now before the legislature

There were eleven of the 13 cities and 16 of the 25 towns represented.. Selectman Alfred L. Cutting of Weston presided and said that "the resolve that led the bill was rushed through the legislature lacked three essentials, Proper legislation, Public demand and a full hearing and careful consideration."

It seemed to be the general opinion of those present that the plan was a scheme to help Boston and have the cities and towns pay for it. In fact it was nearly a Boston enterprise.

Selectman F. H. Gilson of Wellesley said the Metropolitan Planning Commission might all be appointed from Boston. There was no reason for making the district coincide with the park district, since it was not a question of parks but of commercial Boston The yearly apportionment committee, he thought, though it was promised that the plan would cost nothing, might well cost $40,000.

City Solicitor Harry W. James of Chelsea declared that the State is over-commissioned; that not civic coordination but local self-government of old New England Type and proper definition of jurisdiction is most needed, which the proposed bill does not provide.

"The bill," he said, "does not abolish the jurisdiction of the local governments, but creates a nebulous, broad jurisdiction over all."

He pointed out, too, that all the proposed commissioners were to serve a full five-year term, and that the $5,000,000 for their purposes was to be appropriated on their first application, with out subsequent intervention by the Legislature This, he declared, would lead to autocratic government.

City Solicitor F. W. Kaan of Somerville, speaking individually and not officially pointed out a number of technical defects in the measure

"It seems," hesaid, "as if the bill were written from the standpoint of Boston men, as, for instance, when it says that Boston gains nothing from building up the suburbs, which derive their wealth from Boston's development, in which they pay no share.

"That is all wrong. The taxable property of down-town Boston, Wards 6 and 7, comes just as much from the suburban cities and towns as from the suburban Boston wards, and yet they get virtually nothing."

Mr. Kaan said, however, that while he thought the present bill was not practicable and hoped it would be defeated, he was in favor of the principle of the bill and would like to see more metropolitan unity, a guarantee that the metropolitan boards were working well and that metropolitan development was properly studied out.

Alderman A. W. Blakemore declared that the principal suburban problems are not of planning but of finding the money for plans admittedly meritorious. Many cities and towns, he found, are in debt beyond the danger mark, and others are close to it.

Selectman Samuel C. Bennett of Weston; Abner Morse, chairman of the Board of Selectmen of Canton, and Town Counsel George A. Sweetser of Wellesley also spoke.

The resolutions offered by Capt. J. T. Galiano of Hull, "that the sense of the meeting was that the Metropolitan

FORMS OF GOVERNMENT AND TAXATION OF FOREIGN CITIES

Hon. E. C. Hultman Tells Board of Trade How They Differ from Government of American Cities

Resolutions Passed Complimentary to President Bowles of Fore River. 41 Elected to Membership

A most important meeting of the Board of Trade was held Wednesday evening at their rooms in the Adams building, with President Hearn presiding. The first business to come up was action on the proposed amendment to the bylaws fixing the dues at $10 a year to take effect Jan. 1, 1913, This amendment was adopted without debate.

Mr. King of the special committee to consider and suggest changes in the present bylaws reported a new set which differ little from those now in force. The principal changes are that individuals and not corporations shall be eligible for membership, and that the election of members shall be by voice vote.

Any member in arrears for dues four months, shall be notified and if remaining unpaid for a certain time the member shall be seen by a committee and if the dues still remain unpaid the directors shall have full power to declare the membership forfeited.

The board of directors shall consist of 12 members instead of three as now. Provision is also made for the dropping of a member for non-attendance at meetings of the directors.

The directors shall select the various standing committees of which the president shall be a member ex-officio

Twelve members shall constitute a quorum of the Board instead of 8 as now.

No action could be taken on the bylaws at this meeting but notice will be issued in the call for the next meeting.

A. L. Whitman for the committee on the banquet reported everything progressing favorably. All the speakers desired have accepted but one and it was expected he would be heard from soon. The date was Feb. 27, place Music hall and tickets could be obtained of the secretary and at the stores of C. C. Hearn and T. L. Williams. It will be the biggest and best banquet ever held by the Board.

Application for membership were received from 41 business men of the city and they were elected to membership as follows:

Birnie & Diack, James Joss, Frank A. Tirrell, G. W. Hinkley, William Patterson, C. H. Penniman, H. M. Faxon, H A Jones, A. L. Litchfield, Fred E. Jones, O. M. McKim, C. P. Gould, William Chapman, Scammell & Son, Francis L. Wharton, William Norteman, L. F. R. Langelier, William M. Prim, A. P. J. Pinel, Luther S. Anderson, Coughlin & Donovan, James L. Hamilton, Dennis F. Crowley, A. F. Bromley, James H. Lalley, Albert E. Avery, A. W. Finley, Frank S. Baker, Edward D. Barrett, J. J. McAnarney, John F. Welch, J. W. Pratt, W. H. Doble, L. Grossman & Son, R. F. Claflin, N. S. Huting, W. J. Leslie, Chas. W. Bailey, C. F. Pettengill, E. C. Sargent, C. C. Whittemore.

A rising vote of thanks was extended to the Quincy Real Estate Trust for donating the use of Music hall for the banquet

Hon. E. C. Hultman was then introduced as the delegate of the Board who had accompanied the Boston Chamber of Commerce party on its trip to Europe last summer.

Mr. Hultman said that during the trip he had had an exceptional opportunity to study the forms of government of foreign cities and their method of taxation, as he was closely associated, during the trip with Mayor Speer of Denver, Col., who was a close student of municipal governmentship. He then gave a running report of the methods in vogue. It was exceedingly interesting and a revelation to his hearers. As it is a subject in which the general public will be interested, Mr. Hultman's remarks are given in full:

We visited over twenty of the most progressive cities of Europe. It was my first trip abroad and therefore everything was intensely interesting. It was a very educational trip and we had unusual opportunity for studying all the civic activities and different parts of municipal life which impressed me as being the thing an American could study with the most profit in the older countries. I shall not attempt to go into detail but attempt to explain a few of the general impressions I obtained from my insight into the European method of municipal government. In order to understand this government we must always bear in mind that European cities have greater power and more freedom of action than American cities. Here, the state has control of our municipalities and the municipality can exercise only such powers as the state is willing to grant under special statutes, while in Europe cities can do anything that the law does not specifically prohibit them from doing. I found the voting franchise for municipal elections more or less limited in all the countries visited. In England only property and rate paying citizens can vote for city officials. The long residence required in districts or wards prevents much of the floating population from voting. Restrictions are not so great in other elections and a much larger vote is cast. The officials of Liverpool told me that not over 40 to 50 per cent voted in their municipal elections.

In Belgium every man has one vote. If a man is married, has children and pays taxes he has two votes. If he holds a diploma from a high school he has three votes.

In Austria-Hungary the tax payers paying the highest taxes elect one-third of the city council. The middle class, professional men, tradesmen etc. elect one third, while the mass of small tax payers elect the remaining third.

In Germany only tax payers vote at city elections, and they are divided into three classes, first the richer members who pay one-third of the taxes, choose one-third of the city council, the second class who pay another one-third of the taxes, select another third while the great masses who pay small taxes select the remaining one-third of the council.

These facts are of interest but of perhaps little value in this country where we do not believe in class rule and do have universal suffrage.

TAXATION.

Municipal taxation varies in different countries, and in various cities of the same countries. Notwithstanding the fact that wages are much lower, taxes are higher in European than in American cities. One of the principal sources of revenue is from an income tax which is separate and independent from the income tax which is generally levied by the general government which varies from 2 to 12 per cent on a sliding scale with a higher tax for the larger incomes.

In England the principal source of city revenue is the so-called rates or a tax based on the rental value of property for rents received. It varies from 10 to 50 per cent and I think would average 30 per cent of the rents' receivable from all property. If the property is vacant no rates or taxes are paid. This tax is generally paid by the tenant. If land is vacant it is taxed for what it would bring for pasture. Vacant land near the Crystal Palace in the London suburbs which has a value of about $2500 per acre is taxed at about $1.50 per acre. This is one of the strongest underlying causes for the discontent and almost revolutionary feeling of people of small means today and the day is not far distant when the owners of vacant land in England will pay their proportion of land taxes. In London about 60 per cent of the city's revenue comes from the rates. About 10 per cent from imperial taxes to assist the fire and police department and the balance from licenses, fees and municipal undertakings.

In Germany the income tax is divided between the general government and the cities. The amount varies in different cities. There is comparatively little trouble in collecting this tax in the German cities as the penalties for evasions and false returns are so severe that it is much better to be honest. France has no income tax. I found many interesting forms of taxation. In some places windows and doors are taxed. A private carriage entrance from the street pays a large tax. One servant is taxed at say, $7 per annum but for servants in livery double the amount is charged. Again there is an occupation tax which includes all the activities of both men and women, except daily labor.

Business men not only pay an income tax but also a tax on the amount of business they do. Horses, wagons, automobiles are all taxed and generally at twice the amount, if they are for pleasure instead of business. Every sale or transfer of real estate is taxed at about 3 per cent of its value. Licenses are required for almost every line of business. In some places a music tax is collected while in others 10 per cent is taken by the city on all theatre tickets sold. One of the worst forms of taxation is the tax "oxtroi" on all food products entering cities like Paris and Vienna. It is wrong in principle because it places the burden of taxation upon the poor. It adds about 10 per cent to the cost of living in the cities levying it and is the largest source of revenue for city purposes. It is very unpopular with the people, but the cities must provide some other form of taxation before they can abandon it.

FORM OF CITY GOVERNMENT.

The real power of the city government rests in the city council, which consists of from 50 to 200 members elected by districts. Members serve without pay but are highly honored and respected by the people. They are selected as a mark of honor and no citizen thinks or refusing to serve. The council elects the mayor. In England they usually elect one of their members for a one year term. He has no real powers but that of presiding over the council. In Paris the President of the council is mayor, although there are 20 district mayors whose most important duties are to keep a record of the births and deaths.

In Germany the condition is different. The council elects a mayor who is the real executive officer of the city, and who is paid a liberal salary. He is a man who has made municipal government a study. There is a school for such purposes in Berlin. He starts in a small city and if successful he is called from the smaller to a larger city, and then to a larger one still. It is not unusual for a German city to advertise for a mayor and send committees to other cities, and offer increased salaries to have mayors come to them.

In some cities the mayor is elected for twelve years with a pension for life. Others give a three years' trial and if satisfactory then elect for life. They can retire a mayor from active duty at any time on full pay. The burgomaster of Nurnberg was called to that city about six years ago. He refused to come on a three years' trial unless the city would give him a contract that if he was not wanted more than three years Nurnberg would pay him the same pension for life, that he was entitled to from the city he was leaving. This was done and when the three years were up he was re-elected for life. The mayor selects the heads of the various departments on account of their special fitness. Very often he calls them from other cities. He reports to the city council in much the same way that the manager of a railroad reports to his board of directors. Little or no politics exist or can be traced to the administration side of the German cities.

It seems to me that the lesson that we should learn from the German cities is the necessity for the removal for party politics. We should only nominate men in whom we have con-

TRADITION OF VICTORIAN ERA

Was Revived by William De Morgan, Said Mrs. Gurney

SEVENTH LECTURE

At the home of Mrs. Hazen E. Ricker, Whitney road, club women met Wednesday afternoon for the seventh lesson in modern literature by Mrs. Herbert J. Gurney under the auspices of the Literature committee of the Quincy Women's club,

William DeMorgan revives the best tradition of the Victorian era, said Mrs. Gurney, when a new masterpiece of fiction was read by many thousands. Thackery, Dickens and Trollope wrote spacious books in those days planned along the broad lines, touching, full of humor, life long love and heroic sacrifice.

DeMorgan comes of interesting stock, his father was professor of mathematics at University college; as an author he was master of his subject He wrote "A Budget of Parodoxes" on which Holmes comments so delightfully in "Over the Tea Cups." His wife is an artist and has become distinguished for her paintings. De Morgan was born in London 1834, educated at University college school, but from the first his bent seems to have been toward art rather than scholarship. At twenty he entered the Royal Academy school, studied painting several years, and busied himself with stained glass. even he had not found his life work. It was seven years later that he took up ceramics, a potter he remained till 1904 It is to be wondered whether his popularity as a novelist may not have boomed his tiles and vessels of "Persian blue ware." It remained for him at 64, with ill health and old age upon him, to make a final triumph as a popular novelist. He lives in Chelsea in summer and in the winter in Florence.

"Joseph Vance" ill-written according to all the canons of well-made fiction, the writer disobeys every known rule for writing a book. The supreme test of all fiction after all is characterization. Are the people real, do they live and move before us? He loves character and he has given himself every freedom in creating pleasant people, hence the charm of his young women, Lossie and Janey Pegg and Alice and perhaps above all Sallie. All brave humorous and gay—"Joseph

No other department has succeeded in waking up and finding itself famous as often as the Post Office Department.

EXPLOSION OF GAS

It Blows Out Store Front and Creates Panic at Providence

Providence, Feb. 8.—A gas explosion in the Olneyville Public Market injured seven persons, blew the front out of the store, and created consternation among the occupants of the building.

The explosion was caused by the igniting of escaping illuminating gas. About fifty people were employed in the store, and they were thrown into a panic when the crash came. The fire department extinguished the fire before it had caused much damage.

ASSEMBLY HALL NEEDED

Cranch School Needs Assembly Hall for Meetings

TUESDAY'S MEETING

The meeting held Tuesday evening at the Cranch School was so well attended, that the hall was taxed to overflowing, fully 230 people being present. When one realizes that this school has no regular assembly hall, but that the people of the district are obliged to be seated in the ordinary lower hall, that a program such as was in order Tuesday evening, in which appeared gymnastic drills and plays to illustrate the methods and work of the lecturer, had to be given on a small, wholly inadequate stage, the observer cannot fail to see the grave mistake made in erecting the building without providing a proper association hall.

There is also a vast amount of work involved, in arranging for the evening, at the close of the school session, upon the day set for the meeting. There is the setting up of the sectional platform, the bringing up of chairs from the basement, and later their return. When there is an assembly hall, all this energy and time are saved the busy janitor and the already overworked master.

The meeting was presided over by President Pfaffmann, who announced that Mrs. Clarence Burgin was in charge of the music of the evening. She introduced Miss Ruth Keating, violinist, accompanied by her sister, Miss Teresa Keating. They charmed their audience with finely rendered selections.

President Pfaffmann then presented the speaker of the evening, Dr. J. Gardiner Smith, who gave his excellent presentation of "Physical Education in our Public Schools, What it is and Why."

He likened the body to a motor and the individual to an engineer. Dr. Smith brought out how necessary it was that we should teach the young to become good engineers; capable of taking the best of care of the mechanisim in their charge.

So interested and enthusiastic did his audience become that at the close, when Dr. Smith asked for questions, this request was eagerly complied with, mothers, as well as fathers, getting on their feet.

The friendly discussion did not close until after ten o'clock, late, to be sure; yet all felt that it was time well spent, for much ground had been covered in two hours.

The children of grade one, who took part in the gymnastic drills and plays, included the Misses Dorothy Brown, Edward White, Gertrude Fitz, Doris Johnson, Donald Skinner, Gunhill Ahlstrom, Astley Robertson, Edith R. Baisell and Edward Larson. They were led by their teacher, Miss Elsie Martin.

The following pupils of the seventh and eighth grades also took part: Ethel Sutherland, Isabelle Olsen, Alice Charlesworth, Sidney Stone, Vernon Arbuckle, Maria Schenklberger, Elizabeth Ellwell Effa Holteen, Earl Bell, Ellis Backman and William Everson.

Miss Annie Birnie played for marching. A rising vote of thanks was given the Misses Keatings and Dr. Smith.

The social hour, in charge of Miss Healey, assisted by Mrs. Henry Holden, Mrs. Thomas Little, Mrs. Redfield Allen, and Mrs. William Fleming was then in order. The dainty chocolate cups used at this time were the gift of president George Pfaffmann.

The next meeting, a union meeting for the associations of the Adams and Cranch schools, will take place in the Coddington school assembly hall on the evening of March 13th. The speaker for the occasion will be George I. Aldrich, superintendent of the Brookline public schools, once a master of the Adams school, and later superintendent of the Quincy schools. This will be an open meeting and all interested are extended a cordial invtation to be present.

The music during the reception hour was contributed by William Roche, violinist and Andrew M. Deane, pianist, both graduates of the school who have furnished music at several of the meetings.

SAY TROUBLE IS INEVITABLE

Operators Cannot Grant Demands of Soft Coal Miners

GREAT STRUGGLE IS COMING

Two Hundred and Fifty Thousand Men Expected to Walk Out on First of April—Workmen Insist on Concessions Which Employers Declare to Be Unreasonable—No Chance For Compromise of Differences

Pittsburgh, Feb. 8.—One of the greatest industrial struggles the United States has ever known will be inaugurated April 1, according to members of the Coal Operators' association, when 250,000 miners employed in the soft coal fields of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Pennsylvania are expected to lay down their tools and walk out. Never in the history of mining in this country has such a large number of men walked out on strike at one time.

The operators are preparing for a bitter fight, for, according to their statements, the walkout is inevitable. Coal operators who have returned from a meeting of miners and operators at Indianapolis, where the two bodies failed to reach an agreement on the wage scale for the coming year, one side wanting an advance and the other a reduction, were unanimous in declaring the demands of the miners were such that they could not be met. The miners, they say, were equally positive they would not work unless the demands were met, and there seems no chance for a compromise.

According to local operators the miners at the joint conference in Indianapolis demanded that the "mine-run system," which applies now only to Illinois, be made to apply in every state. The mine-run basis is paying the men for everything sent up in the car—lump, nut, egg and other varieties.

In Ohio, Indiana and Pennsylvania the miners are paid only for coal that screens over certain dimensions. In addition to this, the miners demand a 10-cent increase in pay on every ton and a regulation of the differentials. In Illinois, exclusive of the Danville district, there is a difference of 7 cents a ton on hand-mined coal and machine-mined coal, the machine operators getting the lesser amount.

In the Danville district the machine operators get 10 cents less than the hand or solid mine men, while in the other three states the differentials run from 15 to 20 cents a ton. The miners also demand a shortening in their working day from eight to seven hours and a five-hour day on Saturday. In addition to the 10 cents a ton advance in their own wages, the miners ask a 20 percent increase for all day hands in the mine.

These demands operators say are absolutely beyond reason. They declare they can hardly mine coal at a profit under the present rates, much less grant an advance. As it is said to be impossible for the miners and operators to get together again before the latter part of March the operators are a unit in declaring the strike inevitable.

Operators say that while they have prepared no plans for a fight, it will probably mean a general shutdown. In addition to the walkout of the soft coal men, it is said the hard coal people may strike, though so far this is only conjecture.

The joint conference of the anthracite operators and miners will be held in New York Feb. 27. The miners have already announced they will demand an increase of 20 percent, and the operators are equally firm in saying they will not grant it.

END OF CHINESE WAR

Sun's Suggestion Eagerly Accepted by the Imperialists

Nanking, Feb. 8.—Peace has finally been declared in China and revolutionary and imperialist leaders are united in the belief that there will be no more fighting.

The complete cessation of hostilities was taken upon suggestion of President Sun Yat Sen and the imperialists seized upon the proposition eagerly.

Both the republican and Manchu governments are impoverished and cannot continue the war.

Imperialist troops are being withdrawn from the front.

Milford, Mass., Feb. 8.—By a decree of Judge Lynch in the municipal court here Dereastas J. Pierce, a preacher in the town of Upton, was banished from Upton under penalty of imprisonment.

The decree was issued following charges made against Pierce, who conducted a shoe store in Upton and had charge of a local mission. He is known as the "evangelical preacher." He has a wife and four children in Newfoundland.

Catholic Laity of Boston Tender Him Reception and Banquet

Boston, Feb. 8.—William Cardinal O'Connell at the Hotel Somerset last night was given a reception and banquet by 500 of the most representative laymen of the archdiocese, which attested the eminence of his leadership and the loyalty and devotion of his lay following.

Governor Foss responded to the toast, "The Comonwealth." Mayor Fitzgerald replied to "The City of Boston" and Edward Feeney of Brooklyn brought the greetings of the American Federation of Catholic societies. Joseph H. O'Neil spoke for the Catholic laity. Henry V. Cunningham presided and welcomed the cardinal.

Cardinal O'Connell, in a manner, gave to the laymen an accounting of his five years of stewardship.

Building Boys and Girls

Hillside School consists of a farm of three hundred acres with buildings, in Greenwich, Mass., which for ten years has been devoted by Miss Charlotte V. Drinkwater to the work of developing homeless boys and girls into men and women of the sturdy old New England type.

Miss Drinkwater was for more than thirty years general superintendent of the Boston Young Women's Christian Association, and dealing in that capacity so long with problems of character building has naturally fitted her for the Hillside task, and although now absolutely blind, her hand, heart, and intellect (aided by carefully selected men and women experienced in the art of training children) are still the directing force in promoting the welfare of the boys and girls.

Hillside works from ground principles. There is the tillage of the soil conducted on scientific lines, and the general industries incident to real farm life, such as plowing, planting, hoeing, and haying, the care of horses, cattle, poultry raising, and fruit growing, with all the indoor work of dish washing, bed making, plain cooking, butter making, home sewing, and all accomplishments formerly learned in all farmers' homes.

There was raised on the farm the past year over $1,400 worth of corn, potatoes, etc., besides housing hay and silage enough for their horses, cows, and pigs all winter. This labor, the contact with the soils, the outdoor life, the nearness to nature's heart, make the healthy, well-developed body such as city life does not often produce. And health is often a moral force.

Those who have for the past ten years watched the young lives unfold and develop at Hillside give affirmative testimony that the principles for which Hillside School stands are but nature's laws underlying the development of well-rounded, competent, Christian children. Certainly it is much easier to form character than to reform it.

But, of course, no life is complete without the development of the intellect. So at Hillside there has been established a grade school, in which the pupils are graded at entrance and proceed regularly year by year to the ninth grade. In addition, those considered capable are given a supplementary course of one year, corresponding to the first year of a high school.

The course of manual training at Hillside is really invaluable, great care being taken to see that each pupil is taught the things in which that individual can become proficient. Efficiency always is imperative at Hillside. Each child is helped to determine for himself the best method of accomplishing work in the shortest time, and to recognize the purpose for which each constructed article is adapted: this creates a fine judgment, steadiness of purpose and self-poise, traits of character essential in the unfolding young life.

But perhaps, the greatest emphasis should be laid on the home and spiritual life, the pivot on which the whole Hillside plan rests. The homes at Hillside are arranged as nearly as possible in reproduction of the natural family environment; brothers and sisters are never separated; foster fathers and mothers exercise loving care over each individual child. It is in the home, Miss Drinkwater believes, that the spiritual side of the child life ought to flow into full fruition. The opportunities for heart-to-heart talks, teacher with children, always have great weight in character molding. As manhood and womanhood advance, these influences widen and form a deep stream of beneficence to humanity.

At Hillside watchfulness and eternal vigilance over each young life bend it inevitably in the direction of good; tender, loving, and intelligent discipline search out the evil elements, and crush them with good.

In 1910, Miss Drinkwater, desiring to perpetuate the school, deeded the 300-acre farm with all its buildings, equipment, stock, etc., to the "Hillside School," which was incorporated under Massachusetts laws, and its interests are carefully guarded by a board of business men and women who appreciate the aim and object of its work.

In making a modest appeal to those blessed with this world's goods for funds for the continuance of Hillside, we may state that on economic principles alone schools like Hillside fully deserve financial support, for the tendency of such influences is to deplete prisons and asylums, reduce the number of inmates of state reform schools, make of what otherwise might become idle and discontented men and women, contented and industrious citizens, an honor to their country and to their God.

Mr. Franklin P. Shumway, 373 Washington Street, Boston, president of the school, will be glad to mail any interested person a neat little illustrated booklet giving full information about Hillside and its most interesting work.

King Frederick Suffers From Sudden Attack of Pneumonia

Copenhagen, Feb. 8.—King Frederick, who was suddenly stricken while walking in the palace garden, is seriously ill, but court physicians hold out hope for his recovery. Despite this reassurance fears are felt, owing to the rapid course of the attack.

Although no imminent danger is regarded as attached to King Frederick's illness, which is now said to be pneumonia, his condition is causing general anxiety throughout Denmark. There have been crowds of callers at the palace.

KAISER OPENS REICHSTAG

Social Democratic Representatives Conspicuous by Their Absence

Berlin, Feb. 8.—Emperor William in person opened the thirteenth reichstag which has assembled since the foundation of the German empire.

As is customary, instead of going to the imperial paliament, the emperor called the members to the palace, where he made his speech from the throne in his historic White Hall. No representative of the Social Democratic party, comprising over one-fourth of the membership of the house, put in an appearance.

The emperor was attended by several of the royal princes and surrounded by all the pomp and ceremonial of a medieval pageant. He was preceded by heralds and gray-haired generals bearing the crown and sceptre, the sword of state, the imperial banner and other emblems of empire.

The main note of the speech was the demand for additions to the military and naval forces which are considered necessary in the present international situation.

The emperor referred to the satisfactory state of the imperial finances and to the continuance of the traditional tariff policy of Germany.

Police Discharge Dickinson, Having No Evidence Against Him

New York, Feb. 8.—Charles M. Dickinson, who had been held on a charge of homicide because of the death of Helen Taylor by a bomb last Saturday night, was discharged from custody. The police had no evidence against him.

Last night Dickinson issued a statement through his counsel, which seems to make it certain that another man left the Taylor woman's apartment shortly before the explosion occurred.

STEEL TRUST WORK IN CONVICT CAMPS

Magazine Writer Tells of Investigation In Alabama

Washington, Feb. 8.—Convict labor in the operation of subsidiary companies of the United States Steel corporation, particularly in Alabama, were taken up by the Stanley investigating committee when it resumed its hearings.

Shelby M. Harrison, a magazine writer, testified that he had made an investigation of the conditions. He told of the large number of state and county convicts in the camps in Alabama and of the minor offenses for which some of the men had been convicted and put at work in the mines. Men who walked on the right of way of a railroad, he said, had been arrested for misdemeanor and ordered into convict labor.

The committee inquired very minutely into the way in which the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad company procured convictions. Harrison said the company agreed to take the convicts "old or young, black or white," and work them in the camps.

Harrison said that the warden who flogs convicts in labor camps is employed by the steel company. Failure to do the required tasks was punishable by flogging, solitary confinement and by other methods, he said.

THE EDUCATIONAL FIELD

High School — Public Schools
Woodward Institute — Parochial School

From present indications, several new Parents' and Teachers' associations will soon be formed in this city in addition to those already prospering in the Adams, Cranch, Wollaston and Massachusetts Fields schools. Preliminary meetings have already been arranged at the Coddington and Washington schools and one or two others are being talked of.

It was very fitting that Mayor Stone should allow the Wollaston Parents' and Teachers' Association to make the arrangements for the dedication of the new building in that district as it was mainly through the efforts of the Child Nurture Club which was the predecessor of the present association that the new building was secured.

From all prospects, the new building will be thronged on the evening of Feb. 12 by the many parents and citizens who will be anxious to inspect the new building as well as to hear the speaker of the evening, Mr. Henry T. Bailey, who has a national reputation as a writer and speaker on art and educational subjects. The furniture is all placed in the building, a new Hume grand piano will be delivered this week and the only thing that prevents the use of the building at once is the non-arrival of some slate slabs that are to be used on the stairs. The grounds of course are unleveled so far as grading is concerned but that will be attended to as soon as the spring weather permits.

Last week the Grammar Masters of the city formed an association to meet informally once a month to discuss the educational problems that are peculiar to the work of the elementary schools. This organization is distinct from the Quincy School Masters' Club which also meets monthly at the high school and whose membership is made up of all the men teachers of the city. This club concerns itself more especially with the general problems of education, keeping in touch with the new movements, the experiments that are being tried at practice schools, and the current education of literature.

Yesterday afternoon the masters of all the schools and one delegate from each building met at the Coddington School to consider the advisability of re-organizing the Quincy Teachers' Association which went out of existence some four or five years ago. There are many matters of legislation and desirable school activities in which these town and city organizations can be factors for good and it was thought there was a good field for such an association here in Quincy. The delegates from all the buildings were heartily in favor of the organization and arrangements will be completed in the near future.

Much interest has been taken by the school children in the spelling match that was held last week, between teams representing every grade from the fourth up in every school in the city. Each team was made up of exactly half the class and the words, twenty in number, were selected from the spelling book with which the pupils were familiar. The results in general show a marked improvement over the previous tests given six months ago. The percentages of the winners were higher in every grade and for every place; the percentages of the teams lowest on the list were immensely superior to the similar percentages in the last spelling match. The winning teams and their percentages were as follows. Grade IV. 1st Mass. Field 90 per cent, 2d Washington 87 per cent, 3d Adams 86 per cent. Grade V. Cranch 98 per cent, Adams 92 per cent, John Hancock 91 per cent Grade VI. Adams 95 per cent, Washington 91 per cent, Lincoln 87 per cent. Grade VII. Wollaston 96 per cent, Cranch 93 per cent, Willard 92 per cent. Grade VIII. Hancock 94 per cent, Coddington 91 per cent Cranch 88 per cent. As the words were in each case the most difficult to be selected, the results are distinctly encouraging.

The School Masters' Club holds its next regular meeting at the High school on Wednesday, Feb. 14. The topic of the evening will be a consideration of the amount and cost of retardation in the public schools. Last June a study was made by the Russell Sage Foundation, of the number of over age children in the various grades of 29 typical cities, Quincy among the number. The result of this study shows Quincy as having the lowest percentage of over age children of any of the cities studied, though the cost of retardation in the city is still rather high.

The public does not generally realize how rapidly the school population is increasing in the north end of the city. One room at the Quincy school has 96 pupils at present belonging with two teachers, another has 63. In this building are two assistants who hold classes in the corridors for want of better acommodation. At the Massachusetts Fields school, the master's office and the teachers' room are both utilized for class purposes. It was hoped that the opening of the Montclair school would completely relieve the situation at both buildings but at the present rate of growth, it appears doubtful.

HIGH SCHOOL.

The Committee for the Sophomore-Junior reception of Q. H. S. to be held in the gymnasium, on the evening of Feb. 9th, is as follows: Dorothy Edwards, Marion McLoon, Irene Potterton, Harry Burr, Charles Holmes, Fred Atwood.

Some of the teachers and students of the high school enjoyed a pleasant evening last Thursday, while on a sleighing party

The date of the vaudeville entertainment, to be given at the High School Hall, for the benefit of Athletics, has been changed to March 2.

The rehearsals for the farce, "Miss Oliver's Dollars," have begun.

The teachers of Quincy High School enjoyed a merry sleigh ride, and social on Tuesday evening.

A picture of the entire student body of the High School was recently taken by the photographer of one of the Boston papers, and a framed copy of the picture has been presented to the school.

WOLLASTON SCHOOL.

The people of Wollaston are anxiously looking forward to the dedication of the new school building which is to take place Monday evening, February 12th, at 8 o'clock. The Mayor, Mr. Eugene R. Stone, Chairman of the school committee, Mr. John L. Miller, and Supt. of Schools, Mr. Albert L. Barbour, will speak. The principal address will be given by Mr. Henry T. Bailey, Editor of the School Art Book, subject, "Then and Now." A very large attendance is expected. It is hoped that all will make a careful inspection of the building after the exercises.

The slate treads for the stairs which have been causing a little anxiety arrived this morning and a large force of men is putting them in place.

Several parties from the school have enjoyed the sleighing the past week. The 8th grade is planning a ride this evening.

MASS. FIELDS.

The Parent-Teachers' Association held a very successful meeting last Thursday evening when Mr. Charles H. Johnson delivered his lecture on Historic Quincy. Unfortunately the seating capacity was inadequate, many not being able to find even standing room. Music was furnished by a double quartet.

The petition, for the purchase of the land near the school, bounded by Rawson Road, Hamden Circle and Willett street, for a playground is having the vigorous support of all. It seems to be an ideal location and with the rapid growth of the district a thing very much needed.

The Emery Art school will give an exhibit of over two hundred pictures in the school corridor, March 5th and 6th.

An admission of twenty-five cents will be charged. A food and candy sale will also be held. The net proceeds will be used to purchase pictures. It is hoped that a large sum may be realized.

Forte.

It was the most exciting moment of one of those midnight rehearsals. Try as he would, Donald Brian, the actor, could not induce the orchestra to play sufficiently loud for a smashing finale. Finally in desperation he called out to the orchestra conductor: "Swell! Vicars, Swell!" Whereat the phlegmatic, unruffled English conductor stopped the band, turned smilingly to Mr. Brian and said: "Thank you, sir."

Vance" is thoroughly entertaining, the long hand manuscript of 250,000 words was sent at his wife's solicitation. It was rejected then it was typewritten. The woman in charge told a publisher that her girls were reading and crying over it instead of copying it. After that it was soon between covers. No better story, told for story's sake has been produced in our time, the true humor, pathos, entirely new characters, noble self sacrificing The book is made up of little things, causnal encounters, etc., all young clever amusing natural people.

In "Joseph Vance" while the scene is mostly in and near London in the fifties, there are some telling glimpses of Italy where the author lives much of the time.

The scheme of "Alice—for short" which might paradoxicaly be called a genial ghost and murder story is utterly different, yet his humor and humanity again dominate.

"Somehow Good" contains perhaps the author's freshest and most sympathetic story of young love, proves there is nothing eternal in sin. Throughout its pages the "God be praised, evil has turned to good" of the old Mayor, rings like a triumpet call of hope. The story tells of triumph, of courage and devotion. Throughout he makes you feel how life keeps right on, its humor with its tragedy. The endings of all his novels have so far been happy.

Mrs. Gurney briefly sketched these three books and referred to "It can never happen again" and "An affair of dishonor."

In a few words Mrs. Gurney compared William J. Locke with DeMorgan, sketching "Beloved Vagabond" a delightfuly interesting book, and she read from "Glory of Clementina" one of the best sellers of 1911 in which the good woman is coming to her own.

Mrs. Gurney knows just how to treat her subject in true literary style. It is a high quality of enjoyment to listen to her reading. The next lesson on Feb. 21, at three o'clock will be on John Galsworthy for which Mrs. Maurice P. Spillane of Elm street, corner of Bigelow is to open her home.

BROTHERS KEPT OATHS

Thirty-Five Years Without Speaking a Word to One Another

Kansas City, Feb. 8.—That John and Joseph Hedley, brothers, swore never to speak to each other, and for thirty-five years kept their oaths, was brought out in the federal court through the reading of depositions in a case in which Joseph is suing to recover John's estate.

After a quarrel nearly forty years ago the brothers parted, Joseph going to Pennsylvania. John, a bachelor, made his home with Mrs. Elizabeth Foley in Kansas City, Kan. John died five years ago, leaving, according to Mrs. Foley, a verbal will bequeathing to her his $20,000 estate.

APPLY TO THE CASHIER.

A timid knock, a gruff "Come in!" and the tear stained, new office boy stood before the manager.

"P—please, sir!" he blubbered.

The manager looked up sharply.

"P—please, sir!" he blubbered again.

"Well, well," asked the manager, "what is it?"

"P—please, sir, I upset a p—packet of envelopes," said the office boy, dabbing his streaming eyes with his coat sleeve, "and the c—cashier k—kicked me!"

"Good gracious, my lad!" snapped the manager irritably. "You don't expect me to attend personally to every detail of business, do you?"—Answers.

Further Study of Mars.

Photographing through colored screens is the new method of studying Mars that has been undertaken by Tikhoff at the Pulkova observatory. Four different screens were used—transmitting respectively red, red and orange, orange and yellow, and green—and in the 30-inch equatorial telescope they produced good photographs of very small size. The red and the green filters gave strikingly different results. On the plates that were exposed under the red, the continents are much brighter than the south polar cap, while the seas are very dark and the canals are best seen. The pictures that were taken under the green show the south polar cap as the brightest object, and the seas are grayish. A study of the polar cap has made it appear greenish instead of white. The interesting conclusion has been reached that at the time the photographs were made the cap was ice instead of snow, and this view has been confirmed by experiments on the absorption spectrum of ice and in photographing sand, snow and ice.

Bowing in 1780.

If you bow to anyone passing by, do it in this manner: Raise the right hand to your hat gracefully.

Put your forefinger as far as the crown, and your thumb under the crim, and then raise it from your head gracefully and easily.

Look at the person you bow to, and hold your body gently forward.

Hold your left arm straight down at your side, neither drawing it forward nor backward.

Move the right leg, if the person goes by on the right side, and keep the other firm.

If the person goes by on the left side, move the left leg, and keep the right firm.

Let your body be bowed moderately, not too much.—November Atlantic.

Nature's Washrooms.

On a tiny, rocky isle in Clear Lake, California, there is a perpetual soda fountain, from which gushes better soda water than the chemists can produce. Furthermore, here are natural wash tubs and washing machines and, in some places, even ready-made soap. In the Yellowstone National Park the family wash may be put into a stout bag that may be hung in one of the boiling springs and left there while the owner goes about his business. When taken out the clothes are so clean and white that no rinsing is necessary.

BOARD OF TRADE

fidence and then have an administration of city affairs so that it cannot be told to which political party they belong.

One reason for the high taxes in the European cities is that there is no debt limit and the city is free to borrow money in the same way that an individual borrows in his business so long as his credit is good. Another striking difference in the European cities is that all individual rights must give way to the general good. The city authorities fix the building lines and limits the height of buildings to the width of the street upon which the property faces. When new territory is to be opened up the city does the planning and not the owners. They lay out not only streets and alleys but parks and playgrounds and are compelled by law to give the owners in lots at least two thirds of the land which they put into the district.

The city councils make the tax levy, collect the money while the executive department spend it and are held strictly accountable for it. Some of the reasons that the German cities are better governed than ours are that they honor their officials and in return honest service.

The permanent tenure of office secures trained and efficient officers.

Another interesting, but to me an important idea, is that they have strict libel laws which do not permit newspapers to make false statements about public officials, business men or private citizens. Newspapers there must know what they say about public officials, or others, to be true, or pay the penalty.

They have more power to do things, to experiment and work out a city civilization of their own which has led to a rivalry among mayors as well as among cities.

At the conclusion of his remarks John R Richards asked if the Senator had taken particular notice of the rates charged in foreign countries by gas and electric light companies. He replied that he had not for the reason that he had devoted his study to railroads, in which he was particularly interested

G. B. Bates wanted to know if in his travels he had found the railroad tracks depressed, at grade or raised.

Senator Hultman said in reply that the conditions in foreign countries differed somewhat from America. In America railroads were first extended to undeveloped countries and places were then built. In Europe however, the cities and towns were first built up and then the railroads extended to them. For this reason railroads had splendid road beds and trains ran at very high speed. He had seen no elevated tracks however. At the conclusion of his remarks the speaker was given a rising vote of thanks.

In view of the fact that there were many who desired to become members of the Board it was voted to rescind the vote of the January meeting. relative to the $5 initiation fee, and the time to which this rule should go into effect was extended to March 1.

SECRETARY'S SALARY.

On motion of Mr. King it was voted to appoint a committee of five to consider the question of a salary for the secretary and clerk and report at the next meeting.

RESOLUTIONS.

On motion of John R. Richards a resolution was adopted in favor of having Quincy granite used in the construction of the addition to the Boston Custom House, and our senators and representatives in congress be urged to use their best endeavors in this direction. The resolution was adopted without debate.

J. R. Richards also offered the following resolution which was adopted unanimously: "That we congratulate the City of Quincy on having within its limits such a well equipped business plant as the Fore River Shipbuilding Co., and we desire to express our appreciation of the ability and energy shown by its president, Admiral Bowles, and we desire to compliment him most highly for his success in securing the contract from the United States Government for the six million dollar battleship, as we realize that there will be great financial benefit to Quincy, besides giving it a world-wide reputation."

Representative Leslie was present with a plan of the proposed boulevard from Quincy Shore to Hancock street, for which a bill is now pending in the legislature for $240,000. Representative Leslie said that he had been assured by the engineer that the building of this boulevard would in no way have anything to do with the grade crossing question, as the boulevard came to Hancock street at grade.

Representative Leslie was questioned at length by G. B. Bates and others. He said the plan could be seen at any time at the office of the commissioner.

TELEPHONE RATES.

W. H. Teasdale proposed a resolution relative to telephone rates. The resolution called for a return to the flat rate system for the Metropolitan district with its four and five party lines. This resolution met with some opposition. Some thought the new zone rate better, while others claimed that for them it was a detriment. Afters some discussion it was voted to refer the resolution to the committee on telephones when appointed.

Representative Piper said that there were several bills relative to telephone service before his legislative committee and that he did not desire to be tied down to any particular vote until the question had been investigated by a committee and it was found just what was desired.

COUNTY BOARD.

The matter of becoming affiliated with the Norfolk County Board of Trade association came up and it was voted that the Board of Trade become affiliated with the association and that the president, secretary and Arthur W. Stetson be elected as delegates.

Peter T. Fallon moved that the secretary write to the selectmen of the towns of Randolph and Avon relative to having Willard street accepted and built as a state highway. The motion was adopted without discussion and the meeting adjourned at 11 o'clock.

LEADERS ARE KEEPING MUM

Important Developments Are Near In Lawrence Strike

LONG EXECUTIVE SESSIONS

May Be For Purpose of Perfecting State-Wide Strike or Settling Present Difficulty—Clash Between Regular Union and Industrial Workers Becomes Bitter—Women Seek Converts Among Perchers—Posters Setting Forth Grievances of Operatives to Be Sent All Over the Country—Mill Agents Report Increase In Number of Operatives at Work

Lawrence, Mass., Feb. 8.—Three long executive sessions of the strike committee are expected to result in important action in the textile workers' wage war within the next twenty-four hours.

The unusual secrecy maintained led to a rumor that negotiations were being conducted for a settlement with the mill owners, but this is denied by the Industrial Workers of the World leaders. They admit, however, that they are considering propositions which will affect largely the future plans for conduct of the strike.

It is believed that plans are being perfected for the proposed state-wide strike, although William E. Trautmann and William D. Haywood both refuse to commit themselves in the matter.

"There always is a critical period in a strike," said Trautmann, "and these last few days of quiet betoken such a period. The strike at present is hanging in the balance, and we will know in a short time whether it is to be an early settlement or a long drawn fight."

For the last week it has been the custom to admit the public to strike committee meetings, but everyone not a member was excluded from yesterday's sessions. They lasted until late last night with short intervals for meals. There will be an adjourned meeting today.

It was announced here last night that 500 Greek shoe workers in Manchester, N. H., struck under I. W. W. leadership. This is considered by local members of the organization to be a result of the Lawrence struggle.

That outbreaks similar to those in Lawrence at the beginning of the strike are feared in New Hampshire is indicated by the presence here of Brigadier General Tutherly, adjutant general of the New Hampshire national guards. He is studying the strike situation and the method by which the Massachusetts guardsmen maintain order. Two other officers of his staff arrived today.

The breach is growing wider in the ranks of the operatives, caused by the entrance into the struggle of the American Federation of Labor, which is attempting to settle the strike by urging the so-called skilled workers in the mills to formulate demands affecting their crafts alone.

Condemnation of these methods by I. W. W. leaders is general, and in an address last night before the Polish operatives, Haywood bitterly attacked the Federation and John Golden, president of the textile workers, who he declared intends to sell out the striking operatives if he gets the opportunity.

At present the number of operatives subject to control of the A. F. of L. is small, but they are increasing rapidly. Fourteen meetings of the skilled craftsmen were held yesterday and last night, and tentative wage schedules were drawn up for presentation to the mill operators.

Most of the demands agree with those originally requested by the I. W. W. committee, but in three mills the weavers will ask an increase of 20 percent instead of 15.

At a meeting yesterday afternoon of perchers, called by the Central Labor union, three women operatives attempted to break up the gathering by urging those present to enlist in the Industrial Workers of the World.

All the perchers are men, but the women were admitted to the hall without question. Before the meeting they spoke to each percher as he entered, telling of the advantage of belonging to the I. W. W. When the meeting started they stood up and insisted on being heard. They accused James Menzie, secretary of the Central Labor union, of selling out the members when they were on strike five years ago.

There has been a general cessation of activity among the main body of the strikers. Few meetings have been held and these were only for the purpose of securing a closer organization. Leaders outside the executive committee have been looking after this part of the work.

Hereafter all strikers will be known by the presence in their buttonholes of streamers of white ribbon. This feature was recommended by Haywood.

The strike committee had printed 30,000 posters setting forth the grievances of the operatives, and these will be sent over the entire country. It is planned to issue circulars of this sort several times each week.

Mill agents report an increase in the number of opeatives at work. It is asserted at the Atlantic mill that more than a third of the workers have returned.

Lawrence ministers and priests must keep out of the fight, according to the I. W. W. leaders. A committee called on several pastors and asked that they make no attempt to interfere, either behalf of or against the strikers.

Congress Asked to Act
Berger Demands Wool Probe

Washington, Feb. 8.—An investigation of "the relations of the American Woolen company to the strike of its operatives" at Lawrence, Mass., was called for by Representative Victor L. Berger, the Socialist member of the house, in a resolution which would provide a congressional commission of seven members of the house to make an inquiry.

GIRLS' CLOTHES STOLEN

Athletes Compelled to Hurry Home In Scanty Raiment

Waltham, Mass., Feb. 8.—Treading gingerly through the snow, while the chill winds sported about their lower limbs in care-free abandon, four young women, members of the freshman and sophomore classes of the Waltham high school, wended their hurried way homeward last night minus their skirts.

While the girls were participating in a gymnastic exhibition in the assembly hall of the high school building some person or persons unknown entered their dressing room through a window in the basement and stole their clothes.

In consequence, the young women were forced to make their way home attired in their gymnastic suits, which are quite thin, with large, bulowy bloomers coming to the knees.

BANKER MORSE DUE IN NEW YORK TODAY

His Condition Much Improved as He Leaves Atlanta

Atlanta, Feb. 8.—Although it had been given out that he would not leave until Saturday, Charles W. Morse, whose sentence in the federal penitentiary was recently commuted by President Taft because he was supposed to be dying, left Atlanta yesterday afternoon for New York, where he will arrive today about 3 o'clock.

Morse has been at the Piedmont hotel for several days and his condition has steadily improved so much so that he was able to walk about his room and the hall of the hotel.

For some days Morse has been sitting up in his room at the hotel, preparatory to his trip. His mental condition, states his physician, has improved more rapidly than his physical, and it is said he is anxious to get back to business.

Prince of Monaco Brings Up Some Queer Specimens of Octopus

Paris, Feb. 8.—Prince Albert of Monaco, at a meeting of the Academy of Science, read a paper on the deep-sea monsters captured during the last cruise of the prince in the yacht Hirondelle.

Two gigantic octopuses, said the prince, were captured at a depth of nearly 1500 feet. One was almost transparent, like a jellyfish, and its anatomy could clearly be discerned through the matter which surrounded it.

The other possessed a great solitary eye divided into two parts. The upper part was for seeing, while the lower part projected a phosphorescent light ahead of the monster, enabling the upper or seeing part to come into use in the sombre depths of the ocean.

Ohio Constitutional Convention Adopts Clause Regarding Juries

Columbus, Feb. 8.—The state constitution convention adopted a proposed amendment of the constitution, so as to provide that the three-fourths of a jury may bring in a verdict in a civil case. In criminal cases unanimous verdicts are to be required as now.

This is the first proposal to be adopted in the convention. The vote was 93 to 11. All of the eleven who opposed the proposal are lawyers. Three of them have been on the common pleas bench.

MANY CONTESTS IN THE SOUTH

Rump Conventions For Roosevelt Are Looked For

FLORIDA SETS BALL ROLLING

Means Enormous Amount of Work For National Committee—Taft Assured of Instructed Delegation From New York—His Campaign Manager Not Worrying Over La Follette Supporters Going Over to Roosevelt

Washington, Feb. 8.—The outcome of the Florida Republican state convention for the election of delegates for the national convention indicates that the national committee will have to pass on the usual number of contests from the southern states just prior to the meeting of the national convention.

Numerous telegrams were received here from Florida Republicans telling of what happened at the state convention. The story, in brief, seems to be that the insurgent Republicans walked out of the regular convention and held a rump convention. The regular convention unanimously instructed for the renomination of Taft, while the rump convention declared for the nomination of Roosevelt. These conflicting instructions have to do with the four delegates-at-large only. The eight district delegates were instructed for Taft.

The men in charge of the Taft campaign understand that the followers of Roosevelt have been instructed to lay the groundwork for contests wherever possible. Even without any definite instructions from anybody rump conventions and contests can always be counted on in most of the southern states.

This means an enormous amount of work for the national committee. In 1908, the committee spent nearly two weeks in passing on the contests from the southern states. The politicians are saying that it is safe to count on as much work being put up to the committee this year.

A score or more of prominent politicians from different sections of the country were at the executive offices yesterday. If the stories they tell are to be relied on, the Roosevelt movement is no longer making any headway. The New Yorkers now assert that the president is assured of an instructed delegation from that state.

Insurgents who were enlisted in the La Follette movement continue to go over to Roosevelt. Practically every prominent supporter of the Wisconsin senator is now out for Roosevelt. The managers of the Taft campaign express entire satisfaction with this situation.

Representative Slayden of Texas, author of the "third term" resolution, is probably more disappointed than anyone else that the house sidestepped the proposition and refused to let it come up for a vote.

Slayden denied emphatically that his resolution was aimed especially at Roosevelt. He said: "My resolution was aimed at the dangerous and un-American proposition of a third term. I mean a third term whether consecutive or with an intervening term. If Roosevelt is a candidate for a third term then it was aimed at him. The thinking, patriotic, conservative element of the country is against any abandonment of traditions in that respect."

PROBE WILL BE THOROUGH

Florida Everglades Land Scandal Will Be Looked Into

Washington, Feb. 8.—Thorough investigation of the charges that government reports on Florida Everglade lands were suppressed by officials of the department of agriculture at the instance of land speculators, and that department engineers were dismissed because of controversies in this connection, was determined upon by the Democratic members of the house committee on expenditures in the department of agricultrue.

After a conference, Representative Moss of Indiana, chairman of the committee, said that the formal order for the inquiry would be executed at a meeting of the full committee today.

HOOK IS ELIMINATED

Nagel Likely to Be Appointed to Supreme Bench Judgeship

Washington, Feb. 8.—The nomination of Charles Nagel of Missouri, secretary of commerce and labor, to be an associate justice of the supreme court of the United States, is expected at the Capitol.

The president's change of mind over Judge Hook of Kansas is attributed to a "Jim Crow" decision in which Hook participated in an Oklahoma case, in which a majority of the court sustained a state law requiring railroads to provide separate accommodations for negroes.

PAPER BAG COOKING

Great System Perfected by M. Soyer, Famous London Chef.

ELIMINATES MANY KITCHEN TROUBLES.

By Martha McCulloch Williams.

William Shakespeare, it may be had not cooking in mind, when he set his witches chanting:

"Double double toil and trouble!
Fire burn and caldron bubble."

Nevertheless, the fact remains that the burning fire, the bubbling caldron are sources of double trouble to womenkind. Therefore, they should rise up and call blessed M. Soyer's system of paper bag cooking, which has come newly to their help. It saves the bubblings of the caldron and thereby the troublings of the cook. This in many, many ways. Perhaps the most instantly apparent one is—the fact that there is no caldron to be washed or scoured when the flesh is weariest.

So, also, are the roasting pans and those for frying, likewise the broiler. Paper bags can do the work better—and be thrown away when they have served their turn.

But do not make the mistake of taking it for an accomplished cook. It is a help toward helping yourself, nothing more.

Beef or Veal Loaf.—To each pound of raw minced lean meat, add an ounce of finely minced suet, half a small minced onion, a dust of pepper, a pinch of salt mixed through a scant spoonful of flour, and a light sprinkle of powdered herbs. Mix the seasoning well through the meat, shape it into a flat, round cake, rub butter plentifully on the outside, put into a greased paper bag, seal and bake in a hot oven, allowing fifteen minutes to the pound. A few slices of tomato put in the bag helps to make tasty gravy. A spoonful of tomato catsup may be used instead.

Baked Onions.—Parboil for fifteen minutes Spanish or Bermuda onions, chill them in cold water, then cut a V out of the hearts. Fill the space with butter, after dusting it well with salt and pepper, put the onions in a bag with a lump of butter and a very little water, seal and cook twenty minutes in a hot oven, or thirty minutes in a very moderate one.

PAPER BAG COOKED BREAKFAST DISHES.

By Nicholas Soyer, Chef of Brooks' Club, London.

Eggs and Tomatoes.—Butter a bag thickly, put into it half a pint of tomato catsup and butter the size of a walnut. Cook in hot oven ten minutes. Cut a square from the center of the bag, break into it, one at a time, four eggs. Cook for three or four minutes. Dish up. Cut away all the top of the bag and serve.

Kippered Mackerel with Fine Herbs.—Cut salt mackerel into fillets, lay them in a deep earthen dish, and cover with boiling water. Leave in water half a minute. Take out, wipe dry, dust with coarse black pepper, and put on top of each fillet half a teaspoonful of minced parsley, and chives of onion, and a bit of butter the size of a small walnut. Grease a bag well, put in the fillets, seal, and cook for twenty minutes in a hot oven. Serve hot, with brown bread and butter.

Marechal of Lobster and Eggs.—Take the white and claw meat of a lobster, chop it small and set aside. Rub the brown meat smooth in a basin with a bit of butter and a good dust of white pepper. Add gradually half a bottle of tomato catsup. Work all well together. Put into a bag four slices of bacon. Do not seal the bag. Cook the bacon four minutes, then take out, and put in the lobster and tomato mixture, seal and cook for eight minutes. Cut open the bag on top, put in the white meat, and make hot for four or five minutes. Lower the gas very much for this last cooking—the white meat must only get very hot, as cooking toughens it. Serve in a very hot dish, garnished with the slices of bacon.

Eggs a la Tripe.—Rub together an ounce of butter and an ounce of flour, cook smooth in half a pine of milk which has been flavored lightly with mace. Add to it two large thinly-sliced onions, cooked in a bag with a little butter, and six hard-boiled eggs cut in halves lengthwise. Pour gently into a well-greased double bag, and make very hot in the oven for ten minutes. Serve as quickly as possible, on a very hot dish.

Eggs on Strassburg Croutons.—Cut the crust from four even-sized squares of stale bread, butter them thinly, dust lightly with pepper, and spread with a layer of foie gras. Cook for five minutes inside a well-greased bag, then cut open the bag and break an egg on each square of bread. Dust the eggs on top with pepper and a very little salt and cook for another four minutes. Serve immediately on a very hot dish.

Eggs a la Bechamel.—Cut four hard-boiled eggs in halves lengthwise, put them into a thickly greased bag with a gill of cream, salt and pepper to taste, and a tiny dust of powdered mace. Cook five minutes in a moderate oven, and serve hot on squares of lightly buttered toast.

PINEAPPLE DELICACIES.

PINEAPPLE contains an acid which is a very great help to digestion. The fruit has great medicinal value. Pineapple is said to be strengthening to the throat, as well as a tonic for the stomach and liver.

When fresh pineapple cannot be had canned pineapple is available and may be used in making the many delicious desserts that can be prepared with pineapple.

Some excellent recipes are quoted here:

Delicious Confections.

Candied Pineapple.—To crystallize pineapple after it is peeled and sliced boil for half an hour in sirup, using pound for pound of fruit and sugar, but no water. Lift the slices out and dry in an oven or hot sunshine. When dry pack in clean boxes, with oiled paper between the layers.

With Gelatin.

Pineapple Sponge.—Take half an ounce of gelatin and soak in half a pint of cold water until it is soft.

Put half a pint of cold water, half a tablespoonful of lemon juice and the sirup from one small can of pineapple in a pan and warm up.

When hot put in the soaked gelatin, one ounce and a half of powdered sugar and stir till the gelatin is quite dissolved.

Put the whites of two eggs into a basin and when the water and gelatin have cooled strain it on the eggs and whisk it till it is a very stiff froth. Then add the pineapple, cut very small.

A Fruit Salad.

Pinapple Salad.—Pare and pull in pieces with a fork a ripe pineapple, add one-fourth as much finely cut celery and toss together with some white mayonnaise. Serve in spoonfuls on heart lettuce leaves and garnish with olives.

Pineapple With Nuts.—Stew half a large can of pineapple in some of its juice until it is soft enough to rub through a hair sieve.

Flavor the pulp with a little lemon juice. Stir the pulp into about half a pint of cream and sweeten to taste. Set in a cool place till required, then pour into custard glasses and serve with chopped pistachio with chopped pineapple strewn on the top.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

FRECKLES

By Gene Stratton-Porter

COPYRIGHT, 1904, BY DOUBLEDAY, PAGE & CO.

SYNOPSIS.

Freckles, a homeless boy, is hired by Foss McLean to guard the expensive timber in the Limberlost from timber thieves.

Freckles does his work faithfully, makes friends with the birds and yearns to know more about nature. He lives with Mr. and Mrs. Duncan.

He resolves to get books and educate himself. He becomes interested in a huge pair of vultures and calls his bird friends his "chickens."

Some of the trees he is guarding are worth $1,000 each. Freckles' books arrive. He receives a call from Wessner.

Wessner attempts to bribe Freckles to betray his trust, and Freckles whips him. McLean overhears them and witnesses the fight.

Freckles' honesty saves a precious tree. He finds the nest of the vultures and is visited by a beautiful young girl.

She calls Freckles McLean's son. Freckles calls her "the angel" and helps the Bird Woman in taking photographs. McLean promises to adopt Freckles.

Freckles and the angel become very friendly. Assisted by the Bird Woman, they drive Wessner and Black Jack, timber thieves, from the Limberlost.

McLean fears more trouble, but Freckles insists upon being the sole guard of the timber. Freckles calls upon the angel's father.

The angel receives him as her equal, and her father is kind. Mrs. Duncan has exciting adventures in the Limberlost.

The Bird Woman and the angel again visit Freckles, and Freckles falls in love with the angel. The angel kisses him.

Freckles is bound and gagged by Black Jack's gang, and the timber thieves start felling a very valuable tree.

Wessner went out to the trail and removed the wire. Then he stood in front of Freckles and laughed in devilish hate. Freckles found himself looking fear in the face and marveled that he was not afraid. Four to one! The tree halfway eaten through, the wagons coming up the inside road, he bound and gagged! The men with Black Jack and Wessner had belonged to McLean's gang when last he had heard of them, but who those coming with the wagons might be he could not guess.

If they secured that tree McLean lost its value, lost his wager and lost his faith in him. The words of the angel hammered in his ears. "Oh, Freckles, do watch closely!"

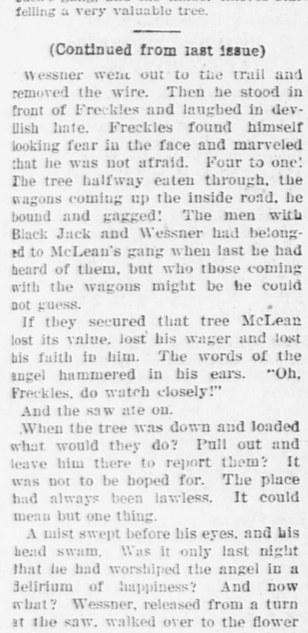

And the saw ate on.

When the tree was down and loaded what would they do? Pull out and leave him there to report them? It was not to be hoped for. The place had always been lawless. It could mean but one thing.

A mist swept before his eyes, and his head swam. Was it only last night that he had worshiped the angel in a delirium of happiness? And now what? Wessner, released from a turn at the saw, walked over to the flower bed and, tearing up a handful of rare ferns by the roots, started toward Freckles. His intention was obvious. Black Jack stopped him with an oath.

"You see here, Dutchy," he bawled, "mebby you think you'll wash his face with that, but you won't. A contract's a contract. We agreed to take out these trees and leave him for you to dispose of whatever way you please, provided you shut him up eternally on this deal. But I'll not see a tied man tormented by a fellow that he can lick up the ground with, loose, and that's flat. It raises my gorge to think what he'll get when we're gone, but you needn't think you're free to begin before. Don't you lay a hand on him while I'm here! What do you say, boys?"

"I say yes," growled one of McLean's latest deserters. "What's more, we're a pack of fools to risk the dirty work of silencing him. I don't mind lifting the trees we came for, but I'm cursed if I want blood on my hands."

"Well, you ain't going to get it," bellowed Jack. "You fellows only contracted to help me get out my marked trees. He belongs to Wessner, and it ain't our deal what happens to him. It's all planned safe and sure. As for killing that buck—come to think of it, killing is what he needs. He's away to good for this world of woe anyhow. His dropping out won't be the only secret the old Limberlost has never told. It's too dead easy to make it look like he helped take the timber and then cut. Why, he's played right into our hands. He was here at the swamp all last night and back again in an hour or so. When we get our plan worked out even old fool Duncan won't lift a finger to look for his carcass."

"You just bet," said Wessner. "I owe him all he'll get. But I'll pay!" he snarled at Freckles.

So it was killing then. They were not only after this one tree, but many, and with his body it was their plan to kill his honor. To brand him a thief, like them, before the angel, the Bird Woman, the dear boss and the Duncans! Freckles' body sagged against the ropes in sick despair.

There was no hope of McLean's coming. They had chosen a day when they knew he had a big contract at the south camp. The boss could not possibly come before tomorrow, and there would be no tomorrow for him. Duncan was on his way to the south camp, and the Bird Woman had said she would come as soon as she could. After the fatigue of the party it was useless to expect her and the angel today, and God save them from coming!

The sweat broke out on Freckles' forehead. He tugged at the ropes whenever he felt that he dared, but they were passed about the tree and his body several times and knotted on his chest. He resolved that he would bear in mind what he had once heard the Bird Woman say. He would go out bonnily. Never would he let them see if he grew afraid. After all, what did it matter what they did to his body if by some scheme of the devil they could compass his disgrace?

Then hope suddenly rose high in Freckles' breast. They could not do that. The angel would not believe. Neither would McLean. He would keep up his courage. Kill him they could; dishonor him they could not.

Yet, summon all the fortitude he might, that saw eating into the tree rasped his nerves worse and worse. With whirling brain he gazed off into the Limberlost, searching for something, he knew not what, and in blank horror found his eyes fastened on the angel. She was quite a distance away, but he could see her white lips and wide, angry eyes.

Last week he had taken her and the Bird Woman across the swamp over the path he followed in going in from his room to the chicken tree. He had told them last night that the butterfly tree was on the line close to this path. In figuring on their not coming that day he failed to reckon with the enthusiasm of the Bird Woman. They must be there for the study, and the angel had risked crossing the swamp in search of him. Or was there something in his room they needed? The blood surged in his ears like the roar of the Limberlost in the wrath of a storm.

He looked again, and it had been a dream. She was not there. Had she been? For his life Freckles could not tell whether he had really seen the angel or whether his strained senses had played him the most cruel trick of all. Or was it not the kindest? Now he could die with the vision of her lovely face fresh with him.

"Thank you for that, O God!" whispered Freckles. "'Twas more than kind of you, and I don't s'pose I ought to be wanting anything more, but if you can, oh, I wish I could know before this ends if 'twas me mother"—Freckles could not even whisper the words, for he hesitated a second and ended—"if 'twas me mother did it!"

"Freckles! Freckles! Oh, Freckles!" the voice of the angel came calling. Freckles swayed forward and wrenched at the rope until it cut deeply into his body.

Black Jack whipped out a revolver and snatched the gag from Freckles' mouth.

"Say quick, what's that, or it's up with you right now and whoever that is with you!"

"It's the girl the Bird Woman takes about with her," whispered Freckles through dry, swollen lips.

"They ain't due here for five days yet," said Wessner. "We got on to that last week."

"Yes," said Freckles, "but I found a tree covered with butterflies and things along the east line yesterday that I thought the Bird Woman would want extra, and I went to town for her last night. She said she'd come soon, but she didn't say when. I take care of the girl while the Bird Woman works. Untie me quick until she is gone. I'll try to send her back, and then you can go on with your dirty work."

"He ain't lying," volunteered Wessner. "I saw that tree covered with butterflies and him watching around it when we were spying on him yesterday."

"No, he leaves lying to your sort," snapped Black Jack as he undid the rope and pitched it across the room. "Remember that you're covered every move you make, my buck," he cautioned.

"Freckles! Freckles!" came the angel's impatient voice, nearer and nearer.

"I must be answering," said Freckles, and Jack nodded. "Right here!" he called, and to the men: "You go on with your work, and remember one thing yourselves. The work of the Bird Woman is known all over the world. This girl's father is a rich man, and she is all he has. If you offer hurt of any kind to either of them this world has no place far enough away nor dark enough for you to be hiding in."

"Freckles, where are you?" demanded the angel.

Soul sick with fear for her, Freckles went toward her and parted the bushes that she might enter. She came through without apparently giving him a glance, and the first words she said were: "Why have the gang come so soon? I didn't know you expected them for three weeks yet. Or is this some special tree that Mr. McLean needs to fill an order right now?"

Freckles hesitated. Would a man dare lie to save himself? No. But to save the angel—surely that was different. He opened his lips, but the angel was capable of saving herself. She walked in among them, exactly as if she had been raised in a lumber camp and never waited for an answer.

"Why, your specimen case!" she cried. "Look! Haven't you noticed that it's tipped over? Set it straight quickly!"

A couple of men stepped out and carefully righted the case.

"There; that's better," she said. "Freckles, I'm surprised at your being so careless. It would be a shame to break those lovely butterflies for one old tree. Is that a valuable tree? Why didn't you tell us last night you were going to take a tree out this morning? Oh, say, did you put your case there to protect that tree from that stealing old Black Jack and his gang? I bet you did! Well, if that wasn't bright! What kind of a tree is it?"

"It's a golden oak," said Freckles.

"Like those they make dining tables and sideboards out of?"

"Yes."

"My, how interesting!" she cried. "I don't know a thing about timber, but my father wants me to learn about just everything I can. I am going to ask him to let me come here and watch you until I know enough to boss a gang myself. Do you like to cut trees, gentlemen?" she asked of the men with angelic sweetness.

Some of them looked foolish and some grinned, but one managed to say that they did. Then the angel's eyes turned full on Black Jack, and she gave the most beautiful little start of astonishment.

"Oh, I almost thought that you were a ghost!" she cried. "But I see now that you are really and truly. Were you ever in Colorado?"

"No," said Jack.

Washington, Feb. 8.—The nomination of former Governor Myron T. Herrick of Ohio, to be ambassador to France, was sent by President Taft to the senate. He will succeed Robert Bacon, resigned, to become a fellow of Harvard university. An effort will be made to secure Herrick's immediate confirmation.

President Taft was informed by Secretary of State Knox that the French government had found Herrick acceptable as ambassador.

CARS DYNAMITED BY TRAIN ROBBERS

Postal Car and Wells Fargo Express Safe Ransacked

Memphis, Feb. 8.—Rock Island passenger train No. 43, bound west from Memphis, was held up by bandits and dynamited seventeen miles east of Hurlburt, Ark. The train carried a large amount of specie and many express money orders.

The robbers fired two blasts of dynamite. So terrific was the detonation that passengers were thrown from their berths, and windows in houses a mile away were broken.

The mail, baggage and express cars were destroyed by dynamite. The bandits cut the telegraph and telephone wires between Memphis, Hurlburt and Little Rock. Bill Williams, a negro brakeman, was killed by the explosion. A tramp riding on the blind baggage was blown to pieces.

The value of the plunder the robbers obtained has not been determined. They ransacked the postal car and blasted the Wells Fargo Express safe, apparently overlooking nothing that might add to their pront.

NOT LOOKING FOR TROUCLE.

"Do you—"

The rough-looking man with the weather-beaten face advanced on the youth escorting the pretty girl.—"want"—

His eyes glittered with a sort of repressed excitement, as if anticipating sport and gain combined.

—"to have—"

He threw back his sleeves significantly, disclosing a pair of brown, browny, muscular arms that could have felled an ox.

—"a row?"

The girl shrieked a delighted assent, as the boatman helped them in, and rowed them around for an hour.

Planning Commission bill be strenuously opposed," was adopted, and then Mr. Sweetser put his suggestion in the form of a formal motion, that a committee be appointed to draw up a plan for a Suburban Civic Association.

PERSIAN LORE ABOUT ROSE

Nightingale Sings His Frenzied Love for that Flower and Dies Beneath Rosebush.

Persian legendary lore tells some fanciful stories about the rose which have great poetic charm. For example, the poet Attar wrote "The Book of the Nightingale," telling how all the other birds appeared in anger before the throne of Solomon, asking him to destroy the nightingale, which would not allow them to rest by night, but poured forth its lays when peaceful silence should rein all over the earth. After prolonged argument the bird was acquitted, for it explained with such pathos that its untimely melody could not be restrained because of its frenzied love for the rose, a passion so hopeless and undying that it could never be made voiceless. Another Persian belief is that nightingales always die beneath rose bushes, stupefied by the scent. Jamie, a Persian poet, wrote of how "the first rose appeared in Gulistan at the time the flowers demanded a new sovereign from Allah, because the drowsy lotus would slumber at night. At first the maiden queen blossom was shown white, and encircled with a protecting guard of thorns, but the poor nightgale fell into such an ecstasy of love over her charms, and so recklessly pressed his lovelorn heart against those cruel thorns, that his blood, so far as it could trickle into the flower's bosom, dyed it crimson."

Another fancy states that the Perfume of the rose was gained from a cup of nectar thrown over it by the little god Cupid, while its thorns were those stings of bees used by him as arrows in his wrath at finding some roses scentless after all his trouble.

The beds of the Shahs of Persia in ancient times were filled with rose petals, which had to be often scattered lest they become uncomfortable. This must surely have been the origin of the saying: "He would complain of a bed of roses." It was also claimed that a rose liquor would "by one glassful make the sternest monarch merciful or the sickliest mortal slumber amid his pains."

The rose is emblematical of joy and love, and was consecrated to Venus the goddess of beauty, from whose path it was said to have first sprung Crimson roses, "gemmed with dew drops," formed the crowning garland of the Romans' youthful Comus, god of feasting, and the Turks believed it absolutely wicked to step on a rose petal or leave it lying on the ground.—Pall Mall Gazette.

TROUBLES HAVE BEEN SETTLED

Greater Boston League Now Composed of Five Teams

NEW SCHEDULE

At a meeting held in the Carney building, Boston, by the managers of teams affiliated with the Greater Boston A. A .A .U. Basketball league, all the minor troubles which have been brewing of late, were straigtened out and the president of the league Hugh C. McGrath, stated that the season would be finished, even if it had to be done with only two teams.

The league is now composed of a a five-team circuit, as a result of the meeting. The Cunningham gym, the Lynn Y. M. C. A. and the Fr Mathew team have been dropped. Dr. Burnett, who has been causing much of dissatisfaction throughout the season, was present and said he was in hearty accord with the N. E. A. A. A. U. changes and hoped everything would be satisfactory.

He was notified he could not use Powell, because he was a member of the South Boston A. C. and therefore not eligible to represent two clubs. This move forced Dr. Burnett to withdraw both of his teams from the league.

Neither of the other two teams dropped were represented.

The question of protested games was considered, and as a result Quincy A. A. was credited with a victory by forfeiture, the Cathedral Y. M. C. A. team failing to put in an appearance.

The managers present, Flynn, Comerford, Fitzgerald, Gordon, McMackin, all posted a $10 forfeit, to be given the home team in case o fthe non-appearance of a team scheduled to play. A schedule of games for the remainder of the month was then drawn up as follows:—

The new schedule is as follows:

Feb. 8—St. Alphonsus vs Quincy A. A. at Quincy.

Feb. 9—St. Joseph's vs Cathedral at Boston College.

Feb. 9—St. Mary's vs St. Alphonsus at Roxbury.

Feb. 13—St. Mary's vs Cathedral at Boston College.

Feb. 14—Quincy vs St. Joseph's at West End.

Feb. 15—Cathedral vs Quincy at Quincy.

Feb. 16—St. Alphonsus vs St. Mary's at North End.

Feb. 17—St. Joseph's vs St. Alphonsus at Roxbury.

Feb. 20—St. Alphonsus vs St. Joseph's at West End.

Feb. 22—St. Mary's vs Quincy A. A. at Quincy.

Feb. 23—Cathedral vs S. Mary's at North End.

Feb. 24—Quincy vs St. Alphonsus at Roxbury.

The standing of the two leagues, shows both teams of Quincy A. A. leading in both departments.

Chinese Talleyrand.

Every Chinese is an enigma to the western mind, but the greatest enigma of them all is the man who has been called to the helm of state in this storm, the only man, if there be any, who can save the empire from shipwreck, Yuan Shi-Kai. He has been suspected and trusted alternately by Manchu and Chinese, reformer and conservative, foreign and native. The late emperor, who had made him his chief adviser, cursed him with his last breath as a traitor and cause of all his misfortunes. The late empress dowager, who had favored him above all others, denounced him at her last council. The present regent, his bitter enemy, has now made him virtually dictator of the empire. He is a possible intermediary between Manchus and rebels, because each party believes he is on their side; the Manchus trust him to support the dynasty, the rebels trust him to promote reform. Trained in the school of devious diplomacy under that consummate master of the craft, Li Hung-Chang, he has pursued a tortuous course through the troubled waters of Chinese politics ever since. His career would make the plot for a melodrama were it not too sensational and improbable for the stage.—New York Independent.

"I thought so, too, but father didn't.'

"Why not?"

MADE BRUIN PEEVISH

AMUSING INCIDENT IN MOUNTAINS OF PENNSYLVANIA.

Bear Has Encounter With Swinging Beetle Which He Uses as Punching Bag and Comes Off Second Best.

A Pennsylvanian once witnessed a curious incident in the mountains of his state, wherein a black bear was the principal figure.

It appears that the winter before the wood cutters of the mountains had broken the handle of one of their tools, a beetle. A rope was tied about the beetle head and it had been left hanging to the low limb of a tree. The man who witnessed the spectacle happened to be in the vicinity one summer day, and, remembering the beetle, started after it to carry it home.

As he came near the place he saw a black bear slowly circling around the hanging beetle at a distance of a few feet. He was too much occupied to notice the man, who stopped to see what bruin was about.

The bear acted as if he thought the beetle were some kind of trap. He would approach within a few feet and sniff. Then he would back off a little way, squat on his haunches and give a low snort, eyeing the tool all the time.

While was thus engaged a sudden breeze sprung up and set the beetle swinging lightly. The animal snorted again and backed off a step or two. Soon another gust struck the beetle and swayed it still more. The bear responded by a louder snort—a sort of challenge.

As soon as the beetle stopped swinging bruin got up and circled about it several times. At length he went near—then nearer. He reached out his paw and touched the thing gently. As it swung toward him he hit it, this time rather forcibly.

The beetle head was a round one of hickory, with heavy iron rings at each end. As it rebounded from the second blow of the creature's paw it hit him fairly on the nose. Angry at this, he ashed at the beetle again and gave it a sounding blow. As it came toward him he dodged a little, just enough to save his nose and receive the blow in his left eye! He hit it again, and his nose got another blow. That hurt so much that he growled angrily and rooted viciously in the leaves.

Bruin was furious by this time and went at that beetle as if he meant to annihilate it. He gave it a tremendous blow with his right paw, and the tool swung clear over the limb, came down on the other side, and struck him on top of the head. He uttered a roar that made the woods ring. Finally he caught the beetle in his paws, pulled upon it until he broke the rope, and then went to cuffing and biting the tool.

When he found that it did not fight back any more bruin let it roll to the ground. Then he shook himself and walked off into the woods.

AMONG LOSERS OF THINGS

The Advertisements of the Careless Present a Most Interesting Study in Psychology.

Even when you haven't lost or found anything do you ever turn to the column advertising for lost articles? If you do not, try it occasionally. You'll find the lost article column brim full of touches of nature that make the whole world kin.

Among other interesting things you'll learn that Kansas City is chuck full, almost overflowing, with cows. No one who hasn't read the lost article ads realizes the magnitude of the bovine population of Greater Kansas City. Never a day passes but some Kansas City family, usually a number of them, is regretting the loss of Bossie and is asking some one to bring her back. It's merely a case of won't stay put, that's all. Bossie strays every day, every hour, almost every minute in Kansas City.

Dogs, however, are the most frequently lost article. Usually another case of won't stay put. Towser is a gregarious, nomad.

The lost article column is as seasonable as the market column, too. Just now its muffs, fur neckpieces, overcoats and shotguns that are being left in street cars, dropped from motor cars or forgotten somewhere, for this is their season.

Umbrellas, eyeglasses, watches, lockets, pins and brooches are lost all the year around without regard to season.

Horses are lost frequently, but mules rarely.

The other day a man lost a laundry—so the caption of the ad. would lead one to believe, but later on the ad. explained that it was a package of laundry the man lost.

One woman lost a pillow cover this week. She had taken it to a matinee to embroider between acts.

Women may now and then lose parcels of dress goods, lace and other materials while shopping, but staid lawyers, careful business men and physicians aren't immune to the affection, as lawyers lose abstracts valuable papers and books, while business men lose suitcases, bags, pocketbooks and papers, and doctors sometimes leave medicine cases, parcels and books where they didn't intend to.

A pair of red house slippers were lost the other day, presumably by a minister or a woman.

Leisurely Moose Hunting.

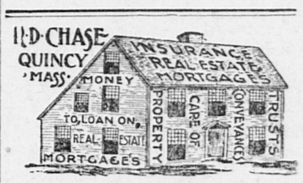

The most leisurely method of moose hunting chronicled during the present season is that pursued by a Mars Hill veteran hunter and woodsman, Humphrey Bridges.

Several hours' walk from camp brought him in sight of a hill on which he saw what looked like a pronged stump. He stood five minutes speculating, then crept nearer and looked again. The object did not move. Creeping six or seven rods, he saw the supposed stump moving slightly and then a large tongue flopping alongside the dark place revealed the identity of a moose.

He aimed for the neck of the animal and fired. The moose rose to his feet and ran. When Bridges reached the spot where the animal had lain he found blood. He sat down, filled his pipe and reasoned that the moose could not last over an hour. He therefore walked slowly on, keeping close to the trail, and found the moose lying down in a lumber road a mile and a half away from the place where he was shot. The moose reared on his front legs, but could not pull his hind legs under him, and half stood with head lowered for battle until another bullet ended the struggle.—Kennebec Journal.

CITIZENS REFUSED A PUBLIC HEARING

It Would be Useless as Grade Crossing Question is Practically Settled

Letter From Chairman Bates of Special Commission

It looks as though Quincy would get a black eye on the grade crossing question, One thing is certain the citizens will not be given another opportunity to be heard on the question at a public hearing.

A few days ago Mayor Stone wrote the special commission asking that the citizens be given a public hearing, before report of the commission was made. Reason for asking for the hearing was because it was intimated that the city plan had been turned down and that the plan to be reported would not be to liking of the citizens.

This morning the Mayor received a letter from John L. Bates, chairman of the commission, in reply to his request. This letter states that the grade crossing question in Quincy is practically settled and that the commission is only waiting for a few details from its engineer before making its report, which is expected in a few weeks. For this reason it will be impossible to reopen the question and give the citizens a public hearing.

In reply to this Mayor Stone has again communicated with the commission asking that if a public hearing of the citizens is not possible that he be given a personal hearing.

If however as the letter of Chairman Bates states the question is practically settled it is doubtful if a comference with the Mayor would materially change the plan that has been adopted.

Just what plan the commission has decided upon is not known but from things dropped from time to time the general impression is that it will not be far from that proposed by the railroad at the public hearings.

While no one is in a position to state with authority just what will be reported it is understood the plan of the commission provides for the closing of Saville street leaving the tracks at the Quincy centre depot practically the same as they are at present. An overhead foot bridge will be provided however and Irving place will be extended to Granite street. The plan will probably provide for the straightening of the tracks through the centre by moving them toward the west at the centre depot. Upland road will also be connected with Irving place more directly than now. So much for Saville street.

As to Water street there seems to be a difference of opinion but from recent things seen and heard it is believed the plan will call for the dead ending of Water street at its present crossing near the depot, and that a crossing will be made beneath the tracks near the site now occupied by Crane's grain elevator. Presidents avenue will be turned to the west and cross under the tracks, which will be raised at this point, the new street connecting with Liberty street at a point near Penn street. The situation at this point will be further relieved by extending Pearl street in a westerly direction so as to connect with Presidents avenue.

If these plans are adopted, and there is every reason to believe that they will be, they will be afr from what the citizens in general desire It is quite certain however to most people who have made a study of the question that the tracks will not be elevated through the city so as to make a Chinese wall, which is something to be thankful for

PRESENTED WITH TRAVELLING BAG

A number of friends of Thomas G. Smith, the genial chairman of the Entertainment committee of the Granite City club, who during the summer months have participated in his personally conducted tours to Portland, Maine, paid him a friendly call Thursday evening. Except on Wednesday and Saturday evenings, Tom is usually between the sheets by 8 o'clock, but having an intimation that he was to receive callers he on this evening broke his usual rule, so that when the party arirved they found him at the door, wearing one of those broad smiles of welcome, characteristic of him.

After presenting Tom with a handsome travelling bag, which he was informed would come in handy on the next Portland trip, and receiving his thanks for the unexpected gift, cards were in order until a little after ten when a chowder, for which clams coming from the vicinity of the aforesaid Portland were the principal ingredients, was served by Mrs. Smith. It was excellent and it is unnecessary to say, that it was one to which all did jusice. Cards were then resumed until the church clock bell tolled the hour of midnight.

Mayor Stone who had been attending another gathering dropped in on his way home to extend his greetings and enjoyed a bowl of the chowder. Gene said that he had never been fortnuate enough to be numbered as one of the party on the personally conducted Portland tours, but he hoped to be recorded next summer. He was assured that he would not be forgotten.

IMPRESSIONS OF AMERICA

Humorous Address by Rev. Edward Evans at Wollaston

SUPPER SERVED

At the sociable of the Wollaston Congregational church Thursday evening, a most entertaining and humorous address was given by Rev. Edward Evans of Holbrook, pastor of the Winthrop Congregational church, entitled "An Englishman's first impressions of America."

The speaker told in detail of the breaking of home ties and of his first experience with "Yankee buncombe," which however was not his last.

His descriptions of the American bell boy and policemen and his contact with Yankee phraseology were all hit off in a manner to send his audience into gales of laughter and proved conclusively that at least one Englishman had a sense of humor.

The enterprise of American newspapers was mentioned in contrast to the staid English publications. Where the English would have the common heading of "births" "marriages" and "deaths" American enterprise would no doubt dictate "hatched," "matched" "dispatched."

The American woman is much like her English sister. She has the same craze for new hats and old china, the same love for little children, the same fear of a mouse. America is the best place for woman and woman is the best thing in America.

He had spoken of some things he did like. He must now turn to the other side. He did not like the American mosquito. That creature with the thirst for blood that pursued him relentlessly. These New Jersey troubadours not only treat you to song but they also take up a collection.

"I do not like," said the speaker, "the kind of American aristocracy that bases its claim on material possession. In America there are three kinds of aristocracy: that of brains, that of birth and that of brass. For the first I have respect, the second amuses me, while for the last I have the most profound contempt. I do not like the American heiress who sells herself body and soul to a titled foreigner. They are not ladies, these vulgar snobs who marry men they cannot respect for the mere glamour of a foreign court and the honor of an empty title."

In closing Rev. Mr. Evans paid a glowing tribute to America, the land of freedom, strength and resources. The land with broad rivers, rolling prairies and deep forests. A land with a glorious history and who in their onward march of civilization planted the meeting house alongside the log cabin.

As a final word the speaker expressed a desire to see the treaty of arbitration ratified between the United States and Great Britain and the hope that in the future these two great nations would go on their way not with one flag above the other but as brothers side by side.

The speaker was introduced by Rufus B. Tobey and the conclusion of the address was greeted with continued applause and a rising vote of thanks.

An excellent supper was served by a commitee consisting of Mrs. Albert Sayward, Mrs. Chester J. Hogue, Mrs. Leon F. Besse, Mrs. B. F. Bowles, Mrs. Edwin Smith, Mrs. Charles H. Backus, Mrs. L. W. Nash, Mrs. Chas. G. Farwell and Mrs. E. Wilson Blake.

OFFICIAL VISITATION.

Em. Sir Albert W. Fay of Wollaston, Grand Lecturer of the Grand Commandry of Knight Templars of Massachusetts and Rhode Island—occompanied by Em. Sir Henry P. Furnald of Newcomb street, Deputy Grand Warden, officially inspected Sutton Commandry K. T., of New Bedford, Thursday evening. Others on the suite were distinguished Em. Sir Knights from both states. Sutton Commandry is considered one of the best in the district. There was a large number in attendance and the work was highly praised.

COPLEY SQUARE MUSIC SCHOOL

Unusually Fine Benefit Concert at Hall Place Church

STORY OF LOST CHORD

One of the finest entertainments ever enjoyed in this city was the grand benefit concert given by the Copley Square School of Music at the Hall Place M. E. church, Thursday evening.

Long before the concert began the vestry of the church was practically full and by eight o'clock there was limited standing room only. The program:

Overture, Hungarian Lustspiel, Keler Bela—Orchestra.

'Cello solo, "To the Evening Star," Wagner—Miss Edith M. Hunter.

Vocal solo, "Only a Ribbon", Chas. T. Scott—Miss May E. Ring.

Andante from Surprise Symphony, Hayden and "Wedding March," Mendelsshon—Orchestra.

Violin Concerto No. 9, Adagio; Rondo, DeBeriot—Miss Edith M. Herter.

Trio, Piano, violin and 'cello op. 16 Jadassohn—Misses Pease, Herter, Hunter.

Grand Festival March, Schleiffarth—Orchestra.

"The Lost Chord," Sullivan—John W. Bridge, Jr.

Vocal solo—"Sing On," Menza—Miss Ring.

"Nazareth" and "Marguerite Waltz," Gounod—Orchestra.

All the selections were well rendered and several encores responded to. The concert was scheduled to last exactly one hour and forty minutes, but when the time for concluding arrived, the program was unfinished and Prof. Davis smilingly asked his orchestra if, in view of the fact that they were enjoying themselves as well as their audience, they would remain until the next train and all with one accord consented. Several encores were given and Prof. Davis lead the audience in the singing of some good old Methodist hymns.

Previous to rendering "The Lost Chord," Prof. Davis briefly told the story of the finding of the Lost Chord and explained what the lost chord is. He also told of the adapting of the Marguerite Waltz to the concert room.

Prof. Davis and Rev. T. C. Martin, pastor of the church are warm friends and the witty remarks of both were greatly enjoyed by the audience.

During intermission members of the Junior League sold confectionery, the proceeds to go towards the purchasing of new singing books for the Sunday school.

The Ladies' Aid served members of the orchestra with hot cocoa and as there was nearly an hour's wait before train time, a social time was enjoyed.

The members of the Davis Ensemble orchestra are: Frank M. Davis, leader; First Violins—Edith M. Herter, Albert B. Miller, Theodore Sherman; Second Violins—Ethel Ryan, Villa West, Cecil Bornstein, Esther Charak, Ruth Bowditch; Pianists—Margaret Ryan, Murial C. Pease, Ruth Smith, Arthur Phelps; Viola—Peter Hurstack; Cello—Edith M. Hunter; Contra Bass—Dr. Beardsley; Clarinet—Clement M. Durgan; Cornets—John W. Bridge, Jr., Frank Lynch, Chas. R. Steward; Flute—Walter H. Watson; Trombone—James W. Lawson; Triangle—Mary B. Bowditch.

Prof. Davis was assisted by Miss May E. Ring of Quincy.

Two grand pianos were loaned for the occasion by the J. A. Keating Co., of Quincy.

This is the fifth number in the course of lectures being given throughout the winter months. The next will be a stereoptican lecture on Oberammagan by Rev. Mr. Adams on March 14. The five lectures thus far have been well patronized and financial and social successes.

☞The Girls' Friendly society of St. Chrysostom's church, Wollaston, will give an entertainment in Alpha hall, Friday evening, Feb. 9 at 8 o'clock. Tickets on sale at door 35 cents. 8-2t

☞Give the baby bread and milk. PRATT'S BREAD and good pure milk.

LOCAL MATTERS ARE DISCUSSED

West Quincy Improvement Society Discuss Local Matters

NO DEFINITE ACTION

Matters of direct interest to West Quincy as well as to the city as a whole were discussed informally at the regular meeting of the Ward Four Improvement society at its regular meeting Thursday evening. There was a good attendance of members and President Little presided.

In opening the meeting the President spoke of a conference which he had with Representative Leslie in relation to matters that were of interest to West Quincy. These, among other things included the much discussed question as to the use of book tickets between West Quincy and Boston. As the ruling of the railroad now stands, persons holding book tickets between West Quincy and Boston can not use them on the main line for a trip from Boston to Quincy, although a person holding a trip book ticket from Quincy to Boston can use it either on the main or branch line. Representative Leslie promised to take up the matter with the general ticket agent of the New York and New Haven. He also promised to use his influence in the matter of the five cent fare on the street railway between West Quincy and Milton Lower Mills, as well as on the question of the so-called missing link between West Quincy and Milton Lower Mills as well as on the question of so-called missing link between East Milton and Adams street, which citizens of West Quincy and East Milton so much desire.

FREE EMPLOYMENT.

The president read a communication from the free employment bureau and and after some discussion Louis Walters offered to build and erect a bulletin board for the society, upon which notices of this kind might be posted. He was given a rising vote of thanks.

OLD HOMESTEAD ACT.

A communication was also received relative to the Old Homestead act, as passed by the legislature of last year. No definite action was taken in the matter however, as more definite information was desired.

TOWN RIVER DREDGING.

The bill now pending before the leg-

BRIDGE SPAN HAS ARRIVED

One of the long steel spans for the new bridge over the railroad tracks on Atlantic street arrived Thursday. The span is an unusually long one and required three cars to carrry it. It was side tracked near the bridge and will be put in position in a few days. The second span is on the way and is expected any day. The spans will be put in position as fast as possible and it is probable that the bridge will be in position, or one section of it, within a few weeks.

SLEIGH PARTY.

Fifteen members of the Presidents Hill Tennis club had a very enjoyable sleigh ride to Mattapan, Thursday evening. Although the snow had been disappearing with more or less rapidity, the sleighing proved to be very good and no bare spots were encountered. At Mattapan, the party alighted and partook of a specially prepared "feed" at one of the restaurants .

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

If things keep on this way, we shall feel like taking the butter down to the safe deposit vault nights.

Henry Labouchere made a fortune of $4,000,000 by publishing "Truth" but if he printed truth, he must have needed a good corps of fighting editors.

No danger that the Irish players will have to walk the tracks. If their friends keep on prosecuting them, they can well afford to travel by special trains.

Possibly the reason why the groundhog retired so speedily was not on account of the weather, but because he caught a glimpse of the Farmer's Boy and Towzer

The war department has granted permission for an army ball team to go to Japan to play Tokio university. In time no doubt, all international differences will be settled in this manner.

"Wall street has engaged Henry Watterson and Col. Harvey, of Harpers Weekly to put Woodrow Wilson's boom in cold storage. The "Street" is going to play another favorite that it likes better.

RUNNING FOR CONGRESS.

The cost of running a "fairly lively campaign" for Congress was estimated by Senator Lorimer a few days ago on the witness stand, as being $10,000.

Election expenses are mounting to a point exceeding anything else in our national cost of living. In greater New York in a recent campaign, banners and transparencies alone cost $75,000, and postage, 40,000. Formerly citizens used to consider it an honor to expound the principles of their party from the stump for nothing, but now $5 to $10 a night is paid for a host of cart-tail orators.

Much of the money goes for the most trifling purposes. In the campaign of 1904, celluloid buttons and campaign badges alone cost $100,000.

Although collections from office holders are generally made illegal, the "workers" know how to handle these things discreetly. This story was told in the "Outlook" a few years ago, of how one reluctant official was dealt with.

"We aint seen you lately" was the caller's tactful way of approaching the delicate subject. But somehow the officer did not seem to gather his drift.

"It's a cold day, isn't it?" continued the patriotic representative of the party. He turned up his coat collar, and shivered as if the North wind were penetrating to his inmost bones. "It's going to be much colder."

By this time the obtuse official at last gathered his meaning, the price of peace was paid, and the cheered visitor departed, remarking "It's getting warmer already."

"These men are deserving citizens" say the politicians regarding these "workers" whose support has to be yearly. "They have to make enough on election day to support their families for the rest of the year, and their needs should be considered."

In England they are supposed to have handled this question much better, and yet the maximum limit on tion expenditure over there is by no means small. An English candidate can spend $1750 for a district having 2000 electors, and $150 extra for each additional thousand. In a Congressional district having 40,000 voters, this would bring the price up to $7450 almost identically the amount of the salary.

Each political party would be just as well off if certain classes of expenditure were absolutely forbidden, and others limited, the only sufferers being "hangers-on", to whom $10 earned by politics looks sweeter than $100 by honest labor.

MRS. DANIEL HIGGINS.

Mrs Hepzibah Higgins, widow of Daniel Higgins, who for the past few years has made her home with her son Mr. George H. Higgins of Atlantic died Wednesday morning in her ninety-ninth year, and was probably the oldest living resident in this city.

Mrs. Higgins had long been associated with Quincy (as town and city) occupying for many years her pretty homestead on Washington court, Quincy Point. She had been active, holding a very great interest in life until within a few years, and it had only been a matter of months since her mind became clouded.

Mrs. Higgins had been a widow for many years, and lived to see three sons, Capt. James Higgins of San Francisco, Capt. Lucius Higgins of New York, and Capt. William Higgins and her daughter Miss Ella Higgins of this city, all pass away.

Mrs. Higgins by her willingness to do the duty nearest her hand endeared herself to all with whom she came in contact. She had a long membership with the Point church, and has had the distinction of being its oldest member for many years.

She leaves one son, Mr. George H. Higgins and seven grand children, three of whom are on the western coast and had only known her through a lively and vital correspondence. However, all will cherish most tenderly the memory of Mother and Grandmother, and that will be an inspiration to them, to meet all difficulties bravely and always to keep hope burning brightly in the heart.

The funeral was held from the residense of Mr. George H. Higgins, 125 Atlantic street, Atlantic, this afternoon, and was largely attended by relatives and friends.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Editor Quincy Ledger:

Many years ago a petition to separate the then small village of Wollaston from Quincy was drawn up for presentation to the General Court. It was proposed to take all of that part of Quincy lying north of Furnace brook, east of Adams street, west of Hancock street and south of the Wollaston Foundry and incorporate it into the town of Wollaston.

Great interest was taken by the Wollaston people in the proposed establishment of themselves into civic housekeeping. The great benefits to be derived from a town so compactly laid out and so convenient to Boston were carefully discussed but the consensus of opinion was that the population and valuation was too small to then make the attempt.

For many years the question has slumbered to be again revived, as the once small village has grown to be a prosperous, and one might say a rich community. It has increased in wealth until it is today the second richest ward in the city, being assessed upon nearly $6,000,000 worth of real and personal property and contributing approximately $120,000 annually towards the maintenance of the city. Its population has kept pace with its prosperity for it now has upwards of 6000 people.

Such is the Wollaston of today, its hills and valleys and plains built over by well-to-do Boston business men with residences and well kept grounds, the equal of which outside of the Newtons and Brookline would be hard to find. Not that Wollaston has such beautiful estates as those favored cities, but for general tidiness and well kept grounds it is their equal.

Taking the original Wollaston, as it was plotted out by D. Granger & Son in 1870, it would undoubtedly make an ideal suburban town with its short streets, compact growth and united community of wide awake business men. , Wollaston has but little in common with Quincy or any of the other wards. Carrying this statement to its logical conclusion Quincy is a loosely knitted municipality made of six distinct small towns having but little interest in each others affairs. This indifference has resulted in the rolling up of a large debt amounting to $2,000,000, making the city rank 5 in the state in percentage of net debt of valuation and giving it a tax rate of $20. And, notwithstanding such a showing of poverty an order will probably be introduced into the Council this spring to borrow $100-000 for the purpose of building wharves, etc. at Germantown or Quincy Point for our granite dealers to ship their product by water. Not only does Quincy rank as number five in the percentage of net debt of valuation, but it also has the unenviable distinction of being the one city in the state whose expenditure for maintenance show the smallest percentage of total charges against revenue,—56.50 per cent, while 25.18 per cent was expended to meet debt requirement.—the largest proportionate expenditure for this purpose of any of the cities,—and 18.31 per cent to meet interest charges. As a contrast the city showing the largest percentage of maintenance chargeable to revenue is Springfield, 86.08 per cent being expended for this purpose: 7.67 per cent being expended for debt requirements; and 6.25 per cent for interest charges. For illustration, in 1908 the revenue of Quincy for current charges was $668.069 and for the same year the current charge against this revenue were $749.562, making an excess of expenditure over receipts of $81,493, being an increase of the city's deficiency of revenue of $37,823 over that of the preceding year. Dividing this $749,562 into three items we find that $423,540, was expended for maintenance; $137,225 for interest; and $188,796 for debt requirements. Out of a total expenditure of $749,562 the sum of $326,000 went for debt purposes.

It is such high finance as this that creates dissension and talk of dividing the city into conveniently administered towns at a minimum of expense.

If the setting off of Wollaston (the D. Granger & Son plan) should ever become a reality the town would take rank with Hingham, Fairhaven, Amherst, Lexington and others of 5,000 population. The total annual expenses of administering the affairs of a town of 5,000 population in a manner befitting modern ideas is, according to the returns made to the Massachusetts Bureau of Statistics, about $100,000. With a valuation of $5,000-000 this makes a $20 tax rate, every dollar of which would be spent in the town directly for and under the eyes of the people who pay the bills.

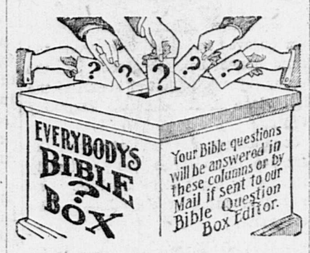

Fairhaven, with a population of 5122 is a typical New England town. Its expenditures for one year were $93,-411, roughly divided as follows:—

Fire and Police	$ 5203.
Health and Sanitation	4362.
General Government	6034.
Highways and bridges	19,131.
Charities	3356.
Soldiers' benefits	3002
Education	22,313.
Miscellaneous	470.
Interest	5516
Outlays	4431.
Debt	6500
Transfer	800.
State tax, etc	5983.
County tax	4264.
Sinking fund	1925.

I believe the time is coming when Wollaston will balk at the colossal financial blundering which for several years has been an ever increasing burden until now it has reached such proportions that a $25 tax rate will soon be with us. Wollaston as a separate town with $100,000 spent annually by its up-to-date business men would be an ideal community.

JAMES S. WHITING.

Wollaston, Feb. 8, 1912.

Q.—What is meant by the term "Doomsday?" (A. B. C.)

Answer.— It is that last dreadful day in the which (according to the antiquated theories of an obsolete theological formation) the Lord will return to the earth, and take His seat upon a great white throne, and then all nations will be gathered before Him for judgment. As the judgments proceed, the mountains and the rocks will come tumbling down, and the sea and the waves will roar under the agitations of a mighty storm. About this time a terrible earthquake will shake things up so severely that all things that can be shaken will be removed. In connection with these trifling phenomena of nature, there will be the sounding of the last trump and tremendous voices will be heard on the air. Amidst this deafening uproar, while "the wreck of matter and the crush of worlds" is transpiring, the 20,000,000,000 and more of the human race will be judged, and all within the limitations of a twenty-four hour day! When the final summing up takes place, the Great Judge will invite the few saints, "the little flock," to enter into the conditions of bliss, while to the vast majority of the race He will issue the command to depart into an eternity of torment in fire and brimstone. With the pronouncement of the final sentence of doom, a terrible fire will break forth; the elements shall melt with fervent heat; and the heavens and earth being on fire shall be dissolved! This lurid picture of the judgment time was evidently formed by some one with highly developed imaginative powers, who gathered together a number of symbolic and figurative expressions from the Scriptures with which to produce this amusing sketch of "doomsday," which has served to frighten some good and bad children nearly to death!

QUESTION OF LOANS TO CHINA

Effort to Put Attitude of Nations on Public Record

KNOX'S NOTE TO THE POWERS

Will Explain That America Is Opposed to Anything Save Concerted Action In Regard to Financial Assistance, as Loans Eventually Become Basis of Military Movements—Strict Neutrality Insisted Upon

Washington, Feb. 9.—Secretary Knox's note to Count von Berstorff, the German ambassador, just made public, is taken to be the preliminary of an expected exchange of notes between the United States, Germany, Great Britain, France, Japan and Russia, which would be of immense importance in placing all these powers on record for concerted action and common understanding in the protection of the integrity of China.

The state department in its note defines the attitude of the United States toward China in the conditions now prevailing in that country. This note, addressed to the German ambassador, in reply to an inquiry from him, follows conversations that have been conducted of late between Knox and all the representatives of the powers accredited here.

These exchanges of views have been wholly informal and have been suggested by the present condition of affairs in China. There has been practical unanimity of feeling in regard to the phases of interest that now engage the attention of the powers. It is obvious to all that in the more or less formless and recrystalizing state of the Chinese, a foundation might be laid in international agreements involving China that hereafter might lead to difficulty.

There have been symptoms of particular activity on the part of Russia and Japan which are of concern to other powers, as, for instance, the disposition made of Outer Mongolia a few weeks ago. There are also known in financial centres projects in the way of financial assistance in the progressive elements of China which have a decided international interest.

The experience of every government in regard to loans that eventually become the basis of military movements has been so abundant that this consideration could not fail to prompt a vigilant survey of the present situation. The fact that the powers are so nearly one in the view that there is no necessity for intervention minimizes the danger that there should be an attempt by any power to intervene, and later, as a reward for assistance, receive territorial advantages.

The state department's note recites previous agreements between the powers as to neutrality, the policy of concerted action, the co-operation of all in the protection of their common interests, and the common understanding against independent action or any interference in China.

The concert of the powers thus far having been maintained unbroken the question of loans to China is naturally the important matter left to be considered, and the Knox note is intended to deal directly and conclusively with this.

The agreement suggested is that nations who undertake loans to China shall still observe strict neutrality between the two factions, that nations thus making loans shall have the approval of thier governments, and that such loans shall not be made without the common consent of the powers. By such an understanding, it is believed, undue advantage will not accrue to any one power, and the common interests of all will be best preserved and protected.

Copies of the note have been sent to all the representatives of the powers. The views expressed by Knox have received the assent of all the representatives of the powers here.

AN UNSOLVED MYSTERY

Police Fail to Find Clues In the Taylor Murder Case

New York, Feb. 9.—Unless the police are able to unearth more promising clues than those they have thus far been following, the mystery involved in the killing of Mrs. Helen Taylor by the explosion of an infernal machine seems likely to go down in the annals of New York criminal history unsolved.

After a thorough investigation by the best detectives on the force, the police admit that they have no idea of the identity of the person who sent the death package to Mrs. Taylor, and can not find a motive for the crime.

DOINGS ON THE STAGE OF

LOCAL AND BOSTON THEATRES

"NAZIMOVA"

For the next two weeks beginning Feb. 12, Nazimova, under the direction of Charles Frohman, will appear at the Hollis Street Theatre in "The Marionettes," a comedy from the French of Pierre Wolff. No stage personality of the present day is more interesting than this adopted Russian who, in the short space of seven years, has reached a position of commanding importance upon the stage of a country whose language was utterly unknown to her when she first visited its shores as a member of practically a strolling band of players from her native land.

Nazimova had served a long and trying novitiate in her own country, accumulating technique under some of the best Russian stage managers, and this equipment added to a remarkable personality caused her to leap into immediate fame in New York even though she had never been heard of before, and was appearing in an unknown language in a foreign theatre far, from the usual haunts of the metropolitan playgoer.

So amazing was the impression she created and so evident her mental capacity, that almost immediately there sprang into existence a demand, it was little less, that she study and appear in English. This she did, acquiring the language in an incredibly short space of time, and her accomplishments since then have been ones that have redounded to the glory of both herself and the American stage.

"The Marionettes," is from the same pen whence came that delightful comedy, "The Secret of Polichinelle" and that strong story of French family life, "The Lily." It is a story of a modest, untutored little country girl who has married a man whose only interest in her has been through the fortune she brought him. He is a member of a fast, ultra-gay set in Paris in which the wife is sadly out of place, and she is soon left entirely to herself, while the husband pursues his former course of dissipation. Neglected and humiliated, the country mouse awakens to a realization that it is only by assuming the attributes of the women who appeal to him, that she will have any chance to win his respect, attention and love. To think is to act, and she bursts forth into the gayest butterfly of them all. Naturally attractive, and using every art in adornment and every fascination which she can muster, she soon becomes the toast of Paris. Admirers flock to her, none more ardent than her husband, but she rebuffs him with as much indifference as he had shown to her. When she is convinced that she has won what she set out to win, the play ends happily with the reconciliation of husband and wife.

"THE WEDDING TRIP."

Shubert's production of Reginald De Koven's latest comic opera "The Wedding Trip" which has been running in New York with much success, will be the attraction at the Majestic Theatre with the same remarkable cast which was selected by the composer to interpret his work. The book is by Harry B. Smith and Fred De Gresac. The score is said to be every bit as musical and as tuneful as delightful Robin Hood. The finales are extended and important and while the music is written from an artistic standpoint there is an abundance of popular melody from beginning to end, and those who have heard the score have spoken of it as that work of Mr. De Koven's most likely to be attuned to the present taste in music. The Shuberts have given the opera a most elaborate staging, and while "The Wedding Trip" may recall some earlier comic opera success, nothing in the present piece has been done along conventional lines, this being equally true as to the costuming and staging.

The Boston engagement is limited to one week only.

"THE LITTLEST REBEL"

An event of supreme importance and paramount interest to theatregoers of this city is the forthcoming engagement of those sterling stars, Dustin Farnum and William Farnum, in Edward Peple's masterpiece of dramatic writing, "The Littlest Rebel." In mounting and producing this massive attraction, Mr. A. H. Woods has exhausted the resources of modern stage-craft and given to the public a spectacular, truthful and memorable picture, not only of the most interesting pages from the Civil War's history, but, as well, an overwhelmingly tender and sympathic stage painting of the human side of the great struggle.

The story of "The Littlest Rebel" is a simple and effective one. A father—scout in the Confederate cause—steals through the lines of the enemy to carry food to his child a little miss of seven, who plays with her dollies in an old log-house, and exists on acorn coffee and blueberries except when her father comes with bread and meat. And it is while on one of these visits to his baby that the scout is traced and captured by a Northern officer, Colonel Morrison. Touched, however, by the child's plea and the father's pitiful condition and commendable purpose, the Colone. permits the scout to escape. This breach of war discipline is discovered by an envious brother officer, the Colonel's act betrayed and the two men involved taken prisoners and sentenced by courtmartial, the one to be hung as a traitor, the other to be shot as a spy. Again the "Littlest Rebel," as the child is called, intervenes, and so impresses General Grant with her looks and her words that the prisoners are released and sent their various ways with reprimands.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

"The Product of the Mill," the new Harvard-Radcliffe Prize Play which begins its third week at the Castle Square on Monday, is given this high praise by the Drama League of Boston in its weekly bulletin. A timely drama, dealing with a sociological theme—child labor—and dealing with it in a strong womanly way, Constructionally, this piece is admirably simple and direct. Miss McFadden has withstood many temptations for sub-plots and sociological discussion. She has stuck to the simple play, with simple yet varied and definite characterization, and simple and direct dialogue. There is an absence of "talk." The whole theme of the play is acted and visualized before us. For instance, we cite a scene where the mothers beat on the door for entrance to the mill, when the rumor spreads that a child has been managled by the machines. The whole company played excellently and with admirable ensemble. Mr. Craig is to be thanked for his intelligent enterprise. The public, young and old are strongly urged to attend. Among the good acting in "The Product of the Mill" is that of Mary Young, John Craig, Henrietta McDaniel, Madeline Moore and George Hassell.

"THE PINK LADY"

"The Pink Lady," distinctively the bright particular spot of Boston's amusements will celebrate its 75th performance at the Colonial Theatre with a St. Valentine souvenir matinee Wednesday, upon which occasion an exquisitely designed, hand painted silk and embroidered valentine pertinent to the day and the occasion will be presented to every lady in attendance, irrespective of the price of the seat purchased. The alluring fascination of this gem of musical comedy is just as attractive as its long run nears the end as upon its first performances at the Colonial Theatre where the cogency of its appeal is just as strong in drawing enormous audiences, whose laughter and applause heartily respond to the humorous episodes, clever complications, bright sparkling music and the many delights contained in this, distinctly the best musical play of the season. "The Pink Lady" is now in its last weeks as the entire production and cast will shortly be presented in London. The performance will not be seen elsewhere in New England and the only opportunity for witnessing "The Pink Lady" with its present cast will be at the remaining performances of its engagement at the Colonial Theatre, Boston.

PLYMOUTH THEATRE.

Have you heard of the much talked of mother-scene of "The Herfords"? It is being discussed by all those who have already witnessed this absorbing sympathic scene of the play in which Miss Viola Allen, America's most popular actiress, and a great cast are appearing at the Plymouth Theatre, Boston. On Monday the play enters upon the fourth week of its engagement. Since the initial performance in Boston, the play has been increasing in popularity and the audiences have become larger and even more appreciative. The scene in the final act between Miss Viola Allen (the mother) and Miss Beatrice Prentice (the daughter) is intensely human. To quote the Boston Post: "The scene between mother and daughter is one of the best which Boston has witnessed in a long time." "The Herfords" is one of those plays, which deals with a question uppermost in the minds of all women that no one can afford to miss. Many of its dialogues are rich, bright and breezy while at other times they are mingled with a touch of tender pathos. In short the play is clean and wholesome that any man, woman or child may witness without the slightest blush of shame. Miss Allen, who is seen for the first time in her career in the role of a mother, is at her best and is surrounded by a most notable cast.

"BARON TRENCK."

The attraction at the Shubert Theatre for the second and last week, beginning Feb. 12, will be the Whitney Opera Company in the new Viennese comic opera, "Baron Trenck." The reputation lately established by the Whitney Opera Company in its presentation of "The Chocolate Soldier" is a matter of record to New England theatre-goers and this fact will go not a little way in arousing extraordinary interest in this new production. Mr. F. C. Whitney has spent nearly a year in preparing for the American production of this opera. It has been termed a true comic opera in Washington, Baltimore and Philadelphia, the only cities in which it has been presented in this country preparatory to the Boston engagement, the story being based upon the adventures of Francois Baron Trenck, the noted partisan colonel and commander-in-chief of the Pandours, in the service of her majesty the Empress Queen Maria Theresa.

From all accounts the score is saturated with tuneful, brilliant and sparking ensembles, while the music is of the most charming and melodic character.

The music, while of the highest character is of that quality which is at once caught upon the lips of the receptive whistler, and the beautiful waltz themes have already become as much the rage as did the waltz in "The Merry Widow," and in "The Chocolate Soldier." The action which covers two acts and three scenes takes place in Silesia, in 1759. Needless to say that the scenes and the period give ample opportunity for wonderful costuming and picturesque scenic efefcts.

B. F. KEITH'S

The Four Mortons, Sam, Kitty, Paul and Clara, known as "The most amusing family on earth," and whose fame has spread to every nook and corner of the United States, will head the bill at B. F. Keith's Theatre next week in a new act never before seen in Boston. It has been several years since the Mortons appeared in this city. Their new act includes a little bit of everything, with singing, dancing, dialogue, musicalities, and just plain fun, a staple article of entertainment for which the Mortons have long been famous. This versatile family will be but one feature of a splendid show, chiefly remarkable for the great number of new acts it includes. One of the most pretentious of these is Alber's Polar Bears, a wonderful troupe of animal actors that includes some of the largest and finest specimens in captivity. Herr Alber has just closed a long engagement at the New York Hippodrome, where his pets proved the talk of all New York. Another act that has originality written over it will be Joe Jackson, the pantominist. Jackson never speaks a word, but he manages to keep his audiences in a constant scream of delight. James Callahan and Jonny St. George will present their character classic, "The Old Neighborhood," and other features will be Lewis and Dody., in a character singing act; the Meredith Sisters, "the maids who made Hiawatha famous;" and Bertish, the modern Hercules.

DRAMA GIVEN BY DORCAS SOCIETY

There was a very large audience at the Universalist vestry Thursday evening at the dramatic entertainment given under the auspices of the Dorcas society of the church. The drama presented was "The Blundering Mr. Brown" and was given in three acts. The first scene was laid in a room of Mr. Brown's house, the time being evening; scene second being two evenings later and the third scene the following evening.

The principal character, Mr. Brown was impersonated by Bertram G. Barnes. He was a very successful man in a business way, but an awful blunderer in the matrimonial line and he caused no end of merriment. The character of Mrs. Brown, a clever social success, but a little hard on the head of the house, was impersonated by Mrs. Robert G. Reed. Both of these characters were exceptionally well taken. In fact it can be said that all were equally good. Everett Andrews made a capital policeman, although a little sentimental and not good at catching thieves. Bartlett Spooner was a young bank clerk with a small salary but matrimonially a poor proposition, Freeman Hyland, was Dr. Horton a wealthy physician, and matrimonially a good business proposition.

Other characters were Miss Katherine Reed as Clara Brown, the adopted daughter of Daniel, Edith Hyland as Bessie Brown, the niece and ward waiting to come into her inheritance and Maude H. Cudworth as Maggie Murphy, the sentimental servant and maid of all work

Between the acts there were pleasing musical selections by Miss Dora Wentworth at the piano and Master Percy Ames violinist. The whole entertainment was well staged and presented in a manner reflecting great credit on those taking part.

MIDWINTER MEETING.

Massachusetts State Federation of Women's Clubs in Boston.

For three consecutive years the mid-winter meeting of the Massachusetts State Federation has been held in Park Street church, Boston, this year on Thursday, as the guest of the Woman's club of the church. The morning session was called to order at ten o'clock by the president, Mrs. Henry Coolidge Mulligan. Mrs George F .F. Roberts, president of the hostess club, welcomed the delegates in the name of her club to which Mrs. Mulligan graciously responded.

The first of the session was in the hands of the Legislative department, when Mrs. Snow Rich, chairman, presented bills now before the Legislature for action by the Federation. This business having been disposed of, the convention turned its attention to the consideration of educational subjects. Prof. Benjamin R. Andrews of Columbia University was the first speaker and his subject, "The Trend of Modern Education."

From one-thirty to two o'clock Harris S. Shaw, A. A. G. O., of the Columbus Avenue Universalist church gave an organ recital, after which Mrs. Sara T. S. Leighton, chairman of the special committee on Settlement Work, presented Miss Margaret E. Henry at Maryville college, who told of "Work among the Southern Mountaineers." Miss Henry's address was of particular interest to the club women from the fact that many of the clubs are supporting scholarships at Maryville college and that Miss Henry has supervised the work at Happy Valley, Tennessee, where the Federation has carried on summer settlement work for a number of years. The closing address was given by Hon. Philander B. Claxton, United States Commissioner of Education, on the ever timely subject, "The Home and the School."

FROCKS FOR SOUTHERN WEAR.

Prophecies of Summer Modes—Parisian Touches—Taffeta Hats—Ratine Cloth—Cottons.

The great array of hats and frocks brought out for Southern wear are of interest to stay at homes who like to plan outfits ahead and must have advanced information to make their planning worth while. Manufacturers and merchants are lamenting over the decline in trade due to the plain and simple lines of present day fashions but the woman who is clever at making her clothes at home, is certainly having her innings since a very few yards of material, cut after a good pattern, turns out a gown much more effective than its cost would indicate.

The above designs are by The McCall Company, New York, Designers and Makers of McCall Patterns.

A PAQUIN GOWN.

The general lines remain scant and straight with only a very few notable changes. The lip yoke is again shown probably because it is so distinctly in line with other Oriental types now modish. Paquin has sent over a changeable green taffeta frock—as said before changeable taffetas will be the rage shortly—with a yoke extending about six inches below the waist at the sides and back, and lapped over in front, the edges outlined by two rows of stitching. The skirt is atached in narrow box pleats, quite wide apart, and not stitched down. Above the hem there is a tuck, and down the middle of the front is a two inch band of white lace insertion, plaited across, held down by small black buttons at either side. A wide girdle of folded silk comes nearly to the bust, and the upper part of the waist is of white chiffon overlaid with black chiffon. Bretelles over the shoulder are of lace and taffeta, and a band of taffeta finishes the three-quarter sleeve.

BORDER POSSIBILITIES.

Borders, and borders and no end of borders on silk, cottons and linen weaves, with combinations of thick and thin and contrasting materials of all sorts is a prominent trend of coming styles that lends its aid to smart economy not recognizable as such for economy that can be descried a block away is not a brand that appeals to anyone. While almost any coloring goes with present fashions the news from Paris is that a dull rose is the faddish thing there just now, and of course it will come here soon.

A SUIT NOVELTY

Perhaps the cotton Ratine that has been spoken of before in these letters is the most pronounced novelty in cotton suitings. Whether it will catch on can not now be determined but it looks like a good probabitly. The stuff resembles Terry cloth, or Turkish towelling very closely, only that the nap is shorter and not so thick, and in many cases there are narrow hair lines of black on the white or ecru grounds. The material is shown also with colored dyes but this is not likely to take. The trouble is that a suit can not well be cleaned at home and it will need constant renewal to remain attractive.

FOR HOME DRESSMAKING

Every year women buy pretty cotton fabrics earlier, for they have discovered that it is the early shopper that secures the choicest patterns. This year through the cleverness of a well-known Scotch manufacturer of fine ginghams, anyone can go to the counters where his goods are sold and secure without cost a smart little book of advance fashions for women and children, which may be suitably made up in zephyrs with "Wm. Anderson" woven on the selvage. Colorings and patterns are simply fascinating this season, and plain colorings that exactly match the prevailing tint in striped, blocked or plaided patterns, permit the greatest possible variety of stylish combinations. With each design the number of yards is given thus insuring accurate buying and avoiding haste.

TAFFETA HATS.

Hats draped with black or changeable taffetas are a late Parisian touch practical for travelling or general wear. These have no other trimming than the silk which is draped in many ways and ends at the back in a huge bow or in ends wired to stand up on lines found becoming.

OPPOSES THE REFERENDUM

Harmon Wants It Tested Elsewhere Before Ohio Tries It

Columbus, O., Feb. 9.—Governor Harmon came out flat-footed in opposition to the incorporation of the initative and referendum into the Ohio constitution when he addressed the constitutional convention upon their invitation.

He declared that the initiative and referendum was still in an experimental stage and desired to wait and see how it works out in other states before making a test of it in this state.

Mountain Climbers Find Craters

Ferrell, Ida., Feb. 9.—When a party of mountain climbers returned from the top of Mount Wiessners, in the Coeur d'Alene range, they told of the existence of four craters on the extreme summit, from which vapor was ascending. The snow about the craters was melted as around the top of a chimney.

THE LIFE-SAVING SERVICE

Treasury Department Shows Hostile Attitude Toward It

Washington, Feb. 9.—That officials of the treasury department have been attempting to legislate life-saving superintendents out of their position by the simple process of striking their salary items from the sundry civil appropriation bill has become known here.

This move is in the interest of the revenue cutter men, who, it is stated are becoming desperate over the prospect of losing their places. For some time the attitude of the department toward the life-saving service has been hostile.

From all parts of the country stories are coming into Washington proving conclusively that there is a concerted attempt on the part of the revenue cutter service to absorb the life-saving service. It would seem from the indications that if congress does not speedily interfere the life-saving service as now constituted will become a thing of the past.

PORTUGAL'S GREAT FLOOD

Lives and Property Lost by Overflow of the River Tagus

Lisbon, Feb. 9.—The number of victims of the floods in Portugal is not yet known, but it will be large. Large numbers of injured are being cared for in hospitals in the flooded district.

The River Tagus is a raging torrent, carrying seaward on its tempestuous current corpses and merchandise of all kinds. Many barges which were anchored in the navigable section of the Tagus were sunk at the first onslaught of the flood current; others were swept seaward with a great mass of debris from the upper part of the river, including uprooted trees and the bodies of cattle and livestock.

Crops throughout the flooded district are ruined and all communication by wire is severed. The chamber voted $500,000 to aid victims of the disaster.

PREVENT EXTINCTION OF MIGRATORY BIRDS

Object of Measure to Be Urged Before Congress

Washington, Feb. 9.—John B. Burnham, president, and William S. Haskell, vice president and counsel of the American Game Protective and Propagation association, are in Washington to urge the passage of a bill for federal protection of migratory birds.

Enlightened sportsmen throughout the country agree that such a bill is necessary to prevent the speedy and total extinction of certain migrants. They point to at least two cases—that of the wild pigeon and the Esquimaux curlew—in which shooting during the breeding season has resulted in annihilation. The woodcock and wood duck are in immediate danger of a like fate as a result of unrestricted shooting.

Many species which have been driven from their former breeding grounds would stop with us again, if on their arrival in the spring they were not greeted with deadly fusillades which compel them to continue northward.

CONDUCTING A LOTTERY

A man who gave his name as James T. Mullen, of Quincy, was arrested in Brockton, Wednesday for conducting a lottery and was arraigned in court Thursday. He pleaded guilty and said that he was selling a piano to pay the funeral expenses of his wife who recently died.

He was arrested at the railroad station for drunkenness and on being searched the lottery slips came to light. He told the police that he had sold six tickets at 25 cents each. He claimed to have nine children. In view of these facts Judge Reed placed his case on file, and he was allowed to return to Quincy.

READY TO MEET MILL OWNERS

Lawrence Strikers Are Willing to Enter Conference

TEN MEN FROM EACH SIDE

Employers Think Committee Would Be Too Large and Say Number Present Shall Not Exceed Five on Each Side—Strikers Will Make No Change In Original Demands—Scale Schedule Being Drawn Up by Skilled Operatives—Unique Demonstration by Strikers' Children Being Planned by Haywood—Parades In New York, Philadelphia and Washington

Lawrence, Mass., Feb. 9.—Only a disagreement as to the size of a committee of conference seems to stand in the way of an early meeting between the mill owners and their operatives, about 15,000 of whom have been on strike for a month.

The strike committee of the Industrial Workers of the World, the organization which has controlled the strike from the outset, announced last night that it was willing to enter a conference with the mill owners but insisted that ten members be present from each.

The mill owners, it is understood on good authority, stand ready to confer with a committee of the strikers over the latters' grievances, but declare that the number present at such a conference shall not exceed five on each side. Both sides object to the presence of any third party, and the most that any mediators can do, it is believed, is to arrange the details of meeting.

Despite the assertion yesterday by William Yeates that the strike is farther than ever from an end, both he and William D. Haywood express themselves as favorable to such a consultation. The official decision of the Industrial Workers of the World comittee will be given today.

However, if the strikers do meet the owners, they declare there will be no change in their original demands. The manufacturers can expect no compromise, they say, and the proposition which it is reported the mills are willing to offer, of fifty-six hours' pay for fifty-four hours' work, will not be considered. It is intended to hold out for the 15 per-cent increase, with double pay for overtime and the abolition of the premium system.

The avowed intention of the legislative committee is to bring together for a general peace movement the warring factions among the strikers, who are divided among the American Federation of Labor and the Industrial Workers of the World.

The mill owners, it is understood, will be inclined to consider demands made by the older organization rather than any presented by the newer body. It is hoped that delegates from each of the labor bodies can be induced to meet the manufacturers.

Representatives Meaney, Ellis, Bellamy and Rideout, comprising the portion of the committee to confer with the operatives, reached Lawrence at noon yesterday. They went directly to the city hall, where they held a conference with Mayor Scanlon.

Then they visited the strike committee at its headquarters, but as only a few members were present it was impossible to take any official action on an agreement in regard to the conference. The legislators returned to the city hall and again held a conference with the mayor that lasted until late in the evening.

Bellamy declared that the committee will remain in Lawrence until peace is secured, or until the members are convinced that a settlement is impossible.

Numerous meetings were held yesterday of the skilled operatives, who are drawing up a scale schedule under direction of the Central Labor union. They declare themselves willing, however, to meet the manufacturers before this work is completed, if by so doing they can expedite a settlement.

I. W. W. organizers still are busy, and each day sees a steady increase in the number enrolled in the body.

Haywood is planning for a unique demonstration of strikers' children in New York and Philadelphia, ending with a final appeal at the Capitol in Washington. He is arranging for a special train to leave Saturday over the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad for New York. The children will parade down Broadway, carrying banners with announcements "We can't parade in Lawrence, so we have to come to New York," and "Products of the mills." It is hoped to have several hundred in line.

The preliminary hearing today of the cases against Joseph J. Ettor and his aide, Arturo Giovannitti, charging them with being accessories to the murder of Annie Lopizzo, killed in a fight between rioters and police, is awaited with interest by both sides.

Strike leaders declare that no matter what action is taken by the court, it will be regarded as a victory for their cause. If Ettor and Giovannitti are held without bonds to the grand jury, they say, the striking operatives will be encouraged by the belief that the mill owners are afraid to have them at large; if they are released it will mean a strengthening of the ranks by a restoration of two capable organizing heads.

Cost of Maintaining Militia

Boston, Feb. 9.—The expense of keeping the militia in Lawrence has been $42,000 up to date, and the cost per day is $4000, according to a report which Adjutant General Pearson submitted to Governor Foss yesterday afternoon. The governor at once sent the report to the legislature.

The adjutant general says that his regular department appropriation will be utterly inadequate to take care of the extraordinary expenses due to duty on the Lawrence strike. The cost of winter equipment has been $7000.

The house yesterday refused to vote $10,000 for the aid of the Lawrence strikers. The committee on rules voted against it on the statement of the attorney general that it was unconstitutional, and the house accepted the report.

EXTORTION CHARGED

Mrs. Green Added Interest to Mortgage on Hearst Properties

New York, Feb. 9.—Mrs. Hetty Green "attempted to extort money" from William R. Hearst, according to C. M. Bovee, attorney for the editor, who obtained an order in court directing Mrs. Green to appear and show cause why she should not be compelled to accept $275,000 with interest up till last Monday in payment of a mortgage she held on Hearst properties.

Mrs. Green, Bovee said, refused to cancel the mortgage until the payment of $1145 additional interest, which, he said, she claimed, when Hearst's representative called on her last Monday.

Bovee withdrew the order yesterday afternoon, saying that Mrs. Green had "capitulated" and turned over the mortgage for the amount named by Hearst.

IS WILLING TO FACE A PRISON SENTENCE

R'ght of Free Speech Will Not Be Forfeited by Gompers

Washington, Feb. 9. — "The speeches I made during 1908 were in support of the candidate and the party which promised the labor movement relief from the system of federal injunctions which has grown up. They voiced my political beliefs. I made these speeches because I believe in the right of free speech. If because of the exercise of that right I must go to jail, and I would feel the loss of my liberty keenly, I will face that jail sentence and will not flinch."

Samuel Gompers made that statement in the supreme court of the District of Columbia, where he is on trial for contempt. He admitted that he made speeches in Indianapolis and Baltimore which attorneys who are prosecuting him insist were contempt of court.

DYNAMITE DEFENSE FUND

Union Men Throughout Country Will Be Asked to Contribute

Chicago, Feb. 9.—Alton B. Parker, former Democratic candidate for president, has been picked by Chicago labor leaders as the man whom they will ask to appear as leading counsel in the trials of the men who have been caught by the thirty-two indictments returned at Indianapolis in the labor dynamite conspiracy.

A conference of labor leaders was held here to consider plans for the defense fund. Every union workingman in the country will be asked to contribute at least one day's wages upon the plea that the new indictments are a direct attempt of big business to break down the pillar of union labor.

HANDS TERRIBLY BURNED

Pittsfield Electrician Survives Shock of Thirty Thousand Volts

Pittsfield, Mass., Feb. 9.—Joseph Cull, employed in the transformer test department at the General Electric plant, is in the Hillcrest hospital as the result of a marvelous escape from electrocution.

Cull, while at work, picked up with both hands a live wire, containing 30,000 volts of electricity.

His hands were fearfully burned, but it is thought that the use of them can be saved. For some unknown reason the electricity did not go through his body, and in that way his life was saved.

SUPPRESSION OF A REPORT

Seeking Motive of Wilson in the Everglades Case

INSIDE HISTORY OF MATTER

Powerful Corporate and Political Influences Said to Be at Work to Discredit Reclamation Service—Dismissals From Department of Agriculture Said to Have Been Due to Certain Irregularities

Washington, Feb. 9.—That Secretary Wilson of the department of agriculture will be shown to have ordered the suppression of a public document, that Solicitor McCabe will appear in the role of supporting his chief in his suppression, that the dismissal of Chief Engineer Elliot by the department was for the good of the service, and that powerful corporate and political influences are at work to discredit the reclamation service of the state of Florida—these will be the important acts disclosed in the "Everglades case," about to be opened by the Moss committee.

In order to get a clear idea of the situation as it stands today, it is necessary to review some history. It appears, first, that in May, 1909, J. O. Wright, a drainage expert of the department of agriculture, undertook, at the request of the state of Florida, to make an extensive survey of the Everglades with a view of determining whether they should be reclaimed. Wright's report happened to come to the attention of a New York engineer by the name of Morgan, who declared that certain of Wright's findings were incorrect and that the report should not be made public till Elliot returned to Washington.

Upon his return, Elliot, who was not a drainage expert, rewrote the Wright report. When his document was submitted to Wilson, he endeavored to smooth over the differences of opinion. There followed a series of revisions, and about this time, certain members of the Florida congressional delegation appeared upon the scene, pulling and hauling Wilson this way and that.

The conclusion of it all was that Wilson ordered the report to be suppressed. It remained suppressed till a senate resolution of Aug. 7, 1911, desired its publication. It is now a public document.

There is no question as to the fact of this suppression, for it is admitted by Wilson as well as by McCabe. To the Moss committee will be assigned the unpleasant task of ascertaining if this suppression was in public interest or whether it was similar to the manipulating of documents in the Wiley case.

The second phase of the investigation will take up the dismissal of Elliot, chief engineer of the drainage division, and A. D. Moorehouse, his assistant, and the suspension of the auditor for the department, F. J. Singleton. It is stated by high officials of the department that these dismissals have nothing to do with the suppression of the Everglades report, but are the outcome of the irregularities which these men permitted to take place in 1909 and which have just been brought to light by the department inspector.

The investigation will show, it is said, Elliot and the other two men were not dismissed for opposing secretly, and, it will be charged, maliciously, a government conservation policy, but instead on technical grounds of doubtful importance.

Third, as to the political string which has set the whole outfit jumping. The string was pulled a few days ago by Representative Clark of Florida. Clark, it seems, belongs to the Flagler interests which control the eastern coast of the state down to the Keys upon which Flagler has just completed his railroad. Clark's opponent for congress is R. H. Burr, chairman of the state railroad commission, a body of three men who have been fighting to reduce railroad rates.

Clark, and until very recently the Flagler railroad as well, have been blocking the state's Everglade reclamation plans at every turn. Clark's purpose, therefore, in starting the Moss committee again on the warpath is said by some to strike at men like Burr as well as at J. O. Wright, the author of the Everglades report and now the chief engineer of the Everglades drainage project, a project not of private promoters but of the state of Florida.

The candidate for governor of Florida, Mr. Gibbons, is with Clark in the present fight. The majority of the congressional delegation are strongly in favor of the Everglades proposition.

Such is the bare outline of the underlying features of the case which is about to be tried by the Moss committee here in Washington.

PAPER BAG COOKING

Great System Perfected by M. Soyer, Famous London Chef.

GETS THE GOOD OUT OF FOOD.

By Martha McCulloch Williams.

Eating serves a double purpose—the giving of pleasure, the keeping up of strength. Ill-cooked food reduces both to a minimum—hence the proverb: "God sends meat and the devil sends cooks." Possibly his satanic majesty now and again nods. It must have been in such a somnolent interval that he let M. Soyer's system of paper bag cooking get by him. For unquestionably it is in the way of reducing ill-cooking at least one-half. Thereby it will help to feed fat all the nations of the earth.

The use of cooking is to change the nature of food substances, making them at once better tasting and more digestible. Heat works by developing flavors and transforming substances. Its most important office is, however, to break down fiber, animal and vegetable, to such a degree as to render it easily digestible. If it is to do this it must be properly applied. That is to say, gently, regularly.

Simple food, well cooked, is the foundation of happiness—and paper bag cooking means good cooking.

It follows naturally that the paper bag is especially useful in preparing food for delicate persons, and growing children. Here follow some dishes that have helped build up weak and wasted people. That they will be likewise good for children, especially delicate ones, admits of no doubt.

Pigeon Roast.—Take a squab, a squab-chicken as small as possible, or a quail, dress it whole, stuff lightly with toasted bread crumbs, adding a raisin or two, or shreds of tart apple. Season very lightly inside before stuffing. Rub a little more salt outside, but only a little. Rub also with soft butter, not melted, and dredge very lightly with flour. Then wrap in bacon, sliced as thin as possible, and put into a buttered bag with a half teaspoonful of water. Seal and cook in a hot oven twenty to thirty minutes, depending on the size. The squab-chicken may require thirty-five minutes.

Shredded Wheat and Tomatoes.—Pour upon each shredded wheat biscuit required a teaspoonful of melted butter. Lay the buttered biscuit in a well-buttered bag and pile upon them thick slices of peeled tomatoes, well seasoned with sugar, salt, black and red pepper. Seal and cook for ten minutes. Serve on hot plates. A pleasing variant for children is to use instead of tomatoes, bananas peeled, cut in cubes, covered with sugar and lemon juice, and cooked for eight minutes. This can be served with cream.

PAPER BAG COOKED DISHES FOR INVALIDS AND CHILDREN.

By Nicholas Soyer, Chef of Brooks' Club, London.

Sweetbread Mackenzie.—Blanch and trim a good-sized sweetbread, make a little mirepoir of vegetables, paying attention to the color of the vegetables, and seeing that they do not brown. Cut the sweetbread across the center, but do not halve it. Pound one ounce of pistachios and lay them in the slit of the sweetbread. Cover the sweetbread with the prepared vegetables and place in a well-buttered bag. Cook in a slow oven for thirty minutes. Dish the sweetbread, place the other ingredients in a fine sieve and lightly press the gravy through, on to the sweetbread.

Chicken Quenelles.—Take the breast of one fowl, add a pint of white sauce, and a piece of butter the size of a walnut. Pound well, mix in one egg, pass through a hair sieve. Place in a basin, add a quarter pint of cream and stir well. Form into small quenelles with a spoon, place in a buttered bag, lay carefully on the broiler, and cook for six minutes in a hot oven.

Chicken and Rice Tea.—Chop up half a raw chicken, wash a tablespoonful of rice in cold water, and mix with the chicken. Wash a teaspoonful of pearl barley, and add with a quarter-pint of cold water. Put all together into a small paper bag, and cook forty to forty-five minutes in a slow oven.

Filletted Poultry for Invalids.—Mince fine a carrot, turnip and onion, add a little minced ham, a pinch of sugar and salt, and lay at the bottom of a small well-buttered bag. Slice the breast of a fowl—cooked—lay the slices upon the prepared vegetables, which were cooked before mincing, sprinkle with oiled butter, seal and cook six minutes in a slow oven. Dish the fillets, put the vegetables in a sieve and press the gravy from them over the fillets.

Beef Tea.—Put one pound of beef steak in a paper bag, seal it, and cook for twelve minutes in a moderate oven. Open the bag on a dish and you will find natural gravy about the meat. Cut up the steak, press out all juice from it, strain, season to taste, and serve at once in a hot cup. For chicken tea, cut up half a fresh fowl, break the bones with a chopper, put in bag with two tablespoonfuls cold water, seal and cook forty-five minutes in a slow oven. Strain into a hot cup, season and serve.

FRECKLES

By Gene Stratton-Porter

COPYRIGHT, 1904, BY DOUBLEDAY, PAGE & CO.

SYNOPSIS.

Freckles, a homeless boy, is hired by Boss McLean to guard the expensive timber in the Limberlost from timber thieves.

Freckles does his work faithfully, makes friends with the birds and yearns to know more about nature. He lives with Mr. and Mrs. Duncan.

He resolves to get books and educate himself. He becomes interested in a huge pair of vultures and calls his bird friends his "chickens."

Some of the trees he is guarding are worth $1,000 each. Freckles' books arrive. He receives a call from Wessner.

Wessner attempts to bribe Freckles to betray his trust, and Freckles whips him. McLean overhears them and witnesses the fight.

Freckles' honesty saves a precious tree. He finds the nest of the vultures and is visited by a beautiful young girl.

She calls Freckles McLean's son. Freckles calls her "the angel" and helps the Bird Woman in taking photographs. McLean promises to adopt Freckles.

Freckles and the angel become very friendly. Assisted by the Bird Woman, they drive Wessner and Black Jack, timber thieves, from the Limberlost.

McLean fears more trouble, but Freckles insists upon being the sole guard of the timber. Freckles calls upon the angel's father.

The angel receives him as her equal, and her father is kind. Mrs. Duncan has exciting adventures in the Limberlost.

The Bird Woman and the angel again visit Freckles, and Freckles falls in love with the angel. The angel kisses him.

Freckles is bound and gagged by Black Jack's gang, and the timber thieves start felling a very valuable tree.

CHAPTER XV.

THE ANGEL GOES FOR HELP.

"I SEE now you aren't the same man," said the angel. "You know, we were in Colorado last year, and there was a cowboy that was the handsomest man about. He'd come riding into town every night, and all we girls just adored him! Oh, but he was a beauty! I thought at first glance you were really he, but I see now he wasn't nearly so tall nor so broad as you and only half as handsome.

The men burst into a roar of laughter, and Jack flushed crimson. The angel joined in the laugh.

"Well, I'll leave it to you! Isn't he handsome?" she challenged. "As for that cowboy's face, it couldn't be compared with yours. The only trouble with you is that your clothes are spoiling you. It's the dress those cowboys wear that makes half their looks. If you were properly dressed you could break the heart of the prettiest girl in the country."

With one accord the other men focused on Black Jack and for the first time realized that he was a superb speciman of manhood, for he stood six feet tall, was broad, well rounded and had dark, even skin, big black eyes and full red lips.

"I'll tell you what!" exclaimed the angel. "I'd just love to see you on horseback. Nothing sets a handsome man off so splendidly. Do you ride?"

"Yes," said Jack, and his eyes were burning on the angel as if he would fathom the depths of her soul.

"Well," said the angel winsomely, "I know what I just wish you'd do. I wish you would let your hair grow a little longer. Then wear a blue flannel shirt a little open at the throat, a red tie and a broad brimmed felt hat and ride past my house of evenings. I'm always at home then and almost always on the veranda, and, oh, but I would like to see you! Will you do that for me?"

The angel was looking straight into Jack's face, coarse and hardened with sin and careless living, which was now taking on a wholly different expression. The evil lines of it were softening and fading out under her clear gaze. A dull red flamed into his bronze cheeks, and his eyes were growing brightly tender.

"Yes," he said, and the glance he shot at the men was of such a nature that no one saw fit even to change countenance.

"Oh, goody!" she cried, tilting on her toes. "I'll ask the girls to come to see, but they needn't stick in. We can get along without them, can't we?"

Jack leaned toward her. He was the charmed, fluttering bird, and the angel was the snake.

"Well, I rather guess!" he cried.

The angel drew a deep breath and looked him over rapturously.

"My, but you're tall!" she gurgled. "Do you suppose I will ever grow to reach your shoulders?

"Lariat Bill used always to have a bunch of red flowers in his shirt pocket, and the red lit up his dark eyes and olive cheeks and made his splendid. May I put a bunch of red flowers on you?"

Freckles' eyes popped, and he wheezed for breath. He wished that the earth would open and swallow him up. Was he dead or alive? Since his angel had set eyes on Black Jack she had never even glanced his way. Was she completely bewitched? Would she throw herself at the man's feet before them all? Couldn't she give him even one thought? Hadn't she seen he was ragged and bound? Did she truly think that these were McLean's men? Why, she couldn't. It was only a few days ago that she had been near enough like unto and angry enough with him to peel the hat from his head with a shot. Suddenly a thing she had jestingly said to him one day came back with startling force. "You must take angels on trust." Of course you must! She was his angel. She must have seen. His life and, what was far worse, her own were in her hands. There was nothing he could do but trust her. Surely she was working out some plan.

The angel knelt beside his flowerbed and recklessly tore up by the roots a big bunch of foxfire.

"These stems are so tough and sticky," she said. "I can't break them. Lend me your knife," she ordered Freckles.

As she reached for the knife her back was one second toward the men. She looked into his eyes and deliberately winked.

She severed the stems, tossed the knife back to Freckles and, walking up to Jack, laid the flowers over his heart.

Freckles broke into a sweat of agony. He had said she would be safe in a herd of howling savages. Would she? If Black Jack even made a motion toward touching her Freckles knew that from somewhere he would muster the strength to kill him. He mentally measured the distance to where his club lay and set his muscles for a spring. But, no! The big fellow was baring his head with a hand that was unsteady. The angel pulled one of the long silver pins from her hat and fastened her flowers securely.

Freckles was quaking. What was to come next?

As the angel stepped back from Jack she turned her head to one side and peered up at him, just as Freckles had seen the little yellow fellow do on the line a hundred times, and said: "Well, that does the trick! Isn't that fine? See how it sets him off, boys! Don't you forget the tie is to be red and the first ride soon. I can't wait very long. Now I must go. The Bird Woman will be ready to start, and she will come here hunting me next, for she is busy today. What did I come here for anyway?"

She glanced inquiringly about, and several of the men laughed. Oh, the delight of it! She had forgot her errand for him! Jack had a second increase in height. The angel glanced helplessly about as if seeking a clew. Then her eyes fell, as if by accident, on Freckles.

"It's mighty risky for you to be crossing the swamp alone," he said. "I know it's a little farther, but it's begging you I am to be going back by the trail."

The angel laughed merrily.

"Oh, stop your nonsense!" she cried. "I'm not afraid—not in the least!"

Freckles turned to Jack imploringly.

"You tell her!" he pleaded. "Tell her to go by the trail. She will for you."

The implication of this statement was so gratifying to Black Jack that he seemed again to expand and take on increase before their very eyes.

"You bet!" exclaimed Jack. And to the angel: "You better take Freckles' word for it, miss. He knows the old swamp better than any of us, except me, and if he says go by the trail you'd best do it."

The angel hesitated. One last glance at Freckles showed her the agony in his eyes. She would follow the trail.

"All right," she said, giving Jack a killing glance. "If you say so I'll go back by the trail to please you. Good-by, everybody."

She lifted the bushes and started for the entrance.

"Stop her!" growled Wessner. "Keep her till we're loaded anyhow. Can't you see that when this thing is found out there she'll be to ruin all of us. If you let her go every man of us has got to cut, and some of us will be caught sure."

Jack sprang forward. Freckles' heart muffled up in his throat. The angel seemed to divine Jack's coming. She was humming a little song. She deliberately stopped and began pulling the heads of the curious grasses that grew all about her. When she straightened she took a step backward and called: "Ho, Freckles, the Bird Woman wants that natural history pamphlet returned. It belongs to a set she is going to have bound."

Then the angel shot a parting glance at Jack, and she was bewitchingly lovely.

"You won't forget that ride and the red tie," she half asserted, half questioned.

Jack lost his head entirely. Freckles was his captive, but he was the angel's, soul and body. With head held well up the angel walked slowly away, and Jack wheeled on the men.

"Drop your staring and saw wood!" he shouted. "Don't you know anything at all about how to treat a lady?"

The men muttered and threatened among themselves, but they fell to working with a vengeance.

Freckles sat down on one of his benches and waited. In their haste to get the tree down and loaded so that the teamsters could start with it and leave them free to attack another they had forgotten to rebind him.

The angel was on the trail and safely started.

Freckles wondered what she would say to the Bird Woman and how long it would take them to pack and get started. He knew now that they would understand and the angel would try to get the boss there in time to save his wager. She could never do it, for the saw was over half through and Jack and Wessner cutting into the opposite side of the tree. It looked as if they could get at least that tree out before McLean could come.

When it was down would they rebind him and leave him for Wessner to wreak his insane vengeance on, or would they take him along to the next tree and dispose of him when they had stolen all the timber they could? Jack had said that he should not be touched until he left. Surely he would not run all that risk for one tree when he had many others of far greater value marked.

Once Jack came over to Freckles and asked if he had any water. Freckles rose and showed him where he kept his drinking water. Jack drank in great gulps, and as he passed the bucket back he said: "When a man's got a chance of catching a fine girl like that he ought not to be mixed up in any dirty business. I wish I was out of this."

Freckles answered heartily, "I wish I was too."

Jack stared at him a minute and then broke into a roar of rough laughter.

"Blest if I blame you," he said. "But you had your chance. We offered you a fair thing, and you gave Wessner his answer. I ain't envying you when he gives you his."

"You're six to one," answered Freckles. "It will be easy enough for you to be killing the body of me, but, curse you all, you can't blacken me soul!"

"I'd give anything you could name if I had your honesty," said Jack.

When the mighty tree fell the Limberlost shivered and screamed with the echo. Freckles groaned in despair, but the gang took heart. That was so much accomplished. Now, if they could get it out quickly they knew where to dispose of it safely with no questions asked. Before the day was over they could remove three others worth far more than this.

On the line, the angel gave one backward glance at Black Jack to see that he had returned to his work. Then she gathered her skirts above her knees and leaped forward on the run. In the first three yards she passed Freckles' wheel. Instantly she imagined that was why he had insisted on her coming by the trail. She seized it and sprang on. The saddle was too high, but she was an expert rider and could catch the pedals as they came up. She stopped at Duncan's cabin long enough to get out the wrench and lower the saddle, telling Mrs. Duncan the while what was happening and that she must follow the east trail until she found the Bird Woman to tell her she had gone for McLean and to leave the swamp as quickly as possible.

The angel saw Mrs. Duncan started and then flew.

IS TAKEN FOR DEAD

Blind Woman Hears Exclamation and Sight Is Regained

New York, Feb. 9.—"She's dead," cried someone as Mrs. Annie Churchill, 57 years old, totally blind and partially paralyzed for two years, was about to be taken from a wagon, where she lay prone, into the family's new home in Brooklyn. The shock the words gave her roused her to a protesting effort and in a twinkling she had regained her sight.

"Jim, Jim," she cried to her husband, "I can see."

Her loss of vision was caused by paralysis and the shock she sustained on being taken for a corpse is believed to have restored her sight.

Snatched From Death's Jaws

Sutter Creek, Col., Feb. 9.—The sixty-two miners entombed in the Bunkerhill mine by a cave-in in the mouth of the shaft, were rescued after twenty-four hours of hard work by miners. None of the men were injured.

Death of Aged Educator

Lincoln, Neb., Feb. 9.—Chancellor Emeritus DeWitt C. Huntington of Wesleyan university died here. He retired from active educational work five years ago. He was 82 years old.

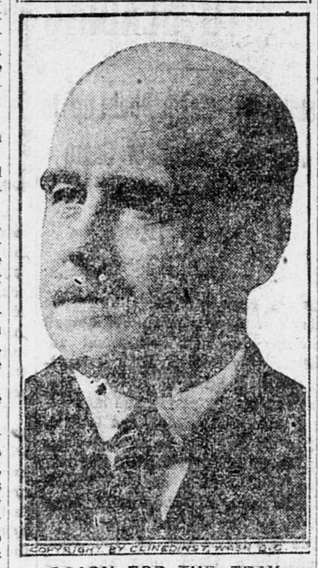

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

READY FOR THE FRAY

McKinley Is Chairman of Congressional Campaign Committee

Washington, Feb. 9.—The Republican campaign for the control of the next house was launched in earnest when the congressional campaign committee elected these officers:

William B. McKinley of Illinois, chairman; Charles H. Burke of South Dakota, vice chairman; J. Hampton Moore of Pennsylvania, secretary; George W. Fairchild of New York, treasurer, and W. J. Browning of New Jersey, auditor. Francis Curtis of Massachusetts was appointed literary director.

Taft headquarters are to be opened here immediately and Representative McKinley will be in charge of the president's political interests from now until the Chicago convention. This announcement was made last night.

The selection of McKinley is regarded as especially happy. In his capacity as chairman of the Republican congressional committee he will have exceptional means of keeping in close touch with political affairs throughout the country.

SHOWS NO EMOTION UPON HIS RETURN

Former Banker Morse Is at His Home in New York

New York, Feb. 9.—Charles W. Morse, bank wrecker and commuted federal convict, came back last night to the scene of his former triumphs and his conviction, crumpled up in a wheel chair, silent and impassive as a lay figure.

With his wife at his side, he was pushed through the curious throngs at the Pennsylvania station, lifted quickly into a taxicab and whisked away to his home at 127 West Fifty-eighth street. He expects to remain there a week or ten days before starting for Bad Nauheim, Ger., where he hopes to recover his health.

If Morse felt any emotion at his homecoming, he did not show it. Not once did he open his lips during the progress of his wheel-chair from train to taxicab. He did not even raise his head.

QUINCY A. A. AGAIN WINS

First and Second Fives Beat St. Alphonsus Teams

GREAT GAME

The first and second teams of the Quincy A. A. established themselves more firmly as leaders of the Greater Boston Basket ball league in their respective departments by defeating the first and second teams of the St. Alphonsus Association by decisive scores in St. Mary's Hall, West Quincy, before a record breaking crowd, last evening. It was at first expected that the visitors would make things look dangerous, owing to the fact that they recently took the measure of the strong Cathedral aggregation.

The first team of the visitors exhibited great form in the early stages of the game, but when the local combination took the lead, the result of the game was never in doubt. The first team of the local association was victorious by a score of 41 to 29, while the second team rolled up a total of 66 points to its opponents 16.

The principal game was most exciting at times and was replete with many spectacular plays, the feature being contributed by Eysinger of the visitors, who placed the ball through the net, after having thrown it the entire length of the hall. It was, without doubt the most spectacular play ever made in the local hall.

"Dan" Duggan was the star player, getting 10 baskets from the floor. "Sid." Duggan also played well, as did Hebert and Boyle.

For the visitors the best work was done by Eyesinger, Moran and Conley.

As regards the second teams, suffice it to say that the local boys had an easy proposition. "Brutus" Chapman was the star, having 14 baskets from the floor to his credit. The summary of the game between the first teams is as follows:—

QUINCY A. A.	St. ALPHONSUS
O'Rourke, rf	lb Eysinger
P. Duggan lf	rf McGowan
D. Dugan c	C. Conley
Kelley rb	lf Moran

MAYOR STONE AT SMOKE TALK

Hibernian hall Franklin street was taxed to its utmost Thursday evening on the occasion of the second annual smoke talk of the Quincy Central Labor Union. The meeting was presided over by President William Kelley, who made a stirring address, previous to introducing the speakers and talent of the evening. Delegations were in attendance from various labor organizations and the event proved a gala one.

During the evening Mayor Eugene R. Stone came in and was most enthusiastically received. He addressed the gathering, his remarks eliciting repeated applause. His Honor spoke of his affiliation with different union men and of his dealings with them as a travelling salesman. He also discussed the benefit to men adhering to the principles embodied in unionism. He told of the effect such principles would have in moulding together a citizenship of the highest type and offered his services to organized labor in any movement which he deemed for the best interests and general welfare of the citizens at large.

Other speakers included John Cogill, business agent of the Brotherhood of Carpenters, Charles E. O'Donnell, organizer and business agent of the Barbers' Union, William Copp, president of the Label Section of the Central Labor Union and L. W. Bedell, organizer of the South Shore District of Carpenters, and James Edwards.

An entertainment of a high order was provided in conjunction with the affair the talent including Walter Young, monologue artist; William Young, song; Thomas Burns, comedian, and Thomas Murray, the silver tongued tenor and obliging manager of the Orpheum Theatre.

Refreshments were served and cigars distributed. The smoke talk was brought to a close shortly after eleven o'clock with all singing "Auld Lang Syne."

LOCAL MATTERS DISCUSSED

islature relative to having the Port of Boston dredge the Town river in Quincy also came up and the society put itself on record as being in favor of the passage of the bill.

BATH HOUSE BILL

No action was taken on the bill for the erection of a state bath house on Wollaston beach, for which an appropriation of $70,000 is asked

BANQUET.

The society finds itself up against a peculiar situation in regard to its annual banquet. It has been trying for several months to fix upon a date when the hall could be secured, as well as a date when there were not several other banquets, in which its members were interested As yet the committee have been unable to fix a proper time and the society will probably now wait until after Lent.

The date for the next meeting falling on a holiday an adjournment was taken to Feb. 29.

MONTHLY SOCIABLE.

The monthly sociable of the Wollaston Unitarian church was held in the vestry, Thursday evening with a fine supper and a large number in attendance. A pleasant evening was spent with vocal solos by Miss Abbie Penley, instrumental selections by Mrs. Kimball and the acting out of charades by various members of the committee.

The program was in charge of a committee headed by Mrs. Carl G. Horst and the evening concluded with the singing of college songs with Irving L. Shaw at the piano.

Composing the supper committee were: Mrs. Chandler W. Smith, Miss Jennie Foster, Miss Helen Foster, Mrs. Charles H. Brigham, Mrs. Benjamin Sargent, Mrs. Davis, Mrs. Walter Taylor, Mrs. Clarence Hutton, Mrs. Jesse I. Litchfield, Mrs. Hamilton, Mrs. Charles Jameson, Mrs. Holbrook, Mrs. Fred C. Merrill, Mrs. Farnum, Mrs. George Weston, Mrs. H. C. Seymour and Miss Florence Hall.

Sure Thing.

"Do you know of any really good way to break a man of smoking in the house?"

"Certainly. Let his wife buy his cigars."

Just So.

William—This is a queer world.

Walker—Right you are; a man's shoes will often get untied, but never just as he is ready to take them off.

A Natural Phenomenon.

"What do you think of this vacuum idea?"

"There're millions in it."

BANQUET AND INSTALLATION

Exercises of a most impressive nature marked the annual installation of officers of Granite Conclave, No. 797, Improved Order of Heptasoples, Thursday evening in Electa hall. At the conclusion of the installation the gathering repaired to Protection hall to partake of a repast and incidentally to enjoy an entertainment furnished by local talent.

The installing officer was District Deputy Ernest Blazer of Allston, assisted by Alternate District Deputy A. W. Duffield, who officiated as Supreme Inspector. The officers installed were as follows:

Archon—James J Mullen.
Provost—Edward Brown.

At the close of the installation exercises, District Deputy Blazer, in behalf of members of the local conclave, in a few well chosen words, presented Past Archon A. R. McKay with a handsome travelling bag, in appreciation of his services as Archon the past year. Mr. McKay was deeply affected by the token, but managed to respond feelingly in acceptance.

The remainder of the evening was spent in a most enjoyable manner. Wiliam Provost, director of Provost's orchestra did the honors at the piano; Fred McDonald entertained with songs and jokes in his usual inimitable style, receiving much applause; Adolph Restelli, tenor soloist was forced to respond to a number of encores, while Frank Lawlor also made a great hit in his impersonation of a baby singer.

DRAMATIC CLUB DANCING PARTY

One of the prettiest dancing parties of the year took place in Alpha hall, Wednesday evening, under the auspices of the Dramatic club of the order of Eastern Star. The affair was attended by about 75 couples. Music was by the Ames orchestra, which gave a concert previous to dancing. The affair began at eight o'clock, terminating at midnight. The dance order included sixteen regular numbers and two extras, the feature being the sixth number entitled a "Leap Year Two Step." During this number the ladies did the honors usually incumbent upon the men.

William Tarbox was in charge of the floor, ably assisted by a committee composed of Mrs. Clara Catarius, Mrs. Harvey Ames, Mrs. Margaret Gammons, Misses Annie Rose, Bessie Roberts, Clara Call, Lottie Barnicoat, Mildred Crowley and Roy Prout. Merton Turner, Harvey Ames and Arthur L. Thomas.

Educational Progress.

In the decade 1900-1910 greater progress was made in educational conditions in the United States than in any previous 10 years in the country's history. The report of the Federal bureau of education shows that the annual expenditures for public schools increased from $220,000,000 to $425,000,000, appropriations for Normal schools from $2,769,000 to $6,630,000, and the value of school property from $550,000,000 to over $1,000,000,000. Public High schools increased from 6,000 to 10,213, their teachers from about 20,000 to over 41,000, and enrolled High school pupils from 520,000 to 900,000.

The average length of the common school term increased from 144 to 156 days, and the average attendance of pupils from 99 to 114 days.

An advance from $166,175,000 to $273,425,000 was made in the productive fund of universities, colleges and technical schools, and from $28,500,000 to $77,800,000 in their annual income outside of endowments.

Foolish Questions.

"Do you know how to manage a wife?"

"Good heavens, man! What makes you suspect I have ever been in an insane asylum?"

Untimely Tommy.

Mother—Tommy always eats more pie when we have friends at dinner.

Visitor—Why is that, Tommy?

Tommy—'Cos we don't have no pie no other time.

A Hard Job.

"What is Billy Hardatit doing these days?" asked Smithers.

"Oh, he's working his son's way through college," said little Binks.—Harper's Weekly.

QUINCY LOSES TO READING

Result of Game in Doubt up to Last Half-Minute of Game

16 TO 14

Quincy High received its second setback of the season in basketball yesterday afternoon, by a defeat administered by Reading High at Reading, the score being 16 to 14. The game was closely played and interesting from start to finish, and it was only in the last minutes of play, when Chester Hartshorn, captain of the home team caged a basket, that it could be safely said the Reading boys had turned the tables.

The two teams met in the local gymnasium a short time ago, and Quincy High was the victor in a game which proved to be one of the cleanest, fastest and most exciting, ever played on the Quincy High court. The game yesterday was of the same high order and when the first half ended, Quincy High was in the lead to the tune of 12 to 4.

But the endurance and stamina of the home team were exhibited to a great degree in the second half, and in the first ten minutes of play, the Reading boys had succeeded in making the score stand even. Gibbons, the Reading High left forward, secured four goals from the floor in the second half.

This was exceptionally good work against a player such as Holmes of the local eleven, who up to this game had kept his opponent from getting more than three baskets in a game. In some games, the players who has opposed Holmes, failed to have a single basket to his credit.

Finlay was closely covered at all stages and failed to show up to advantage. The best work for the local team was contributed by Trask, who got three baskets from the floor and two from fouls. Chapman also played well. Johnson played a brilliant game as a back and did not allow his opponent to get a basket.

Gibbons and Hartshorn excelled for the home team.

SURPRISED ON ANNIVERSARY

By a happy coincidence, the surprise party tendered to Mr. and Mrs. John Gilcoine of 87 Gilbert street, by their many friends, Thursday evening, proved to be an affair of especial importance, inasmuch as it marked the twenty-first wedding anniversary of the couple. The invaders assembled near the Gilcoine house at 7.30 o'clock, and by eight o'clock had taken the homestead by storm.

The couple were the recipients of many gifts, given by those who were in attendance, and the evening was spent in a most enjoyable manner. The event was brought to a close shortly before midnight, when refreshments were served.

The committee in charge included Mrs. M. Murphy, Mrs. A. Sullivan, Mrs. M. Kelley and Mrs Agnes Lemieux

SATURDAY BOYS' MEETING

The meeting for boys at the Y M. C. A. on Saturday at 9 will be addressed by Rev. W. B. Ayers of Wollaston, one of the most popular speakers to boys in this vicinity..

The subject of his address will be "Dogs and Boys," and the boy who has the wisdom to attend the meeting will be a "lucky dog." Owing to the fact that Abraham Lincoln's birthday is so close at hand Mr. Ayers will also touch upon some of the incidents of the martyred President's life. There will be a rousing song service before the address.

Those boys who do not remember Mr. Ayers by name will certainly remember the story of "The House That Jack Built" which he told at a meeting last year. A record attendance should be present at this meeting on Saturday at 9.

SPORTING "DOPE"

By B. A.

Don't Knock, Just Boost.—B. A.

Less than two weeks ago we were loud in praise of the wonderful performance of the local High school basketball team, when the Worcester South High combination was defeated to the tune of 115 to 0. Nor was this all, George Finlay, the star Quincy High forward, was credited with 32 baskets from the floor, conceded to be a record for the season.

The great victory was heralded far and wide and everywhere fans were willing to admit it would remain unexcelled for some time. But it was only Wednesday night that the wonderful achievement of the Granite City aggregation was put in the shade by the Rock Ridge High quintet. The Rock Ridge team played the University "Prep." school team at Wellesley and was victorious by a score of 126 to 4, making a record above all others for the season. In addition, Charles Woods, who plays the same position on his team as Finley does for Quincy High, went him one better and secured 33 baskets from the floor, thereby establishing himself as the individual record holder for the greatest number of baskets in a single game, made by a high school player.

It was the fifth straight victory for the Rock Ridge team, which is also out for the championship of the State. By another peculiar coincidence, Smith who plays the other forward position for the Wellesley team, caged 17 baskets from the floor. This was one more than Trask made in the game which we thought was to stand as a record for the season.

It is pleasing to note that things have been settled among the different managers of the teams now comprising the league, and while we regret that the Cunningham Gym, Lynn and Fr. Mathew teams are not to continue in the league, it may be all for the better, for it is now certain that no protests or dissatisfaction will be forthcoming from that direction.

COMING EVENTS CALENDAR.

Under this heading will be published every Wednesday and Saturday dates of forthcoming entertainments in the city. A one-line announcement will be inserted free of charge, but if any committee desires more publicity as to place, hour, date, admission, etc., it will be inserted at 25 cents per line each insertion. Look the list over, and if your entertainment is not included, send it in.

A Notable Day's Work.

Robert Burns composed his masterpiece, "Tam o' Shanter," in one day in the open air. Burns went out of the house in the morning and, not returning, his wife joined him in the afternoon with her two children. Seeing that he was "crooning to himsel'," she forebore to interrupt him, but stayed in the fields at a distance, where she could see him. She observed him wildly gesticulating and at times fairly leaping with joy. She said to Allan Cunningham, the poet, after her husband's death, "I wisht ye had seen him; he was in such ecstasy that the tears were happing down his cheeks." He committed the poem to writing by the riverside and went into the house and read it to his wife at the fireside with great triumph—one of the most notable day's work ever done in Scotland!

Varied Program by Girls' Friendly Society at Alpha Hall

MANY GUESTS

Alpha hall was filled Friday evening by those attending the entertainment given by St. Chrysostom's branch of the Girls' Friendly society of Wollaston. The gallery was reserved for guests numbering about 50 members of All Saints branch of Ashmont.

The program was a varied one and under the personal direction of Mrs. Morgan J. Walker. Every number was excellently rendered, the parts taken with snap and precision and there were no dull moments.

The sketch "Kleptomaniac" contained many trills and considerable comedy. It was highly entertaining, full of mirth and merriment as the judging and misjudging continued in Mrs. Burton's drawing room after she lost her purse containing all her rings including her engagement ring as well as a hundred dollars at a recital at the Vendome until found in a rip in the lining of the owner's coat by Freda. The way the young ladies took their parts was admirable and there were several curtain calls. The cast was:

Mrs. John Burton,	Lydia Hennigar
Mrs. Valarie Chase Ormsby,	Amy Rhodes
Mrs. Chas. Dover,	Mabel Anderson
Mrs. Freda Dixon,	Mary Brown
Mrs. Ashley,	Robina Atkins
Miss Evans,	Edna Fowler
Katie,	Rheta Keith

In the song, "Bring me a rose" Miss Mabel Anderson, soloist and Miss Muriel Wheelen violinist, with a chorus of ten young ladies wearing white costumes with wreaths of pink roses, Miss Anderson sang with fine effect accompanying herself at the piano and Miss Wheelen played sweetly and sympathetically. In the chorus were: Mary Brown, Beatrice Butler, Lillian Purdom, Mildred Bean, Alice Hennigar, A. Maud Briggs, Jean Gorham, Carolyn Wilkinson, Edith Atkins, Irene Coleman, Elsie Whitehead and Zoe Fowler.

The Teddy bear dance was a laughable affair and cleverly executed the brown costumes and nursing bottles of the bears added to the fun as their keepers lead them by pink ribbons. They were heartily encored. The bears were: Helen Ketchum, Louisa Ross, Beatrice Butler, Elsie Whitehead, Pearl Belyea, Carolyn Wilkinson and the Keepers: Helen Croucher, Edith Atkins, Mildred Bean, Marian Tanner, Irene Coleman and Beatrice Henry.

The playlet "Confessions" which called for "any old scene, any old time, any old couple" was both mirthful and serious—a happy blending of comedy that is not forced and pathos not too deep to be convincing, which gave plenty of opportunity to Mr. David Moffat as "He" and Mrs. Morgan J. Walker as "She" to reveal their clever ability which found immediate favor from an appreciative audience. They were heartily applauded after their portrayal of the inquisitiveness of human nature.

The Lullaby songs, Miss Leah Hennigar soloist, (Miss Louise Ross accompanist,) with her little children in chorus with dollies in their arms made a charming picture as they sweetly sang the songs which found much favor. The children were: Ruth Drew, Rachael McTear, Marian Hooley, Dorothy Hennigar, Grace Purdom, Inez Parlee and Marian Halett.

The closing number was a comedy entitled "Open Secret." The two scenes in the college room in a Radcliffe dormitory was a sort of "before and after" with Madge trying to have the men make themselves useful and the interference of half of the college girls, make an awful mess of things. The arrival of package after package after the girls had fixed up the room for which she simply can not account to her mother who comes on a visit, any more than she wishes to account for the $200 which was for the express purpose of fitting up her room.

Her sister Grace's busy scrutiny gives her away at every turn. However she finally says "Mother, I cannot tell a lie, I gave the money to the Parish house fund," when the curtain falls, amid hearty applause. The parts were taken as follows:

Madge Apthorpe,	Margaret Sibley
Jean,	Mary Brown
Mrs. Apthorpe,	A. Maud Briggs
Edith,	Pearl Belyea
Elinor,	Dorothy Bean
Carrie,	Louise Wilkinson
May,	Nettie Parlee
Kate,	Louisa Ross
Agatha Meade,	Lillian Purdom

OUR AUXILIARY FUNDAMENTALS

Address to Y. M. C. A. Women's Aux. by Mrs. H. G. Mank

MONTHLY MEETING

The Woman's Auxiliary of the Y. M. C. A. held its monthly meeting in the Association rooms Friday afternoon with a large number present and great enthusiasm in the work. Mrs. Edwin I. Beal, president presided and welcomed all cordially.

The meeting opened by singing the hymn "Love Divine," Mrs. N. G. Nickerson at the piano. Mrs. S. I. Wood made a few remarks in which she expressed the service rendering of the auxiliary work very impressively, after which she read a portion of scripture and offered prayer Mr. Bromley, the Y. M. C. A. director, related a few incidents regarding the work.

He said recently a young man was brought to the rooms in a state of intoxication, he had a bottle of brandy with him, and drank some of it after he was brought in. It was taken from him and poured down the sewer. He was kindly and tenderly cared for, for three weeks and it is hoped from the good influences brought to bear upon him would go out a wiser and stronger man.

One can't but observe that Mr. Bromley is very enthusiastic in his work.

Various committees reported on the fair which is in progress, and Mrs. H. W. Pinkham on financial questions. About $1000 has been raised for the Y. M. C. A. by the Woman's Auxiliary.

Mrs. Beal introduced the speaker of the afternoon, Mrs. H. G. Mank of Lawrence, who said in part:

We might give widely differing answers, if asked what are our Auxiliary fundamentals? To different individuals certain fundamental principles would come with a very different appeal and greatly verying force. But we will consider briefly some of these things which made their appeal to me, and the discussion may be trusted to bring out others which may seem of even more importance to someone else.

First a sense of proportion. By this I mean the power to discriminate between what we would like to see done and what ought to be done. An important matter is our relation to the association. We do not exist for our own sake but for the help and value we may be to the association. So let us rise to our privileges and put our shoulders to the wheel and if the local association should be in any rut, help lift it out of whatever difficulty into which it may have fallen, whenever our aid is needed.

If the requisites of the young men can be better served by not being reminded of our existence, then let us remain inconspicuous. Oftentimes the director of a local Association feels that he can cope better with the members and care for the interests of the young men without feminine asistance. In that case let us withdraw gracefully. Of course there are occasions when we are both needed and wanted, and this sense of proportion will enable us to remain as a help and inspiration and not to become a nuisance.

An instinct of what a boy really needs in order to develop the best and strongest manhood is necessary and we must realize that noise is not sinful if often annoying. A man having once been a boy can get in touch with the boy nature better than we. So let us yield our opinions to the officers of the Association when they do not coincide with our own.

In all religious matters, let us have a proper sense of proportion. We must take everyone's religious views charitably, and remember deeds not creeds count and a person whose ideas of religion may be at variance with ours may have the character of a saint imbued with true courage, a sense of honor and steadfastness of purpose.

It is well also to cultivate a sense of humor. Nothing is more important to increase the sanity and the sweetness of life.

The second fundamental principle for the Auxiliary is a purpose of service. We are most of us able to talk glibly of service but what we require

QUINCY DAY AT STATE HOUSE

Wednesday will be "Quincy Day" at the State House, when two matters of great interest to Quincy people will be given hearings by the Committee on Public Lands and Harbors. One of the matters to be considered is the bill introduced by Rep. Leslie, which provides that the Directors of the Port of Boston be authorized to expend a sum not exceeding $20,000, in widening and deepening the channel leading to the Wollaston and Squantum Yacht clubs. The bill aims to secure a channel that will be 70 feet wide and 6 feet deep at mean low water. The yachtsmen of both clubs have created great interest in the bill among themselves and their neighbors and they plan a representative gathering to urge favorable consideration by the committee. Each club has elected a committee of five men to speak for the bill. Rep. Leslie is very enthusiastic about the proposed legislation and has high hopes of its ultimate success.

The other bill to be considered by the same committee is one presented on the petition of Mayor Stone which provides for widening and deepening the present channel in Town river from the Baker yacht basin to Johnson's lumber wharf and authorizes an expenditure of $25,000. This is an important bill to the shipping interests of the city and Senator Barnes, Reps. Leslie and Piper, Mayor Stone and several city officials will be on hand to help it along in the committee room.

TO REVISE ITS CONSTITUTION

Under the vote of the Granite Cutters' National union the revision of its constitution will be by convention and will be held in Quincy the coming spring. Each branch is entitled to a certain number of delegates, the number being based upon the membership of the branch. Quincy is entitled under this rule to three delegates and at the last meeting of the local unions James Duncan, Alexander W. Russell and Thomas Johnston were unanimously nominated as the delegates. These delegates will be voted for by the whole union at the next meeting Feb. 21.

Some weeks will be required to revise the constitution and as stated above the work will be done in Quincy, which is a very proper place as the headquarters of the union are in this city.

PLANS FOR A CLASS INITIATION

Col. Abner B. Packard camp Sons of Veterans are making plans for a class initiation to be held at Faxon hall Sunday March 3 at 2.30. It is expected that a class of twenty-five or more will be initiated. The work will be performed by a special degree team from Boston and it is expected that a quartette will add impressiveness to the affair.

Delegates are expected from camps at Braintree, East Weymouth, Milton, Rockland, Abington, Whitman, Hingham and Dorchester, as well as many prominent Grand Army and Sons of Veterans. Refreshments will be served after the meeting and there will be addresses by prominent members and visitors.

PLAINTIFF IS AWARDED $1,000

In the superior court at Dedham Friday, in the suit of Katherine A. Sweeney of Quincy against Nicholas Garbarino for breach of promise, the defendant, Garbarino was defaulted and damges assessed for the plaintiff in the sum of $1,000.

Garbarino is a former well-known resident of Quincy. He conducted a poll room and barber shop at Houghs Neck for several years, at the same time being used by the police as court interpreter, until his place at Houghs Neck was raided and after a long legal fight he was convicted. He disappeared from Quincy shortly after.

RECEPTION TO JUNIOR CLASS

High School Juniors are Guests of the Sophomore Class

THE MATRONS

The gymnasium of Quincy High school wore a festive air last evening when members of the sophomore class gave a reception to members of the junior class. The function was largely attended and everything was carried out in a charming and most brilliant manner. The gymnasium was transformed into a dance hall and from 7.30 until 10.30 o'clock was the scene of a most happy gathering.

Decorations were of a varied nature streamers of blue and red being conspicous. At either end of the hall, in large numerals, were the class numbers of both classes. These were placed over head the basketball nets, and a view at the numerals 1913 at the one end and 1914 at the other made it evident beyond a doubt that the affair was being enjoyed exclusively by members of both these classes.

Beneath the clock, appeared the following, " 1914 to 1913." At the Southeastern corner a large American Flag overlapped the section set apart for the receiving of the students by the matrons. The invited guests included Superintendent of Schools Albert L. Barbour and Mrs. Barbour, Principal James D. Howlett and the teaching force, connected with the school. The matrons were Miss Mary G. Brown, Miss Evaline A. Salsman and Miss Bertha Kirmayer, all of whom are teachers at the High school.

The grand march, which took place at eight o'clock was led by Harry Burr and Miss Dorothy Edwards, followed by Charles Holmes and Miss Marion McLoon and about one hundred couples. Punch was served during the evening and the party was pronounced most successful.

The committee in charge comprised the following members of the sophomore class, Harry Burr, president, Marion McLoon, vice-president, Dorothy Edwards, secretary, Irene Potterton, treasurer, Frederick Atwood and Charles Holmes. Music was by the Wollaston orchestra, and the dance order was composed of sixteen numbers. A short intermission took place at nine o'clock.

WAS FATHER OF MRS. E. R. STONE

Mayor and Mrs. E. R. Stone have the sympathy of the citizens in general in the death of Mrs. Stone's father, Edward C. Chessman who died at his home, 50 Prescott street, East Boston, Friday night aged 76 years. Mr. Chessman had been for more than 40 years the janitor of the Emerson grammar school. Last November he secured a year's leave of absence. A short time ago he was attacked by a severe cold and his illness was brief.

Mr. Chessman was born in Boston. He was appojnted janitor of the Emerson school in 1871. He served under three principals. There were then but few houses in the Third or Fourth Sections, but the district has since grown to be one of the most congested of the city.

During his 40 years of service Mr. Chessman never missed a day at the school and took great pride in his work. He lived within a short distance of the building and even after the children had left the building for the day and during vacation he kept a watchful eye on the property. The boys and girls of the school knew Mr. Chessman as "Grandpa," and for all he had a kind word and smile.

Mr. Chessman leaves his wife and seven children: Mrs. Gertrude Stone, wife of Mayor Stone; Mrs. Eliza Woodbury and Mrs. William Stone of East Boston, Mrs. Myra McNeil of Winthrop, Mrs. Elizabeth Stone of Pepperell, George L. Chessman of Dorchester and Joseph Chessman of Lawrence.

The funeral will take place at the home Monday at 2 P. M.

MERCHANTS' CARNIVAL.

The ladies of the Auxiliary to the Y. M. C. A., are enthusiastic over the Merchants' carnival to be given at the Y. M. C. A. building, Feb. 20-21. As a fair it will present many novel features. A series of original and artistic tableaux wil be presented each evening under the direction of Mrs. E. S. Tenney, whose name is a guarantee of the excellence of the entertainment. It promises to be a most successful affair.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Did any one complain of the heat last July?

The subsidiary oil companies and the independents have put up the price of oil, too. It is still possible to meet and talk over prices after dark.

Wilson called Watterson a "nice old gentleman." This would make most people madder than calling them a thief.

The meat packers have had to open a padlocked book, but does the government know the combination that will unlock their mouths?

The National Piano Dealers Association is to burn 300 square pianos at their coming convention, but we believe you can keep the neighbors awake equally well with an upright.

A Yukon miner shocked New York by hanging a red flannel shirt out of a hotel window, but if he had sold a million of fake mining stock no attention would have been paid to anything so commonplace.

It is reported that the ice on ponds in the vicinity of Quincy is not far from fifteen inches thick. To the ordinary layman it seems as though the ice men never had less difficulty in filling their houses than this year and that with such a plentiful supply that the price should drop next summer. According to the ice men however there will be no material difference in price from the past few years. While the ice has been plentiful it is claimed that owing to the increased cost of housing this year, coupled with the fact that they must make up for some o fthe losses of other years that there will be no material reduction. It is hard work to get ahead of the ice man.

I., roast lamb dinner; Mrs. John Evans, clothing; Mrs. Herbert Drake, 4 quarts milk each day; Mrs. Johnson of Wollaston, doll carriage and sled.

The cooks of the ancients were artists in their way and were so skillful that they could serve a whole pig boiled on one side and roasted on the other.

Y. M. C. A. AUXILIARY

is a plan or steadfast purpose in its less attractive forms. We must remember that service when it becomes real and practical sometimes spells drudgery redeemed and ennobled by the service which compels it. If we serve appetizing suppers for our boys and young men and draw them under good influences, where under competent guidance they may study God's word and absorb spiritual nourishment then cooking and sewing may become acts of consecration. And we shall follow in the footsteps of our Saviour, who said " Inasmuch as ye did it unto the least of these ye did it unto me."

It seems sometimes as though the special work of the Auxiliary was for the boys, especially mothers who have sons, but it must be done by personal contact and through the hospitality of our homes. When our patience is sometimes exhausted with the boys of the Association, it is well for us to remember that the boy nature as well as woman nature is God-given and our Saviour himself was a boy and as we live nearer to Him we shall be better able to understand them. Let us then only ask for opportunities of service.

A third necessary Auxiliary fundamental is a spirit of love. We must never as an organization lose sight of the fact that we are christian women engaged in work for Christ and as our work is distinctively christian it fails in its essential purpose unless pervaded by the spirit of Christ.

We all make mistakes; we all act unwisely at times. It is impossible that we all think alike, but we can in non-essential matters differ without bitterness. I remember once of seeing upon a fine building devoted to philanthrophy this inscription, "Charitable Eye and Ear Infirmary," and I thought to myself if the last word was omitted, it would express what we all greatly need, especially in our Auxilary work. A charitable eye and ear would help us individually and collectively to be happy, to be kind, to be loving.

The fourth Auxiliary fundamental is religion. A religion which is the life of God, in our souls. A religion which is a power to transform and develop character. The religion which can hardly be better expressed than in the words of Dr. Stalker: "Religion is not merely a creed, but an experience; not a restraint, but an inspiration; not an insurance for the next world, but a program for the present world."

CLUB DRAMATICS.

Members of the Quincy Women's club are purchasing so many guest tickets for the annual dramatics at Quincy Music hall on Tuesday afternoon that it looks like a crowded house.

The play chosen is "The Honeymoon" by John Tobin. It was written in 1770 and is rightly considered one of the most brilliant of the old English comedies.

The play is in three acts with the following cast:

Duke Aranza—Mrs. Charles Seavey.

DANGER IN UNCOOKED FOOD

Fruits and Vegetables Are Carrying Agents of Typhoid Fever

Washington, Feb. 10.—Uncooked fruits and vegetables, served in restaurants and the homes of millions, are likely to be carrying agents of typhoid fever, according to Passed Assistant Surgeon Creel of the public health and marine hospital service, as the result of experiments with lettuce and radishes.

Dr. Creel declares that even under conditions most unfavorable to the bacillus, the infection lasts at least thirty-one days, "a period sufficiently long for some varieties of lettuce and radishes to mature."

Morse Plans Vengeance on Those Who Deserted Him

IS GOING TO GERMANY FIRST

Expects to Return With Strength Enough to Go Back to Wall Street, Despite His Doctor's Prediction That It Would Be Fatal to Him—Has Gained Rapidly Since He Was Pardoned by President

New York, Feb. 10.—Charlee W. Morse arose yesterday from his own bed at the Milano apartments after passing a good night. He was improved after his long journey from the south which brought him into New York.

Morse seemed in very fair health when he reached the Milano, where he immediately secluded himself in his apartments.

With the money that he has saved from the wreck, Morse and his wife will sail for Bad Nauheim, Ger., within the next ten days or two weeks. Physicians regard the saline waters of that spa as most efficacious in the treatment of heart disease, hardening of the heart, Bright's disease and the other serious ailments with which Morse is afflicted.

At an indefinite date, dependent upon a continuation of his recovery, Morse plans to return to New York for vengeance on those whom he trusted, and who, he declares, turned on him when he was down and by legal process took from him securities to which he claims he is justly entitled.

He made this statement to a close friend a short time ago in Atlanta. He did not name the men to whom he referred, but he left no doubt in the mind of the man to whom he uttered the threat that he meant it to be taken with the utmost seriousness.

Dr. Fowler of Atlanta, who accompanied Morse and his wife, said: "I am convinced that if Morse attempts to go back to Wall street, it will be fatal to him. I have not told him so in words, but he knows my opinion. Wall street, with its excitement and worries, is not the place for a man in Morse's physical condition."

Following is a chronology of Morse's progress from a sick bed in the federal prison at Atlanta to his home in New York city:

1911—Nov. 19—Takes to his bed in the United States penitentiary at Atlanta. His life is despaired of.

Nov. 26—Removed on a stretcher from the prison to the army post hospital at Fort McPherson.

Dec. 27—Propped up in hospital bed and supported by straps while photographed for President Taft's medical examiners.

1912—Jan. 18—Sentence commuted.

Jan. 27—Removed in an ambulance from the post hospital to an Atlanta hotel.

Feb. 6—Sits up five hours and reads the papers at his hotel.

Feb. 7—Walks from hotel to carriage, rides to railroad station and goes in roller-chair along platform to his parlor car.

Feb. 8—Arrives in New York after twenty-seven hours' railway journey, walks from train to a wheel-chair, is taken to a taxi, rides to his house and walks in.

TWO MESSAGES FROM FOSS

Both Deal With Penal Institutions In Massachusetts

Boston, Feb. 10.—Governor Foss sent to the legislature yesterday two messages, one asking for the establishment of a commission whose duty it shall be to relocate the state prison now in Charlestown. The other demands the renovation of the supervision of penal institutions, both state and county.

The governor says that reformatories no longer reform. He urges that where a jail sentence is imposed for non-payment of a fine there be a longer time allowed. He points out that 12,000 persons went to jail last year because they did not have the money to pay fines.

Suffers From Paranoia, According to Alienists' Testimony

Boston, Feb. 10.—Former Judge Henry S. Dewey was yesterday ordered committed to the Boston insane hospital. Judge Grant of the probate court, after a hearing lasting well beyond regular court hours, declared him to be of unsound mind.

Two alienists had testified that Dewey was suffering from paranoia, and that it would be dangerous to allow him his liberty. Paranoia is defined by the Century dictionary as mental unsoundness attended with delusions.

According to the physicians the person who would most likely be the victim of any act of Dewey would be some one high in authority.

Salimonia was disarmed by Pasqualle Radosta, who wrenched a 32-calibre automatic revolver from his hand. Salimonia then ran down Hanover street and was captured on the roof of a house at 3 Canny place.

ETTOR URGED TO VIOLENCE

Letters Written to Him by St. John Read In Court

ARE ADMITTED AS EVIDENCE

Lawrence, Mass., Feb. 10.—Three letters which finally were admitted as evidence over the objection of the defense, figured most prominently in the hearing in the local police court of Joseph J. Ettor, until his arrest leader of the striking textile workers here, and Arturo Giovannitti, his lieutenant, charged with being accessories before the fact to the murder of Anna Lopizzo, an Italian woman, who was shot during a riot Jan. 29.

Two of the letters were from Vincent St. John, general secretary-treasurer of the Industrial Workers of the World, at Chicago, one being addressed to Ettor and the other to William D. Haywood, the western labor man who is now in Lawrence assisting the strikers.

In these letters St. John urges the recipients to organize the Lawrence textile workers thoroughly and indicated his distrust of the American Federation of Labor.

In one of these letters St. John wrote: "If the strike be of any length, the practice of trying to carry it by paying strike benefits or opening a commissary must be cut out. These are out of date methods. There is no chance to win anything that way.

"Get those 16,000 or 20,000 organized to break into jail and make the county feed them while they are on strike. Or organize them to go back into the mills and fight there. Get them back as an organization with the understanding that they will continue to fight."

References to Pearl McGill of Muscatine, Ia., called her "an agent of the A. F. of L., that is, the bosses," and warned against anything she might say.

The third letter was written to Ettor by Thomas Miller of Lymansville, R. I., whose identity or business was not further disclosed, but who is supposed to be a Rhode Island textile worker. In this letter Miller stated his belief that it would not be difficult to organize a general strike in the mills of the American Woolen company in Rhode Island.

The prosecution had fairly started its case when court adjourned at 4:30 p. m. until Monday. It is expected that the hearing will not be concluded before late Monday and may even go over to another day, as there are many witnesses yet to be examined.

The whole interest in the strike situation yesterday centred in the court proceedings. Aside from one or two small gatherings of Central Labor union operatives to formulate demands there were no meetings. On the streets there was no semblance of disorder and the squads of militia stationed about the police station and courtroom had little to do.

Ettor came into court with the characteristic smile on his face. Throughout the day he and Giovannitti were calm and composed, save for a few minutes when the matter of the admission of the letters was being argued by the lawyers. Then Ettor flushed and Giovannitti looked pale, while both appeared nervous.

District Attorney Atwill, in outlining the case of the prosecution, said that it was proposed to show that Ettor, as a leader in the Industrial Workers of the World, which organization, he said, desired a social revolution and the destruction of the wage system, made speeches and gave advice to the strikers which inspired them to use violence.

This, he declared, resulted in the riot in which the Lopizzo woman was killed. Giovannitti, he held, had assisted Ettor in his efforts.

He said it would be shown that the bullet which struck the woman had been intended for a police officer, and that when the person who fired the shot, whom he described as a tall Italian, saw that he had missed his mark, he stabbed the officer.

William D. Haywood, called as the first witness, refused to answer various questions relating to his supposed connection with the Industrial Workers of the World and with the strike, on the ground that they might incriminate him. He was temporarily excused. William E. Trautmann, another western labor man, took the same position and was excused.

Captain Sullivan of the Lawrence police described the riots of Jan. 29, and testified that a tall Italian aimed his revolver at Police Officer Benoit, but the bullet instead struck Anna Lopizzo, resulting in a fatal wound. The Italian then stabbed Benoit, and escaped in the crowd.

That Ettor in one of his speeches urged the strikers to "keep the gun shops busy" and declared that he was going to get a gun himself, was the testimony of the two newspaper men called to the stand.

James E. Donoghue, testifying regarding a meeting of the strike committee which he attended, quoted Ettor in regard to the buying of guns and described how Ettor had said that the workers during the French revolution had hanged the masters with grass in their mouths.

Cross examined, the witness could repeat but little of what the leader said, but declared, "He didn't preach peace."

Joseph P. Toye, another newspaper man called as a witness, repeated a similar statement regarding the purchase of firearms.

While the hearing was in progress at the courthouse the strike committee met at their headquarters, and after a long talk by Chairman Yates voted to resume picketing. In order to keep within the law it was arranged that pickets shall form an endless chain, walking in single file, and keep constantly on the move. The committee also voted to ask the carmen to refuse to carry strike-breakers on the street cars.

In his talk Yates criticised the American Federation of Labor for taking up the strike and charged the leaders of that organization with insincerity.

Demand of Electrical Workers

Lawrence, Mass., Feb. 10.—Electrical workers of the mills and public service power plants formulated demands asking a wage of 32 cents an hour for all men who have worked more than four years, at a meeting last night.

They also ask 25 cents an hour for all electricians who have worked less than four years. This is an increase of nearly 100 percent in some cases. The present rate is from 13 to 26 cents.

AID UNFORTUNATES IN PRACTICAL WAY

Cincinnati Police Court Judge Issues Call For Volunteers

Cincinnati, Feb. 10.—Police Court Judge Arthur Fricke issued a unique challenge to preachers, business men and women of Cincinnati to prove in a practical way how much they care to assist in helping unfortunate men and women who come before the bar of his court.

Judge Fricke called for 100 representatives of each class he named, each to be responsible for one man or woman to be taken from the flotsam and jetsam of the police court.

The 300 wards of the court are to be supervised personally for a year, to be supplied with clean clothing, a place to live and given positions which will enable them to support themselves in a self-respecting manner.

"Sin, crime and vice cannot be restrained by force," says the judge. "They must be conquered only through personal contact with a character stronger than that of the victim."

IS LOSING HIS MIND

Sheriff's Opinion In Regard to the Condition of Richeson

Boston, Feb. 10.—Sheriff Quinn held a conference with Governor Foss yesterday, at which the condition of Clarence V. T. Richeson was discussed. Quinn told the governor that in his opinion the condemned murderer would undoubtedly lose his mind as the time for his death approached.

The general belief at the state house is that if a petition for commutation of sentence is presented Governor Foss will submit it to the executive council without recommendations. The burden of the letters received at the office of the governor is to the effect that Richeson's sentence should be carried out.

CLASH WITH HONDURAS

Our Marines Take Possession of Valentine Syndicate's Property

Puerto Cortez, Honduras, Feb. 10.—There has been a clash between the United States and Honduran authorities over enforcement of a government decree directing representatives of W. S. Valentine of New York to surrender to government authorities the railroad, wharf and other properties held under lease by the Valentine syndicate.

Seventy-five marines from the United States gunboat Petrel landed and seized the wharf and railroad. Honduran troops were then ordered to stop all trains. The governor has filed a protest.

WOLLASTON CONGREGATIONAL.

The following sent out with the order of services for Sunday shows the Wollaston Congregational church to have unusual "signs of life" both material and spiritual.

"Let every saint and sinner in Wollaston who can leave his (or her) furnace fire and Sunday paper for an hour and a quarter, come up to the Congregational church Sunday morning; and see what a church that is waking up looks like. We haven't picked a regular pastor yet, but pending a choice, Rev. Edward Norton is at the helm. He has the happy habit of being interesting from start to finish. Then there's the new choir that started in last Sunday—not the best in Greater Boston, perhaps, but a whole lot better than some you've heard. Music is an important part of our service now. And don't forget the 'ear-phones.' 'They that have ears to hear' may now obey the Biblical command, even though their auditory nerves be deadened. The ingenious and inconspicuous little ear-phone does the work Last Sunday we had the nearest to a full house that we've had for many a year. We want to set a new mark next Sunday, and the Sunday after, until we have to put out the "S. R. O." sign. Come up and be counted 'among those present.'"

A BOSTON GIRL'S BUDGET.

Art, Music and Suffrage at the Yankee Athens—Issue of Hebrew Harmony Makes Discord at the Hub—What Professor Elson and Cantor Wolkowich Have to Say—Real Bwana Tumbo Turns Up as Hard Working Sea Cook—New England Suffragist Plants Banner on Andes Peak—Political Equality Advocates Visit Lawrence

Bwana Tumbo—the real, bona fide Bwana Tumbo—has invaded the port of Boston. The former king of a cannibal tribe was not received with warlike demonstrations nor diplomatic receptions, owing to the fact that he came to these shores as cook on the Portuguese cruiser Republica. The erstwhile man-eating chief was captured by a squad of Portuguese soldiers while they were hunting in Africa and later put to work in the barracks. His experience in cooking apparently stood him in good stead, as he was later put aboard the warship as chef. This suggests the idea that the civilized cooking school course might be rendered more successful by the addition of lessons in preparing Puree of Missionaries, Man a la Newburgh, Roast Young Infant, and other delicacies on which the cannibal king's success in the culinary department is undoubtedly based.

The banner with the strange device "Joan of Arc Suffrage League" now floats from the ice crowned peak of Mt. Coropuna, in the Peruvian Andes, 20,000 feet above sea level, after having been borne there through snow and perils of precipice and glacier streams by the indomitable Miss Annie S. Peck, the Boston mountain climber. When Miss Peck arrived in New York after her expedition she was met by a delegation of women bearing the black and yellow banners of the league, who cheered to the echo when she assured them that the symbol of emancipation of the women of the western hemisphere was planted hard and fast on the lofty peak.

Meantime Boston suffragists are actively engaged in affording relief to the Lawrence strikers and their families. A number of the leaders in the Boston and Massachusetts associations have gone to the troubled city and are giving their entire time to investigating the conditions of applicants for aid and obtaining the necessary relief for them. Among the hardest workers in the relief corps is Mrs. Susan W. FitzGerald, recent candidate for the school committee, who finds that her occupation is even more strenuous than campaigning for election. Such cases as that of a man, his wife and baby, huddled in bed to keep warm, having had nothing to eat or drink for two days, except a pint of milk for the baby, are common enough to keep the members of the various relief committees at work day and night.

Artistic folk of the Back Bay are expressing surprise and considerable admiration over the reecnt digression from his customary path of Alexander Pope, popularly known as America's leading animal painter. Mr. Pope heretofore has confined himself largely to paintings of animals and still life studies, but he is now exhibiting at his studio a portrait of Mrs. B. P. Cheney, formerly Julia Arthur, which is making his fellow artists "sit up and take notice." The realistic style of Mr. Pope's former painting is carried out in his portrait painting, but the inherent possibilities in his realism have never been more strikingly revealed.

The subject of Jewish harmony is causing sounds of discord in Boston's musical circles. The recent declaration in a lecture at the Boston Public Library by Professor Louis C Elson of the faculty of the New England Conservatory of Music to the effect that the Hebrew music of today is not, as supposed, derived directly from the Temple at Jerusalem, has drawn fire from some of the rabbis and cantors of the Hebrew synagogues and societies. The Jewish Advocate, the local Hebrew journal, has taken up the discussion, quoting Irwin Wolkowich, cantor of Temple Ohabeii Shalom, who says: "It is known to nearly all intelligent Jews that the Kol Nidre chant is a pure Hebrew melody. He will also find Kol Nidre is not the only Hebrew chant that is sung by the Jews. We have chants for our New Year's day of atonement and Passover services that have been handed down from generation to generation. It is claimed by the majority of Jews that these chants come to us from the Temple of Jerusalem. There is no doubt that after the dispersion of the Jews some other music crept into the Jewish liturgy and that these melodies were sung in various forms in different Jewish communities. But the chants specifically referred to above are purely Hebrew in character and origin." Not so, however, says the New England Conservatory expert, adding one more to the long listo f exploded historical traditions. Mr. Elson for some years past has been lecturing to music students on the history of music, the development of orchestral instruments and kindred subjects. In preparation for his talks on the music of early nations he has been led to delve perhaps as deeply as any expert has done into the music of the Hebrew and Egyptian people. Out of his knowledge he says: "It is idle to seek for the ancient Hebrew chants among the existing synagogic hymns. The Jews, after the dispersion, came under foreign influences, and the national characteristics of the different countries in which they have sojourned are strongly marked in the liturgic music of the German, Viennese and Russian congregations. The plaintive hymn 'Kol Nidre,' which is sung once a year upon the Day of Atonement, and which is the only hymn common to the synagogues all over the world, was for many years thought to be a relic of the old temple service, but it is now known to be Arabic in character, and probably comes from Spain, where the Jews, under Moorish rule, enjoyed a peace and liberty that almost recalled the happy days before the destruction of Jerusalem. The tune called 'Leoni' in the church hymnal and ascribed to an ancient Hebrew melody is quite aprocryphal."

Anty Drudge to the Rescue of Daughter's Pale Blue Gingham.

Mrs. Careful—"I have made my daughter such a pretty pale blue gingham dress, and now I am worried for fear it will fade in the wash."

Anty Drudge—"It won't fade if you don't rub it hard, nor put it in boiling water. Just wash it carefully in Fels-Naptha suds, made in cool or luke-warm water, and it will come out as bright as new. But be sure not to use hot water with Fels-Naptha!"

The Fels-Naptha way of washing gives the clothes a fair chance.

The old-fashioned way is destructive because it first softens the fibre by boiling, and then subjects it to the telling rub of the washboard.

With Fels-Naptha soap there is no boiling nor is there the hard back-breaking drudgery of the washboard.

Just rub Fels-Naptha soap on the clothes, roll and place them in cool or luke-warm water. Half an hour will be long enough for the soap to do its work. Then a light rub, thorough rinse, blued and the clothes are white, pure, and ready to hang out. And you'll find Fels-Naptha just as good for every other kind of household cleaning. Follow closely the easy directions on the red and green wrapper.

FRECKLES

By Gene Stratton-Porter

COPYRIGHT, 1904, BY DOUBLEDAY, PAGE & CO.

SYNOPSIS.

Freckles, a homeless boy, is hired by Boss McLean to guard the expensive timber in the Limberlost from timber thieves.

Freckles does his work faithfully, makes friends with the birds and yearns to know more about nature. He lives with Mr. and Mrs. Duncan.

He resolves to get books and educate himself. He becomes interested in a huge pair of vultures and calls his bird friends his "chickens."

Some of the trees he is guarding are worth $1,000 each. Freckles' books arrive. He receives a call from Wessner.

Wessner attempts to bribe Freckles to betray his trust, and Freckles whips him. McLean overhears them and witnesses the fight.

Freckles' honesty saves a precious tree. He finds the nest of the vultures and is visited by a beautiful young girl.

She calls Freckles McLean's son. Freckles calls her "the angel" and helps the Bird Woman in taking photographs. McLean promises to adopt Freckles.

Freckles and the angel become very friendly. Assisted by the Bird Woman, they drive Wessner and Black Jack, timber thieves, from the Limberlost.

McLean fears more trouble, but Freckles insists upon being the sole guard of the timber. Freckles calls upon the angel's father.

The angel receives him as her equal, and her father is kind. Mrs. Duncan has exciting adventures in the Limberlost.

The Bird Woman and the angel again visit Freckles, and Freckles falls in love with the angel. The angel kisses him.

Freckles is bound and gagged by Black Jack's gang, and the timber thieves start felling a very valuable tree.

those awful miles of corduroy. Would they never end? The bushes clawed her hat, and she did not stop for it.

At last she lifted her head. Surely it could not be more than a mile now. She had covered two of corduroy and at least three of pike, and it was only six in all. She was reeling in the saddle, but she gripped the bars with new energy and raced desperately. The sun blistered down on her bare head and hands. Just when she was choking with dust and almost prostrate with heat and exhaustion—crash, she ran into a broken bottle! Snap! went the tire. The wheel swerved and pitched over. The tired angel rolled into the thick yellow dust of the road and lay still.

From afar Duncan began to notice a strange, dust covered object in the road as he headed for town with the first load of the day's felling. As he neared the angel he saw it was a woman and a broken wheel. Many of the farmers' daughters rode wheels, but this face was a stranger's. He glanced at the angel's tumbled clothing, the silkiness of her hair, with its pale satin ribbon, and noticed that she had lost her hat. His lips tightened in an ominous quiver. He left her and picked up the wheel. As he had surmised, he knew it. This, then, was Freckles' Swamp Angel.

There was trouble in the Limberlost, and she had broken down in racing for McLean. Duncan hurried to the nearest farmhouse to send help to the angel. Then he put the bay to speed and raced for camp.

The angel, left alone, lay still for a second, then she shivered and opened her eyes.

"Oh, poor Freckles!" she wailed. "They may be killing him by now. Oh, how much time have I wasted?"

She hurried to the bay Duncan had unharnessed, snatched a blacksnake whip that lay on the ground, caught the hames stretched along the horse's neck, and, for the first time, the fine, big fellow felt on his back the quality of the lash that Duncan was accustomed to crack over him.

At the south camp they were loading a second wagon when the angel thundered up on one of Duncan's bays, lathered and dripping, and cried: "Everybody go to Freckles! There are thieves stealing trees, and they have him bound. They're going to kill him!"

She wheeled the horse and headed for the Limberlost. The alarm sounded over camp. McLean sprang to Nellie's back and raced after the angel. As they passed Duncan he wheeled and followed. Soon the pike was an irregular procession of barebacked riders, wildly driving flying horses toward the swamp.

CHAPTER XVI.

FRECKLES RELEASED.

THE boss rode neck and neck with the angel. He glanced back and saw that Duncan was near. There was something terrifying in the look of the big man and the way he sat his beast and rode. It would be a sad day for the man on whom Duncan's wrath broke. There were four others close behind him and the pike filling up with the rest of the gang.

The angel turned into the trail to the west, and the men bunched and followed her. When she reached the entrance to Freckles' room there were four men with her and two more very close behind. She slid from the horse and, snatching the little revolver from her breast, darted for the bushes. McLean caught them back and, with drawn weapon, pressed up beside her. There they stopped in astonishment.

The Bird Woman blocked the entrance. Over a small limb lay her revolver, and it was trained at short range on Black Jack and Wessner, who stood with their hands above their heads.

Freckles, with blood streaming down his face from an ugly cut in his temple, was gagged and bound to the tree again, and the rest of the men were gone. Black Jack was raving like a maniac, and when they looked closer it was only the left arm that he raised. His right, with the hand shattered, hung helpless, and his revolver lay at Freckles' feet. Wessner's weapon was still in his belt, and beside him lay Freckles' club.

Freckles' face was of stony whiteness, with colorless lips, but in his eyes was the strength of undying courage. McLean pushed past the Bird Woman, crying, "Hold steady on them for just one minute more!"

He snatched the revolver from Wessner's belt and stooped for Jack's.

At that instant the angel rushed in. She tore the gag from Freckles, and, seizing the rope knotted on his chest, she tugged at it desperately. Under her fingers it gave way, and she hurled it to McLean. The men were crowding in, and Duncan seized Wessner. As the angel saw Freckles stand out free she reached her arms to him and pitched forward. A fearful oath burst from the lips of Black Jack. To have saved his life Freckles could not have avoided the glance of triumph he gave Jack as he folded his angel in his arms and stretched her on the mosses.

As McLean rose from binding Wessner there was a cry that Jack was escaping. He was already well into the swamp, working for its densest part. Every man that could be spared plunged after him. Other members of the gang arriving, they were sent to follow the tracks of the wagons.

Watchers patrolled the line and roads through the swamp all that night with lighted torches, and the next day McLean headed as thorough a search as he felt could be made of one side, while Duncan covered the other, but Black Jack could not be found. Spies were set about his home in Wildcat hollow to ascertain if he reached there or aid was sent in any direction to him, but it was soon clear that his relatives were ignorant of his whereabouts and themselves searching for him.

Great is the elasticity of youth. A hot bath and a sound night's sleep renewed Freckles' strength. Freckles was on the trail early the next morning. Besides a crowd of people anxious to witness Jack's capture, he found four stalwart guards, one at each turn. In his heart he was compelled to admit that he was glad to have them there.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.
We give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

MOBILIZATION OF OUR TROOPS

Does Not Mean American Intervention In Mexico

GREAT MILITARY MOVEMENT

Washington, Feb. 10.—Intervention in Mexico by the United States is not intended by any mobilization of troops which may be made again along the southern border. This was the message which the state department telegraphed to various consular and diplomatic representatives in Mexico who had complained that talk of intervention was fostering a dangerous anti-American sentiment.

The state department reiterated emphatically that this government had no interest in Mexico beyond the safety of American lives and interests, but from the same consular agents came reports far from reassuring as to the stability of the Mexican federal government. No specific formidable uprising was recorded, but small upheavals regarded as symptoms of general dissatisfaction led to an apprehension that the malcontents may unite, confronting the government with a serious crisis.

Anticipating possible orders from President Taft to move troops once more to Texas to enforce neutrality laws and inspire a respect for American lives in the north of the republic, where rebels are reported to be operating, the general staff has completed plans for a big military movement when that becomes necessary.

Telegrams already are prepared ordering department commanders to move their forces southward, although the organized militia is not included. The national guardsmen, it is pointed out, cannot be sent out of the country, being available only to repel an invasion. The activity of the general staff is attributed to its eagerness to show how promptly the troops can be moved and does not forecast international developments.

Reports of unsettled conditions in the interior of Mexico have come from various points. Fifteen hundred insurgents are threatening Santa Rosalia and there are strikes at the Madero mines at Parras. Matamoras, opposite Brownsville, Tex., also is scenting trouble.

Rebels are said to be in control of the situation from Juarez south to Casas Grandes, though no reports of any fighting have reached here.

Grave conditions are believed to prevail in southern Mexico, pessimistic reports being received from the states of Vera Cruz, Michoacan and Hidalgo.

CLEAR TRACK FOR TAFT

Announcement After Long Conference of His Friends

Washington, Feb. 10.—That President Taft is certain of 780 delegates out of a total of 1076, or 241 more than the number necessary to nominate in the national convention, is the result of a calculation made public by Representative McKinley of Ohio and Charles D. Hilles, secretary to the president.

The campaign for the president's renomination began in earnest when McKinley, Hilles and Senator Crane held their first conference. They spent several hours together and discussed the political situation. After the meeting was over the foregoing statement was made.

OPENS A NEW BOSTON OFFICE

The Fore River Shipbuilding Co., is to open a Boston office on Monday. The office will be located in the Lawrence building 85 Devonshire street, rooms 905 and 906. The company has long felt the need of a Boston office, not only as headquarters for its representative in Boston but as a place where the directors can meet without the necessity of coming to Quincy. Dirctors in a large company like the Fore River Co., are busy men and if they have to come to Quincy to attend meetings it means at least two hours wasted in travelling back and forth. For the present the office will be in charge of the company's Boston representative.

SPECIAL MEETING CALLED.

Mayor Stone sent out notices this morning calling a special meeting of the City Council for Monday evening. But one matter is stated in the call. That is drawing of jurors.

CELEBRATION COMMITTEE.

A special meeting of the Executive Committee of the July 4th celebration committee has been called for next Tuesday evening. The meeting will be held in the office of Mayor Stone at City Hall, at 7 o'clock sharp.

SOUTH BRAINTREE

A party of friends went in town Tuesday to see Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert V. Pennock start on their trip west. They went with the Raymond, Whitcomb party on that day and will be gone about six weeks. The good wishes of a host of friends accompany them.

The Pond Cemetery Association will meet with Mrs George E. Orcutt, Hancock street, Tuesday afternoon. The work commitee are much pleased with the response to their appeal for material for their quilts. It shows that members read the Observer carefully. As, owing to the burning of the Town hall, there can be no fair this year, the work committee are devoting all their time to quilts, expecting the cold weather will create a demand for them. Members and friends will please note this.

Next Friday evening in G. A. R. hall, Post 87 and W. R. C. No. 94 will hold a joint celebration in honor of Washington and Lincoln.

Mrs. G. D. Willis of Washington street has been seriously ill with a painful case of blood poisoning in her left hand the past week. At last accounts she was as comfortable as could be expected.

QUINCY CHORAL SOCIETY.

The Quincy Choral Society has set the date of its spring festival for Tuesday April 9th and is planning to make the affair in every way a success. Much interest is already aroused by the first announcements and several new singers have joined the society for the half season remaining. The number of rehearsals will necessarily be less than in the first series and although the executive board will gladly admit all singers with good voices who come early, they will not be allowed to join after the rehearsal of Tuesay Feb. 27th unless they are of excellen training and practically know the Faust music. It is hoped that all who really desire to study the opera will attend the rehearsal of Tuesday Feb. 13th at Y. M. C. H. hall, for if the concerts continue to be as successful financially as they hae been in the past the time will soon come when only the best voices will be acceptable as is the rule in other well established singing societies. Thls many who have good voices, untrained, and hae not taken adantage o fthis opportunity to study and improve, will at last lose the privilege.

It is a matter of regret to the board of officers that the date of the festival conflicts with an afternoon meeting of the Women's club, but this date was the only one available under the many conditions attendant upon arranging so large an affair. It is expected that the choral work will be so clearly defined another year, that all dates for the entire season may be arranged at the first business meeting in October which will no doubt be more satisfactory to members and tend to aoid conflicting with other organizations.

READ LEDGER ADVS.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Editor of the Ledger:

The forthcoming dedication of the Wollaston grammar school has focused attention upon one of the burning questions of the da, namely, "The Use of Schools for Other Than School Purposes." The first effort to have any law on this matter resulted in the passage of the following by the Legislature last year. The comment of the State Board of Education follows the statute.

Chapter 367. Sec. 1. The school committee of any city or town which accepts the provisions of this act may grant the temporary use of halls in school buildings upon such terms and conditions and for such public or educational purposes, for which no admission fee is charged, as the said school committee may deem wise; provided, however, that such use shall not in any way interfere or be inconsistent with the use of the halls for school purposes.

Sec. 2. This act shall take effect in a city upon its acceptance by a two thirds vote of the members of each branch of the city council or corresponding body of that city present and voting, and upon the approval of the Mayor; and it shall take effect in a town upon its acceptance by a majority of the voters of the town present and voting thereon at an annual town meeting or at a special meeting called for the purpose. [Approved April 29, 1911.]

Those who supported this measure sought to encourage, through legislation, and to remove all legal doubt relative to the wider use of school buildings for such free, public and educational purposes, in addition to those usually carried on under regular public school auspices, as the school committee may deem wise. The act seems to have no reference to and seems to be without effect upon the question of the rental of school buildings for a consideration or of their use for gatherings to which an admission fee is charged One effect of the measure is to make it necessary that in all towns where school committees have allowed school buildings to be used for general purposes, specific permissions from the town must henceforth be obtained.

The city of Malden desirous of having greater privileges secured a special act, which need not be quoted here City Solicitor McAnarney prepared a special bill for the Legislature, which I carried to the State House Feb. 6. It was of course too late to be received and acted upon this year, but I found the Committee on Education in session, and on learning that it had before it several general bills, which made our special bill unnecessary, I sat through the session and herewith present a brief statement of what I learned.

The City of Boston asked for special legislation, and was represented by the Mayor, Chairman of the School Committee, and representative of the Finance Committee. As this is of no special interest to Quincy, I make no further reference to it, but the three bills presented for the consideration of the Legislative Committee on Education , are as follows:

USE OF SCHOOL HOUSE.

Sec. 1. School committees, in their discretion, may allow the use of school houses for lectures, with or without stereopticon illustrations or moving pictures, and for readings, concerts and other similar entertainments. They may require compensation for the use of the buildings or may permit their use without charge. They may make rules governing the use of the buildings.

Sec. 2. Cities and towns may appropriate money to pay expenses incurred under this act when no compensation is required.

Sec. 3. This act shall take effect upon its passage.

USE OF SCHOOL HALLS.

Sec. 1. Section one of chapter three hundred and sixty-seven of the acts of the year nineteen hundred and eleven is hereby amended by striking out in line five the words "for which no admission fee is charged," and by adding at the end thereof the words:— and provided further, that use of such halls shall not be granted for purposes of private profit to individuals,— so that the said section shall read as follows:— Sec. 1. The school committee of any city or town which accepts the provisions of this act may grant the temporary use of halls in school buildings upon such terms and conditoins and for such public or educational purposes, as the said school committee may deem wise: provided, however, that such use shall not in any way interfere or be inconsistent with the use of the halls for school purposes, and provided further, that use of such halls shall not be granted for purposes of private profit to individuals.

Sec. 2. This act shall take effect upon its passage.

Sec. 1. Sec. one of chapter three hundred and sixty-seven of the acts of the year nineteen hundred and eleven is hereby amended by adding at the end thereof the words:— and that such use shall not be granted during the regular sessions of the school unless the egresses have been approved for such purpose by an inspector of factories and public buildings of the district police,— so as to read as follows:—Sec. 1. The school committee of any city or town which accepts the provisions of this act may grant the temporary use of halls in school buildings upon such terms and conditions and for such public or educational purposes, for which no admission fee is charged, as the said school committee may deem wise: provided, however, that such use shall not in any way interfere or be inconsistent with the use of the halls for school purposes, and that such use shall not be granted during the regular sessions of the school unless the egresses have been approved for such purpose by an inspector of factories and public buildings of the district police.

Sec. 2. This act shall take effect upon its passage.

Without question the ideas there embodied will be reported favorably by the Committee on Education of the Legislature and we may reasonably expect that in a short time a general law will be passed which will enable our School Committee to let the halls of our various public schools for other than school purposes.

RUFUS B. TOBEY.

Wollaston, Feb. 7, 1912.

A LETTER TO THE MAYOR.

Hon. Eugene R. Stone,
Mayor of Quincy,

Dear Sir:—Fourteen days have passed, since I respectfully asked you and your City Solicitor (servants of the citizens of Quincy) to publicly answer 12 questions relating to the welfare of our city pertaining to the grade crossing question at Saville and Water streets and the Furnace Brook Parkway problem, with a House Bill attached authorizing the appropriation of $240,000.

Why have you refused to answer? In your public utterances before and since election you have boldly proclaimed and advocated, "publicity of our city affairs." Why this attitude of the sphinx? If you are sincere and on the level, you should be delighted and a pleasure to lead us out of the wilderness into the light.

So I again ask you and the City Solicitor to turn on the light and publicly answer the 12 burning questions of the hour. Remember "procrastination is the thief of time." We are fast approaching a great crisis in our city. Are you "the Man of the Hour" or will you deliberately and silently allow our city to be worse than dynamited for the benefit of selfish interests for profit?

Yours for Publicity,
G. B. Bates.
Member Grade Crossing Committee.

LORIMER PROBE ENDS

Testimony at Hearings Constitutes About Five Million Words

Washington, Feb. 10.—Public hearings in the second senatorial investigation into the election of Senator Lorimer were declared closed by Chairman Dillingham of the senate Lorimer investigation committee. Attorney Haneey, representing Lorimer, was given permission to file a brief to the effect that the senator's election was adjudicated before the present investigation began, and it therefore could not be the subject of a second investigation.

The inquiry has proved to be one of the most exhaustive ever made by a congressional committee. In the eight months' hearing about 10,000 pages of printed testimony were taken, constituting about 5,000,000 words. It is estimated that the stenographers' fees alone reach $15,000.

POSTMASTER MUST RESIGN

Sublet Work to Canadian, Saving Only $75 a Year For Himself

Washington, Feb. 10.—Subletting the work and responsibilities of his office to a Canadian has gotten Postmaster C. F. Bayley of Beebe Plain, Vt., into difficulty with the postoffice department. His resignation has been called for.

Beebe Plain is on the Canadian boundary. The line, in fact, passes directly through the postoffice, and the Canadian postmaster has his office not only in the same building, but in the same room as the American postmaster.

Bayley farmed out his office to the Canadian official, retaining only $75 a year of his salary of $532 for the use of his name. Bayley performed no duties himself, the work all being done by the Canadian.

PANIC DURING FIRE IN INSANE ASYLUM

Women Patients Are All Transferred Without Injury

Worcester, Mass., Feb. 10.—Two hundred insane female patients in the Summer street branch of the state hospital for the insane were thrown into a panic by a fire which started in the cupola of the main building yesterday afternoon. There are about 300 inmates in the institution. Of these, 200 were in the endangered section, and much difficulty was experienced in removing them to other quarters.

The fire is thought to have been caused by defective electric light wiring. It spread quickly along the roof and caused an uproar among the terrified women.

Dr. Scribner, superintendent of the branch, marshalled his nurses and attendants and the work of transferring the patients to another part of the building was accomplished without injury. It took some time to quiet the women, who pushed and crowded roughly in their efforts to escape.

After a hard fight the blaze was extinguished. The loss is between $2000 and $3000.

RETRACT FORMER PLEA

Five Men Admit Robbing a Postoffice In a Maine Town

Portland, Me., Feb. 10.—A mild sensation was created in the federal court when the five men indicted for robbing the West Buxton postoffice retracted their plea of not guilty, made earlier in the day, and pleaded guilty. They will be sentenced today.

Their names were given in the indictments as Fred R. Dixon, George Sullivan, John T. Ryan, John E. Connors and Harry C. Morgan.

The Sebago Lake men who captured the five robbers will share in a federal reward, which will amount to nearly $1000, it is understood.

SUFFRAGE FOR WOMEN

Clause Providing For It In Ohio's New Constitution

Columbus, Feb. 10.—That a clause providing for equal suffrage will be reported favorably by the committee on woman suffrage of the Ohio constitutional convention was conceded, following a hearing at which leading advocates of suffrage for women had made addresses.

Chairman Kilpatrick asserted that eighteen of the twenty-one members of the committee favor the proposal which gives the electoral franchise to women.

Did Nothing but Shoe Horses

New Brunskick, N. J., Feb. 10.—George De Hart, the "village blacksmith," who died at his home here, shod horses for forty-five years, but in the past thirty years he never rode on or behind a horse; he lived close to New York, but never visited the "Big City;" he never rode in a trolley car, a railroad train or automobile. He never married.

Letters remain in the post office for Willis C. Bates Co., Luigi di Berardino, J. L. Lockhart and Mrs. Grace Winkfield.

The Washington whist club met Thursday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Clark. A good time was enjoyed by all.

Mr. and Mrs. Stevens who have been spending the Winter in Braintree have gone to New York for a few days and from there will take a trip south.

The bridge party at the Cochato club next Tuesday evening is under the direction of Mrs. George E. Williams. Weather permitting there will be a large attendance.

There was no happier little boy in Miss Whelan's room in the second grade of the Union school than little Tommie Hollinshead, the occasion being the invitation from his grandfather Mr. Dimmock to take his classmates a sleigh ride on Wednesday afternoon. The little people enjoyed the ride and will ever remember the kind deed of Mr. Dimmock.

Pretty German Under Auspices Quincy Day Nursery

MATRONS AND USHERS

Alpha hall was the scene of one of the prettiest parties of the season, Saturday afternoon, the occasion being a Valentine German, given under the auspices of the Quincy Day Nursery association, for the young people, under the leadership and management of Mrs. Charles M. Bryant, who displayed great executive ability.

The matrons, Mrs. George E. Pfaffmann, Mrs. Edward H. Angier, Mrs. Charles L. Seavey, Mrs. Walter E. Simmons, Jr., were escorted into the hall to the strains of music played by Keating's orchestra, by the head ushers, Henry M. Faxon, Jack Doble, Richard Blackmur and Gordon Rowe.

The assistant ushers, Harold Seavey, Karl Pfaffmann, Frederick Schenkleberger, William B. Rice, Otis Angier, Willard Crocker, Rodgers Burgin, Abbott Johnson, Robert Davis Edward Whittemore, Frederick Rollins, Franklin Streeter, Joseph A. Dasha, Jr., Loyal Safford, Stanley Richards, Howard Johnson, and Henry I. Hall presented the guests to the matrons and Mrs. Bryant after which dancing was enjoyed from two until five.

There were about 150 children present: youths and misses who with their smiling faces, and the latter in their dainty party frocks, lent gaiety and festivity to the place.

The valentine favors were presented very generously by Mrs. Bryant.

The committee in charge of the party worked assiduously to make it a success and it was a great social success and indications point to a decided success financially as a good sum was netted for the treasury.

The orchestra, Miss Ruth Keating, leader, played in a skilful and admirable manner. There were twelve numbers on the program. Mrs. Bryant was ably assisted by Mrs. John Johnson of Wollaston and Mrs Paul Blackmur. All of the ladies were becomingly gowned and received in a cordial and charming manner.

THE SUNDAY LIQUOR RAID

Inspector Goodhue accompanied by Officers Curtin, Cahill, Ilson, Hinchon and Duane raided the premises of the German Social club, 64 West street, Sunday afternoon.

When the officers entered the premises they found eight or ten men seated about a table drinking. No arrests were made but the officers seized 50 bottles of beer, a keg containing beer, bottling apparatus, empty bottles, books and papers.

LADIES' AID GIVE SUPPER

Members of the Swedish Lutheran church assembled in Protection hall in large numbers Saturday for the supper given by the Ladies' Aid society. The affair proved most successful all details being carried out to complete satisfaction.

There was an entertainment and addresses by various members.

Music was furnished by the Dorcas society orchestra, and the choir of the church rendered several songs. Miss Anna Sandberg gave a number of piano solos, responding to repeated encores.

The committee in charge included: Mrs. Andrew Anderson, Mrs. Andrew Nelson, Mrs. Gustave Nelson, Mrs. Gustave Gustafson, Mrs. Anna Lindquist, Mrs. Emma Coleman, Mrs. Mollie Anderson, Mrs. Eric Eckblom and Mrs. Herman Kjellbig.

SUNDAY AND MORNING FIRES.

Chief Litchfield answered the first alarms of fire since he assumed the office of Chief, Sunday, when there were two bell alarms. The first alarm was from Box 29 at 6.55 P. M. and was for a slight fire in the barn of Thomas Butler on Putnam street. The fire was among a lot of old paper and was quickly extinguished.

The second alarm was sounded from Box 75 at 7.35 P. M. and was for a slight fire among a lot of rubbish in the attic of a house at the corner of South Walnut and Sumner streets occupied by Salvatore Purpura. The damage here was also slight.

These fires however furnished an illustration of how quick time can be made with auto apparatus. At the fire on Putnam street Chief Litchfield in his new auto was the first to arrive and directly behind him was the auto chemical both arriving at the box inside of three minutes from the time the first blow sounded and at least three minutes ahead of the apparatus drawn by horses. Again at Box 75 Chief Litchfield and the auto chemical made remarkable quick runs to the box.

The alarm from Box 39 at 8.03 this morning was for a fire in a car of potatoes at the Quincy Adams depot. The car was one known as an Eastman heater car and the potatoes belong to F. H. Crane & Sons. The fire started from the heater and was discovered soon after 6.15. An attempt was made at that time to get the fire out and it was thought it had been extinguished. Half an hour later the fire again broke out and the alarm was sounded. As potatoes are unusually high at this time the loss will be considerable.

—A local attorney who was called to Cleveland on business recently says he met a sleeping car porter who deserves the famous baseball sobriquet, "solid ivory." "I started to dress in the morning," relates the lawyer, "and found one black and one tan shoe beneath my berth. I summoned the porter and demanded an explanation. 'Well,' said the porter, scratching his head, 'don't that beat all. I swear to goodness, boss, that's the second time this morning that's happened.'"

READING LAMP FROM TEACHERS

T. B. Pollard Entertains Teachers on his Anniversary

ORIGINAL POEM

Thomas B. Pollard for twenty-five years principal of the Washington school, entertained the teaching corps and janitor of the building at his home on Edison street, Saturday evening. Mr. Pollard was assisted in receiving by Mrs. Pollard and the evening was one of great enjoyment.. Miss Olive Viola Bicknell, one of the teaching corps gave several vocal solos and vocal solos were also contributed by Miss Frances Murray, also of the teaching corps. Another feature was the reading of an original poem written by Timothy J. Collins, the well-known newspaper correspondent, who was a member of Mr. Pollard's first class at the school.

During the evening Miss Sara Malone in behalf of the teachers presented Mr. Pollard with a reading lamp. Refreshments were also served.

The original poem was as follows:

Back through the quarter century's gaze—
Long years of service, nobly done—
We look tonight and sound thy praise,
Just praise thy deeds have fairly won.

The silvered years that mark the time,
Since first with us began your task,
Have found you still in manhood's prime,
God keep you so, we fondly ask.

The trumpets of the might of war
Were not assigned to such as thee,
But greater honors yet, by far,
Have been thy part and still shall be.

No armed legions follow thee,
Nor proud battalions of the line,
No battle standards, flying fair,
Adorn the armies that are thine.

No sorrowing scenes thy march has made,
No aching hearts nor empty homes,
Such fruits as these the conquering blade
Brings, when the conquering army comes.

But victories of peace and love
Have been thy share in Life's campaign,
In children's hearts thy name is wove
And there, secure, it shall remain.

Small, trusting feet have followed thee,
Through all the years that mark thy rule,
And, o'er the heights to Victory,
The armies marched from school to school.

Thy Life's example was the star
That shed its light for them to see,
And, following from near and far,
They reached the heights because of thee.

Truth, Honesty, and Justice bright,
Emblazoned on thy banner borne
Aloft through darkness of the night,
Above the peaks to meet the dawn.

Let poets sing the Heroes' praise,
A praise that sings of battle arts,
Thy fame, securely ever stays,
Implanted in thy pupils' hearts.

May future years be like the past,
From silver sheen to golden hue,
And Love, the golden cord, hold fast,
And stretch alway from them to you.

And may this Light still lead us on,
Reflected light of days gone by,
Of days of promise yet to come,
Or days to end in Victory.

J. FRANKLIN FAXON.

J. Franklin Faxon, a life long and well known resident of Quincy, died Sunday morning at his home on Adams street, after an illness of 10 days' duration. His illness was not thought at first to be of a serious nature, but he did not improve, and an operation was performed, and he gradually failed, until Sunday morning, when he passed away.

Mr. Faxon was a son of Job and Judith B. (Hardwick) Faxon, and a brother of the late Henry H. Faxon. He was born in Quincy, Feb. 2, 1832, and had always made his home here. He was for many years engaged in the wholesale grocery business, and at one time largely interested in the lumber business in Maine. Of late years, however, he has not been actively engaged in business.

He leaves a widow and two daughters, Mrs. Charles A. Price of Monroe road, and Mrs. Warren G. Ogden, of Goffe street.

MEETINGS OF GRANITE CUTTERS

Quincy Polishers' and Tool Sharpeners branches of the G. C. I. A. will hold their regular monthly meeting this week at Clan McGregor hall on Thursday and Friday nights respectively. Each branch will elect officers to serve during the ensuing six months.

A great deal of interest is being manifested by the members of each branch in the selection of one member to serve as delegate to the convention which will meet in Quincy sometime this spring, probably in April; to revise the constitution of the Granite Cutters' International association.

Both branches have nominated a number of members and large meetings are expected because each nominee has a large following.

On Wednesday, Feb. 21, the granite cutters' branch will meet at Clan McGregor hall to elect officers for the ensuing six months. A mass meeting of the three Quincy branches will be held at the same time to elect three delegates to the Executive Council, to serve for a term of three months.

Quincy cutters' branch will have three delegates at the coming convention and at the meeting in January unanimously nominated James Duncan, Alex W. Russell and Thomas Johnston. These men represent the most progressive element among the cutters and are eminently capable in every way and no doubt will give a good account of themselves at the convention.

ASKED TO SERVE ON COMMITTEE

The Board of Directors of the Boston Chamber of Commerce voted at their last meeting to request Ex-Representative Louis F. R. Langelier to serve as a member of their committee on Legislation.

Other members of the Chamber to serve on this committee are: Franklin W. Ganse, chairman, Columbian National Life Ins. Co.; March G. Bennett, Samuel Cabot, Inc., Mfg. chemists; Leon R. Eyges, Eyges, Wyner & Freedman, lawyers; Randolph Frothingham, Channing & Frothingham, lawyers; Amos R. Little, Ballard & Little, lawyer and William Odlin, lawyer.

PRETTY GERMAN.

One of the prettiest parties of the season was the German, held in Colonial hall last Saturday evening. Mrs. Herbert Beattie, Mrs Frederick Keep, and Mrs. Albert Parker were the matrons. Morton Beattie, Chester Bennett and Allen Miller were the ushers.

The next German will take place February 23rd and will be a Leap Year function. The young ladies will act as ushers and do all the honors of the evening.

"Our Sweethearts' party" held Saturday afternoon in the parish rooms of St. Chrysostom's church under the direction of Mrs. H. To say the little ones enjoyed themselves is putting it mild, it was a gala day for them and fun to their hearts' content reigned supreme for three hours.

Before the program of the afternoon the rector Rev. Frederick H. Steenstra said—"The greatest need of a new parish house is for the Sunday school and it is made still more emphatic by the number of children here today which would have been at least double if the day had not been so intensely cold. A new parish house was the pet scheme of your former rector Rev. Mr. Clattenburg—after his success in cancelling the church debt and he has just sent us $50 for the fund." The announcement was received with hearty applause.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

It has been demonstrated on more than one occasion, says the Charlestown Enterprise, that if any city or town desires to protect its interests when those interests conflict with the desires of corporations, the people must stand together and must stand under the right kind of leadership.

This would have been very pertinent advice for Quincy about the time abolishing grade crossings was discussed. Standing together means much, also the right kind of leadership if you are to get there.

What is this, all our children wanting to leave the family roof-tree and go it alone? For several months Houghs Neck has been talking a separate town to be called Seagirt and now Mr. Whiting in public letter suggests that it might be better for Wollaston to become a town.

A while ago there was talk of Quincy Neck becoming a town. About time now to hear from the other sections. How about Atlantic, The Downs, West Quincy, South Quincy, Quincy Point and all the other small settlements do they feel as though they wanted to go it alone?

Now seems to be the time to make your wants known.

ENTERTAIN THE SAILORS.

The sailors at Sailors' Snug Harbor Germantown enjoyed a very pleasant evening Saturday through the kindness of the Cornish Carol club.

The last Sunday of December the club sang Christmas carols which were much enjoyed and at that time planned another concert for some week night. Saturday night, in spite of the cold, about 20 members of the club went to the Harbor and gave the following program:

—Brockton's city engineer estimates the present population of the city as 60,000, and it is said that the deposits in Brockton's institutions for savings amount to nearly $12,000,000. This is a good showing, considering that the average yearly wage of Brockton's work people is $658.47, according to statistics gathered by the board of health.—Somerville Journal.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES AND JOTTINGS

A Regular Weekly Feature of the Quincy Daily Ledger

While the Young Men's Christian Association was organized for English speaking and has grown especially fast among men who speak this language many probably do not realize what a force it has become among men speaking nearly every language under the sun.

There are few English ideas that have gotten much of a chance in China except this Association. Not only are there Associations for the men of China but also for the vast numbers of English speaking men who are living there. It is especially among the Chinese the work is a marvel. The recent revolution has wrought havoc among the business interests of the nation. Men who have recently visited the country say that while 13 out of 70 banks in Shanghai have weathered the storm and are still in business, men in Shanghai have, with great sacrifice stood by the work and met the $25,000 budget which they had underwritten. Wonder if the same would have been experienced in this country under similar conditions?

Fortunately the answer can be made in the affirmative for at a recent dinner of the International Committee held in New York Pres. W. C. Brown was present and spoke. He said that the directors of the New York Central R. R. felt that the money they invested in the work of the Association was the best invested of any they had the handling of. He also said that during the recent hard times the directors, who by the way vote large sums of the money of the Railroad towards the support of the Railroad Associations, did not cut down these appropriations one cent.

In writing of Secretary Hayes who is in Manking, it is said that after practically all the foreigners had escaped, he was there during the siege and capture of the city by the Revolutionary force and was able to be of great service in the Red Cross work. The story is the same in Foochow. They all say this is the time of times for the association in that country. For some time the Association has rendered great service in the preparation of students for the Government examinations. In fact great changes have taken place because of the Association influence brought to bear upon the officials in charge of them.

Here is what the American Secretaries are doing, except those who are stationed in West China, they are not taking a vacation or waiting for a chance to get home because their work has been stopped for a time, they are just digging at the language getting in shape to do a larger and better work when the storm has blown over. Here is what National Secretary Brockman cables to New York, "Get the plans of those buildings to us not later than Feb. 1st. Sixteen men at once is the very least number we can ask for." This is for the Province of Foochow alone. This country has 30,000,000 of people and has joined the new Government. Dr. Sun, the Provisional President is a Christian."

Japan during their war had a chance to see what the Association could do for their young men in the army. This led the Mikado to give a large sum of money to the work and gave a great impetus to the work in that country.

Denmark has opened a handsome new building worth $31,000 at Allburg and another costing $10,000 at Silkeborg.

The "Miyak" of St. Petersburg (The Young Men's Christian Association) now has 850 members. Its secretary is directing the formation of a similar Association at Moscow in response to a petition of 200 men.

The Viceroy at Nanking sent a commission to the Association building at Shanghai to inspect the work. His attention was called to the Association by the American Consul-General. The commissioner spent four hours greatly interested and on his report to the Viceroy made a gift of $1,000 and he himself sent $300.

These are some of the experiences in some of the usually thought of as difficult countries to introduce English or American customs. Columns could be written of the work in India. The results of the work in India are the most fascinating of those in any country where the Association work has been taken up.

ARMY AND NAVY.

Doubtless there are people who think the Young Men's Christian Association does well enough in working for and with men in the city, but when it comes to working with men in the army and navy that is another matter. In this they are in error as can be shown below;

"I used to crave whiskey, but since I have signed the pledge I hate to hear the word spoken," writes a nineteen-year-old boy on the U. S. S. Louisiana. He was one of the 750 who came in on this great battleship to the Brooklyn Navy Yard in December for three weeks' rest and recreation and one of 6,000 blue-jackets and marines on eight big warships which lay in the yard during the holidays. Within forty-eight hours after its arrival the Brooklyn Navy Association projected into the main deck compartments of his ship Dt. A. T. Mac Nichol, an international authority on alcohol, who knocked out every leg on which alcohol has ever stood as a food, tonic or stimulant, and revealed its true nature as a deadly narcotic poison. So convincingly was this shown that this young man and fifty shipmates out of the 225 present at the talk signed the Enlisted Men's Abstinence League pledge.

"We never had such a sober lot of men, and only four cases of discipline for drunkenness," said the executive officer of this ship before they sailed.

On seven other battleships and on a group of nine torpedo boat destroyers the message was given to 1,400 men and 500 pledges were signed on board ship and in the Branch building in December. One of the signers writes: "I am not sorry for what i did the last time I was in the Association. ——I hope you will get a lot more of the navy men to sign the pledge, because that (drink) is the worst faullt any of us ever had." (One grateful executive officer estimated that 90 per cent of the offenses committed in the service can be traced to an indulgence in intoxicating liquors.) "I took my first drink the first time I went ashore from this outfit. I thought it made a man of me to go in and out of a saloon, but I guess I have cut my eye teeth since then."

During the last days of the campaign men were squarely asked to begin the christian life at final meetings on the big ships. Between decks with with big guns and other machinery standing mutely by, at such a meeting on the battleship North Dakota practically all of the 150 men arose to express their desire to live the christian life and no less than 68 decision cards were signed by men of the service who wanted to enlist under the Banner of the Cross. At he same meeting 55 of these men joined the Enlisted Men's Bible and Prayer League and were provided with the New Testaments furnished by Miss Helen Gould. Equally remarkable meetings were held on the five other big ships. Decisions for the christian life were urged at the Sunday meetings at the Naval Association building; during the month 1,240 men heard the message; 350 signed cards they would accept Jesus Christ as Saviour and Lord and undertake to live a christian life; 289 were enrolled for daily Bible study and prayer, and over 200 were supplied with Testaments.

With such a work being carried on by the Association in this most difficult field it surely will secure the interest and aid in the different cities where the work is established. For when these men are in cities where there is no Navy Association they are most welcome in the city Association.

Secretary Gay of the Lawrence Association says that a large number of the soldiers who are in that city have made use of the invitation the Association extended to the men while they are there on duty. And right glad were they to have the chance to spend much of their time there. They begin coming at nine o'clock and are coming and going all day long. The heart of many a mother and father will be made glad to know their boys are spending their time in the Building. To those parents and friends, the Association will have made itself worth while if it does no other such work during the year. But Mr. Gay nor the men connected with that Association will never know just what the results of the work are. Are the people who contribute their money to support that work going to withdraw their support because they cannot be shown just what the results are? Of course they are not. This same question could be put to the generous men and women of the city of Quincy and they would of course answer it in the same way. The fact is no one ever knows just when some just as real help will be rendered to the young men right here at home.

THE CANDIDACY OF ROOSEVELT

Permanent Committee Organized at Chicago to Push It

EIGHT GOVERNORS PRESENT

Bass of New Hampshire the Only Easterner — Resolutions Declare That Former President Is the One Man Who Can Unite Party and Attract Independent Voters—Delegates From Twenty-Eight States

Chicago, Feb. 12.—Eight governors and delegates from twenty-eight states met here and in an informal conference organized a permanent committee to push the candidacy of Theodore Roosevelt for the Republican nomination for president.

The governors addressed a letter to Roosevelt in which they explained the purpose of the meeting and asked him to let it be known that if the people demand he accept the nomination and the demand would not be unheeded by him.

The meeting was without disagreement and the resolutions adopted declare that "all are agreed Theodore Roosevelt is the one man who can at this time unite all elements of the party and attract large numbers of independent voters."

The resolutions further favor an expression of the people's choice for president by direct vote for a candidate in each state and appeal to all agreeing with that sentiment to join the movement.

They conclude with a protest "against the use of organized political machinery, based on patronage, to deprive the people of any voice as to their real choice."

On rollcall the delegates from the different states told of work already done toward promoting the ex-president's candidacy. Several reported complete organizations.

In a statement signed by Governors Stubbs of Kansas, Osborn of Michigan, Hadley of Misouri, Aldrich of Nebraska, Bass of New Hampshire, Glasscock of West Virginia, Vesey of South Dakota and Carey of Wyoming, the following was set forth:

"Momentous questions are pressing for solution; what the country is seeking is justice between man and man. It wants equality of justice, safeguarded by adequate law.

"A principle is of no avail without a man; a cause is lost without a leader. In Theodore Roosevelt we believe the principle has the man; the cause, the leader. It is our opinion that this is the sentiment of the people in the states we represent.

"It is nothing to us that Theodore Roosevelt is not a candidate for the Republican nomination; we believe the people have decided to make him their candidate. It is for the people to determine who shall be their leader, irrespective of the wishes of the citizen selected.

"Knowing the high sense of public duty with which Colonel Roosevelt is imbued, we are satisfied that he will not refuse to heed the call of the people; that he will, if nominated, accept the nomination, and if elected, will discharge the duties of the chief magistracy with the same faithfulness and consideration of the interests of all the people and display the same rugged courage and will apply his well-known doctrine of the square deal that his past record indicates."

The conference was executive, as was a meeting held separately by the governors, who declined to give out the text of the letter they sent to Roosevelt.

Folk not only agreed to divide the delegation, but asked his friends to make no further effort in his behalf. He promised to support Clark.

Speaker Clark, according to reports from forty of ninety counties holding primaries Saturday, was successful in all except Giradeau. This county went for Folk.

SUNDAY IN OUR CHURCHES

Topics and Announcements For Coming Week

SUNDAY SCHOOLS

WOLLASTON M. E.

There was another large attendance Sunday evening at the Wollaston M. E. church for the second in the series of sermons for men by Rev. Wesley Wiggins. "Can Wollaston churches operate without men?" 1 Chron. 29:3. Mr. Wiggins said in part:

The superintenent of any large shop or factory, who plans for the interest of the company for which he works must study the needs, the opportunities, the possibilities and the probable results. He must know the men and the material with which he has to work, to bring things to pass in order that good profits may be realized. No business is conducted without men. The great need of the business world is men; men of leadership; men of ability to plan and to execute their plans to the best interest of the company concerned.

No man will invest his capital in a losing game. The capitalist must be assured that the thing he puts his money into will realize for him a handsome return. Competition is so close today that the business man must be on the alert for any invention or discovery of methods that will enable him to win over his competitor. The great need is for men who can succeed in the position where they may be placed. So too the church needs men if the best results are to be achieved. The first thing to be considered is, Is it worthy of the effort of the business man? Will the end justify the means? To successfully operate the churches of Wollaston we need for leadership, for counsel, for the many activities connected with the work, the sterling qualities of true manhood, full of resourcefulness. We need the wisdom and the force of purpose which the business man possesses.

No more promising trend is to be found in modern life than that of the increased interest of man in things religious. Far too long has the church neglected this most important work. But today if present indications mean anything we are on the verge of a great awakening. Already the church is recognizing its opportunity and is calling into service, men of strong business principles, progressive spirit and forceful in service.

With men thoroughly aroused, with a deep sense of their responsibility to the church and to God the church will take on new life and branch out into new lines of activity. We have a right to expect this for mankind is aggressive. Man will not be satisfied with simply marking time. He must see things move. With an aroused manhood that realizes its obligations to the church, the problems of finance and the extension of God's kingdom will be solved.

What of the aroused manhood in the persons of Wycliffe, Knox, Savonorola, Gough, and Dwight L. Moody. Only a few out of many. But what impulses they stirred; what forces they set in motion; what new eras they inaugurated. They brought about great spiritual aggressiveness. The church offers opportunities for men of every rank and station in life giving unto us not monasteries where alms are given the poor and oppressed, but settlements that reach into the slums of the city and country; not a religion of contemplation in cloister, but one that wrestles with life in shop and store, on form and in home; not a christianity with cold and formal creeds, but one of life and vigor that appeals to the sterling qualities of strong manhood; one that calls for the brave, the heroic, the strong, the courageous, bristling with energy, life and purpose.

To operate the Wollaston churches successfully in behalf of the individual, the home and the community we must solicit the hearty co-operation of men.

1. Most helpful features of Church life. What are the most helpful features of church life. What is the greatest need of the church? It is interesting to note the different replies in answer to these questions all of which we do well to consider.

"The most helpful features of church life today are the maintaining of high christian ideals from instruction from the pulpit and Sunday school. Direct stimulation of the moral and religious sense arousing the feelings of men above ordinary affairs. The part that the church keeps a man in touch with better things of life.

"Contribution of thoughts that helps towards appreciation of the Fatherhood of God. The check to society and the community on evil and sin.

"The most helpful features of church life are not the so-called social gatherings; not the Sunday school, not the prayer meeting; but the sermon that is preached Sunday morning, provided it be prepared carefully and delivered with reverence and courage. Business cares and thoughts of the week can be laid aside. The mind refreshed with new thoughts and desires usually not of a selfish nature.

"To the man already in the church and who understands it, there are many helpful features. He is strengthened by what he hears and he has learned to enjoy the service. To the man outside there are few helpful features that he can see. One of the most helpful features is work in some form. A person that is at work will not be apt to fall away from the church and we have so many varieties of work in the Sunday school, the League, and the prayer room that one might find some place to fit in.

II. The greatest need of the church.

"A presentation of the religion of actual daily living that will actually make people feel the need of it." I think one of the biggest things lacking in the church is a union of all our forces. Men rally when there is something to do, and the thing to be done is worth while doing and under competent leadership. The power of such a movement as that of the 'Men and Religion' is that it appeals to very many denominations and is under strong leadership and with a big outlook.

"I do not think that the church needs men more than men need the church. I go to church quite as often for what I may be able to do for the church as for what the church may be able to do for me. I am not sure but the good we get from the church we get in this way quite as often as in any other way. The great need of the church is a thorough revision of church rules to suit present conditions and then to be wisely administered and widely advertised so people will know what the church stands for.

III. How shall this need be met?

"This need can be met save only as we look to God for guidance and set our affections to the house of God. If we are to reach men and solicit their hearty co-operation in the work of the church we must present Christ in such fulness and attractiveness, resourceful, manly, courageous, masterful, as shall appeal to the most intellectual and businesslike man."

WOLLASTON UNITARIAN.

"This one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things that are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus;" this was the scripture text of the sermon preached by Rev. Carl G. Horst at the morning service, and the modern embodiment of the same thought he took from our own poet, Longfellow, "Look not mournfully into the past, it comes not back again. Wisely improve the present, it is thine—Go forth to meet the shadowy future without fear and with a manly heart."

From these ancient and modern texts the preacher preached a strong and inspiring sermon, pressing the mighty claims of the present and urging that the failures and sins of the past he remembered only to safeguard the future. As a river deepens and broadens as it leaves its tiny source and flows through many lands, so the experiences of life, the dark as well as the bright, add to the worth of our natures.

No man suffers defeat, so long as he is ready to take each day as it comes and make of it a fresh beginning, and each step upward is a process of education by which every generation leaves a message for those who come after.

A fine instrumental program was rendered at the vesper service in the afternoon and the church auditorium was filled to its capacity. The organ and a stringed quartet furnished the music and Rev. Carl G. Horst preached a brief sermon from the text "Glorify God in your body, and in your spirit."

Special mid-week Lenten services for the deepening of the moral and religious life will be held at 7.45 p. m. The visiting clergmen this season are:

Feb. 28—Rev. Thomas Van Ness, Boston.
March 6—Rev. Sheed Anderson, Roxbury.
March 13—Rev. Joseph P. MacCarthy, Ph. D., Waltham.
March 20—Rev. Palfrey Perkins, Brighton.
March 27—Rev. Harry Lutz, Newton.
April 3—Rev. Julian C. Jaynes, West Newton.

The best answer to the question "Why more people do not go to Church?" is given by Dr. J. C. Adams of Hartford, Conn. He says: The great spiritual defection is not due to the Church's neglect of its business, but the crowd does not care for the business it is doing. It is the social pre-occupation with the lower and lesser things. The real difficulty is the passion for pleasure, wealth and power. People want a good time, a lot of money, and to control affairs. The Sunday pleasure-seekers are not worrying about the churches' Calvinism, they want trolley rides, picture shows, and baseball games.

"The Lawrence strike brings prominently to the front the advantages of the Canadian Publicity Law. Under this law no strike can take place until an investigating board, having full power, has ascertained and published all the facts."

The February meeting of the Wollaston Unitarian club will be held Tuesday. Dinner at 6.30 p. m., James Duncan, Vice-president of the American federation of Labor, will speak on "The Need of Organization of Labor."

The Ladies' Aid Alliance will give a party to members of the Sunday school on Wednesdays. The Kindergarten class and the Cradle Roll babies are invited to a party in the vestry from 3 to 4.30; the first, second, third and fourth classes to games and supper from 5 to 7, the older classes, and former members of the Sunday school, to supper at 6.30 and a dance in Wollaston hall at 7.30. All young people connected with the parish are cordially invited to this party.

For the benefit of new comers into our parish we would state that whenever a check is sent to the treasurer of the church, the check itself is a sufficient receipt and no special receipt is necessary.

The young people in our parish are cordially invited to attend the meeting of the Young People's Branch of the Women's Christian Temperance Union at the home of Miss Eleanor Dunn, 253 Newport avenue, at 7.45, Thursday evening.

At the Y. P. R. U. meeting, Sunday evening, at 7 o'clock, the Rev. Joel H. Metcalf, Ph. D., the world-wide known astronomer of Winchester, will give a stereopticon lecture on "A Pilgrimage to the home of St. Francis."

The Lenten Study class under the auspices of the Women's Alliance will meet at the pastor's home, Friday, Feb. 23 at 3 P. M.

BETHANY CHURCH.

A large congregation was present at Bethany church, Sunday morning, despite the severe cold. Dr. Asher Anderson occupied the pulpit, and took for his text, Isaiah, chapter 60: 19-20, "The sun shall be no more thy light by day: neither for brightness shall the moon give light unto thee: but the Lord shall be unto thee an everlasting light, and thy God thy glory. Thy sun shall no more go down: neither shall thy moon withdraw itself: for the Lord shall be thine everlasting light, and the days of thy mourning shall be ended."

Dr. Anderson said in part, these two verses contained a revelation and an inspiration: God reveals himself unto us today just as in the olden times He revealed himself unto the prophets of old, and we are inspired to do great and noble deeds; to come to the rescue of the fallen; to try to teach this divine lesson of sweet helpfulness and fair judgment that they may rise out of darkness, out of dreams into the beauty of God's service, and know peace and rest and trust.

The revelation of the character of God to all mankind, is this: that he wishes us to be true to ourselves, to consecrate our lives to His service knowing we can thus alone be true to Him and by the development of our spiritual nature, the light of God's sun shall shine upon our life and we shall better enjoy its opportunities, its privileges, its victories. God's book, the Bible no better book was ever written. As the Scotchman said to his wife, " God's book is right and we are wrong, Mary." If we wish to be right and do right we must follow the teachings of this book and then His divine kingdom shall universally prevail.

A young man came into his class one morning and said, " Professor, I do not see much sense to the Proverbs." "Well, was the answer, you may write better ones and bring them to the class tomorrow morning." It is needless to say they were never written.

God's light—and love will never fail us. Light is the emblem of Divine presence. God today is inspiring men to new activities: the gift of divinity is implanted in the soul and every noble aspiration is quickened.

The sublime promises of God are eternal: in and through the light of his love will our hearts be directed to altitudes of holiness and to a manifestation of the Infinite Spirit of life and light.

WOLLASTON BAPTIST.

Large audiences attended the Wollaston Baptist church Sunday morning and evening when the pastor preached, morning subject, " Lost and Found;" evening, "The man who Danced." The evening sermon continued a series of sermons which the pastor has been preaching especially to men on the general subject " Men who did things."

The Sunday school was well attended. In the absence of Elford L. Durgan, Louis S. Cleaves acted as superintendent. Three new scholars were enrolled.

The Junior Endeavor meeting was held at 3.30 in the chapel. Miss Ethel M. Campbell is the superintendent of this interesting department and was in charge. The Y. P. S. C. E. met at 6 in the chapel. Miss Madeline Nesbit led the meeting, subject, " Generosity" 2 Cor. 9: 6-15.

The chorus choir met at the close of the evening service and did great work under the leadership of musical director, A. D. Albee.

This evening several of our members are to attend the banquet of the Sunday school Superintendents Union of Boston and vicinity, but will return in time to attend the dedication of the New Wollaston school house.

Tuesday evening, at 7.45 a cottage prayer meeting will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James C. Porter 109 Taylor street, Deacon George E. Thomas will lead.

Wednesday morning, afternoon and evening the annual Sunday school convention of the Boston South Baptist association, of which our school is a part, will be held at the First Baptist church, Dorchester, corner Adams and Ashmont streets. A number of our people are planning to attend. The program seems very attractive.

COMING EVENTS CALENDAR.

Under this heading will be published every Wednesday and Saturday dates of forthcoming entertainments in the city. A one-line announcement will be inserted free of charge, but if any committee desires more publicity as to place, hour, date, admission, etc., it will be inserted at 25 cents per line each insertion. SENTENCED AS SPY

German Gets Three Years of Penal Servitude In England

Winchester, Eng., Feb. 12.—Heinrich Grosse, a captain in the German merchant marine, who was arrested on a charge of espionage, was sentenced at the assizes to three years' penal servitude. Grosse was tried by a jury. He pleaded not guilty. He testified that he came to England to do business in German coal.

The evidence showed that he tried to get information as to the armament of submarine vessels, as to the preparations for arming merchant ships in the event of war, as to the extent of the naval coal reserves and as to other matters valuable to an enemy.

TWELVE WANT HUSBANDS

Chicago Girls Cannot Find Suitable Mates In Their Home City

Muskogee, Okla., Feb. 12.—Husbands are decidedly scarce in Chicago, or the Windy City girls are seeking a warmer clime for a "love nest." Twelve Chicago young women, members of the Ankh club, a "very select organization," through the club secretary, have written to Muskogee for hubbies.

The members of the club are between 20 and 50 years of age and for the most part schoolmarms, although there are two stenographers, two nurses and a music teacher.

No divorcees, adventurers or triflers need apply, says the letter.

ADOPT A NEW PICKET PLAN

Lawrence Strikers Decide to Try the "Endless Chain"

MAY CLASH WITH SOLDIERY

Leaders Put Forth Strong Efforts to Keep Operatives From Returning to Work—Strikers Show Attitude of Hostility Toward Reporters—Wage Schedule of Skilled Operatives Ready to Be Presented—Loomfixers Return to Work Without Settlement—Loss In Wages During Strike Has Reached $750,000

Lawrence, Mass., Feb. 12.—Renewal of picketing by the strikers, the rumored return of thousands of operatives to the mills and resumption of the preliminary trial of Joseph J. Ettor and Arturo O. Giavonnitti, will mark today as one of the most important days since the beginning of the textile wage war.

The strike committee yesterday completed plans for a method of picketing known as the "endless chain," by which hundreds of men, women and children will be kept marching through the mill district in a continuous line. It is expected that this procedure will result in a clash between the paraders and the militia, as it is in direct violation of Colonel Sweetser's orders.

Militia officers state that no interference with operatives who desire to go to work will be tolerated. Orders have been received, they say, to arrest immediately any offenders.

Cheering Up Strikers

In an effort to keep up the spirits of strikers who might be tempted to go back to work through hunger, I. W. W. leaders have been hard at work speaking before meetings of all nationalities all over the city. All other ideas have been cast aside for the present except organization under the I. W. W. standard and every speaker emphasized this point particularly.

Everywhere on the streets can be seen small placards bearing the words "Don't Be a Scab." Little boys and girls, old women, old men—thousands of them—wear the pieces of cardboard in conspicuous places on their clothing. Some are pasted on small strips of red ribbon.

Since the Ettor and Giovannitti hearing Friday, at which important testimony against the leaders was given by newspaper men, there has meen a distinct attitude of hostility toward reporters among the strikers. At an Italian meeting yesterday two Boston newspaper men were forced to leave the hall by threats of violence. The demonstration against the reporters was incited by Angelo Rocco, a personal friend of Ettor.

To Ask Railroad Men's Help

The executive committee is planning to ask the aid of Boston and Maine railway employes in the local strike. Early this week a formal request will be made that they refuse to haul the raw materials to the mills or to take away the finished product. By this method it is hoped effectually to cripple the manufacturers. The plan suggested by James Thompson, general organizer for the I. W. W., is to have cars consigned to the Lawrence mills missent to other destinations. The same method will be applied to cars of finished goods being shipped out of the city, if the railway men accede to the strikers' request.

The Central Labor union is continuing quietly its plans for shaping the demands which the skilled workers will present to the mill owners.

An executive meeting of the C. L. U. officials and skilled operatives was held last night to complete the wage schedules which have been drawn up at the various meetings during the week. This bill will be given to the local agents today, the presentation to be made by a committee of the operatives in each plant.

American Federation of Labor branches from over the entire country are sending money to the C. L. U. for aid of the strikers.

Loomfixers Return

The loomfixers employed in the Arlington mill voted to return to work today without a settlement of any kind on the part of the mill agents, and have received the sanction of their local union to do this. It is understood that members of this craft, all of whom are organized in a national association owing allegiance neither to the International Workers of the World or the American Federation of Labor, employed in the Wood and other mills may also return to work.

Such partial operations as have been conducted during the strike thus far have been greatly retarded by the absence of the loomfixers, whose presence is necessary to allow the weavers to conduct operations.

Strike a Month Old

The strike was just a month old yesterday, and it is estimated that the financial loss to date closely approaches the $1,000,000 mark, if it is not actually beyond it.

The major portion of this great loss has fallen upon the strikers themselves. Their month of inactivity represents a loss of $750,000 in wages, figuring on a basis of an overage weekly wage of $8.50 for 22,000 operatives.

On the other hand, the cost to the mill owners is believed to be comparatively small. Most of the mills have protected themselves against great financial loss by turning their contracts for manufacture over to mills in other places, and still benefit, either through having the work performed at mills owned by the same companies, or on a sub-contract by which they receive a share of the profits.

Next to the loss of wages by the strikers, the expenses incident to the maintenance in the city of the armed guard of 1500 militiamen, with a number of high-salaried officers, is the greatest in connection with the strike. Military expenditures aggregate nearly $100,000 to date, or about $4000 a day at the present time.

Golden Protests Children's Parade

In two telegrams sent yesterday to New York representatives of the American Federation of Labor, President Golden of the United Textile Workers of America virtually requests their opposition to the raising of funds for the Lawrence strikers by the children sent there to parade in their interests. He also makes the charge that the leaders of the Industrial Workers of the World are preventing an honorable settlement of the strike by the A. F. of L.

Leaders of the I. W. W. in their reply denounce Golden and say that if the A. F. of L. wanted to settle the strike they could have done so weeks ago by simply calling out the railroad switchmen, firemen and electrical engineers, which would have so tied up the works that a settlement would have been made.

INFANTRYMEN SENT TO MEXICAN LINE

Four Hundred Ordered to Proceed From Fort Whipple

Washington, Feb. 12.—The war department has ordered 400 of the Eighteenth infantry under Major Moore to proceed at once from Fort Whipple, Ari., to El Paso. This is the first movement of troops to the Mexican border under the general order issued three days ago.

Advices from Mexico City say a battle between 2000 insurrectos and 1200 federals is being fought a few miles from Cuernaca. The fight ceased suddenly at sunset after fifty-three men had fallen, but was resumed at daybreak.

Fighting is general within a radius of 100 miles of the capital, and engagements are reported from Alende, Chavez, Uruapam and Mexcala.

FIRE IN BOSTON CHAPEL

Occurs During Sunday School Session, but Children Are Safe

Boston, Feb. 12.—One hundred and fifty Sunday school children were marched out without panic and in safety, while thin streaks of smoke were coming through the floor yesterday when a fire threatened to consume St. Mark's chapel and spread to nearby houses on Columbia road, Dorchester.

The fire necessitated two alarms, the last closely following the first. Damage of about $2500 was done to the chapel, which was erected two years ago at a cost of $13,000.

The cause of the fire was an overheated furnace. This is located in a little ell in the rear part of the building, which also adjoins the tenement occupied by the janitor and his wife and two children.

ALL MEETINGS FORBIDDEN

Smallpox Also Closes Schools and Churches at St. Johnsbury

St. Johnsbury, Vt., Feb. 12.—All the churches, public schools, the library and the Y. M. C. A. were ordered closed yesterday and all public gatherings were forbidden, as a result of efforts by the board of health to prevent a further spread of smallpox.

Ten cases of the disease in four different families have caused considerable alarm, although the authorities have had all the families affected under strict quarantine. The state board of health is expected here to look over the situation.

FINDINGS KEPT SECRET

Investigators Said to Have Discovered That "Sugar Trust" Exists

Washington, Feb. 12.—The Hardwick committee of the house, appointed to investigate "sugar trust" matters, has agreed upon a unanimous report. The findings are to be kept secret for a day or two.

The report makes no tariff recommendaions and, it is understood, finds that there is a "sugar trust" in the United States.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

FOR ST. VALENTINE'S PARTIES.

A VALENTINE'S day entertainment may take so many different forms that it is difficult to give advice that may be generally helpful.

If it is to be a party for children or very young people do not feel concerned because you have no novel features to introduce. Children are not experienced enough to criticise hackneyed ideas, and if you will supply them with good things to eat, some jolly valentines and a nice table they will ask no more.

Sandwiches, cakes and ices may be served in the form of hearts, and for each child there may be a little souvenir.

Table Decorations.

Pink and white or red and white are St. Valentine's colors, and these should be selected in decorating the table.

The cloth should be of spotless white linen; if you have it the china may be of white with pink roses. The flowers may be placed in the center of the table in a loving cup.

It is a pretty idea to have a doll cupid suspended from the chandelier supporting ribbon streamers that extend to each plate. At the end of each ribbon should be a heart shaped valentine, which should also serve as place card.

The Valentine Luncheon.

If a valentine luncheon is to be given for adults simplicity should be the keynote. A suitable menu is as follows:

Bouillon in Cups.
Bread Sticks.
Creamed Halibut in Ramekins.
Chicken Croquettes.
Green Peas.
Fruit Salad.
Crackers. Cheese.
Heart Shaped Ices. Cake.
Coffee.
Candies. Nuts.

When sending out the invitations use some ingenuity in wording them and if possible send them on special St. Valentine's day stationery.

If this cannot be had you can use the heart shaped cards of water color board, which can be bought wherever artists' supplies are sold. Have an artist friend outline some tiny hearts or arrows on the cards if you are unable to do this yourself and use some jolly rime in asking friends to the entertainment.

FISH SALADS.

WHEN there is cold fish the fragments may be used up by making salad. Lobsters, crabs, oysters and shellfish of any kind make the best salads. Salmon salad is also a popular dish. Fresh fish or canned fish may be used in making these salads.

A mayonnaise makes the best dressing, and slices of lemon and sprigs of watercress are the most suitable garnishings.

Elaborate Salads.

Lobster Salad.—Take the meat and mince well.

For the dressing use the hard boiled yolks of four eggs (cutting the whites into thin circles for garnishing), one teaspoonful of mustard wet with vinegar, one teaspoonful of salt and a pinch of cayenne pepper.

Beat well, add gradually one cupful of salad oil and thin with lemon juice. Have ready a cupful of whipped cream.

Just before serving add half of the cream to the dressing and mix well with the lobster.

Mold into a salad dish and turn over it the remnants of the whipped cream. Garnish with celery tops and the whites of the eggs cut into rings.

Crab Salad.—Shred a head of lettuce and some celery and put into a bowl.

Mash the hard boiled yolks of four eggs to a fine paste with olive oil, rub in a large teaspoonful of dry mustard, beat the yolks and whites of two raw eggs separately and stir into the hard boiled yolks. Thin the mixture with vinegar or lemon. Beat well and season with salt and cayenne.

Add the crab meat to the dressing and turn over the bed of lettuce and celery. Toss all together before serving.

With Shell Fish.

Oyster Salad.—Take a head of celery, put the celery stalks in a saucepan with the same quantity of tender white cabbage, cut in strips; cover with boiling salted water and cook. Drain in a colander and mince fine. Before entirely cold marinade with a little oil and vinegar, then chill.

Strain the liquor from two dozen large oysters, put it into a saucepan and let it come to a boiling point. Skim at once, add a little salt, a dozen bruised peppercorns, two tablespoonfuls of vinegar and then the oysters. Heat until the oysters curl, drain them and set on the ice to cool.

When ready to serve arrange the chopped celery and cabbage on a dish and garnish with a border of watercress and celery tips.

Place the oysters close together on the top of the bed of celery and cabbage, cover all with mayonnaise, sprinkle over it a little minced capers and serve.

RUNS OUT OF COAL

Anchor Liner, Long Overdue, Experiences a Rough Passage

Boston, Feb. 12.—The Anchor liner Calabria, due at New York ten days ago from Mediterranean ports, and for which some anxiety has been felt, as she had 308 passengers, put into Boston harbor yesterday, after one of the longest and roughest voyages ever made by a passenger liner crossing the Atlantic.

The wireless operator on the steamer sent a message to the New York agents Saturday and yesterday a lighter with about 150 tons of coal waited at the quarantine station for the Calabria to come in. When the steamer's anchors were thrown over in the inner harbor only a small pile of bunker scrapings was left. She had been twenty-three days at sea.

Had the liner been another day at sea it would have been necessary to smash up the fittings for fuel in order to keep the engines going.

ENTIRE QUESTION AGAIN THROWN OPEN

President Is Not Ready to Name Successor to Harlan

Washington, Feb. 12.—President Taft has decided to delay the appointment of a successor to the late Judge Harlan of the United States supreme court. Friends of Judge Hook of Kansas, who for a long while was the leading candidate, have asked the president for more time to present his claims and to offset the adverse effect of the "Jim Crow" law decision in which he participated.

In the meantime various protests have reached the White House against the proposed appointment of Secretary of Commerce and Labor Nagel. These protests have come largely from labor organizations, the complaint being that Nagel had been too liberal in his enforcement of the immigration laws.

It looks at the White House as though the entire question of the vacant judgeship has again been thrown open.

A CORROBORATION

Of Interest to Quincy Readers.

For months Quincy citizens have seen in these columns enthusiastic praise of Doan's Kidney Pills by residence of this locality.

Would these prominent people recommend a remedy that had not proven reliable?

Would they confirm their statements after years had elapsed if personal experience had not shown the remedy to be worthy of endorsement?

No stronger proof of merit can be had than cures that have stood the test of time.

The following statement should carry conviction to the mind of every Quincy reader.

John Callahan, 55 Prospect Street, Brockton, Mass., says: "I am pleased to recommend Doan's Kidney Pills, as I have been greatly benefited by their use. I was annoyed by a lame and aching back and my kidneys did not act regularly. I finally used Doan's Kidney Pills, and they gave me entire relief. I am glad to confirm the statement given in their praise by a member of my family in 1908."

FRECKLES

By Gene Stratton-Porter

COPYRIGHT, 1904, BY DOUBLEDAY, PAGE & CO.

SYNOPSIS.

Freckles, a homeless boy, is hired by Foss McLean to guard the expensive timber in the Limberlost from timber thieves.

Freckles does his work faithfully, makes friends with the birds and yearns to know more about nature. He lives with Mr. and Mrs. Duncan.

He resolves to get books and educate himself. He becomes interested in a huge pair of vultures and calls his bird friends his "chickens."

Some of the trees he is guarding are worth $1,000 each. Freckles' books arrive. He receives a call from Wessner.

Wessner attempts to bribe Freckles to betray his trust, and Freckles whips him. McLean overhears them and witnesses the fight.

Freckles' honesty saves a precious tree. He finds the nest of the vultures and is visited by a beautiful young girl.

She calls Freckles McLean's son. Freckles calls her "the angel" and helps the Bird Woman in taking photographs. McLean promises to adopt Freckles.

Freckles and the angel become very friendly. Assisted by the Bird Woman, they drive Wessner and Black Jack, timber thieves, from the Limberlost.

McLean fears more trouble, but Freckles insists upon being the sole guard of the timber. Freckles calls upon the angel's father.

The angel receives him as her equal, and her father is kind. Mrs. Duncan has exciting adventures in the Limberlost.

The Bird Woman and the angel again visit Freckles, and Freckles falls in love with the angel. The angel kisses him.

Freckles is bound and gagged by Black Jack's gang, and the timber thieves start felling a very valuable tree.

Wessner is to kill Freckles after the tree is stolen. The angel makes a daring effort to save Freckles and the tree.

McLean's men, notified by the angel, rush to save Freckles. All the timber thieves except Black Jack are captured.

Near noon McLean turned his party over to John Duncan's and, taking Freckles, drove to town to see how it fared with the angel. McLean visited a greenhouse and bought an armload of its finest products, but Freckles would have none of them. He would carry his message in a glowing mass of the Limberlost's first goldenrod.

The angel was in no way seriously injured. She reached both hands to McLean. "What if one old tree is gone? You don't care, sir? You feel that Freckles has kept his trust as nobody ever did before, don't you? You won't forget all those long first days of fright that you told us of, the fearful cold of winter, the rain, heat, and lonesomeness and the brave days, and, lately, nights, too, and let him feel that his trust is broken?

"Oh, Mr. McLean," she begged, "say something to him! Do something to make him feel that it isn't for nothing he has watched and suffered it out with that old Limberlost. Make him see how great and fine it is and how far, far better he has done than you or any of us expected! What's one old tree anyway?" she burst out passionately.

"I was thinking before you came. Those two other men were rank cowards. They were scared for their lives. If they were the drivers I wager you gloves against gloves they never took those logs out to the pike. My coming upset them. Before you feel bad any more you go look and see if they didn't run out of courage the minute they left Wessner and Black Jack and dump that timber and go on the run. I don't believe they ever had the grit to drive out with it in daylight. Go see if they didn't figure on going out the way we did the other morning, and you'll find the logs before you strike the road. They never risked taking them into the open when they got away and had time to think. Of course they didn't!

"And, then, another thing. You haven't lost your wager! It will never be claimed, because you made it with a stout, dark, red faced man that drives a bay and a gray. He was right back of you, Mr. McLean, when I came up to you yesterday. He went deathly white and shook on his feet when he saw those men would likely be caught. Some one of them was something to him, and you can just spot him for one of the men at the bottom of your troubles and urging those other younger fellows on to steal from you. I suppose he'd promised to divide. You settle with him, and that business will stop."

She turned to Freckles. "And you be the happiest man alive, because you have kept your trust. Go look where I tell you and you'll find the logs. I can just see about where they are. When they go up that steep little hill into the next woods after the cornfield why they could unloose the chains and the logs would roll off the wagons themselves. Now, you go see; and, Mr. McLean, you do feel that Freckles has been brave and faithful? You won't love him any the less even if you don't find the logs"—

The angel's nerve gave way and she burst into tears. Freckles couldn't bear it. He fairly ran from the room with the tears streaming from his own eyes. But McLean took the angel out of the Bird Woman's arms and kissed her brave little face.

As they drove back to the swamp McLean so earnestly seconded all that the angel had said that he soon had the boy feeling much better.

"Freckles, your angel has a spice of the devil in her, but she's superb. You needn't spend any time questioning or bewailing anything she does. Just worship blindly, my boy. By heaven, she's sense, courage and beauty for half a dozen girls!" said McLean.

"It's altogether right you are, sir," affirmed Freckles heartily. After a little he added, "There's no question but the series is over now."

"Don't think it," answered McLean. "The Bird Woman is working for success, and success along any line is not won by being scared out. She will be back on the usual day, and ten to one the angel will be with her. They are made of pretty stern stuff, and they don't scare worth a cent. You may do your usual walking, but those four guards are there to stay. They are under your orders absolutely. I have listened to your pride too long. You are too precious to me to run any more risks."

"I am sorry to have anything spoil the series," said Freckles, "and I'd love them to be coming, the angel especial, but it can't be. You'll have to tell them so. You see, Jack would have been ready to stake his life she meant what she said and did to him. When the teams pulled out, Wessner seized me, and he and Jack went to quarrelling over whether they should finish me then or take me on to the next tree they were for felling. Wessner wanted to get at me right then, and Jack said he shouldn't be touching me till the last tree was out and all the rest of them gone. They tied me up again. To keep me courage up I twits Wessner about having to tie me and needing another man to help handle me. I told him what I'd do to him if I was free, and he grabs up me own club and lays open me head with it. When the blood came streaming, it set Jack raving, and he cursed Wessner for a coward and a softy. Then Wessner turned on Jack and gives it to him for letting the angel make a fool of him. Tells him she was just playing with him, and beyond all manner of doubt she'd gone for you, and there was nothing to do on account of his cursed foolishness but finish me, get out, and let the rest of the timber go, for likely you was on the way right then. And it drove Jack plumb crazy.

"I don't think he was for having a doubt of the angel before, but then he just raved. He grabbed out his gun and turned on Wessner. Sprang! It went out of his fist, and the order comes, 'Hands up!' Wessner reached for kingdom come like he was expecting to grab hold and pull himself up. Jack puts up what he has left. Then he leans over to me and tells me what he'll do to me if he ever gets out of there alive. Then, just like a snake hissing, he spits out what he'll do to her. I ain't done with him yet, and I've brought this awful thing on her."

"And I haven't begun with him yet," said McLean, setting his teeth. "I've been away too slow and too easy, believing there'd be no greater harm than the loss of a tree. I've sent for a couple of first class detectives. We will put them on his track, and rout him out and rid the country of him."

They entered the swamp, taking the route followed by the Bird Woman and the angel. They really did find the logs, almost where the angel had predicted they would be. McLean went on to the south camp and had an interview with Crowen that completely convinced him that the angel was correct there also. But he had no proof, so all he could do was to discharge the man, though his guilt was so apparent that he himself offered to withdraw the wager.

Then McLean sent for a pack of bloodhounds and put them on the trail of Black Jack. They clung to it, on and on, into the depths of the swamp, leading their followers through what had been considered impassable and impenetrable ways, and, finally, around near to the west entrance and out into the swale. Here the dogs bellowed, raved and fell over each other in their excitement. They raced back and forth from swamp to swale, but follow the scent farther they would not, even though cruelly driven.

At last their owner attributed their actions to snakes, and, as they were very valuable dogs, gave over the effort to urge them on. So that all they really established was the fact that Black Jack had eluded their vigilance and crossed the trail some time in the night. He had escaped to the swale, from which he probably crossed the corduroy and, reaching the lower end of the swamp, had found friends.

For Freckles, with Jack's fearful oath ringing in his ears, there was neither rest nor peace. He was almost ill when he saw the Bird Woman and the angel coming down the corduroy. The guards of the east line he left at their customary places, but those of the west he brought over and placed one near Little Chicken's tree and the other at the carriage. He was firm about the angel's remaining in the carriage, which he did not offer to have unhitched. He went with the Bird Woman for the picture, which was the easiest matter it had been at any time yet, for the simple reason that the placing of the guards and the unusual movement about the swamp had made Mr. and Mrs. Chicken nervous, and they had not carried Little Chicken the customary amount of food. Freckles, in the anxiety of the last few days, had neglected him.

When the Bird Woman proposed to look for other subjects about the line Freckles went so far as to tell her that Jack had made fearful threats against the angel. He implored her to take the angel home and keep her under unceasing guard until Jack was located. He let her go, and then blamed himself fiercely that he had done so.

"McLean," said Mrs. Duncan, as the boss paused to greet her in passing the cabin, "do you know that Freckles hasna been in bed the last five nights and all he's eaten in that many days ye could pack into a pint cup?"

"Why, what does the boy mean?" demanded McLean. "There's no necessity for his being on guard with the watch I've set on the line. I had no idea he was staying down there."

"He's no' there," said Mrs. Duncan. "He goes somewhere else. He leaves

HERE THE DOGS BELLOWED, RAVED AND FELL OVER EACH OTHER.

on his wheel juist after we're abed and rides in about cock crow or a little earlier, and he's looking like death and nothing short of it."

"But, where does he go?" asked McLean in astonishment.

"I'm no given to bearing tales out of school," said Sarah Duncan, "but in this case I'd tell ye if I could. What the trouble is I dinna ken. If it is no stopped he's in for dreadful sickness, and I thought ye could find out and help him. He's in sair trouble; that's all I know."

McLean sat brooding as he stroked Nellie's neck.

At last he said: "I suspect I understand. At any rate, I think I can find out. Thank you for telling me."

"Ye'll no need telling once ye clap your eyes on him," prophesied Mrs. Duncan. "His face is all a glist'ny yellow and he's peaked as a starving caged bird."

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

MAINE WRECK FLOATED

Will Be Raised to Level of Havana Harbor by Tonight

Havana, Feb. 12.—The wreck of the Maine floated free of the mud last night when water was turned into the dam surrounding the wreck. The water within the dam is now about fourteen feet below the harbor level at low tide.

It is the intention today to admit the water more rapidly, so that by nightfall the wreck will be raised to the harbor level, leaving nothing more to be done except to break the dam and float out the ship.

Many hundreds of visitors thronged the dam, watching the refloating of the vessel. None of them was admitted aboard the ship, however, for fear of accident. Major Ferguson, who has had charge of the work, received many congratulations on his success.

The ship will remain secure within the dam until orders are received from Washington to float her out, which can be done within a fortnight.

HUNGER KILLS FEMALE MISER

Her Home Found to Have Been Stored With Food

HAD A PECULIAR DIVERSION

Hoarded Skeletons of Cats, Dogs and Mice, as Well as Remarkable Assortment of Wearing Apparel—No Communication With Outside World For Twenty-Five Years, Except Through Her Guardian

Springfield, Mass., Feb. 12.—With more than $50,000 in high grade securities in her home, which she owned, not to mention nearly $3500 in cash and a supply of food of such exaggerated proportions as to suggest preparations for a siege, Miss Elizabeth Armstrong, an eccentric woman of 71 years, died for lack of food, clothing and a habitable home.

Not since the tremendous blizzard of 1888 had Miss Armstrong left her premises in Elm street, until a physician and an ambulance called to take her to a sanitarium. She had been found in a semi-conscious condition by neighbors, who reported her straits to the authorities.

The arrival of the physician aroused every spark of resistance. She fought with such determination, the physician says, that chloroform which he administered alone prevented her from injuring herself.

Miss Armstrong recovered from the effects of the chloroform and improvement in her condition was noted for a few days, when she began to fail. J. F. Hayes, her guardian, found in her home the day she died two wagonloads of food, a remarkable assortment of wearing apparel, the styles of most of which antedated the Civil war, and hundreds of skeletons of cats, dogs and mice, the collection of which is believed to have been the sole diversion of Miss Armstrong.

In a bureau drawer were found the skeletons of thirty cats. In another drawer in the same bureau a score of mice were arranged on large plates, with what the owner evidently considered artistic taste.

In more than twenty-five years Miss Armstrong had no communication with the outside world except through her guardian, Hayes, who cashed the dividends on her securities and turned over the proceeds to her. She submitted with ill grace to the payment of the small taxes on her home and hid the rest of the money. She hoarded food and clothing with the same tenacity and cunning she displayed in concealing her money.

Miss Armstrong inherited her estate from her father, who was the owner of the stage line between this city and Bennington, Vt. No one in West Springfield has any recollection of a single instance on which she expended so much as 1 cent.

It was believed that Miss Armstrong left no relatives, but it is said that her property will go to an aunt and two cousins in New York.

ST. MARY'S LOSE TO ST. LEO'S

In a game of basketball which was closely played and interesting from start to finish, members of St. Leo Holy Name society defeated the St. Mary's of West Quincy, in the Boston College gymnasium Saturday, 10 to 6.

It was the first game of the season for the local players, and their performance was highly creditable when the experience of the Dorchester boys is taken into consideration.

Both teams played evenly until the last five minutes of play, when the St. Leo team came to the fore with a safe lead.

Davidson was the star player, securing all the points made by the winners. Flaherty played well for the local players, while Quinn and Duggin also showed up to advantage. The summary:——

VICTORY FOR QUINCY HIGH

Defeats Weymouth High in Clean and Interesting Game

22 TO 14

Quincy High redeemed itself at Weymouth Friday afternoon defeating Weymouth High basketball team in a clean and interesting game, 22 to 14. In the first half the home team exhibited great fun, but the inability to maintain the endurance in the second half, allowed the local players to acquire supremacy of the situation.

The lineup of Quincy High was changed considerably. McDonald played a forward position in conjunction with Finlay, taking the place originally occupied by Captain Chapman who was shifted to right back.

In the second half, Holmes was placed in his regular position, and accredited himself in the same style as has characterized his playing throughout the season. Wall and Leonard proved to be the star players for the home team and by guarding these players carefully in the second session, the local boys were enabled to obtain a substantial lead.

Finlay and Trask played in their usual brilliant form, the former securing five baskets from the floor, while the latter had four to his credit.

Trask also showed up to advantage in shooting fouls, putting the ball through the net four times on free tries. Wall was the conspicuous star for the Weymouth team, although Humphrey also played well.

It was the third game of the week for Quincy High and judging from the performance, it looks as if Coach Staff's aggregation has regained its championship form. The summary:

PEOPLE'S FORUM.

In many ways the most enjoyable meeting of the series yet held of the People's Forum, Braintree, was that on Sunday afternoon, when Harry Phillips of London, England, spoke on "Human waste heaps and how to reduce them." Mr. Phillips has a very pleasing personality and a most lucid and convincing way of presenting his arguments.

He likened the outcasts of society such as fallen women, criminals, drunkards, etc., to a great heap of waste material thrown out of that great quarry, the world, and explained some ways in which this waste heap could be utilized and thus reduced in size. He thinks that neither labor nor capital should expect governments to settle all their grievances On the contrary he believes that both parties should reach a high state of efficiency by proper organization and that all differences should be settled by a board of conciliation made up of representatives from both sides and that the decision of this board should be final.

He cited the success of such an arrangement in Australia where 57 out of 60 strikes were settled amicably. Mr. Phillips called strikes old fashioned and barbarous means of settling labor troubles and likened them to a two edged sword which cuts both ways. He mentioned the "institutions" of England which are something the same as our prisons, but better managed and conducted in such a way as to give the discharged prisoners a better chance of becoming useful members of society.

Mr. Phillips is strongly in favor of the profit sharing scheme between employer and employee but gave it as his opinion that in many cases municipal or Federal control of public utilities was inferior to their operation by private enterprise.

Mr. Phillips made a strong plea to his auditors to keep people from going to the waste heap even if they could not help others already there. In this connection he spoke of the great benefits that would accrue to humanity if a law was passed to prevent feeble-minded people from marrying. This would greatly reduce the numbers of idiot and imbecile children whose end in most cases must be the waste heap.

He was amazed at the stringent American tariff and customs laws which place a duty on overcoats, for example, and yet permit all sorts of vicious and ignorant immigrants to land on our shores.

In conclusion Mr. Phillips dwelt on the great example of Christ in dealing with sinners saying that He befriended outcasts and criminals regardless of public opinion. Many questions were put to the speaker who answered all clearly and with great charm of manner.

Next Sunday afternoon Ray Stannard Baker the well-known magazine writer will speak.

SUNDAY IN OUR CHURCHES

MEMORIAL CHURCH.

In Memorial church, Atlantic, yesterday morning, Rev. Thomas W. Davison spoke from Acts 24:25. "The Season that never came."

Mr. Davison said in part. The putting off of duty for a convenient season is only an excuse for delay. That often religious impulses are stirred, but they are not put into practice, and in time the impulse to do good evaporates in mere sentiment. He said that men are generally sincere in expecting at some time to be religious or receive the benefits of religious promises, but mistaken in the things which they believe hinder.

Some feel that their associations are unfavorable for their becoming a Christian or that their business interests would hamper them. Others think that their pleasure or enjoyments would be lost if they definitely enlisted in the service of Christ.

If our thought was only clear, we would see that Christianity could prosper in any environment, that business with the impulses caried out as suggested by Paul would be most satisfactory, and that pleasure which did not degrade or lead to dissipation is legitimate for any Christian. He said that some try to claim indifference, but no one could be indifferent to Paul's up to date reasoning. That it was personal, it was social, it was religious.

The thought of a coming convenient season was a salve for conscience.

Many are convinced of their wrongs in life, but quiet the conscience with the thought of a future reparation. In that way we make light of convictions of duty our own needs, and the privileges of service.

Convenient seasons may never come We form resolutions, but never execute them. Our feelings are moved, but the heart is unchanged. We trifle with our opportunities and they slip by. Those who look for a future convenient season lose the present opportunity.

This is true of the student in school, true of them in business, and is also true in regard to religious accomplishments. The present is the moment of privilege and opportunity.

At the evening service Mr. Davison spoke on "Religious Problems." He said church membership was in itself the greatest solution of the problem. That an active, aggressive membership that intelligently faced conditions would make the Church a power, and instead of feeling that the Church was a place simply to meet once a week, we would make it a home.

Revivalism has gone, but personal evangelism was the great factor today. That a sense of responsibility to show the friendship of Christianity and the evils of selfishness would come when we grasped the great privilege we had at our doors. We speak of the foreign problem. We might see it as our opportunity.

We talk of brotherhood, but the more we talk about it, the less we practice it. It sounds good to talk of God's fatherhood, but most people would see that God is an absentee, and not the ruler that controls the universe, and manifests His presence in all lives and in all nature.

Our church must reclaim humanity, and this is work that demands the highest type of unselfish service. That humanity will respond is our confidence, our hope, and instead of religion being a spasmodic experience, we want it the natural thing in life.

The men of the parish are to meet with the trustees this evening to devise ways and means to boom the church and parish A buffet lunch will be served

An Inference.

There died in Chicago the other day a man of whom it is said that he knew the intimate history of every important family in the city. Some members of some of the important families must be mighty glad that he died.—Savannah News.

A Bunch of Violets

By CLARISSA MACKIE

It was one of those uptown cross-streets whose dividing line is Broadway. No. 87, west, was one of many handsome stone dwellings, while No. 87, east, was merely a shabby boarding house given over to the accommodation of working girls.

Esther Mason wearily climbed the stairs of No. 87 east, and paused as Mrs. Beggs' shrill voice called her name from the hall below.

"Here's something for you—a boy left it a few minutes ago—flowers, I guess! Suppose your beau sent 'em," said the boarding house mistress as Esther descended the stairs.

The girl's face flushed as she took the square box and examined the address on the violet and gold cover. "Miss Esther Mason, No. 87 East —— sixth street." Surely it must be for her, and yet—who would send her a box of flowers on her birthday? Save for the few persons in the office where she was employed she had scarcely an acquaintance in New York—and as for the home people? Esther swallowed a little sob and with a murmured word of thanks to Mrs. Beggs she ran lightly up the stairs to her little room and tossed the box on her narrow bed.

When she had removed her outdoor things she bathed her face and brushed her dusky hair into satin smoothness before she sat down.

All the home folks had passed away to another and more beautiful country two long years before Esther had taken her small patrimony and gone bravely to the great city to make her way among thousands of wage-earners. The investment of her money had brought her a business education, and she had slowly worked her way upward until now she could look forward to the time when an increased salary might permit of a more congenial home. In the meantime the little bank account must grow larger.

This was her birthday and she alone knew it. It was a strange coincidence that some one—some new-found friend might send her some flowers on that day.

She lifted the cover and gazed with delight upon an immense bunch of violets. Their fragrance filled the tiny room and Esther felt a certain sense of luxury in their possession.

Still mystified and yet with a feeling of relief that she might not be obliged to return the gift to some unrecognized donor, she arose with the quick decision that was characteristic of her and changed her gown for the pretty pale gray that was her best.

When the large gray hat with its single long gray feather was perched on her pretty head and the fragrant violets were pinned at her waist, Esther ran down the stairs and knocked at the door of Mrs. Beggs' sitting-room.

"I am going out to dinner, Mrs. Beggs," she called softly, and then, before the older woman could frame a question, the girl had closed the front door behind her slender form and was speeding down the street toward the avenue.

It was after 6 o'clock and the streets and shops were brilliantly lighted. Esther hummed a little song as she turned into Fifth avenue and made her way toward a large and fashionable hotel.

She knew all about this hotel—rich and fashionable people dined there every night. This was her birthday and she was alone. She would treat herself to the luxury of a perfectly cooked dinner and while she listened to the music she might see all these great people whose gay doings filled much space in the newspapers.

Ten minutes later she was seated in a quiet corner of the immense restaurant with hundreds of tables glittering with silver and cut glass.

As she ate the delicious meal, the payment for which would drain her purse to the bottom, her beautiful eyes took in the varied charm of the scene. The handsome gowns of the women; the quiet well bred air of the men; the lovely girls, most of them her own age, to whom this dinner was a common occurrence.

At the next table to Esther's sat an elderly woman, gowned in soft black lace with a jeweled butterfly quivering above her snow white hair. With her was a tall young man with serious gray eyes and handsome face bent above the menu card. In the pauses of the music their conversation floated in snatches to the young girl at her solitary table.

"You are not wearing my violets, Aunt Esther," said the young man after a while. "You said you wanted violets."

"I haven't received them, Dick," returned his companion; "I supposed you had forgotten them or that you would stop for them on the way to the theater."

"They were ordered—let me see, I bought them in a little shop just off the avenue—some German name, Reinz, I believe—he said he would send them over immediately. Some mistake, I suppose, for I distinctly told him they were for Miss Esther Mason, 87 West ——sixth street." The young man lifted his eyes and encountered the gaze of a pair of startled brown ones whose like he had never seen before.

In wondering delight he noted the brown of the eyes, and the distinct black of the curling lashes and delicately marked brows.

"What is the matter, dear?" asked his aunt anxiously.

BASKET BALL RESULTS

The Army kept up its winning streak in the Y. M. C. A. League by defeating Cornell by the one sided score of 39 to 18. Price and Rizzi did the best scoring for the winners, Price caging 6 goals while Rizzi succeeded in getting 5. Rich scored most for his team with a total of 5. His team work, however, was seriously affected by his refusal to pass the ball, many good chances for free trials being thrown away.

Brown forfeited to Harvard and a pick up team played the game, which was a hummer from the start. The All Star defeated Harvard by the score of 30 to 26.

Yale and Carlisle played a game with four men on a side and Yale had a walk away, the score being 32 to 8. Carlisle only scored one goal in the 2nd half while, Yale rolled up 18 points. Dineen scored 11 baskets from the floor.

The fourth game was also one sided. Dartmouth putting it on to Tech by the overwhelming score of 46 to 22. Dartmouth did all of its heavy scoring in the 1st half. When Trask secured 11 baskets he made a new record for one game when he caged 2 in the 2nd half, giving him a total of 13 goals for the game.

Tech braced in the 2nd half and held their opponents even, each team scoring 14 points. Lundin did the best work for the losers.

NEW WOLLASTON SCHOOL BUILDING FORMALLY OPENED

Exercises in Charge of Parents' and Teachers' Association. Mayor Stone Delivers Keys

Address by Henry T. Bailey. Building Then Thrown Open for Public Inspection

Before the largest assemblage ever gathered together in the history of Wollaston, the dedicatory exercises of the new Wollaston school took place in the schoo1 hall, Monday evening.

Fully half an hour before the speaking commenced the seating capacity was nearly filled and when the program began an audience of over 1100 occupied seats, platform and every point of vantage.

It was an occasion in which to rejoice and the vast number present showed what interest the people of Wollaston have watched the construction and completion of their new temple of learning.

The building stands practically finished and on next Monday Wollaston pupils will leave that obsolete structure of an age that is passed and without further ceremony remove to the new building supplied with every means of educational advantage that modern science dictates.

The exercises of Monday evening were marked with an address whose sparkling wit, pithy sentences and educational advice will long be remembered by those present.

Henry Turner Bailey, one of those in the forefront of modern educational methods, delivered a most timely address entitled: "Then and Now."

Mr. Bailey is prominently identified with the State Board of Education and is well known as the editor of the "School Arts Book" and a speaker on educational subjects. He is the brother of Charles W. Bailey of Wollaston.

The program over which Mrs. Walter S .Pinkham, president of the Wollaston Parents' and Teachers' Association presided opened with an overture by an orchestra composed of Mrs. Chandler W. Smith, Lucien H. Thayer, Max Pinkham and Mr. Holmes.

The ushers, prominent members of the Association were: Mrs. H. H. Albee, Mrs. Willard E. Keyes, Mrs. W. H. Streeter, Mrs. Eben W. Harrison, Mrs. Charles B. Hall, Mrs. Charles E. Goodspeed, Mrs. Eric H. Ewertz and Mrs. Eugene DeNormandie.

Upon the platform were city and state officials, members of the city council, school committee, prominent citizens of Wollaston and members of the Wollaston School House committee through whose efforts the reality of the present building is largely due.

In behalf of the Association Mrs. Walter S. Pinkham welcomed those present. The sympathy and support of those present was needed in the campaign for the new school. Now in the hour of rejoicing when we see our dreams come true we need you here. She felt it quite an honor that the city officials allowed the Association to share in the dedication. She introduced as the first speaker Mayor Eugene R. Stone.

"I want to congratulate the people of Wollaston," said the Mayor, "and especially the ladies on the good work done in getting the new school building.

"I believe it was needed and needed badly and I am as pleased to see the new building as to see the children taken from that fire trap where they have been for so many years." (Applause.)

The mayor described in detail the process of obtaining school buildings and supporting them. He went into financial matters concerning them,

"I have heard," he said, "quite a little of late about the financial condition of Quincy, The situation does not look very good on paper but take into consideration the way in which Quincy is doing away with old school buildings and we see that Quincy is not as badly as we supposed financially. The public buildings of Quincy nearly overbalance any debt we have.

"You have one of the best buildings in the city. The matter of the old school building should be given thought and the people should take up the matter with their councilmen.

"The mayor should be given authority to sell the old building and make a playground by filling up the spot where it now stands." This sentiment was greeted with a thunder of applause.

"You should let no grass grow under your feet and in a little while you will have a new playground in addition to this building.

"I congratulate you upon a new building where you will be able to educate the child much better than in the past. The city feels well paid for the money expended here."

John L. Miller, chairman of the school committee, opened his remarks in a humorous trend concerning the coincidence of both himself and the mayor being present.

He was glad that the school committee would have so beautiful a building. In which to carry on their work. They had given a good deal of thought to the plans and had kept a friendly eye on the project.

"This schoolhouse is only a shell, however. The school committee has a building to build in this building. A temple of society composed of many stones, each fitting into the other."

"I feel proud of the building and have never taken as much interest in a biulding in Quincy before. It is a monument to the work of Ex-Mayor Shea."

Mr. Miller paid a tribute to the architect of the building, a citizen of Quincy and one who had pride in his work.

The speaker urged as large a per capita appropriation for school purposes as had been in force in former years and closed with a description of the joint committee's work with vocational education.

Superintendent of schools, Albert L. Barbour added his congratulations to the general fund that had accumulated.

"That the children were to leave the dark, architecturally grotesque building that had house them for the last 40 years for one of the architectural design and ornateness that this one includes is no small achievement."

"Here they not only find better surroundings but an inspiration coming from work done under proper environment."

"Here everything, not only of the newest but the most modern is found. The ventillation is the best that is known. You have a fair sample of the heating on this somewhat cold night. The lighting system is most modern and is greater per foot of floor space than in any other building in Quincy.

"The building is as safe from fire as any building of second class construction can be made. It is the only school in the city to be cleaned by vacuum cleaners.

The rooms would never be overcrowded for they had been built small enough so as not to accommodate more pupils than a teacher should be given to teach."

Mr. Barbour mentioned the decorative features. The bust presented by Mr. and Mrs. Favorite was a welcome addition and the first, he hoped, of a large, line of donations from the citizens of Wollaston.

He congratulated the live Parents' Association upon the building and their predecessors, the Child Nurture club, who combined courteous aggressiveness with tactful diplomacy.

"Education is far too deep a subject for one person to handle alone and we need the help of the parents in administering education as never before.

"The Parents' and Teachers' Associations are among the finest assets a city possesses and I hope that everyone eligible will become a member of the one attached to this school." (Applause.)

Henry Turner Bailey prefaced his address by congratulating those present on the beautiful facade of the new building which was a distinct addition to Wollaston.

The people of Wollaston were fortunate in having three such diverse examples of good architecture on this street as this building, the Unitarian church and the fire station.

He congratulated them that the good sense of somebody had placed the main farcade on the main street, that they had so large a back yard.

In the future the front yard would be made beautiful. In the days to come there would be a model front yard and a back yard that was an ideal playground. Many other phases were also a source of congratulation.

"The topic. "Then and now," upon which I am to speak said Mr. Bailey "is not Scripture and is therefore capable of private interpretation."

"I cannot, like the old woman boast of having lived in three centuries, but I have experienced three educational eras or epochs."

Mr. Bailey described in graphic manner the growth of an ideal. An era controlled by a certain group of ideals begins narrow, gradually becomes full and then begins to wane. During the period of the first, another ideal may have started and persisting finally overshadow the first. So it is with education."

"I was born under one dominant era and by the grace of God I have lived through one besides."

"The first might be called the patriarchal era of education. The teacher was an oriental despot. Whom he would he set up and whom he would, he put down, whom he would, he killed, and whom he would, he left alive and all people and nations trembled before him."

"The second was the military ideal in which the principal was the governor general and the teachers, his lieutenants. Here everything was done with a military precission."

The humor of the description that followed brought tears of laughter to the eyes of many.

"The third is the social era. In the old days the subject was the important thing. In the second era the method was all important. In the present day it is the child that is the important thing."

"The social ideal of the present is to emphasize the child itself and make every boy and girl an efficient member in society."

In the old days, the boys and girls were looked upon as criminals from the minute they entered the school door."

"Teachers assumed the attitude of

QUINCY'S WATER SUPPLY CUT OFF THIS MORNING

Break in 24-Inch Main at East Milton Leaves Quincy Without Water Supply

Temporary Connection With City of Boston Main at Neponset

For a time this morning Quincy was in bad shape and if there had been a fire, serious results would surely have followed. The trouble was due to the breaking of the 24-inch water main in East Milton. This is the main which supplies Quincy. The break is on Adams street near the East Milton Congregational church. Just what time the break occurred is not known but it was not discovered until about 6.30 this morning.

This main comes from Chestnut Hill and a branch enters the stand pipe on Third hill while another branch supplies Quincy proper via Common street.

It has been supposed that the supply from the reservoir on Third Hill was sufficient to keep the city going for a day or two. This morning however it is probable that this supply was being largely drawn upon before the break at Milton became known. In addition to this, when the break in the 24 inch main occurred the water ran back and out of this break so that the supply on Third Hill was soon practically exhausted.

The supply from the stand pipe on Penn's hill also suffered from the same cause. This pipe supplied the pressure for South Quincy and Quincy centre and as there is always a large amount of water used in the early morning the water in this stand pipe soon became very low.

The water pressure in City Square is nominally from 65 to 75 pounds but at 9 o'clock it had dropped to 15 pounds in City Square and an hour later to 5 pounds.

The first intimation that anything serious was wrong was when telephone calls began to be received at City Hall and by the local plumbers, that households could get no water. Many at first laid the cause to the pipes being frozen. As soon as the real condition of affairs was known the Telephone Co., was communicated with and arrangements made to notify all subscribers of the break.

Here the telephone again demonstrated its great usefulness in times of emergency. As soon as the local manager was notified, he assigned a special operator to a board with instructions to call every subscriber in the city and notify them of the break and that they would be deprived of their water supply for some hours. This timely action on the part of the Telephone company saved employees at City Hall from being obliged to

TO CARRY HAND EXTINGUISHERS

The auto which has been provided Chief Litchfield of the fire department will soon more than pay for itself. As stated Monday, in answering the alarms of Sunday, the Chief arrived at the box in advance of even the auto chemical engine.

It is a well recognized fact that a small stream at the start of a fire will often save the loss of many thousands of dollars.

Chief Litchfield said this morning that hereafter he should carry chemical extinguishers on his auto and as he is a personal fire fighter it means that in small fires he can arrive and get to work with one of these chemicals, in some cases several minutes ahead of the apparatus.

EMPLOYEES ARE BANQUETED

Business duties were forgotten Monday evening, when employees of the R. E. Foy Company at South Quincy, to the number of twenty-three, assembled in the United States hotel, Boston, and enjoyed a banquet, at the expense of the proprietor of the local establishment. The party left Quincy shortly after six o'clock, and was seated around the festive board about an hour later.

Songs, jokes and speeches of a varied nature held sway at the post prandial festivities and a most enjoyable time was enjoyed.

—A sense of humor and a daily apple, Marion Harland says have kept her in an excellent condition. This is a delightful combination of treatment for mental and physical state. Her further comment that there is no better combination than a sense of humor and a little religion suggests that the moral state must not be neglected if there is to be a well whole. All this may sound like a pleasantry, but it is very far from a mere joke.—New Bedford Standard.

AVIATION MEET LAST OF JUNE

Popular Prices are to Prevail. Given by Private Enterprise

JUNE 29 TO JULY 7

Announcement has been made, that plans are well advanced for another aviation meet to be held on the Harvard Aviation field at Squantum June 29, to July 7. when the weather is expected to be such as to attract a large crowd.

This meet will be run by individuals and will have no connection with the Harvard Aeronautical Society, lessee of the field. Manager Adams D. Claflin of the society says that he had not subleasted the ground for the event, although he had promised that it could be had at any time.

In this connection Mr. Claflin announced that the Harvard Society will hold no more meets, unless its view undergoes a decided change. This decision has been reached as a result of the poor support of last year's events. The society has paid its rent on the grounds for some time in advance, however, and is in position to control them completely.

The meet which is to be held this year will be at popular prices, and as an inducement to the general public it is intended to have the back of each hangar open so that the visitors may get within a few feet of the machines and look them over as much as they care to. This feature is expected to prove popular with the sightseers, although it may not please the aviators so much. There also will be exhibition flights on Sundays.

The dates have been approved by the Aero Club of America, and Beachey and six other flyers are said to have been booked to take part in the contest, some of which will be new to Boston.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Congress is keeping almost as quiet as the Sphinx of Oyster Bay.

Evidently where the packers made one mistake was in keeping books.

Did you care for butter when you used to have it regularly on the table?

Postmaster General Hitchcock may be able to think up still other suggestions presently.

A girl may not marry the best man at her own wedding, but she should try to make the best of the man she marries.

There is more truth than poetry in James S. Whiting's letter in Friday's Ledger regarding the benefit to Wollaston if it became a separate town from Quincy.

Quincy is to have the aviation meet again this summer which is good news. The time June 29 to July 7 is also favorable for success and it can be a part of the Fourth of July celebration. What will conduce to success more than any special feature is the lowering of admission price. The first year most every one was willing to pay a dollar to get in because it was a novelty, but now the newness is off and a material reduction will be the only sure way of getting a crowd.

FEBRUARY TRADE.

In the cycle of retail trade, now is the time when people expect special inducements. They read in the big metropolitan papers about offers made in order to clear the shelves for spring. They look to the home merchant to do the same thing.

The home merchant is an independent sort of fellow, who does not care slavishly to imitate his great metropolitan rival. Still it is true in general that the home merchant can no more afford to carry over a storefull of unseasonable goods than the big department store. As the cumulative result of past advertising, a public impression exists that February is an inexpensive time to buy goods. The alert business man seizes this feeling, and works it for all it is worth.

Under this state of public opinion, a judicious amount of advertising goes a long way. The idea of cutting prices in February seems so reasonable, that people will flock to your store if you give them half a chance. After they get there, they will be interested not merely in the goods on which you advertise a cut, but on staple lines that sell all the year around, and do not have to be marked down to find customers.

MONEY DID NOT BUY.

The death of Edwin Hawley, the railroad magnate, at the comparatively early age of 61, adds another to the list of captains of industry who have broken down before their time.

At first thought, Mr. Hawley might be regarded as an humdrum personality, with his hermit-like devotion to business, and consequent avoidance of social life. But his daily commuting back and forth from the New York suburbs, jostling elbows with an army of clerks and salespeople, has a certain air of democracy which few of our men of great wealth suggest.

To us the most striking aspect of Hawley's career is not the indomitable tenacity that gave him so big a grip on the business world. Rather it is the negative side of his life, the things his money could not or did not buy.

Hawley's premature death followed a long period of nervous indigestion. Any of us who ever had any trouble with that down trodden creature, the human stomach, know how uncomfortable this old worm can make a human being when once he turns.

Years ago dyspepia was common. The libraries of professional and business people commonly had books of medical advice, telling how to jolly along this obstinate member. There were elaborate theories of diet and doctoring, by which the contrary critter was to be drilled into harness.

But nowadays, does anyone have dyspepsia and more? The workingman never had it much, because his manner of life forbids it. People who live sedentary lives have largely learned that this trouble is not curable by blue pills and dreary dieting, but by active energetic exercise out doors. Most of them have learned how to apply the cure.

But here is the pathetic case of Hawley, with his $50,000,000, able to buy railroads wholesale, but who failed to acquire that simple gift in the reach of everyone who can walk, play golf, drive an automobile, or ride a bicycle—a normal stomach.

When we go shopping in the great marts of life, who would not rather buy a good stomach than a railroad, even at the same price?

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR BIRTHDAY

Four million persons have just celebrated the 31st anniversary of the founding of the Christian Endeavor Societies. It is a movement that has on the whole worked good, by providing a systematic plan for interesting young folks in church work

Of course you will find many a pastor who complains that it has established a line of cleavage between old and young Lacking the inspiration of fresh young hearts and voices, the singing at the prayer meeting is often cracked and thin, while the "testimonials" look backward rather than forward.

The churches, however, must adjust themselves to the demands of youth. They have been wise in seeking to adapt these societies to existing needs, rather than trying to make the young people follow in the straight and sober footsteps of the old ways.

Youth is the period of energy. The youngsters will work their legs off getting evergreen to decorate the church for Christmas, or to get up a church supper, if they can have the fun of bossing the job, when you couldn't possibly hire them to hear the white haired deacon give his views for the hundredth time on observance of the Sabbath.

Q.—Is there any positive proof that our Lord Jesus was born on Christmas Day, Dec. 25th, and if so where can it be found? (A. S.)

Answer.—There is nothing to prove that Christ was born December 25th, but the evidence is clear and strong that the time of His birth was about Oct. 1st . It is generally recognized that Jesus was crucified on Friday, April 3d, A. D. 33. The fact that His crucifixion occurred at the close of the fourteenth day of the month Nisan, and that this date rarely falls on Friday, but did so in the year A. D. 33, substantiates that date so thoroughly that even Usher, who adopted B. C. 4 as the date of Jesus' birth, was forced to admit that His crucifixion was A. D. 33. Our Lord was thirty years of age when he began His ministry, and it is clear that His ministry was for three and a half years only. This generally conceded fact is proved by Daniel's prophecy (Daniel ix, 25-27) concerning Christ's cutting off in the middle of the seventieth week of Israel's favor. The "seventy weeks" (a day for a year—490 days, or 490 years— Ezekiel iv, 6) dating from 454 B. C., when the city, Jerusalem, was rebuilt, terminated A. D. 36. In the "midst" of that last week of seven years, the "seventieth week," Christ was "cut off"—crucified—April 3d, A. D. 33. As the Lord Jesus was thirty-three and a half years old when He died, we have only to measure back that length of time from the date of His death to ascertain the date of His birth, which would be about Oct. 3d, B. C. 2. It is certain that the midwinter date, December 25th, does not well agree with the statement of the scriptures, that at the time of our Lord's birth the shepherds were in the fields with their flocks.

WATER SUPPLY CUT OFF

stop other work to answer a multitude of inquires and make explanations.

Commissioner Tupper immediately took steps to secure a temporary supply of water for the city until the break should be repaired. The City of Boston was communicated with and arrangements made to tap its ten inch main at Neponset.

A large gang of men was immediately dispatched to Neponset and a connection made from the City of Boston ten inch main to the City of Quincy six inch main. Arrangements were also made with Braintree to tap its main on Penn's hill in case of an emergency Weymouth was also communicated with to see what could be done with them in case it was needed.

The connection with the City of Boston main at Neponset was completed about 11 o'clock.

The Metropolitan Water men were also hurried to Milton and work commenced to repair the break. A new section of the 24-inch main was brought to Milton from Forest Hills and a large gang of men set at work uncovering the pipes. Owing to the large amount of frost in the ground this was slow work and it will probably be late this afternoon before the break is repaired and the main supply turned on.

Chief Litchfield of the Fire Department was also notified and the firemen in the several stations were put on the alert in case fire should break out.

At noon the city was receiving a fairly good suply of water but not its usual amount so that service takers will have to get along with as little water as possible for the balance of the day.

At East Milton it was said that the break in the big main had not done a great amount of damage to the street. The street was torn up but the ground being frozen and street being crowned the water was diverted to the gutter whence it flowed to Brook street and entered the brook that comes into Quincy near Reardon's field at the Ward Four playground.

AFTER ALL.

There is nothing in life but the joy of the minute,
There is nothing in love that we do not put in it,
There is nothing can happen unless we begin it,
There is nothing worth winning but what we can win it

There is nothing so sad as to set us a-sighing,
There is nothing we'd do that is not worth the trying,
There is never a danger too great for defying,
The beauty of earth it is folly denying!

There is never a sorrow should cause us repining,
For sorrows were made for the spirit's refining;
So, turn all your clouds inside out 'til their lining
Of silver shall rival the sun in its shining.

If you think that too long you have waited and striven,
Then remember you've gotten as much as you've given,
In the loaf of your burden just look for the leaven;
For God's in the world—and the world is His Heaven.

AFTER THREE HUNDRED YEARS

Manchu Dynasty Yields Up Its Power In China

SURRENDER IS UNCONDITIONAL

Event Which Marks an Epoch In the Human Race is Brought About After Three Months of Actual Revolution —Much Excitement In Pekin When Abdication Is Announced—Sun Is a Naturalized American Pekin, Feb. 13.—The abdication of the throne of China by the Manchu dynasty was proclaimed in an imperial edict here.

The momentous step by which the Manchu dynasty yields up its power after three centuries of rule and agrees to change from an absolute to a representative form of government was notified in three simultaneous proclamations.

Although the final act of abdication had been awaited for some time, the posting of the edict with the declaration that it was an accomplished fact, caused profound excitement.

The second edict, approving all the conditions agreed upon between Yuan Shi Kai and the republican representatives, created even more astonishment. It had been expected that the Manchus would demand conditions which would safeguard many of their privileges, but according to the proclamation their surrender is unconditional.

The third edict informed the viceroys and provincial governors of the retirement of the throne from political power and instructed them to continue doing their duty and to preserve order throughout the land.

It is declared that the step taken by the throne was in order to meet the wishes of the people.

The abdication of the Chinese throne by Pu Yi, the child emperor, brings to an end the powerful Manchu dynasty which has reigned in China since 1644. The boy ruler has been on the throne since Nov. 14, 1908, when Emperor Kwang Si, his uncle, died. His father, Prince Chun, was appointed regent and was the chief figure in China for three years. Surrounded by a large number of princes of the imperial clan and Manchu officials with reactionary ideas, the regent was brought face to face with a revolutionary movement in favor of modern reforms. He endeavored to placate both parties, but ended by causing general dissatisfaction which led to his resignation on Dec. 6, 1911.

The promise of a constitutional government made by the dowager empress on her deathbed in 1908 was not fulfilled in any way until May of last year. In that month an imperial edict abolished the old grand council, which, together with the court, held absolute power, and substituted a constitutional cabinet.

Revolutionary ideas had been spreading in the meantime, and the southern provinces declared against the continuation of Manchu rule and broke into open revolt. After much fighting the revolutionists proclaimed a republic at Nanking in December and Sun Yat Sen accepted the presidency on Dec. 29.

Negotiations between the Republicans and the imperialists followed and an armistice was arranged. This was not strictly observed, but the negotiations continued, with the result that the Manchu rulers, seeing that China proper was almost entirely in favor of the republican idea and the outlying dependencies of Tibet, Turkestan, Mongolia and Manchuria were breaking away, decided that it was their best policy to yield to the popular demand and abdicate from power.

A DAY AFTER WEDDING

Bride Elopes With Married Brother of Man Who Won Her

Grand Rapids, Mich., Feb. 13.—Declaring his brother, Robert, enticed his bride of less than twenty-four hours from the home of her sister, Mrs. Valentine Cornwall, and had left the city with her, Walter Harvey staggered into police headquarters, and after telling his story fell unconscious.

The bride left a letter to her husband telling what she had done. His brother placed a few belongings in a suitcase and departed, leaving a two weeks' board bill behind.

The wedding and the bride's desertion or alleged elopement comes as a climax to a romance of more than a year's standing in which two brothers have striven against each other for the hand of the same girl. Notwithstanding the fact that Robert Harvey is a married man, he pressed his suit with even more vigor than his brother, and in the end won.

PROGRESSIVES' NEW TITLE

President Declares They Are "Political Emotionalists or Neurotics"

New York, Feb. 13.—President Taft brought his celebration of Lincoln's birthday to a close here last night with a political speech to the Republican club in which he breathed defiance to the Democratic party, declared that it was his belief that the Republicans would triumph next November at the polls, and made it plain that he had little sympathy with those of his own political faith who call themselves progressives, but "are political emotionalists or neurotics."

While at the banquet the president received telegrams assuring that two delegates to the Republican national convention from the Eighth Virginia congressional district and two more from Alaska, all pledged to support him, were elected yesterday. Another telegram assured him that the Colorado Republican state central committee had declared for him by a vote of 105 to 10.

SENTIMENT OF STATE AGAINST RICHESON

Governor Will Not Recommend Commutation of Sentence

Boston, Feb. 13.—Governor Foss will make no effort to commute the death sentence of Clarence V. T. Richeson, the murderer of Avis Linnell, who has been sentenced to die in the electric chair during the week of May 19.

It is learned from a source close to the governor that the latter, in his conversation with counsel for the condemned man, said that he did not believe there was the slightest chance to save the life of the former minister.

The governor is satisfied from the hundreds of letters that he has received that the sentiment of the state is for the death of Richeson.

The governor is just as strong in his opposition to capital punishment as ever, but since the law of the state provides for the death penalty he is not disposed in the case of Richeson to take any action, because in his opinion there is not a single circumstance in the case which would warrant clemency on his part.

FLOUR WITH FAT SALT AND WATER

Fifth Demonstration Lecture on Dessert and Pastry

FIRELESS COOKER

The third in the series of five deminstration lectures under the auspices of and for the benefit of Wollaston Kindergarten was given Monday afternoon in Brasee hall, Wollaston, nearly a hundred ladies being present, for who does not like dessert?

Mrs. Hill announced that her lecture was on pastry and desserts and introducing the Fireless Cooker. She first made a fruit pudding using a covered mold in which she placed red cherries chopped in small pieces, peeled sliced apricots, then covered. Alternate layers of cake and fruit filled the mold. A custard was poured over and it was placed in the fireless cooker. It was served with cold sabayou sauce royal, which was rightly named. This pudding could be cooked in an oven by observing the little hints given by Mrs. Hill.

Pineapple Bavariose, pompadour style, was a delicious concoction, pretty as a picture, before the sampling of it began. Mrs. Hill also explained how canned pears could be used in place of pineapple. Gelatine was used. It will take up four times its weight in water, always soak until completely hydrated, all these little details were explained as she proceeded with the preparation of the dishes.

Her explanation of how thin cream can be whipped by the use of viscogen using one-fourth a teaspoonful to each three-fourths cup of cream was worth the price of her lecture and was the means of selling several of one of her cook books which contain the recipe for making it.

Coupe Thais served in tall glasses simply melted in one's mouth and left a longing for more.

Ice Cream eaten slowly and allowed to melt in the mouth was all right. It is a mistake to use starch or flour in making it and Mrs. Hill told why and then explained just how to use junket for thickening and why more wholesome than corn starch.

The ice cream served proved Mrs. Hill's words to be true. It was a nice fine grained mixture. How it could be kept over night in a fireless cooker was something new to her audience.

Mrs. Hill said pastry was made of flour, fat, salt and just enough water to hold the ingredients together, fat makes tender, water toughens it, pastry flour should always be used in this branch of cookery. Pastry should be only for occasions, and let it be light, dry and flaky. No one of the ingredients is unwholesome, but the artificial combination has often proved unhygienic, it must be well cooked and let it be masticated thoroughly.

The rolling and folding was demonstrated for puff paste as well as how to use the butter. She used the Magic cover to roll her crust and proved conclusively that it is all it is claimed to be.

Lemon fandronetts were made in small tins lines with pastry and after baking were covered with a meringue and returned to the oven for eight minutes. They were delicious.

Mr. Bennett from W. G. Shaw's explained the merits of the Caloric Fireless cook stove, especially the radiators, an entirely new feature. The Fireless will save money, cook food more thoroughly, save your nervous energy, make cooking a pleasure and it will bake.

The next lecture Feb. 19 will be Buffet Luncheons and Paper Bag Cookery.

SPECIAL MEETING CITY COUNCIL

The special meeting of the City Council, Monday evening was a brief one being in session but four minutes which is nearly, if not the record for short meetings. The meeting was called to draw jurors. Seventeen members were present and the Mayor, City Clerk and Councilman Studley drew the following jurors according to law.

George T. Westland, Walter J. Anderson, Thomas B. Davenport, Perley R. Runnells, George C. Stenzel and James R. McCormick.

The absent members were Councilmen Abele, Bailey, Cunningham, Ericson, Murray and Sandberg.

WATERWAYS HEARINGS.

It appears from the bulletin of committee hearings just issued at the State House that the bills of Mayor Stone and Rep. Leslie affecting the waterways of Quincy bay and Town river are to be heard Thursday, instead of Wednesday as announced in Saturday's Ledger. The committee on Harbors and Public Lands, before which the bills will be heard, is one of the busiest committees in the legislature this session and has been assigned to room 431, which it shares with the committee on Mercantile Affairs. This room is plenty large enough to accommodate the crowd which will gather there Thursday in Quincy's behalf.

After the business was transacted, refreshments were served and a pleasant evening spent.

—The Merchants' association of New Haven has succeeded in attracting the attention of engineers of Europe by its method of illuminating the business section of the city. That is a quick return upon an investment which should inspire merchants and business men to renewed endeavor. New Haven, it is true, had a particularly desirable street upon which to make the brilliancy of the method count, as buildings are uniformly of an attractive front elevation, and therefore the photographs taken of one street and scattered broadly are particularly pleasing to the eye of the lover of architectural beauty. —Lynn Item.

For the Theater

Photograph by Underwood & Underwood, N. Y.

A fashionable society leader has introduced this to Broadway theatergoers. It is made of gold lace, fur band and ribbon laces, and the point coming over the shoulders is the very latest idea.

WILL WELCOME NEW CORSETS

Very Graceful and Comfortable Are the Lines That Have the Indorsement of Paris.

Lower in bust than ever are the stays, and the sloping shoulders of the kimono sleeve and the graceful, draped fichu are but tendencies which pointed the way for this new figure.

Some of the newest Parisian corsets are but mere girdles above the waist—quite frequently not reaching to the bust. The idea is to give one long line shoulder to waist—a gently sloping line with the bust as low as possible.

But not below the waist is the corset growing shorter! Far from it! Longer and still longer grow mademoiselle's stays—one wonders how they can be worn with comfort. But they can, for many of them are not heavily boned, but beautifully shaped and so arranged that the figure may be kept slim and youthful below the waist line.

Not below the waist line alone, however, is the figure to be youthful—but above it as well. The high, lifted waist line, the low bust, the slim, sloping shoulders—all this is calculated to keep madame from showing the ravages of time—to keep her youthful as possible.

Very comfortable, indeed, are these new corsets, for if they hold the body trim and tight below the waist line they keep it supple and free above the waist, allowing ease and freedom of movement and perfect comfort.

STRIPED VELVET WAIST.

This attractive model is of striped velvet with large revers of the same over which are tiny ones of black satin. It fastens in front with buttons and is finished with an edge of black satin.

The sleeves are trimmed to correspond. The collar is of lace and the guimpe is of white dotted tulle.

Bias Trimming.

Bias effects in trimmings are the rage, those that go round and round a skirt barber pole fashion being called "swirls." This treatment, when made of fringe, with the bands widely separated, is vastly becoming to the figure, taking nothing from the height or slimness if the wearer is slight or of medium build. That is, of course, when the gown is well made and a clinging material, for crude dressmaking with clumsy stuffs can not be expected to give the same harmonious results.

TAFFETA WITH BROWN FUR

Effective Combination of Materials That There Is Little Doubt Is to Be Popular.

A brown taffeta dress (by the way, brown taffeta is certainly going to be the right wear for the next few months) is trimmed with brown fur. The corsage is bloused into a narrow taffeta belt quite simply, and around the throat lies a soft cream lace collarette. The skirt is also bloused just above the knees, over a broad band of fur, which rises a little behind, and below it the taffeta is tied into a careless, flat sort of bow, which hangs not quite in the middle, behind. The sleves are long and have a touch of creamy lace at the wrists.

With simply dressed hair, a sable toque and a big fur coat, could anything be more desirable or charming for winter weather than this little dress, when people heat their homes so much that thin gowns are necessary?

GAVE TOUCH OF ORIGINALITY

How One Clever Girl Evolved Ingenious Scheme That Is Worthy to Become a Fashion.

Seeing in the shops the tiny narrow bands of folded black satin, with their long silken or heavy beaded tassels, used as a neck finish, a certain ingenious girl added the touch of originality to her new afternoon gown by making, to go with it, a tie of braided folds of black satin.

The little tie was of the usual three strand braiding, the satin strips being very small and carefully blind stitched along the entire length. It was long enough to go around the neck and hang almost to the waist, the ends being worked into a clever little "rosette," with a jet beaded center. Another tiny medallion covered the black metal "snap fastener" which held the tie together.

For the School Girl.

The young girl in her teens is proverbially difficult to dress, but very often the simplest and most sensible solution of the difficulty is to copy mother and to adhere to the tailor-made.

The fine stripes that are so fashionable make very suitable schoolgirl costumes, especially in the vague black and gray stripes that are now worn. The skirt is cut simply with an apron back and front fastened down by large buttons of the material; the coat is short and single or double-breasted without trimming, but with the collar faced with gray velvet.

Matching the costume, the hat should be of gray beaver, with just one touch of color, a cerise feather.

Mexican Work.

When doing a piece of Mexican work that is to be drawn in squares try outlining it as for Hardanger embroidery. You will surely be pleased with the result, it looks so much neater than buttonholing. After outlining, cut and draw the threads as usual.—Needlecraft.

To Keep Hat On.

By sewing a small twist of net around the crown line underneath a broad brimmed hat you will be able to keep the hat in place when on the head by fastening it to the hair by means of hairpins caught through the meshes of the net.

SCRAPS of HUMOR

Defending a Fad.

"This fad is the limit."

"What is it?"

"New York girls are having the pictures of their gentlemen friends photographed on their finger nails."

"Nothing remarkable about that."

"No, why—"

"Certainly not. Any girl who thinks much of a young man likes to have him always on hand."

The Secret Out.

"Have you seen Timson lately?"

"No."

"I thought not. He was wondering only last night if you had left town."

"Confound that fellow. I'll never borrow another dollar from him as long as I live!"

A Sure Sign.

"I know as soon as met Mr. Jones that he was a married man."

"Did he talk to you about his wife?"

"Never mentioned her."

"Then how did you know at once he was a married man?"

"He was such a good listener."

In Which Sense, Maudie?

Alice—It's mean of you to tell people that when Jack kissed me I didn't resent it.

Maud—I didn't dear. On the contrary, I said that when he kissed you on the cheek you held it up against him for quite a while.

How Another Was Made Ill.

Joe—How are you, old man?

Arthur—Got a beastly cold, y' know.

Joe—Hard luck, bah Jove. Been going out in the cold without your monocle?

Arthur—No. Called on Henery at his house and that wretched dog of his persisted in wagging his tail and creating a draft.—Tit-Bits.

Natural Prophecy.

"What is the best way to make a play a howling success?"

"I suppose, to try it on the dog."

Prudent Man.

"You say he has money to burn."

"Yes, but there is nothing else he dreads so much as fire."

The Rocking of Lake Erie.

The 250 mile trough of Lake Erie lies approximately in the direction of the west to southwest winds which prevail in that part of the country. Thus the lake offers an excellent opportunity for studying the effects of the wind upon a large body of inclosed water, and very interesting these effects sometimes prove. Rhythmic gusts produce a rocking motion and great blows from the west or southwest sweep the liquid body of the lake eastward and sometimes cause a rise of eight feet or more at Buffalo in the course of a few hours. As soon as the maximum force of the gale has passed the water swings back. Continued rockings are observed on days when the strength of the wind fluctuates.

Real Need.

"Here's a soap, madam, that will not injure the finest fabrics," parroted the house to house canvasser.

"Fine," exclaimed the genial woman. "Now, if you'll throw in the same variety of laundress with each package I'll be a steady customer."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

UNNATURAL FEELING.

Clubbman—Shay, M'ria. I feel as though I was waltzing all 'round you! Wonder what's got into me?

Mrs. Clubbman—You ought to know. You poured it in!

"No! Why?"

"Because it costs every one who goes in a V."

ASK WITHDRAWAL OF THE MILITIA

Officials of Lawrence to Put Matter Up to Governor

LATTER LIKELY TO REFUSE

Militiamen Acquiring Valuable Experience While Preserving Order—Mills Make Large Gains In Number of Operatives at Work—But Little Trouble Over Picketing—Loomfixers Condemned For Returning to Arlington Mills—Strikers Urged by Giovannitti to Prowl Around Like Animals and Look For Blood, According to Detective's Story

Lawrence, Mass., Feb. 13.—Mayor Scanlon and members of the city council will meet with Governor Foss at the state house this afternoon to discuss the local strike situation as the result of a conference with Adjutant General Pearson and Colonel Sweetser, at which, it is said, the municipal officials requested the withdrawal of the militia from Lawrence.

Although neither the mayor nor any of the councilmen would make a statement, it is understood that Pearson refused absolutely to take such action, declaring that troops will be kept here until a settlement is reached and all possibility of an outbreak is over.

The apparent peaceful attitude of the strikers is believed to have led to the request by the city government. According to men in close touch with the officials, it is declared that the majority of them are against further quartering of the militia here, and for several days have been in favor of abolishing the almost martial law which has prevailed.

That the governor is against a withdrawal of the militia or a reduction in the number of soldiers is indicated by the changes which have taken place. Four companies left yesterday, but they were replaced by another battalion. The numerical strength of the militia is as great as at any other time during the strike.

Officers on duty here state that as far as possible a plan will be worked out to have every national guard company in the state serve at least two weeks in Lawrence. It is acknowledged that the militiamen are receiving valuable experience while preserving order among the operatives, and the fourteen-day tour of strike duty has been suggested as a substitute for the summer maneuvers.

Ten thousand operatives, nearly 40 percent of the number in Lawrence, went to work in the mills yesterday, according to claims made by the agents.

Despite elaborate picketing preparations by the strikers, there were only a few disturbances, all of a minor character. Several times militiamen had to interfere when a picketer became too strenuous in his arguments with an operative who desired to enter the mill gates.

Loomfixers in the Arlington mills, who returned to work in a body yesterday, have been condemned severely by all members of the I. W. W. Special reference to their action was made at all meetings yesterday afternoon. John Golden, president of the International Textile Workers, also criticised them, declaring that they had acted entirely without the sanction of the organization.

Miss Elizabeth G. Flynn of New York addressed the gathering last night and presented the requests of sympathizers in New York and Philadelphia for more of the strikers' children to care for. It was finally voted that a lot of children be sent to Philadelphia and New York during the next two weeks, if conditions continue as at present.

"Sleep in the daytime and at night prowl around like wild animals and look for blood. At night you can knock in the heads of the scabs. In a few days we will be able to count the broken heads and they won't be on our side."

These and other similar statements were ascribed to Arturo Giovannitti by Charles Bencardo, an Italian detective, who was a witness at the continued hearing of Giovannitti and Joseph J. Ettor, who are charged with being accessories to the murder of Anna Popizzo, killed in a strike riot.

Giovannitti, according to the witness, was addressing a crowd of strikers who had gathered on the common, following a parade and demonstration on Jan. 29.

All of the witnesses called by the government during the day testified as to the riots of Jan. 15 and 29, and in some instances placed the defendants in the vicinity, although in no case was there testimony tending to show that they had taken any active part in the rioting.

New York, Feb. 13.—Rev. Dr. Robert S. MacArthur, president of the Baptist World Alliance, who has just returned from St. Petersburg, announces that he has received permission from the Russian emperor to build a Baptist college in St. Petersburg.

ON WAY TO SUICIDE

Maine Shoe Manufacturer Confesses Being Heavy Defaulter

Portland, Me., Feb. 13.—A. W. Shaw, founder, president and general manager of the A. W. Shaw corporation of Freeport, shoe manufacturers, has absconded and is a self-confessed defaulter of a large sum from his company.

In a letter sent from Boston to J. Amick of Freeport, his partner for twenty-two years and the heaviest stockholder, he wrote that he intended to commit suicide in midocean.

Playing the stock market for years with varying success, cleaning up $300,000 only eighteen months ago, he wrote, then losing all because, like others, he wanted $10,000,000, was assigned as the cause of his downfall.

To protect the creditors Amick applied to the court for the appointment of receivers, and he and Edward W. Wheeler were appointed.

LINEHAN IS GIVEN TWO YEARS IN JAIL

Pleads Guilty of Larceny and Politicians Breathe Easier

Boston, Feb. 13.—Former State Senator Frank J. Linehan pleaded guilty in Suffolk superior court to larceny in two counts and was sentenced to two years in the house of correction.

This disposed, in a few minutes, of a case which was expected to furnish one of the legal and political sensations of Boston. Politicians had been waiting for the trial with apprehension. It had been reported that "Linehan would tell all."

Linehan was also charged with conspiracy to defraud the city of Boston and with forging and uttering the names of two city of Boston officials. These conspiracy and forgery charges were placed on file.

John L. Sullivan was also charged jointly with Linehan on all charges. It was understood that he was to be a government witness. The charges against Sullivan are also placed on file.

LEWIS IS AFTER HOOK

His Activities May Keep Judge From Seat on Supreme Bench

Washington, Feb. 13.—W. H. Lewis of Boston, a negro assistant attorney general, has had a considerable part in the campaign to prevent the nomination of Judge Hook of Kansas as an associate justice of the supreme court.

Lewis "dug out" the decision in the "Jim Crow" car case of Oklahoma that seems to have been responsible for Hook's undoing, and was able to place it before the president in advance of other negroes, who were vigorous in protests against the nomination. It is thought that the president will not now make the nomination.

Leper Early and Family Are Located In the State of Washington

Tacoma, Feb. 13.—Having been shunted about from place to place, as the result of the long government investigation to determine whether he is a leper, John R. Early, formerly of Washington, D. C., has been found at Summit, near here, and will be fenced in on an acre of land.

The Pierce county commissioners decided to take this step after an investigation by the county physician. His wife and three small children are with him.

BRINGS A MAN BACK TO LIFE

Simple German Device Pumps Oxygen Into the Lungs

WITNESSES UTTERLY AWED

Friends Work Over Victim of Gas For Three Hours and Fail to Restore Respiration—Pulmotor Is Brought Into Use and Man Given Up For Dead Soon Recovers and Feels No Ill Effects From His Experience

Chicago, Feb. 13.—Again doctors have performed the marvelous operation of recalling the apparently dead to life. This time the apparatus used was the pulmotor.

David Haas was asphyxiated by illuminating gas in his room. For more than three hours friends worked over him. They failed to restore respiration and Haas was given up as dead.

Dr. J. Lewis was called in and sent for a pulmotor. In another three hours Haas was able to sit up and express his wonder and his thanks. He was completely restored not only to life, but to health. He felt no ill effects at all, he said.

Dr. Lewis said: "Speaking medically, Haas was in a state of death when the machine arrived. He was certainly beyond all other aid."

Those who witnessed the amazing operation were utterly awed as they saw the spirit of life forced to return.

That this simple apparatus has given man a new control over life and death the doctors are certain. Haas is the fifth who has been "called back." Fifteen others who would have died have been saved.

The pulmotor is a German device. The one used here is owned by the Commonwealth-Edison company. It consists simply of a tank holding oxygen under pressure of 3000 pounds to the square inch, with a pump and a valve for reducing the pressure to two pounds to the square inch. The oxygen is pumped into the lungs direct through an apparatus invented by Dr. Harry M. Richter of the Northwestern university medical school.

When no pulmotor can be obtained an ordinary vacuum cleaner can be used. But this pumps only air into lungs instead of oxygen.

NAMES ARE KEPT SECRET

Fifty-Four Arrests Expected In the Great Dynamite Conspiracy

Indianapolis, Feb. 13.—On the eve of the arrest of the men indicted in the dynamite conspiracy cases it is reported that the number of defendants will be fifty-four. The arrests may take place today.

Many officers in one labor union and one officer in each of two other unions are believed to be involved.

Many cities in the east and in Ohio, Illinois and Missouri are said to be the points from which the federal authorities expect to receive reports of arrests.

Most of the defendants, whose names have been kept secret, but who have been under federal espionage since the indictments were returned a week ago, are reported as now being within reach.

AFFECTS BOTH ARMS

Neuritis Said to Have Suddenly Attacked Prima Donna Nordica

Boston, Feb. 13.—Mystery surrounds the sudden illness of Mme. Lillian Nordica, who was stricken at the Hotel Lenox after a rehearsal of two acts of "Tristan and Isolde," in which she was scheduled to play her favorite leading role.

Her physicians will not admit finding a symptom of a paralytic or apopletic shock, and while they are non-committal as to the real cause of the illness it is generally given out that the famous singer is suffering from neuritis, which has affected both her arms.

SHERWOOD BILL REJECTED

Senate Committee Turns Down Dollar-a-Day Pension Plan

Washington, Feb. 13.—The Sherwood so-called "dollar-a-day" pension bill was rejected by the senate committee on pensions, and another measure, which would involve an annual expenditure of $22,000,000, proposed as a substitute by Senator Smoot, was adopted.

Senators Brown and Curtis gave notice that in the senate they would press the Sherwood bill as a substitute for the Smoot bill.

NINE HUNDRED SORE ARMS

Entire Population of Pensnylvania Town Submits to Vaccination

Greenburg, Pa., Feb. 13.—Nine hundred persons, the entire population of United, a mining settlement near here, have been vaccinated and are nursing sore arms.

The wholesale vaccination was ordered by the state health authorities because of the discovery of smallpox and the quarantining of twenty-six persons, who had been exposed to the contagion. One death has occurred.

The Kitchen Cupboard

FOR WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY.

THE cherry and the hatchet seem to be the favorite symbol of the Father of His Country. There is no special reason for enlarging on the cherry tree episode of his youth, but custom has accepted it, and for all social affairs the cherry and the hatchet appear as often and in as many forms as possible.

Candies are made to look like cherries, cakes and other confections are adorned with glace cherries, while cherry ices and sherbets are seldom omitted from the bill of fare.

About Decorations.

For the table cherry blossoms make a charming decoration, and, since these can be made of paper, they can be used even when the snow is upon the ground. Japanese cherry blossoms, very good imitations of which may be purchased in the department or art stores, are both suitable and pretty.

For the favors dolls dressed in colonial uniforms will delight little folks if you are giving a juvenile party. Candy boxes may be appropriately decorated and filled with candied cherries or cream candy shaped and colored to represent cherries.

Fancy Cakes.

Cakes stamped into fanciful shapes, iced and decorated with crystallized cherries or other fruits, bonbons, nuts, etc., are much in request for both Washington's birthday and Valentine's day functions.

A very easy form of these is produced by slicing down more or less thinly any kind of nice cake, such as sponge, orange, chocolate, etc. These slices, if thick, are then stamped out in diamonds or rounds, covered smoothly with any delicate glace to taste, a bonbon, crystallized fruit or flower or even a cube of bright colored jelly being placed on each as a garnish.

A dainty cake for social affairs may be made thus: Beat twelve ounces of fresh butter to a cream with twelve ounces of sugar. Add four whole eggs, working each in separately. Then work in a pound of sifted flour and when perfectly mixed put the paste aside for four hours or so in a cool place.

Then roll it out half an inch thick and cut into little fancy cakes with a cutter.

Put these cakes on a baking pan, brush each over with egg yolk beaten up with milk, put a preserved cherry, a strip of angelica or a blanched nut on each and bake in a hot oven.

GRAPEFRUIT IS WHOLESOME.

GRAPEFRUIT should be eaten by persons whose blood is not in good condition, for it is an effective antiscorbutic.

Grapefruit contains citric acid, and, while there is not so much of it as in lemons, it has in a lesser degree the same medicinal value. Grapefruit should be eaten by persons who have a rheumatic tendency or who are subject to eruptions of the skin.

When Served.

Grapefruit should always be served as the first course at the meal.

For breakfast cut the fruit in two with a thin sharp knife. Remove the seeds and core. Into the hollow thus made sprinkle sugar. The skin may be loosened from the pulp with a knife before serving. Serve with sharp pointed spoons.

Grapefruit and Bananas.—Use one grapefruit, two bananas and a cupful of pineapple.

Cut the grapefruit into pieces and scrape the fruit into a dish, discarding all peel and linings.

Peel the bananas, split them lengthwise into quarters and then slice crosswise into a dish with the grapefruit.

Add the pineapple and sugar to taste and mix slightly.

Grapefruit Salad. — Take the tops from several green peppers. Fill with grapefruit pulp, fine cut celery, English walnuts and mayonnaise dressing.

To one and a half cupfuls of the mixture add one-fourth of a cupful of cream beaten stiff and tinted a delicate green with spinach.

To each pepper use three halves of walnut meats and half as much celery as grapefruit.

Preserved Grapefruit.

Grapefruit Jelly.—For this soak the rind of the grapefruit in brine for about twelve hours; then place in fresh water until the taste of the brine is gone.

Cut up the pulp after the core and seeds have been removed and put in an enameled kettle.

Add about a quart of water to every grapefruit. Cook down to about one-third. Add sugar as for ordinary jelly, except that a very generous proportion must be used.

Preserved Grapefruit.—Remove the rind from the grapefruit, cut in half, take out the core and seeds.

Slice and put into an enameled kettle with a little water. When it boils add three cupfuls of sugar to each pint of fruit and juice in the kettle and cook for fifteen minutes longer.

Seal in jars for future use.

THE SHIRT WAIST STORE

TERMS NOT MADE PUBLIC

Boston Longshoremen and Employers Have Reached an Agreement

Boston, Feb. 13.—The nearly six-weeks-old strike of the longshoremen of the port of Boston is settled. The 2500 longshoremen who struck Jan. 4 for a wage increase of 10 cents an hour will return to work tomorrow morning at the several wharves in a body.

The ship carpenters that built grain bins and cattle pens on the ships, the Grand Junction freight handlers and the steamship clerks that struck in aid of the longshoremen will also return to work.

The termination of the strike leaves both sides pretty much as they were prior to the strike. It was mutually agreed to refrain from making known the terms of the adjustment, for the present at least.

The strike is said to have been the most remarkable ever conducted in this section of the country. Its chief feature was that it was orderly in every particular.

FRECKLES

By Gene Stratton-Porter

COPYRIGHT, 1904, BY DOUBLEDAY, PAGE & CO.

SYNOPSIS.

Freckles, a homeless boy, is hired by Boss McLean to guard the expensive timber in the Limberlost from timber thieves.

Freckles does his work faithfully, makes friends with the birds and yearns to know more about nature. He lives with Mr. and Mrs. Duncan.

He resolves to get books and educate himself. He becomes interested in a huge pair of vultures and calls his bird friends his "chickens."

Some of the trees he is guarding are worth $1,000 each. Freckles' books arrive. He receives a call from Wessner.

Wessner attempts to bribe Freckles to betray his trust, and Freckles whips him. McLean overhears them and witnesses the fight.

Freckles' honesty saves a precious tree. He finds the nest of the vultures and is visited by a beautiful young girl.

She calls Freckles McLean's son. Freckles calls her "the angel" and helps the Bird Woman in taking photographs. McLean promises to adopt Freckles.

Freckles and the angel become very friendly. Assisted by the Bird Woman, they drive Wessner and Black Jack, timber thieves, from the Limberlost.

McLean fears more trouble, but Freckles insists upon being the sole guard of the timber. Freckles calls upon the angel's father.

The angel receives him as her equal, and her father is kind. Mrs. Duncan has exciting adventures in the Limberlost.

The Bird Woman and the angel again visit Freckles, and Freckles falls in love with the angel. The angel kisses him.

Freckles is bound and gagged by Black Jack's gang, and the timber thieves start felling a very valuable tree.

Wessner is to kill Freckles after the tree is stolen. The angel makes a daring effort to save Freckles and the tree.

McLean's men, notified by the angel, rush to save Freckles. All the timber thieves except Black Jack are captured.

CHAPTER XVII.

NURSING A HEARTACHE.

McLEAN rode down to the Limberlost and, stopping in the shade, sat waiting for Freckles.

Along the north line came Freckles, fairly staggering. When he turned east and reached Sleepy Snake creek, sliding through the swale like the long black snake for which it was named, he sat down on the bridge and closed his burning eyes, but they would not stay shut. As if pulled by wires, the heavy lids flew open and the outraged nerves and muscles of his body danced, twitched and tingled.

He bent forward and idly watched the limpid little stream flowing beneath his feet. Stretching back into the swale, it came creeping between an impenetrable wall of magnificent wild flowers, vines and ferns. Milkweed, goldenrod, ironwort, fringed gentians, cardinal flowers and turtle head stood on the very edge of the creek, and every flower of them grew a double in the water. Wild clematis crowned with snow the heads of trees scattered here and there along the bank.

Freckles sat so still that presently the brim of his hat was covered with snake feeders, rasping their crisp wings and singing as they rested. Some of them settled on the club and one on his shoulder. He was so quiet and feathers, fur and gauze were so accustomed to him that all about the swale they went on with their daily life and forgot he was there.

The heron family waded about the mouth of the creek. Freckles idly wondered whether the nerve racking rasps they occasionally emitted indicated domestic felicity or a raging quarrel. A sheltpoke, with flaring crest, went stalking across a bare space near the creek's mouth. A stately brown bittern waded out into the clear flowing water, lifting his feet high at every step and setting them down gingerly, as if he dreaded wetting them, and, with slightly parted beak, stood eagerly watching about him for worms. Behind him were some mighty trees of the swamp above, and below the bank glowed a solid wall of goldenrod.

No wonder the ancients had chosen yellow as the color to represent victory, for the fierce, conquering hue of the sun was in it. They had done well, too, in choosing purple as the color of royalty. It was a dignified, compelling color, and in its warm tone there was a hint of blood.

It was the Limberlost's hour to proclaim her sovereignty and triumph. Everywhere she flaunted her yellow banner and trailed the purple of her mantle, that was paler in the thistle heads, took on strength in the first opening asters, and glowed and burned in the goldenrod.

Compellingly beautiful was the Limberlost, but cruel withal; far back in there bleached the uncoffined bones of her victims, and she had missed cradling him, oh, so narrowly!

Below the turtle log, a dripping silver gray head, with shining eyes, was cautiously lifted, and Freckles' hand slid around to his revolver. Higher and higher came the head; a long, heavy, fur coated body rose, now half, now three-fourths out of the water. Freckles looked at his shaking hand and doubted, but he gathered his forces, the shot rang out, and the otter lay still. He hurried down and tried to lift it. He could scarcely muster strength to carry it to the bridge. The consciousness that he really could not go farther with it made Freckles realize the fact that he was well up to the limit of human endurance. He could bear it little, if any, longer. Every hour the face of the angel wavered before him, and behind it the awful distorted image of Black Jack, as he swore to the punishment he would mete out to her.

Freckles stopped when he came to the first guard, and telling him of his luck, asked him to go for the otter and carry it up to the cabin, as he was anxious to meet McLean. Freckles passed the second guard without seeing him, and hurried up to the boss. He stood silent under the eyes of McLean.

The boss was dumfounded. Mrs. Duncan had led him to expect that he would find Freckles in a bad way, but this was almost deathly. The fact was apparent that the boy scarcely knew what he was doing. His eyes had a glazed, farsighted look in them, that wrung the heart of the man that loved him. Without a thought of preliminaries McLean leaned in the saddle and drew Freckles up to him.

"My poor lad!" he said. "My poor, dear lad; tell me, and we will try to right it!"

Freckles had twisted his fingers in Nellie's mane. At the kind words his face dropped on McLean's thigh and he shook with a nervous chill. McLean gathered him closer and waited.

"Freckles," said McLean at last, "will you tell me, or must I set to work in the dark and try to find the trouble?"

"Oh, I want to tell you! I must tell you, sir," shuddered Freckles. "I cannot be bearing it the day out alone. I was coming to you when I remimbered you would be here."

He lifted his face and gazed off across the swale, with his jaws set hard a minute, as if gathering his forces. Then he spoke.

"It's the angel, sir," he said.

Instinctively McLean's grip on him tightened.

"I tried hard the other day," said Freckles, "and I couldn't seem to make you see. It's only that there hasn't been an hour, waking or sleeping, since the day she parted the bushes and looked into me room, that the face of her hasn't been before me in all the tinderness, beauty and mischief of it. She talked to me friendly like. She trusted me entirely to take right care of her. She helped me with things about me books. She traited me like I was born a gintleman, and shared with me like I was of her own blood. She walked the streets of the town with me before her friends with all the pride of a queen. She forgot herself and didn't mind the Bird Woman, and run big risks to help me out that first day, sir. This last time she walked into that gang of murderers, took their leader and twisted him to the will of her. She outdone him and raced the life almost out of her trying to save me."

"Since I can remimber, whatever the thing was that happened to me in the beginning has been me curse. I've been bitter, hard and smarting under it hopelessly. She came by and found me voice and put hope of life and success like other men into me in spite of it."

Freckles held up his maimed arm.

"Look at it, sir!" he said. "A thousand times I've cursed it, hanging there helpless. She took it on the street, before all the people, just as if she didn't see that it was a thing to hide and shrink from. Again and again I've had the feeling with her, if I didn't entirely forget it, that she didn't see it was gone and I must pull her sleeve and be pointing it out to her. Her touch on it was so sacred like, at times since I've caught meself looking at the awful thing near like I was proud of it, sir. If I was born your son she couldn't be freating me more as her equal, and she can't help knowing you ain't truly me father. Nobody can know the ugliness or the ignorance of me better than I do and all me lack of birth, home, relatives and money and what's it all to her?"

Freckles stepped back from McLean, squared his shoulders and with a royal lift of his head looked straight into the boss' eyes.

"You saw her in the beautiful little room of her and you can't be forgetting how she begged and pleaded with you for me. She touched me body, and 'twas sanctified. She laid her lips on me brow, and 'twas sacrament. Nobody knows the height of her better than me. Nobody's studied my depths closer. There's no bridge for the great distance between us, sir, and, clearest of all, I'm for realizing it. But she risked terrible things when she came to me among that gang of thieves. She wore herself past bearing to save me from such an easy thing as death! Now, here's me, a man, a big, strong man, and letting her live under that fearful oath, so worse than any death 'twould be for her, and lifting not a finger to save her. I cannot bear it, sir. It's killing me by inches! If any evil comes to her through Black Jack it comes from her angel like goodness to me. Somewhere he's hiding! Somewhere he is waiting his chance! Somewhere he is reaching out for her! I tell you I cannot, I dare not be bearing it longer!"

"Freckles, be quiet!" said McLean, his eyes humid. "Believe me, I did not understand. I know the angel's father, well. I will go to him at once. I have transacted business with him for the last three years. I will make him see! I am only just beginning to realize your agony and the real danger there is for the angel. I will see that she is fully protected every hour of the day and night until Jack is located and disposed of. And I promise you further that if I fail to move her father or make him understand the danger I will maintain a guard over her until Jack is caught."

McLean slid from Nellie's back, and went to examine the otter.

"What do you want to do with it, Freckles?" asked McLean. "Do you known that it is very valuable?"

"I was for almost praying so, sir," said Freckles. "As I saw it coming up the bank I thought this: Once somewhere in a book there was a picture of a young girl, and she was just a breath like the beautifulness of the angel. Her hands were in a muff as big as her body, and I thought it was so pretty. I think she was some queen, or the like. Do you suppose I could have this skin tanned and made into such a muff as that—an enormous big one, sir?"

"Of course you can," said McLean. "That's a fine idea and it's easy enough. It would be a mighty fine thing for you to give to the angel as a little reminder of the Limberlost before it is despoiled, and as a souvenir of her trip for you."

Freckles lifted a face with a glow of happy color creeping into it and eyes lighting with a former brightness. Throwing his arms about McLean, he cried "Oh, how I love you! Oh, I wish I could make you know how I love you!"

McLean strained him to his breast. "God bless you, Freckles," he said. "I do know! We're going to have some good old times out of this world together, and we can't begin too soon. Would you rather sleep first, or get a bite of lunch and have the drive with me, and then rest? I don't know but sleep will come sooner and deeper to take the ride and have your mind set at ease before you lie down. Suppose you go."

"Suppose I do," said Freckles, with a glimmer of the old light in his eyes and newly found strength to shoulder the otter. Together they turned into the swale.

SUBSTITUTE FOR GALLOWS

Warden of Maryland Penitentiary Urges Use of Chloroform

Baltimore, Feb. 13.—Warden Weyler of the state penitentiary, noted as a prison reformer and disciplinarian, has suggested to a committee of the legislature the administration of chloroform as a substitute for hanging in capital punishment.

A bill is now before the legislature to substitute execution by electricity in Maryland for hanging, but Weyler says that chloroform is the most painless method. He would have the condemned person privately dragged in a cell, with none of the spectacular features usually surrounding executions.

The committee was impressed with the warden's suggestion. He is unalterably opposed to executions taking place in the state prison because of the effect upon the prisoners.

Her Rule With Husbands.

Miss Kate Riverton Byles, one of the suffragist leaders of Colorado, said at a recent suffragist dinner in Cripple Creek:

"Opponents of woman's suffrage would have you believe that a vote turns a woman into a monster. Yet, when a young man, arriving at the age of twenty-one, gets the vote, does he, or does he not, become a monster?

"But to hear the anti-suffragists talk you'd think that every voting woman was like that lady, rich in her own right, to whom her husband said:

"'My suspicions are at last confirmed. We part forever from this moment.

"But the guilty lady retorted haughtily:

"'Not at all, sir. Not at all. It's my invariable rule to require a month's notice from every husband.'"

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

CAN'T ESCAPE DEATH DUTIES IN ENGLAND

High Court Rules on Duchess of Manchester Estate

London, Feb. 13.—Legacy duty amounting to $300,000 must be paid on the etate of the late Consuelo, Duchess of Manchester, according to judgment delivered in the chancery division of the high court of justice.

The suit was brought in connection with the fortune inherited from her brother, Fernando, by the late Consuelo, who was a daughter of Antonio Yznaga de Valle of Louisiana and Cuba.

Fernando left $2,000,000 to the duchess, and although the money was never brought to England, the British revenue authorities claimed legacy duty and the demand was resisted by the executors of the duchess' will.

FIFTY REBELS HANGED

Refused to Reveal Whereabouts of Leader of Mexican Revolution

Mexico City, Feb. 13.—A death sentence has been imposed upon General Zapata, leader of the revolution which is raging throughout southern Mexico, as the government's first step in an "extermination campaign."

Fifty followers of Zapata were hanged in the state of Morelos because they would not reveal to federal soldiers the whereabouts of their chief.

After a conference with his advisers Madero issued an ultimatum to the rebels and made it known that "no quarter" will be the government's policy in the future unless the revolutionary soldiers lay down their arms at once.

FOUND IN BAGGAGE ROOM

Gems Valued at $40,000 In Trunk of Man Who Drops Dead

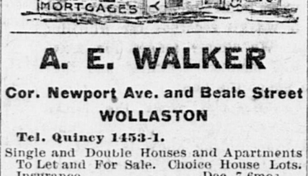

Washington, Feb. 13.—Sample jewelry worth $40,000, carried by J. F. Crane, a member of a Newark jewelry firm, who died suddenly of heart disease Saturday night in the Union station, was found by the police yesterday in half a dozen sample cases in a trunk in the baggage room at the station awaiting shipment to Newark.

Police officials were alarmed when word came from Newark that Crane had $40,000 in his possession.

PARISH REUNION ST. JOHN'S CHURCH

All roads will lead to St. John's Hall, Phipps street, tomorrow evening, on the occasion of the parish reunion of the church of St. John the Baptist. Every preparation has been made to make the affair meet with the greatest of success, and it is expected that the hall will be taxed to overflowing.

The committee in charge have been engaged in active work during the past three weeks and no stone has been left unturned to make the affair the best in the history of the parish.

Rev. John J. Coan, the pastor will open the re-union with an address of welcome. An exquisite concert will then be in order, provided by well-known talent, and Andrew Dinegan, Fred McDonald and James Grant will add to the enjoyment by contributing a minstrel sketch.

Miss Celina Belliveau will entertain with solos, while Daniel Ring will give a number of readings. Thomas Murray, the well-known tenor, will favor those present and from the time the re-union starts, until it is drawn to a close at 2 o'clock Thursday morning, there will not be one dull or idle moment.

Dancing will hold sway during the greater part of the function, although whist and refreshments, in the form of a supper, will receive their due share of attention. Two orchestras have been secured for the occasion, and step dancing of a varied nature may be witnessed in the lower corridor by those who do not care to indulge in the terpsichorean art. Many former residents of the parish will be present and the event gives every promise of being pronounced the best ever.

FINE DRAMA SEASON

ATTRACTIONS AT PLUNKVILLE REVIEWED BY EDITOR.

Opening With Greater Barnstormers' Minstrels, the List Included Prof. Svengali, "East Lynne," "Jesse James" and Others.

"The dramatic season just ended," said the Winesap County Weekly Vindicator, "was the most successful in the history of Plunkville, both from an artistic and a financial point of view.

"Early in October the season was ushered in with the Greater Barnstormers' Minstrels, with 15 performers in high top slickems and beautiful pink dusters, who played the most ravishing circus marches in the courthouse yard. At the evening performance many of the latest melodies were rendered, including 'After the Ball,' 'Hot Time Tonight,' and 'Love Muh and the World Is Mine;' also many first-class jokes which have never been seen in the almanacs in this section. Our versatile and talented barber, band leader, baseball pitcher, orchestra conductor, and society favorite, Mr. Nick Duggins, secured an engagement with the minstrels to play second baritone and double up in the evening as 'Mr. Rastus Johnsing Brown.'

"In November a hypnotist and entertainer called 'Prof. X. Svengali,' occupied the boards at the opera house. Professor Svengali put Sam Tucker, the tinner, into a trance, and made him stand on his head in the corner and sing the 'Doxology.' After the performance Sam missed a five-dollar bill, but he allowed the fun was worth the money.

"In December we witnessed that soulful and lachrymose drama, 'East Lynne,' put on with great eclat and a whole lot of terrific success. Deacon Shucks, who hasn't cried since his wife ran away with the leader of the Bass Center choir, broke into profuse tears; and as the large concourse of Plunkvillians shuffled down the steps that lead from over S. Quigley's well-known commission, confectionery and farm implements emporium, there was not a dry eye on the stairs.

"About the middle of January the Plunkville Thespian and Terpsichorean Troupe rendered 'Kate, the Convict's daughter,' for the benefit of the South Sea head hunters. Miss Sadie Sebree, our talented milliner, who took the immortal role of Kate Kipper, made a pronounced hit and admits that, when it comes to finished trapdoor and red-light situations, she has Mme. Bernhardt backed off the boards.

"The spring attractions included 'Ten Nights in a Barroom,' 'Jesse James,' a Shakespearean elocutionist who put everybody to sleep faster than Parson Buckner does, and a man without arms who played the bass viol with his toes.

"For the next season Manager Tobe Scruggles will maintain the same high standard. He has already engaged 'Uncle Tom's Cabin,' a fiddling quartet, a moving-picture show, a patent-medicine entertainment and an ossified man. During the summer many notable improvements will be made. A new tin cornice will be erected and the interior will be repainted in exquisite tints of flamingo red, paris green, Helen pink and chrome yellow, with many striking fresco decorations representing Venus, General Grant, Cleopatra, the Muses and Little Bopeep. For next season the same competent staff will serve the public. Capt. Artemus Jefferson, the saddler, will continue to preside at the box office in return for the privilege of seeing the shows free. Nathan Thomas, the grocer, will light up and make fires and 'Piggy' Partington, the widow's son, will act as usher and carry the red banner with the golden letters in the parades for the same splendid privileges.

New Find of an Old Race.

Fanning Island, in the mid-Pacific ocean, which was recently purchased by a British Canadian syndicate for use as a coaling station, is the scene of remarkable discoveries, the news of which was brought by the steamship Makura, which arrived at Vancouver, B. C., on Dec. 13. Archaeological explorations have brought to view indications that the island was inhabited at some long-ago period by a race with peculiar skill in architecture. Excavations there have unearthed a large stone building, 50 feet wide and 200 feet long, in the construction of which no mortar was used, the stones used having been skillfully mortised together.

Near by this strange structure was found a tomb containing a human skeleton with a necklace made of the teeth of the sperm whale, and of other articles, including the skull of a dog.

All Fixed.

"I think I'll propose at the party tonight."

"No, you won't."

"Why won't I?"

"My sister knows the young lady in the case, and it has been arranged for you to propose at the ball next week."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

In Control.

"A man always likes to feel that he is in a position to reward his friends and punish his enemies."

"That's true," replied Senator Sorghum; "sometimes I am tempted to take a position as janitor of a big building."

NEW WOLLASTON SCHOOL

the mother who on missing two of her children asked the third where they were. Being informed they were out back of the barn, she exclaimed, 'Well go out and see what they are doing and tell them to stop.'"

"Now the ideal is that the child is undeveloped. That it is not bad, but good in the making. We are beginning to think in phrases of the ideal boy."

The speaker described the first school house he attended with cracked plaster, window cracks and its blackboard troughs filled with the flour of the educational mill. In the seat he sat, snow drifting in on one side and he being roasted on the other."

"Is it any wonder" he questioned, "that people of the present day are apathetic on the matter of parks, playgrounds, boulevards and the like when they were brought up through their most impressionable years under the worst conditions possible?

"A silence that you might hear the clock tick was the old ideal of the well ordered school. It took for its model the church where rows of well-dressed people sat up and refrained from whispering."

"The quiet mill or the silent carpenter shop is the sign of nothing being done. In the school silence is the sign of a dead and alive teacher and half hearted pupils."

"In the modern school everybody should be busy. Children should study in quiet? Don't you have to contend with noise after you leave school. Where then will you get your training?"

"Formerly pencils were passed with a military precission, under the social ideal they don't do that. They train ladies and gentlemen.

"Under the social ideal they don't ask permission to consult the dictionary or to communicate. What in the name of common sense are we in school for?

Like the engineer, in school discipline we should oil the place that squeaks and not in our punishments slobber over the whole machine."

The speaker instanced the Lincoln school in Fall River, where school government is exerted along the same lines as a municipality and excellent results were obtained.

"The reason we have difficulty in the city government to get good men to run for office and greater difficulty in getting citizens to testify in court regarding graft is because a generation has been brought up to believe that it is the teachers business to keep order.

"A democracy means every individual responsible. That's the way American citizens are going to be trained. It can be done speedily.

"I can remember when as a boy we had flies in the ink well, when we brought bayberries and red squirrels to school. This was nature study only it was not on the program. Mary's lamb came too early in the school curriculum, and was sent home again.

"We brought apples and cookies to school and fern roots to munch. This was but a natural craving for domestic science.

We put soda in the ink to make it fizz and operated a system of bent wires to keep tabs on the teacher. These were but experiments in chemistry and physics.

"We drew pictures of the teacher and were punished accordingly. We lost a week's recesses for whittling boats. We simply longed for drawing and manual training but they were under the ban.

"Then we had what the adults thought was right. Now we have what the children know is right

We no longer cram knowledge down the throat of a child. We realize it is milk for babes and welsh rarebit for adults. The whole process has resulted in a radical change in school methods.

The speaker called attention to the ridiculous and impractical problems formerly in use and how they are now brought up to date for practical application.

"Now in spelling we don't copy a word 50 times to reduce it to our spinal column. Mr. Bailey told of the construction work that children were doing in the schools to make them already productive members of society.

"In the old days we were taught that the primary school was a preparation for the grammar school. Here we prepared for the high school. In the high school we were prepared for college. At college they told us we were preparing for life.

"Then the ministers tell us solemnly that this life is only a preparation for the life to come

"There was no time to act in the living present heart within and God overhead Now we are especially appealing along the line of natural ability and are training the largest possible per cent to be efficient."

The speaker closed with the beautiful sentiment from Whittier's "Our State."

The riches of the Commonwealth
Are free strong minds and hearts of health,
And more to her than gold or grain
The cunning hand, the cultured brain
For well she keeps her ancient stock
The stubborn strength of Pilgrim Rock,
And still maintains with milder laws
And clearer light the good old cause

An ovation followed the close of the address, and the large gathering slowly dispersed to eddy through the rooms and corridors on a tour of inspection, under the guidance of the teaching corps.

GIFT OF BOOKS TO SCHOOLS

A gift, consisting of 400 copies of "Abe, the War Eagle," was presented to the Wollaston and Massachusetts Fields Schools, Monday through the kindness of Mrs. Nelson, widow of the late C. P. Nelson, and ex-councilman Arthur C. Gardner.

The story deals with the "Eagle" who served three years in the Civil War.

The author, C. P. Nelson, served in the war, and was a great admirer of the "wonderful bird." The little book is highly interesting to both old and young.

FAMILIAR FRIEND OF YEARS AGO

Marvelous changes have been wrought in the way of living in the last 100 years. We prepare our food in a different way, we eat differently, dress differently, are taught differently in the schools. If we stop a moment to compare our "ways" with those of a hundred years ago, we are almost led to believe that everything has changed and everything has been improved.

In the master of treating our ailments the changes are no less noticeable than in other things. Old ways and old methods are gone. Amid all this change, however, we are almost started when we think of one household preparation which has come down to use out of the remote past unchanged, and which is today more highly respected than ever before. We refer to that old reliable household remedy, Johnson's Anodyne Liniment, which has been used continuously by the people of this country for 101 years.

One hundred years is a long time. To go back to when it began is to get out of the age of the flying machine, the automobile, the telephone and the telegraph to a time when such things were not even dreamed of. It goes back beyond the steam railroad into the realm of the stage coach. The steam-boat was a hundred years ago a new thing. In 1810 when Johnson's Anodyne Liniment was first compounded, James Madison, 4th President of the U. S., had just been inaugurated. Abraham Lincoln was then a one-year-old baby. The country then had less than one-tenth of the population it now has and not one in a hundred thousand of its present 90 million people had then been born.

Where it has once been used in a family it is a rare thing that anything else has ever been found to take its place. Thus, in innumerable households it has come down, like a valued heirloom from father to son for generations. The Anodyne Liniment is manufactured by I. S. Johnson & Co., Boston, Mass., and is sold by dealers generally throughout the country.

Heavy Grief.

As a specimen of heavy grief we have seen nothing more heart-rending than the following obituary notice, published in a German paper:

"Today red, tomorrow dead. So it was with my wife, who only seven days ago 'was springing over bench and table,' and was buried yesterday. During her life she was a live woman, who did not easily mistake an X for a U. For that reason everybody can tell the extent of my sorrow; so young and so merry, and now buried. What is human life? I have said to myself repeatedly within the past few days, and also yesterday in the church yard when I paid the sexton, who will also keep the grave mound in order. So cheerful a wife I shall certainly never, never, find again, and therefore, my sorrow is a righteous one. I wish that heaven preserve any man from a similar sad fate, and thank for the flowers, as well as the Herr Cantor, the music master of the choir, for the grave-hymn, which went through and through me, but was very well sung.—Ackerman, Master-Locksmith."—From the Narrator.

Like Curing Like.

"In his last case, the mental healer who boasts such cures proceeded on the homeopathic principle."

"How so?"

"He gave a dumb man silent treatment."

His Correspondence Course

Ruth looked wonderingly at the big, bronzed, bearded chap who stood smiling down into her upturned face. Somehow those eyes were familiar, and yet—

"Burt?" she gasped. "This can't be you?"

"It can't be anyone else," he insisted. "May I come in?"

Blushing, she stood aside to let him pass. In her surprise she had forgotten even to be hospitable. He made his way into the parlor as though it were only yesterday that he had paid his last call.

The room was little changed; as little changed as Ruth herself—and as primly precise. Even his photograph was still in the little leather frame on the mantel. He crossed the room and regarded it admiringly, though there was little to call for admiration in the somewhat faded cabinet of the heavy jowled ponderous bulked man with a placent smile hovering on a rather weak mouth. Ruth stood beside him.

"Can you wonder," she asked, with a nervous little laugh; "that I did not know you for a moment?"

"I don't think you know me yet," was the unexpected reply. "Let's sit down and get acquainted."

He looked toward the old horsehair covered sofa, but she moved toward a rocker by a stove. Beneath the beard the lips parted in a half smile and he sank into a nearby chair.

"Got in last night," he rumbled, in answer to her question. "I'm only here for a week. Came on to see a man and he won't be back from Europe until next Saturday."

"I take it then that you live in the west?" Burton nodded.

"Southwest would be more nearly correct," he said. "Down in Arizona and Old Mexico mostly."

"And this is your first visit east since—" She paused and colored.

"My first since you opened your correspondence school of character formation," he chuckled.

"My what?" she gasped.

"Maybe you forget just how I came to go west," he suggested. She shook her head. She remembered only too well. Burton Brooks had given up a position because he did not like the work and saw no chance for advancement. She had broken her engagement in a bitter letter in which she had upbraided him for his lack of concentration. She had been ready to forgive and forget the day after, but it was too late. Burton had gone on the midnight train. Whalenville was a flag station and none knew his destination. That had been four years ago. Evidently he had not forgotten.

"Do you think it kind to spoil it all by referring to my unfortunate letter?" she asked patiently.

"It wasn't unfortunate," he insisted. "You don't know what a lot of good that letter did me. That's what I came to tell you."

From his pocketbook he drew out a sheet of tracing cloth and held it toward her. "There it is," he said. "It's been my Bible these last four years.

"I'll admit that when I got it I was sore. I was sore for an hour. Then I realized two things. You were more than half true and the rest of it was that you had worried yourself sick over me and most everyone else. You always did have the trick of wanting to manage everyone you came in contact with and sometimes the contract grew too large for you. You were worried because Jen Stevens ran away with that actor fellow—and I got Jen's share too.

"So I just packed up and lit out. I didn't blame you for not wanting to marry me and I didn't want to put temptation in your way—or mine.

"Well, I got out to Chicago and got a job with a construction company. Every morning I read your letter and when it began to grow ragged on the edges I copied it on tracing cloth.

"I simply couldn't talk back to my boss, remembering what you said, and so I got ahead. Down in Old Mexico when I was living in a box car and bossing a section, I took a correspondence course in engineering and after that I called your letter the Correspondence course in character. It did me a lot of good."

"Then I'm glad that I wrote the letter," she said softly. "I was afraid afterward that I had spoken too strongly."

"It was the best thing that ever happened to me," he declared. "I don't need the course any more, but I do need the teacher, Ruth. May I have her?"

For a moment she hesitated. It was in her mind to hold off, to punish him for those four years in which he had given no sign. Then she realized that he took his punishment very literally, and that she, too, deserved a punishment for her scathing arraignment; and Brooks, seeing her weakening, anticipated her answer with a kiss.

"It's not often that pupils marry their teachers," he laughed, "but there are exceptions to all rules."

Vouched For.

Here's a conversation we actuaully overheard:

"Hello, Jim! How are you? Fine. How's our old friend James?"

"Doing nicely. He's gone in for a course in health culture."

"That so? Well, he can stand it—he always did have a magnificent constitution."—Cleveland Plaindealer.

QUINCY WOMEN'S CLUB ANNUAL DRAMATICS

Three-Act Drama "The Honeymoon" Given Before Large Audience at Music Hall

All of Characters Impersonated by Women

As soon as the doors of Quincy Music hall opened on Tuesday afternoon for the annual dramatics of the Quincy Women's club there was a constant stream of club women going in, until it seemed as though the hall would not contain them all. It is estimated about 800 were in attendance and not a man among them.

Mrs. Eben W. Sheppard president of the club conducted the short business session which always precedes a meeting of the club and welcomed club members and guests cordially and graciously. She said it was a special pleasure to greet such a large audience. So many guests add pleasure to the occasion and proves these annual events are pleasantly anticipated. To members on the waiting list we are glad of every opportunity of this kind which affords us the pleasure of having you with us. It is a matter of regret that we cannot do more. The program this afternoon needs no words from me; it will speak for itself. The appreciation of home talent in art and music and the encouragement of the same by the women of our city is worthy of emulation.

The play selected by the Program committee, Mrs. Edward B. Marsh chairman, was the old English comedy "The Honeymoon" by John Tobin. It was given in three acts and several scenes with the following cast:

Duke Aranza—Mrs. Charles Seavey.
Count Montalban—Mrs. George L. Badger.
Balthazar—Mrs. Wilson Marsh.
Jaquez—Mrs Frank Emery
Lopez—Mrs. Edward Miller.
Campillo—Mrs. Jesse I. Litchfield.
Pedro—Mrs. William Wellington.
Juliana—Mrs. Herbert J. Gurney.
Volante—Mrs. George Fleming.
Zamora—Mrs. George H. Brown.
Inez—Mrs. John O. Short.
Minetta—Mrs. Harry McDonough.
Roderigo—Miss Ruth Keating.

The curtain rose on a room in Balthazar's house on the eve of the marriage of his daughter Juliana to the Duke Aranza. The Duke is telling his friend Count Montalban how he proposes to tame his prospective wife who is a very loveable woman at heart but much spoiled and wilful. After marriage he proposes to take her to a lowly cottage on his estate for the honeymoon, to live the life of the peasants, announcing that he is not a Duke, etc. The marriage takes place and the taming process begins much to the discomforture of the bride, who rebels several times but as in all true story books comes into her own, falls in love thoroughly with husband and the play ends happily. There are two other lovers in the play, the other daughter of Balthazar, Volante and Count Montalban whose affair runs more smoothly and also ends happily. There are the usual servants, tenants, peasants, etc. to round out the setting for the stars.

Mrs. Charles Seavey as the Duke had a long and difficult part but was equal to it. She gave her lines clearly acted easily and naturally. As the husband in love with his wife, yet holding himself in check for the future happiness of both, Mrs. Seavey gave a good interpretation of the

THE CHAMPION OF UNION LABOR

Sec. Treas. Duncan Addresses Wollaston Unitarian Club

THE LABOR MOVEMENT

The cause of Union Labor found a sturdy champion in James Duncan of Quincy, Secretary-treasurer of the Granite Cutters' Union and vice president of the American Federation of Labor who addressed the Wollaston Unitarian club Tuesday evening upon "The need of organization of labor."

JAMES DUNCAN.
Secretary-Treasurer.

The speaker opened his remarks with a resume of the history of the labor movement from earliest times down to the present date.

Prior to the Christian era from 600 to 40 B. C. there was a labor movement in ancient Greece and Rome. Mr. Duncan mentioned the sharp line that was drawn between the manual laborer of this day and the aristocrat.

From the conspiracy laws of Julius Caesar which put down the labor movement began the Dark Ages and there is a blank in the advance of civilization until the Magna Carta was introduced and guilds and groups once more formed.

In the time of good Queen Bess organized labor again performed its part and again were conspiracy laws enforced which were not repealed until 1825.

From this time the growth of organized labor has been going on apace and I hope the sun will never again rise on laws that harness the minds and brains of men and rule by the sword instead of a healthy, liberty loving democracy.

With a country so large as this and one with so great an opportunity for developing its natural resources it is only in later years that we have needed labor organization as now.

Formerly the craftsman knew his apprentice and worked with him and lived with him. In these days of big factories the owner scarcely knows his foremen.

There is a vast difference between the man at the spindles and the owner who spends the profits in Paris or elsewhere. It is through this condition that the need of organization comes in.

What chance has the individual in the present mills and mines. Formerly an interest was taken in the apprentice. Now if a workman goes to his foreman desiring a just increase of his wage he is told that he can quit if he doesn't like it.

If we call this individualism and liberty the words must be given a new meaning. That is what the unions aim to change. That is the condition that shows the need of organized labor.

The object of organized labor is merely a collective bargaining. They say let's reason the thing out together and both sides agree in the end to wages and conditions of employment. The liberty that the individual lost is through practical and modern trade unionism restored to the individual.

Mr. Duncan mentioned the adjustment clause that it is the aim of the union to enforce to make capital safe to the investor and to protect the worker by arranging for no strike, lockout or stopping of work during a labor controversy. By this method great upheavals would be reduced to a minimum if recognized by both sides.

The speaker had not intended to mention the affair at Lawrence but he would say that the mills there had been the cause of smashing 10 separate textile unions in the last 12 years.

The superintendents drove out the American wage earner because he joined the union and filled up the ranks with Syrians, Polacks and Armenians.

This brought in a spirit of revolution while if the textile workers had been recognized the industrial conflict in Lawrence costing the mills, property owners and the government thousands of dollars would not have taken place.

BREAK IN WATER MAIN REPAIRED

Tuesday's Supply Came Through Lines of Hose at Milton

PLENTY OF WATER NOW

There were several funny incidents Tuesday as a result of the bursting of the 24-inch water main which supplies the City of Quincy with water. Early in the morning, when it was found impossible to get water, many imagined that the pipes had frozen during the night and hurry calls were sent to the plumber to come and thaw the pipes out. At that time the plumbers did not know anything about the break and armed with torches attempts were made in several places to thaw out the supposed frozen pipes. Failure in all cases to get the desired result soon put them wise. It was not until they had answered several calls however.

Fortunately there were no fires Tuesday and no calls for an extra amount of water. Several of the polishing mills had to shut down for the day for lack of water. The main body of water in the reservoir was held in check as a reserve in case of fire.

It was also found impossible to make connections at Neponset with the Boston mains and a temporary supply was obtained at East Milton. This was accomplished by four lines of hose connecting hydrants on the Quincy side of the break with hydrants on the Milton side. This gave the city four three-inch streams and this supply was sufficient to give the city what water was needed, although the pressure was not as strong as usual.

A large gang of men were at work all day at East Milton repairing the break but owing to the deep frost digging was hard work and the break was not repaired by night. This morning, bright and early, work on the break was again commenced and it was expected that the new pipe would be in position by noon and the usual pressure turned onto the pipes.

EIGHTY-FOURTH BIRTHDAY

Mrs. Eunice Webster White, of 51 Edison street, passed her eighty-fourth birthday, Tuesday very pleasantly at the home of her daughter in Malden. Every time the postman came he brought from his pack post-cards upon post cards until there was a veritable "shower." These with other gifts were happy surprises, and Mrs. White would like to thank her many friends and neighbors, pastors and church members, who so kindly remembered this mile-stone on her journey of life.

—Degrees will be granted this month to about 100 students at Cornell university. Grammar school classes are also receiving their diplomas in February. Snowball fights, coasting, tobogganing, skating carnivals and the like may yet be features of the new class day and commencement season.—Medford Mercury.

SITE FOR NEW ADAMS SCHOOL

Parents' and Teachers' Association Decide on Location

TUESDAY'S MEETING

The meeting of the Parents' and Teachers' Association of the Adams school, which took place in the assembly hall, Tuesday evening, was attended by the largest number ever noticeable at a gathering of the organization. The meeting was presided over by Vice-president Charles A. Hobart, and all details were carried out to complete satisfaction.

Previous to the introduction of the speaker of the evening, a duet entitled "Life's Morning," was rendered by the Misses Angela and Josephine McCarthy, whose work evoked loud applause. This was followed by a solo, given by Miss Angela McCarthy. The name of the song was "Bonnie Sweet Bessie," and Miss McCarthy was the recipient of prolonged applause for her rendition of it.

The chairman then introduced Horace W. Rice, principal of the Woodward Institute, as the speaker for the occasion. The subject of the treatise was "Vocational Training for Girls in Our Public Schools."

Mr. Rice handled his subject in a most able manner and brought out many instructive things in the course of his remarks. The curriculum of studies at the Woodward Institute was fully discussed, and many points conducive to great development and progress were advanced.

At the conclusion of his remarks Mr. Rice was heartily applauded and was accorded a vote of thanks.

On the behalf of the Parents' and Teachers' Association, Miss Eliza C. Sheahan, who has rounded out 45 years of teaching service, was presented with a set of engrossed resolutions, which were set in a beautiful frame. The presentation speech was made by the presiding officer, and was responded to by Mis Sheahan in a most touching manner. Miss Sheahan was also presented with a substantial purse of gold, the gift of her former pupils.

The meeting was then thrown open for general discussion, and the question of a suitable location for the newly proposed Adams school demanded the attention of those present.

Councilman Charles A Ross happened to be numbered among those present and was called upon to express his views and sentiments in the matter. Councilman Ross brought before the body many interesting facts, and all talk on the schoolhouse situation subsided when he had finished speaking.

Councilman Ross is a member of the committe on public buildings of the City Council, and has taken a decided interest in all matters appertaining to that committee since he became a "City Father."

The Ward Three Councilman stated at the outset that the matter had been brought to the attention of the committee, and that the members of it, in conjunction with Chairman John L.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

The old saying "what goes up must come down" does not apply to the price of necessities.

Never mind the cold, somewhere, somebody is editing spring seed catalogues and spring poetry.

Official New York could not undertake to welcome King George with a durbar. But it might show him a corking good time at a chowder party.

The manner in which Andrew Carnegie enjoyed himself at an investigating committee session may encourage other multi-millionaires to accept invitations.

The only way Theodore Roosevelt could convince some of his friends that he does not want a nomination would be to make another hunting trip to Africa.

Autoists frankly admit that good roads would make enough difference in tire expense to warrant generous contribution to highway improvements.

EDUCATION AND EARNING POWER

When we talk of low wages for unskilled workmen have you ever considered what the average college graduate gets after 16 years of study? There's many a graduate of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, the finest technical college in the world, who after completing his four years' course there, goes to work for some big corporation, like a railroad for instance, at less than $9 a week. And it has cost somebody nearly or quite $2000.00 for his Collegiate education after he left the High school! Indeed President Hibben of Princeton estimates the average earning power of a just graduated Master of Arts at his college at $6.00 per week! —Waltham Free Press.

A LOSING MOVEMENT.

Who compose the particular elements among opponents of the parcels post that are back of the movement which is now supplying alleged information of the "thorough failure" of the parcels post system in the United Kingdom? These people need to go ahead cautiously, unless they are deluded with the notion that the great mass of American people will weakly accept any kind of fact distortion, if misrepresentation is in any degree adroit. If these opponents believe this, than they are storing up disappointment.

The parcels post system of the United Kingdom, equally with the system in countries on the Continent, has too long proved its manifold advantages. It can not now be swept aside, as of no account, in a misguided attempt to blind American readers to the marked advantages which the adoption of the system must inevitably diffuse on this side of the Atlantic. What has been accomplished abroad, with so much of benefit to the popular welfare, may be repeated here. Once the system is adopted, and suffered to operate within natural limits in freedom from restrictions which inimical elements would impose people will wonder that so valuable a service, so marked a boon, was so long withheld. If current attacks upon the English system are being engineered with an idea that wobbly congressmen may possibly be influenced to ally themselves with outspoken opponents of the system, the assumption is a fair one that the movement will fail. The parcels post system is bound to come. Congressmen who oppose it will be listed, for one thing, with elements that put the interests of the great express companies above the rights and convenience of the masses. And a distinction of this kind, in these days of revulsion against corporate abuses, is to be regarded as anything but a political asset worth holding.—Salem News.

INTERNOS CLUB DANCING PARTY

"Paul Jones" and Confetti Dance Were Features

BRILLIANT SCENE

Alpha hall has been the scene of many charming dancing parties in its short history, but the first assembly of the Internos club, Tuesday evening, eclipsed all others. It was the initiatory bow of the Internos club, an organization of young ladies who are well-known in this city in social circles. The popularity of the members was attested by the fact that fully three hundred were in attendance.

The hall presented a scene of brilliancy with its artistic display of purple and white decorations. Adornments significant of the Leap Year season were conspicuous. In the centre of the hall, over the dancers, was hung a large, white paper bell. From this was suspended four white streamers, fastened to each corner of the hall. During the feature dance the streamers were released and showers of confetti fell profusely from the bell, onto the dancers. A number of young ladies threw confetti from the balcony at the same time, and for a while the spectacle was an animated one and most attractive.

Banners bearing the incription "I. C." were placed about the hall and it was evident to all that the Internos Club was holding sway throughout the evening.

Another feature that met with decided favor was the "Paul Jones" dance, during which the ladies stood at one end of the hall and the gentlemen at the other. At the signal of the musical director, the gentlemen invaded the camp of the ladies, each one capturing a partner.

Music was furnished by Wilson's orchestra, which opened the assembly by a repertoire of selections of a most enhancing order.

The dance order consisted of fourteen regular numbers and four extras. A short intermission took place at half past ten. Punch was served in the stage room through the evening. Dancing brought a most enjoyable event to a close at midnight.

The matrons were Mrs. Alice Pinel, Mrs. Mabel Keene and Mrs. Emma Pratt and the ushers included Misses Margaret Gardner, Bertha Pearson, Elsie Lawrence Florence Jones, Agnes Souter, Ethel Booth, Christina Booth, Florence Pratt, Aljuline Keene, Annie Pearson, Gladys Pinel and Ruth Dole.

MISS ALETTA LAWRENCE.

Quincy friends of Miss Aletta Lawrence, will be grieved to learn of her death on Feb. 8, at Kingston, New York. DANCING PARTY COLONIAL HALL

Many pretty costumes were seen Tuesday evening at the valentine dancing party held at Colonial hall under the auspices of the Y. F. K's., a young ladies club of West Quincy. The hall was very prettily decorated with pink crepe paper, about which were hung numerous pink hearts and cupids.

Morrissette's orchestra furnished the music and dancing was in order until 12 o'clock at which time a special car left for West Quincy. One of the features of the evening was the moonlight dance.

The young ladies in charge were Miss Annie Mullen, Miss Olive Berry, Miss Lillian Berry, Miss Louise Driscoll, Miss Marion Pineo, Miss Anna Ogel, Miss Louise Curry, Miss Emeline O'Brien, Miss Rita S. Lyons, and Miss Mary Doyle.

HAIR SNIPPER SENTENCED.

Carl L. Mann of Lynn was sentenced Tuesday to the Concord Reformatory by Judge Burke in the Boston police court for snipping the hair of Ida Shanfield on Feb. 5. Mann pleaded guilty and also stated in court that he had snipped hair from the head of Eileen Gallagher of Appleton street, Atlantic in the shopping district, the same day.

Q.—How can we prove to the extremely critical that the people taken out for the Lord's name (Acts xv, 14) are the ones referred to, in the Scriptures, as the "Bride," "the Lamb's Wife," "The New Jerusalem," etc? (H. J. K.)

Answer.—The "extremely critical" are the very ones to recognize the reasonableness of the doctrine of election so positively outlined in this passage. It is the thinking, critical minds that are rejecting the antiquated, obsolete theories of the past, and now are coming to see the truth concerning the Divine purpose. How reasonable, then, to those who view the facts and reason critically, are the Bible teachings relating to the selection of "a people for His name," and that this selection has been in process of development throughout the entire Christian Era! Naturally, the mind would seek further enlightenment as to the identity of this special people, or class. The various passages of Scripture relating to this class would logically fit into place, and it would be recognized that it is the Church of Christ, the Bride, the Lamb's Wife, the "New Jerusalem," etc. And then how reasonable and consistent the teaching that following this election the Heavenly Father, who is all love and compassion, and goodness, will through this glorified Class—Christ and His Church—rebuild the ruins of David, which are fallen down, restore the Jews to their own land—and "after this," invite "all the Gentiles upon whom His name is called"—the world of mankind—to come back into harmony with Himself and receive eternal life and joy and peace. See the verses following, the one cited in the question.

PATRIOTIC EVENING.

In place of their regular meeting Tuesday evening at South Braintree, the members of Antietam Camp, No. 32, S. of V. with S. of V. Auxiliary No. 16 celebrated Lincoln's birthday, having as their guests the members of Post 87, G. A. R. and W. R. C., No. 94.

The meeting was called to order at 8.15 o'clock by Commander Alfred H. Holbrook of Camp 32, who made a short address of welcome saying in effect that all were assembled to observe in a fitting manner the birthdays of those two great Americans, George Washington and Abraham Lincoln. After the singing of America by all, Lincolns address at Gettysburg was read by M. C. Gillette.

The address of the evening was delivered by Rev. John A. Mitchell, pastor of the Braintree Baptist church and a member of the local camp. Mr. Mitchell's words were at once impressive and inspiring and he held the close attention of his hearers by his masterful character studies of the two great statesmen. The two men with such different environments and yet with a common love of country were skilfully pictured by Mr. Mitchell and the speech was certainly an incentive to patriotic living.

A poem concerning the great emancipation was read by Harry Cone of Camp 32 and remarks were listened to from James Guest of Chestertown, Maryland, who is visiting with relatives in Braintree. Mr. Guest is a veteran of the Rebellion and knew President Lincoln and the assassin Booth, as well as Edwin Booth the famous actor.

The singing of the "Star Spangled Banner" a few minutes previously reminded Mr. Guest of a recent visit to Fort McHenry and he described the scene of the famous fight and interesting incidents connected with it. Comrade Pierson of the G. A. R. read anecdotes of Lincoln and sang a solo entitled "Uphill" after which the proceedings were closed by the singing of "Tramp, Tramp." After the meeting a social hour was enjoyed.

CHAMPION OF UNION LABOR

bor movement was mentioned. With glaring headlines the newspapers exagerate the slightest appearance of trouble in labor ranks.

The good of unions is not touched upon and their mistakes are enlarged. The newspapers educate the people to the riotous side of organized labor instead of showing the good it does.

If I thought the advance of organized labor required one case of rioting or the spilling of a single drop of human blood I would quit the union at once and consider I had done a good job in doing so.

The speaker mentioned some of the things for which organized labor stood. Among them were the minimum wage scale, the eight hour work day, just legislation and the abolishment of child labor.

He arraigned the Massachusetts capitalists who, he claimed are responsible for the deplorable conditions in the Southern cotton mills.

In closing the speaker urged a higher standard for foreign immigration and explained the economic program of the American Federation of Labor.

At the lecture's conclusion many questions were put to the speaker, none being difficult enough to phase him.

With the sentiment that Mr. Duncan should be the next president of the American Federation of labor, as he had already been mentioned in one of the current magazines, the club adjourned.

A fine chicken supper preceded the address, the blessing being asked by Rev. Carl G. Horst.

QUINCY ALLIANCE.

There was a large attendance at the meeting of Quincy Alliance in the parlor of First church, Monday afternoon, the president, Mrs. George G. Saville, presiding. The devotional exercises were followed at the request of Miss Flora Underwood by the singing of five of the grand old hymns, Miss Underwood at the piano, and Mrs. Buckingham and Mrs. Marsh leading.

Interesting communications were read from Miss Sophie W. French; Mrs. Charles H. Johnson read a letter from the Helping Hand Branch of the Alliance in Charleston, S. C., which is so unique and witty and so decidedly optimistic, we think everyone should read it.

Greeting:

The awful hurricane which visited our city Aug. 27th severely damaged our beautiful church. The roof was blown off, windows shattered and the ceiling badly discolored by rain. So far we have been able to make only temporary repairs. Tar paper covers our roof and the same cheerless material at our windows shuts out the light of Heaven. Like all Unitarians we are optimistic but we are having to whistle very hard to keep up our courage. The cost of restoring our church will not be less than $2000; a sum which far exceeds at present our unaided grasp, therefore our appeal.

We do not wish to beg, borrow or steal: we have no desire to sell you a gold brick, but we do wish to sell you a cake, a genuine, unadulterated, delicious Lady Baltimore cake, which we will pack, ship and deliver at your door, express prepaid, for the sum of $3.25. Lady Baltimore is of good generous size, made of the best materials, by an expert cake maker, one who alone possesses the secrets of this famous delicacy. Friends, we are not heathens, but we are worshipping in darkness. The more cakes you buy the more light we will have and the drier will be our devoted heads from the rain which persists in South Carolina to fall on the just and the unjust. But it is not our heads, it is the ceiling we wish to save, the most beautiful church interior in the South. Then, too, John the Evangelist who for many years has so benignly looked down upon us from his window back of the chancel, is headless and armless, in fact only his poor feet are left. We wish to restore the Apostle, as well as other windows wrecked by the storm.

We are not heathens, neither are we heretics, nevertheless we believe in Saints and our patron saint is Lady Baltimore. In her lies our hope for a new roof, new windows and a restored house of worship.

Address: MRS. A. H. PITSCH,
Beaufam Street,
Charleston, S. C.

Mrs. Saville introduced the speaker of the afternoon, Mrs. H. S. Cate, of Canton, who said in part: In the reading of Ben Hur, the story which has had such an influence over all, Catholics and Protestants, we have a sublime lesson of the teachings of Christ. Catholic priests have told their people to go to the theatre when the book was dramatised, and Protestants and Protestant ministers from all parts of the country went to see the performance of this wonderful play.

It was said in olden times " to be a Roman was to be a brute," and that spirit of revenge and vengenance which was paramount in the heart of Ben Hur was transformed by Jesus. The rest had joined to kill the Saviour but Ben Hur was not of them.

From that awakening of Ben Hur, and others of his time, has streamed the light of true Christianity down through the ages, broadening now and then narrowing, according to the conception of the churches. Until in the dawn of the 20th century we have proved to our satisfaction that, God is love: that He is infinite: we know that where infinite love is, there is no place for the old conception of eternal punishment. We know that Heaven is all around and about us, and in order to reach Heaven we know it is necessary to overcome the sins of the flesh. We understand somehow the road to Heaven and we know it means crucifixion. We know we must nail our human selfishness to the cross: our malice, our lust, our envy, and jealously, all sinful qualities must be nailed to the cross on our way to Heaven. And just in the degree in which we do this, we are travelling toward the kingdom of God; the Heaven not in the skies but upon earth for which Jesus wrought and prayed.

We know that it is not the immortality, the greatness of Jesus, but rather his meekness and lowliness, his suffering and his ignominious death, that have left their indelible impress on the heart of all mankind, and have made the cross, not the crown, the symbol of the faith he founded.

Mrs. Saville made a motion that a rising vote of thanks be given to Mrs. Cate, after which a social and informal hour was enjoyed. Cocoa and fancy crackers were served. The hostesses being Miss Lucy M. Spear and Mrs. Warren Anderson and the pourers Miss Lucy M. Spear and Miss Mary W. Holden.

QUINCY WOMEN'S CLUB.

For the annual dramatics the Quincy Women's club met Tuesday afternoon in Quincy Music hall, when nearly every seat was used to accommodate.

As usual a short business session was held from half past two until three Mrs. Eben W. Sheppard president in the chair. Reports were given by the secretary and treasurer. The usual reports by committees were omitted that the play might begin promptly. In the business was the reading of a proposed amendment to the by-laws as follows:

Amendment to Article 11, section 7—At the first regular meeting in March, 1912, and every second year thereafter a nominating committee of five shall be appointed in the same manner as the Election Committee, whose duty it shall be to nominate chairmen of departments. These nominees shall be elected at the April business meeting. The other members of the committee shall be chosen by the chairman.

Mrs. Z. S. Arnold read the proposed amendment and for the committee explained the reason for the amendment.

The especial object of the proposed change is to obviate the confusion caused by having both the Officers and Heads of departments elected in the same year.

It is also considered desirable and in most organizations is customary to have a part of the Board hold over so that there may not be an entirely or nearly complete change in the personel of the Board in any one year, and in view of the Clubs becoming incorporated within a year and the consequent necessity of revising the constitution, this change can be made now, without conflicting with that revision.

If this amendment goes through it is intended and earnestly desired that the present heads of committees be re-elected this spring for two years more, thus retaining their services for an extra year.

On motion of Mrs. Walter S. Pinkham it was voted to refer the proposed amendment back to Executive Board for further consideration before bringing it before the club for action.

Mrs. W. W. Whitcher of the Legislative committee is arranging for a class in parliamentary law under the direction of Mrs. Electa Sherman of Boston. A preliminary meeting is to be held at the club house on Tuesday morning Feb. 20 at 10.30 when Mrs. Sherman will be present to meet those interested and give an introductory talk. Mrs. Whitcher hopes there will be a large attendance of club women to meet Mrs. Sherman. Every one interested, whether they wish to join the class or not, is cordially invited to be present at 10.30 Feb. 20 at the club house.

MISSIONARY CIRCLE.

The Universalist Missionary circle held its monthly meeting at the residence of Mrs. Robert R. Reed, 9 Woodward avenue, Monday afternoon with a good number present. The president Mrs. Thomas A. Addison was in the chair and gave all a hearty welcome. Mrs. Clara S. Brown, secretary called the roll to which the members responded by quotations from different authors or passages of scripture containing the word truth, the watchword of the meeting.

Miss Austin, the pastor gave a brief resume of the missionary work concluding with the beautiful poem, "The Truth."

At the close of the exercises a social hour was enjoyed, the hostess, Mrs. Reed, serving tea and coffee, cake, fruit, and fancy crackers. Mrs. Reed was a charming and hospital hostess.

The next meeting will be held with Mrs. Addison, 603 Washington street.

Preparations are being made for a grand open meeting to be held in the Universalist church some time in April. Invitations will be sent to the different circles in Boston, Somerville, Brookline and other suburban towns. Among the speakers will be Rev. George L. Perin, of Brookline, Rev. Arthur Whitney of Plymouth, Rev. Melvin S. Nash of the Universalist Publishing house, Boston and others.

Y. M. C. A. AUXILIARY.

The ladies of the Auxiliary promise many attractions at the Merchants' Carnival, at the Y. M. C. A. Feb. 20-21. Not least among these are the boys' gymnasium exhibit and the Chinese laundry, both of which will especially interest the children.

A tempting menu will be served at the supper each evening, under the able supervision of Mrs. A. H. Gilson, Music for the entertainment is furnished by young men from the Wollaston Methodist and Baptist churches. The tableaux are truly artistic and of sufficient variety to give a most attractive program on both evenings and well worth seeing..

HIGH CAR STEPS.

Several members of the Quincy Women's club were in attendance last week at the hearing before the Railroad Commissioners.

Forty-three club women, representing women's clubs from all parts of Boston, and a number of men appeared at the hearing on the petition brought by the Hyde Park Current Events club, relative to the height of the steps on street cars. Through the president, Mrs. Maria B. Clarke, Hyde Park, the request was made that the steps be not higher than ten inches from the ground.

The chief complaint was against the open cars used in summer, testimony being introduced to show that in many instances the running boards on these measured from twenty-two to twenty-six inches from the ground. Many complaints were also made against the closed cars, particularly the new semi-convertible type.

The chief complaint was made against the Mattapan square service, particularly on cars running to Brockton, and between East Milton and Quincy. It was said that the steps were particularly high here, owing to the condition of the paving, and that many sprained ankles had resulted to people who slipped in getting off the cars.

John Lindall, superintendent of rolling stock for the Boston Elevated Railway Company, E. W. Holst, superintendent of equipment for the Bay State Electric Railway Company, E. P. Shaw, of the Boston & Worcester Company, and C. Q. Richmond, president of the Berkshire Street Railway Company, appeared for their respective lines, and explained the practical difficulties in changing the height of the step.

Members of the Board, after listening to the testimony, decided that the complaints against the high entrance steps on the street railway cars in many instances were justified, and declared they would investigate the situation in other cities and see what steps could be taken to remedy the condition.

CLEAN UP.

The ladies of the Framingham board of trade are not one whit behind the men in their determination that Framingham shall grow in all the essentials which combine to make true greatness. They are doing great work in the refinements which make community life desirable. Their determination to designate and take charge of a spring "clean-up" day in town is admirable. They will endeavor to have all ashes and other refuse gathered together and removed upon a certain day or days as a commencement and then to have such refuse regularly cared for. Possibly the inauguration of the plan is something in which the boy scouts and clubs can co-operate. There can be no doubt of their willingness and efficiency in such a work and it will help to foster good ideas of thrift and cleanliness. Give them a chance. Organize the good work and carry it out by all means—Framingham News.

MISS ESTELLA NEUHAUS.

This gifted artist is a Hungarian by birth, a pupil of Baermann and a favorite of Emil Paur, the distinguished Symphony orchestra director. She is a pianist of remarkable technique, being fully the equal of the foremost male performers, and possessing a power of expression, which very few of these equal. She has great intelligence, a rich imagination and a sense of values unusual.

The program at Mrs. Lawton's Feb. 6, opened with an arrangement by Miss Neuhaus of the First Movement of Schumann's Concerto in A Minor. She gave a sympathetic and illuminating interpretation of this selection. Then followed a Barcarolle by Rubinstein; Arabesue by Debussy and Ballad music by Massenet, played with finesse, elegance, and imagination. The next group took her audience into the charmed atmosphere of Chopin music. The Polonaise in F sharp minor and Andante Spianto was played with such beauty and charm as to provoke the audience with instant and hearty applause. Following this with a Russian Spinning Song by Youferoff which the audience would have liked repeated she closed with Liszt's magnificent Hungarian Rhapsody No. 12. Miss Neuhaus was at her best in this work, her depth of tone, and marvelous skill in passage playing thoroughly charming her hearers. Such an artistic treat is seldom heard in Quincy.

A program of great interest and charm awaits Miss Neuhaus' subscribers at the second recital at Mrs. Laurance Sturtevant's, Tuesday afternoon, Feb. 20.

Through the Swiss Mountains.

At Bevieux (Old Bex), among the Alps, the railroad passes the rocksalt mines, from which the Swiss government procures most of the salt whose sale is a government monopoly, and often sold only by the local postmaster, who deals not only in stamps, but in salt. At this point a toothed rail is brought into play, and the gradient rapidly increases, as the cars pass through woods of walnuts and chestnuts, here an important item of the diet and income of their owners.

Anty Drudge's Sunday Evening Sermon.

Mrs. Housekeeper—"How I dread wash-day! Thinking of Monday drudgery spoils my Sunday evening."

Anty Drudge—"You are foolish, my dear, to dread a thing that can be made a pleasure. Use Fels-Naptha soap and your washing will be so much easier that Monday will no longer be a Sunday night-mare. And you will have much better looking clothes!"

Is this the kind of a wash-day in your home?

Hours of boiling over a hot stove? Hours of rub-drudgery to get out the dirt? Sore hands? Aching bones? A dingy wash when it goes to the line?

Here's the new wash-day:

Fels-Naptha soap in cool or luke-warm water. Dirt dissolved as if by magic. Cheerful disposition. White hands. White clothes.

Fels-Naptha has done more to brighten home life than any other one thing. Think of it! A soap that fairly lifts the dirt for you; that cuts wash-day labor in two.

It saves your hands; protects your health; prolongs the life of the clothes. And it's the best for every kind of household cleaning. Follow the directions on the red and green wrapper.

BODY CLEAR AS GLASS

Dissection Unnecessary as Result of a New Discovery

London, Feb. 14.—The London press is deeply interested in a discovery by a German physician, Professor Spaltzholz, who, by the use of two complicated organic chemicals, makes the human body transparent after death. The Daily Mirror says:

"As a result of this discovery dissection will be unnecessary, as the Spaltzholz process makes not only the whole body, but the bones transparent, so the full mechanism of human life is displayed."

CHILD HATED BY ITS MOTHER

W. O. Souther, Jr. the well-known Cohasset politician, and member of the board of Selectmen was granted a divorce Tuesday at Dedham from his wife, Louise Souther on the grounds of desertion. According to the testimony Mrs. Souther disliked children, and her aversion for them was so strong that she would have nothing to do with her own child, making it necessary for Mr. Souther's mother to care for it. The child was born July 29, 1908 and on Nov. 13, 1908 Mrs. Souther left her home in consequence of the child, never to return.

Entreaties of the husband were of no avail and she refused to return home to the husband and child. They were maried in Boston, Oct.22, 1905.

French Plumes

FRENCH plumes, very slightly curled, and in innumerable varieties of colorings, are in high favor. From 12 to 30 inches in length, they are used in clusters and singly on hats big and little. Black, white, and all the colors, soft or brilliant, are brought into use for them. They all show in many shadings of one color, or cleverly dyed into several colors on the same flue.

Some of the most fascinating ones are made with one ply mounted over another in a contrasting color, and these two over a third. King's blue and brilliant cerise have been in evidence all over the country, with a liberal sprinkling of mustard color and all the gold shades and the natural tones. One could not go amiss in selecting colors.

The day of the narrow plume is vanishing. Every one wants a broad spread of flues. Natural plumes with short flues must be used by the manufacturers for mode pieces known as "ostrich fancies." The process of tying the flues (so much the vogue in willow plumes), has led to many new effects in tied feathers and has come to stay.

Wreaths and pompans, crown covers, bands and fancy upstanding pieces provide an outlet for the use of narrow plumes.

The distinguishing feature in the use of trimmings at present lies in the abundance of one kind of trimming on a shape. Three to six long plumes decorate big picture hats, but do not conceal the lovely lines of the shapes on which they are mounted. Short plumes are used in clusters in which four or five in a group may be confidently looked for on a good model. But their purchase is not extravagance, because good plumes are durable and may be cleaned or dyed. They are therefore useful for many seasons.

BADEN-POWELL DISPLEASED

Says Military Display by Boy Scouts Savors of the Spectacular

Philadelphia, Feb. 14.—General Baden-Powell arrived in this city yesterday and so great was the crush to welcome him that the British leader of the Boy Scouts movement yielded to fatigue soon after he reached his room in the Bellevue-Stratford.

The Englishman showed marked displeasure at the American conception of the movement, and loudly denounced the military display that greeted him upon his arrival.

Indeed he practically snubbed the Boy Scouts who were lined up in full regimental regalia to greet him. He said: "I did not come here to see a lot of boys all dressed up. I came here to see men. I do not like this showy stuff. It savors of the spectacular."

STRIKE WILL INVOLVE 800,000 COAL MINERS

Hope of Preventing British Walkout Is Vanishing

London, Feb. 14.—A conference of the representatives of the whole of the 800,000 coal miners in the United Kingdom, which was held in London yesterday, confirmed the decision reached during the recent ballot to bring about a national stoppage of work in the coal mines on Feb. 29 unless in the meantime the mine owners accept the principle of a minimum wage for all men and boys employed under ground.

Upwards of 40,000 colliers employed in the mines in Derbyshire yesterday handed in their notices to quit work and by Feb. 15 all the men employed in the mines throughout the country will have followed suit.

There is still, however, a considerable body of opinion that the way out of the difficulty will be found before extreme measures are taken.

PREPARING ONIONS.

MANY persons who like onions refrain from eating them because of the disagreeable odor they impart to the breath.

Chewing a little raw parsley after eating the vegetable is said to aid in removing the objectionable scent.

Cooking Onions.

Creamed Onions.—Peel one quart of medium sized white onions, place them in a saucepan and cover with boiling water. Boil till tender, then add one teaspoonful of salt. After boiling them a few minutes longer drain them in a colander.

Make a sauce as follows: Melt one once of butter, to which add half a tablespoonful of flour, stir and cook two minutes, add half pint hot milk, cook and season with white pepper and a sprinkle of salt.

Put the onions in a hot dish and pour the sauce over them.

Stuffed Onions.—The large Spanish onions are delicious when stuffed with sausage meat. After peeling the onions boil them until tender, but not until they break. When done put them in cold water and scoop out the inside. Fill the center with the sausage and put on tin plates or in a small dripping pan. Cover the bottom of the pan with a very little stock or water. Add also a little stock to the sausage.

Let the onions bake till the filling is thoroughly cooked and the onions are a golden brown.

Baste frequently and season with salt and pepper.

If beef stock is not at hand beef extract melted in a little boiling water may take its place.

A Scotch Dish.

Cockie-Leckie Soup.—Cut the white part of six leeks, one stalk of celery and one onion into small strips about an inch long. Put them into a saucepan with a piece of butter the size of an egg. Cook slowly and stir occasionally. Cook for about ten minutes, but do not let it change color. Moisten with two quarts of good chicken broth, and when it comes to a boil skim well. Then add a pint of potatoes cut the size and shape of a dime and one-quarter of a cup of rice. Let the whole boil until tender, and lastly add half of a breast of a cooked fowl cut in small strips like the vegetables. Season with salt and pepper.

FRECKLES

By Gene Stratton-Porter

COPYRIGHT, 1904, BY DOUBLEDAY, PAGE & CO.

SYNOPSIS.

Freckles, a homeless boy, is hired by Boss McLean to guard the expensive timber in the Limberlost from timber thieves.

Freckles does his work faithfully, makes friends with the birds and yearns to know more about nature. He lives with Mr. and Mrs. Duncan.

He resolves to get books and educate himself. He becomes interested in a huge pair of vultures and calls his bird friends his "chickens."

Some of the trees he is guarding are worth $1,000 each. Freckles' books arrive. He receives a call from Wessner.

Wessner attempts to bribe Freckles to betray his trust, and Freckles whips him. McLean overhears them and witnesses the fight.

Freckles' honesty saves a precious tree. He finds the nest of the vultures and is visited by a beautiful young girl.

She calls Freckles McLean's son. Freckles calls her "the angel" and helps the Bird Woman in taking photographs. McLean promises to adopt Freckles.

Freckles and the angel become very friendly. Assisted by the Bird Woman, they drive Wessner and Black Jack, timber thieves, from the Limberlost.

McLean fears more trouble, but Freckles insists upon being the sole guard of the timber. Freckles calls upon the angel's father.

The angel receives him as her equal, and her father is kind. Mrs. Duncan has exciting adventures in the Limberlost.

The Bird Woman and the angel again visit Freckles, and Freckles falls in love with the angel. The angel kisses him.

Freckles is bound and gagged by Black Jack's gang, and the timber thieves start felling a very valuable tree.

Wessner is to kill Freckles after the tree is stolen. The angel makes a daring effort to save Freckles and the tree.

McLean's men, notified by the angel, rush to save Freckles. All the timber thieves except Black Jack are captured.

McLean noticed and spoke of the big black chickens.

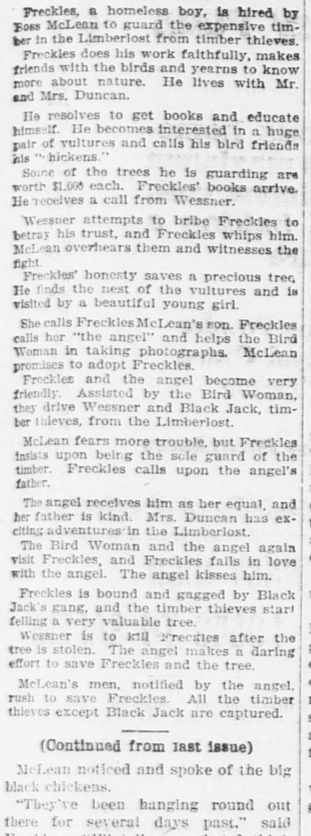

"They've been hanging round out there for several days past," said Freckles. "I'll tell you what I think it means. I think the old rattler has killed something too big for him to swallow, and he's keeping guard and won't let me chickens have it. I'm just sure, from the way the birds have acted out there all summer, that it is the rattler's den. You watch them now. See the way they dip and then rise, frightened like!"

Suddenly McLean turned on him with blanching face.

"Freckles!" he cried.

"You think it's Jack!" shuddered Freckles.

He dropped the otter, caught up his club, and plunged into the swale. Reaching for his revolver, McLean followed. The chickens circled higher at their coming, and the big snake lifted his head and rattled angrily. It sank in sinuous coils at the report of McLean's revolver, and together he and Freckles stood beside Black Jack. His fate was evident and most horrible.

HIS FATE WAS EVIDENT AND MOST HORRIBLE.

"Come," said the boss at last. "We don't dare touch him. We will get a sheet from Mrs. Duncan and tuck over him, to keep these swarms of insects away, and set Hall on guard, while we go for the officers."

Freckles' lips closed resolutely. He deliberately thrust his club under Black Jack's body and, raising him, rested it on his knee. He pulled a long silver pin from the front of the dead man's shirt and sent it spinning out into the swale. Then he gathered up a few crumpled bright flowers and dropped them into the pool far away.

"My soul is sick with the horror of this thing," said McLean as he and Freckles drove toward town. "I can't understand how Jack dared risk creeping through the swale even in desperation. No one knew its dangers better than he. And why did he choose the rankest, muckiest place to cross the swamp?"

"Don't you think, sir, it was because it was on a line with the Limberlost south of the corduroy? The grass was tallest there, and he counted on those willows to screen him. Once he got among them he would have been safe to walk by stooping. If he'd made it past that place he'd been sure to get out."

"Well, I'm as sorry for Jack as I know how to be," said McLean, "but I can't help feeling relieved that our troubles are over with this dreadful punishment for Jack, Wessner safe in jail and warrants out for the others. Jack knew the swamp better than anyone about here. When he found there were two companies trying to lease he wanted to stand in with the one from which he could realize the most. Even then he had trees marked here that he was trying to dispose of. I think his sole intention in forcing me to discharge him from my gang was to come up here and try to steal timber. We had no idea when we took the lease what a gold mine it was."

"That's exactly what Wessner said that first day," said Freckles eagerly. "That 'twas a 'gold mine.' He said he didn't know where the marked trees were, but he knew a man that did, and if I would hold off and let them get the marked ones there were a dozen they could take out in a few days."

"Freckles," cried McLean, "you don't mean a dozen!"

"That's what he said, sir—a dozen. He said they couldn't tell how the grain of all of them would work up, of course, but they were all worth taking out, and five or six were real gold mines. This makes three they've tried, so there must be nine more marked, and several of them for being just fine."

"Well, I wish I knew which they were," said McLean, "so that I could get them out first."

CHAPTER XVIII.

"I HAVE been thinking," said Freckles. "I believe if you will leave one of the guards on the line—say Hall—that I will begin on the swamp at the north end and lay it off in sections and try to hunt out the marked trees. I suppose they are all marked something like that first maple on the line was. Wessner mentioned another good one not so far from that. He said it was best of all. I'd be having the swelled head if I could find that. Of course I don't know a thing about the trees, but I could hunt for the marks. Jack was so good at it he could tell some of them by the mark, but all he wanted to take that we've got on to so far have just had a deep chip cut out rather low down and where the bushes were thick over it. I believe I could be finding some of them."

"Good head!" said McLean. "We will do that. You may begin as soon as you are rested. And about things you came across in the swamp, Freckles, the most trifling little thing that you think the Bird Woman would want, take your wheel and go after her at any time. I'll leave two men on the line, so that you will have one on either side, and you can come and go as you please. Have you stopped to think of all we owe her, my boy?"

"Yis; and the angel—we owe her a lot, too," said Freckles. "I owe her me life and honor. I... nights I'll have to be trying to think how I'm ever to pay her up."

"Well, begin with the small," suggested McLean. "That should be fine."

Freckles told McLean of Mrs. Duncan's desire for a hat like the angel's. He hesitated a little in the telling and kept sharp watch on McLean's face. When he saw the boss' eyes were full of sympathy he loved him anew, for, as ever, McLean was quick to understand. Instead of laughing he said: "I guess you'll have to let me in on that too. You mustn't be selfish, you know. I'll tell you what we'll do. Get it for Christmas. I'll be home then, and we can send a box. You get the hat. I'll add a dress and wrap. You get Duncan a hat and gloves. I'll send him a big overcoat, and we'll put in a lot of little stuff for the babies."

"That would be away too serious for fun," said Freckles. "That would be heavenly."

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Old Negro Employe at National Capitol Succumbs to Old Age

Washington, Feb. 14.—Thomas Brown, a negro laborer in the Capitol, declined to be "fired," died yesterday afternoon of old age.

Brown entered the service of the government in 1865, but more than a decade ago Colonel Bright, then sergeant-at-arms of the senate, sought to discharge him. "Go way from here with all that foolish talk," retorted Brown. "I haven't got time to talk to you. I've got my work to do."

Several senators interceded for Brown and the order of dismissal was withdrawn. The old negro was one of the characters of the Capitol.

MILITIA WILL REMAIN AWHILE

Foss Thinks It Time Lawrence Should Help Itself

AUTHORITIES ARE SPINELESS

Opinion of Adjutant General Expressed In Emphatic Manner—Mayor Admits Inability to Cope With Situation Which Has Arisen—Thinks Strike Beginning of General Wage War—Federation of Labor Taking Steps Toward Settlement of Trouble—Hearing of Ettor and Giovannitti Not Completed

Lawrence, Mass., Feb. 14.—Governor Foss is not satisfied with the manner in which the city officials of Lawrence are handling the strike situation. He told the committee of city officials, headed by Mayor Scanlon, which called upon him yesterday, that the city must show some disposition to help itself, and that he was forced to believe from the reports he had received that this was not the case.

It was decided that the militia would remain in Lawrence for some time, but if possible part of the troops will be withdrawn and the city authorities will be given an opportunity to demonstrate their ability in assisting the militia to protect lives and property.

Adjutant General Pearson will come to Lawrence today, and go over the situation with the civic authorities.

After the conference last evening he stated that in his opinion it was about time that the city officials showed some evidence of a desire to help themselves. "The city authorities are absolutely spineless and rely altogether on the militia to control the situation," said Pearson.

Mayor Scanlon said after the conference: "There isn't a chance in the world, that I can see, to end this strike. It really isn't a strike. It is an incipient revolution. It is the beginning of a wage war, which is to spread throughout the country.

"The city is not able to cope with the situation that has arisen. The mill men will never consent to arbitrate with the I. W. W. and the members of this organization haven't the remotest intention of attempting to settle the strike."

The American Federation of Labor will take its first decisive step today toward effecting a settlement of the strike.

After nearly two weeks of careful preparation by an operatives' committee of higher wage schedules, under auspices of the Central Labor union, consent has been secured from each mill agent for a conference with three of his own employes to consider these demands.

Arrangement of the schedules has been such that the bill which will be presented to each agent affects only the workers in his manufactory.

That the American Federation will make an effort to organize the textile workers immediately, if a settlement is reached, was announced by James R. Menzie, treasurer of the Central Labor union.

Leaders of the Industrial Workers of the World, who have directed the strike since it started just a month ago yesterday, decry the action of the American Federation and declare that they do not take seriously the possibility of its securing a satisfactory adjustment.

It is declared by mill agents there is a decided increase in the number of operatives at work over Monday. Many assert that more than 50 percent have returned, but this is denied by both I. W. W. and C. L. U. leaders.

A number of minor disturbances occurred during the day, a clash between two operatives in the Atlantic mills in the morning resulting in a rumor of a riot.

The circumstances surrounding the fatal shooting of Anna Lopizzo during the riot on Jan. 29 were described by various witnesses yesterday at the continued hearing of the cases of Joseph J. Ettor and his lieutenant, Arturo Giovannitti, charged with being accessories before the fact to the woman's murder.

The shot which killed the Lopizzo woman was intended for Police Officer Benoit, according to the opinion of the witnesses, who testified that the man fired from behind Benoit. The officer himself took the stand and told of hearing something, apparently a bullet, whiz past his head.

Charges of Bribery

Gas Kills Two Men

Holyoke, Mass., Feb. 14.—Gas, which escaped from a fixture accidentally left open in their room in a lodging house, caused the death of Thomas Wyman and Michael Monahan.

SEIZE DIAMOND NECKLACE

Jack Johnson's Home Is Raided by Secret Service Men

Chicago, Feb. 14.—Secret service agents raided the home of the heavyweight champion, Jack Johnson, here and seized a $5000 diamond necklace which it was charged had been smuggled into this country by the pugilist.

According to the government, Johnson tried to effect a settlement by offering to pay $1000, but this was refused. The negro will have to pay about $12,000 to redeem the stones. No criminal charge was filed.

Perry Heath's Conclusions

Washington, Feb. 14. — Perry Heath, just back from a western business trip covering twenty states, told President Taft that business was halting because of a feeling of uncertainty as to what congress or the president might do. He added that he found much misunderstanding of the administration and some misrepresentation of its attitude.

NO KNOWN MOTIVE

Farmer Slain by Granddaughter's Husband, Who Kills Himself

Plainfield, Mass., Feb. 14.—Blood spots on a load of slabs which a horse belonging to B. H. Gould, a local farmer, was drawing through the town without a driver last night, gave the first clue to the murder of the animal's owner and the suicide of the supposed slayer, Clarence Terrill.

The bodies of the two men were found on the shore of Packad's pond, two miles from the town. Clasped in Terrill's hands was a double-barrelled shotgun, both barrels of which had been discharged.

Gould, who was 63 years old, and Terrill, about 30 and the husband of Gould's granddaughter, left their home to draw slabs from Packard's pond. Nothing further was seen of them until the bodies were found.

No reason for the shooting can be assigned. The men lived in the same house and always had been the best of friends.

SUICIDE NOTE IS DISCREDITED

Belief That Shaw Wrote It to Cover His Trail In Flight

PERHAPS BOUND FOR EUROPE

Defalcations of Shoe Manufacturer Estimated at Between $50,000 and $75,000—Always Had Entire Charge of Books and Credits of Corporation —Unlimited Power In All Financial Matters Delegated by Partner

Freeport, Me., Feb. 14.—Is A. W. Shaw, former head of the Shaw shoe manufactory of Freeport, dead? Has he drowned himself in mid-ocean as he said he would do? Or is he perhaps alive and well, nearing Europe on some small tramp steamer, and ready to sink out of sight, and by his disappearance create belief in his death among those he left behind?

These are the questions before Freeport authorities, and before the creditors of the concern, which is a loser by an amount estimated between $50,000 and $75,000, through the defalcations of the former president.

Friends and acquaintances in Freeport express the opinion that Shaw is not temperamentally a man to commit suicide. At te same time it is suggested that his statement of intended suicide might be a ruse to assure himself of safety from pursuit.

A letter given out by J. W. Amick, treasurer of the company, asserts that Shaw misused the funds of his company to speculate in the stock market. The letter, which is said to have been sent by Shaw from Boston, says that the shoe manufacturer contemplated suicide by jumping from a ship in mid-ocean.

Shaw left a wife and four daughters at his home at Freeport. Two of the daughters are married, Mrs. John B. Randall of Freeport and Mrs. Charles McGunigle of Pawtucket, R. I.

A. Shaw & Co. was founded in 1886, Amick entering the firm in 1890. They were incorporated two years ago. Shaw always had entire charge of the books and credits of the corporation and had power of attorney, vesting him with the right to sign checks and papers of all kinds and the negotiating of all loans. Amick had charge of all details and factory management.

Having implicit confidence in Shaw's honesty and loyalty to the business, Amick was content to delegate to him this unlimited power in all financial matters. The company has a weekly payroll of $3500, and owns a plant with a floor space of 50,000 square feet, and a capacity of 1800 pairs of shoes daily.

Democratic Bill to Increase Tariff on Chemicals Is Prepared

Washington, Feb. 14.—The Democratic chemical traiff bill, made public by the ways and means committee of the house, is expected to increase the government's revenues by $3,530,840 over those of the present fiscal year, although the reduction of ad valorem duties proposed is about 31 percent.

Principally, the measure increases duties on perfumes, fancy soaps and other luxuries, and lowers the duties on drugs and materials in common use.

The Democrats will caucus on the measure today and it probably will be introduced in the house on Saturday.

The letter is understood to ask Roosevelt if he would accept the nomination for president and is reported to have been brought to New York by former United States District Attorney Simms of Chicago.

WOMEN'S CLUB DRAMATICS

lines and played up well to the heroine as played by Mrs. Herbert J. Gurney.

In the role of the capricious Juliana Mrs. Gurney had a difficult part. The high strung haughty young beauty whose father and sister had no control over her could not be expected to submit gracefully to a husband who turned out to be a peasant instead of a duke. The part called for much action and clever acting. Mrs. Gurney interpreted the quick tempered girl most cleverly. Just a little facial expression, a shrug or motion giving vent to the turbulent thoughts within. The part was well sustained throughout, from the quick tempered bride with the shrewdish tongue to the charming lovable woman and wife.

The stars Mrs. Seavey and Mrs. Gurney received frequent encores of appreciation.

Mrs. George L. Badger as Count Montalban the Duke's loyal friend, was the bashful but successful lover, played, the part lightly and understandingly. In voice, figure and acting Mrs. Badger was good and carried the part well, as did Mrs. George Flemming as Volante with whom he was in love. She was lively without the shrewdness of tongue of her sister Juliana, and her wooing was slower. Mrs. Fleming was most satisfactory and made the most of the part.

Mrs. Wilson Marsh as Balthazar, the artist and father of Juliana and Volante, bore well the trial of bringing up two attractive daughters and rounded out the part, understandingly.

Mrs. Frank Emery gave a good characterization of Jaquez who impersonated the Duke in his absence on his honeymoon.

Mrs. Jesse I. Litchfield, Mrs. Edward Miller, Mrs. William Wellington as servants and tenants had small parts but were very good.

Mrs. George H. Brown, Mrs. John O. Short, Mrs. Harry McDonough and Miss Ruth Keating, although having no speaking parts brought good acting to their parts and helped much in winding out the whole.

The action of the play was a little slow until the scene on the green outside the cottage. This was prettily set. The dancing of Virginia reel made a decided hit, the applause being so urgent a repition was given.

The curtain went down on the last scene at the Duke's palace with every one reconciled and happy. Several bouquets were passed over the footlights, one of which, a bunch of tulips, presented to Mrs. Gurney bore an interesting message from Mrs. Edward Russell for it read " From the Juliana of forty years ago."

The Honeymoon was last played in Quincy forty years ago and at that time Mrs. Russell played the part of the heroine

Between the acts there was music by a pianist and violinist and members of the Exchange department of the club sold home-made candy.

The ushers were members of the Reception committee of the club Mrs. Walter S. Pinkham, Mrs. Clarence Burgin, Mrs. Albert E. Avery, Mrs. Herbert H. Albee, Mrs. Alfred P. Thompson, Mrs. Charles R. Safford and Miss Margaret L. Thomas.

It was one of the most successful afternoon's of the club.

SPORTING "DOPE"

By B. A.

Don't Knock, Just Boost.—B. A.

There was much comment last week because Quincy High had suffered two setbacks, and it was feared that a long list of defeats would be administered to Captain Chapman's aggregation. But the ability of the Granite City players was demonstrated Friday when they took the measure of the Weymouth High team.

Last week the local boys played three games, which accounts in a measure for their not winning. For a player to participate in three games within a week is a strenuous task, especially when conclusions are being tried with such teams as Franklin high and Reading high, two of the fastest to be found in interscholastic ranks. Then too it is rather difficult for a team that has been governed in its playing by high school rules, to accustom itself to college rules, as was the case in the Franklin high at Franklin. As it was, the local boys only lost by small margins, and are still laying claim to the championship honors of the state.

To date, Quincy high has played eleven games and lost but two. No other high school team has a better record and such being the case, Coach Staff will make his players strive harder than ever to bring the laurels home to Quincy.

The management is endeavoring to secure a game with Oliver Ames on Friday to be played in the local gymnasium. It is hoped the game will come off, for it will prove an exceptionally fine drawing card. Quincy has already made Oliver Ames high taste the spoils of defeat, and now that the rivalry between the two teams has reached the acone of its intensity, a struggle of a high class order is sure to be in evidence.

It is to be regretted that Rolan Estey has severed his connection as manager of the High school basketball team. A finer schedule of games could not have been arranged nor could a manager have done more for his team than Estey, who worked tirelessly in an effort to provide Quincy high with a basketball team of the top notch class, and at the same time furnished local admirers of the game with a series of contests that have proven to be the best ever witnessed on the local court.

An now comes the announcement that the Cathedral Y. M. C. A. contingency has fallen away from the Greater Boston A. A. A. U. basket ball league. Quincy A. A. was scheduled to play the aforementioned, this evening in the Boston college gymnasium and the followers of both teams were awaiting a warm contest.

The next game for Quincy A. A. will be played this evening at the West End with St. Joseph A. A. The fact that the Cathedral team has dropped from the league is all the more deplorable, for the next home game for the local team was scheduled to play with Magee's quintet in St. Mary's hall Thursday evening.

This leaves Quincy A. A. without a home game this week. Such being the case it is a great disappointment to local fans who have been assemblying in large numbers every week, at West Quincy to aid the local boys in their efforts to cary off the honors. It is hoped Manager Flynn will be successful in arranging a game for Thursday, in order that the usual crowd of basketball lovers may have its anxiety to view a gruelling struggle appeased.

SITE FOR ADAMS SCHOOL

Miller of the School Board, paid visits last Friday to all the sites proposed for the erection of the new Adams school. He said that the able advice of Chairman Miller had been carefully weighed and that a thorough survey of all three lots, namely on Pearl street, and Madison avenue, had been made.

He dwelt at length on the inadvisability of having a new scoholhouse erected on the Madison avenue lot, a location which seemed favorable to a large number of the members of the association.

Councilman Ross brought out the fact that the lot was only 200 feet wide, and that a school, covering 180 feet of this area, would present an invironment wholly inadequate for proper educational developments.

In this way there would be an overlapping, which would in all events prove most disadvantageous. Then, too, the Councilman added that considerable filling would be required, which would entail an expenditure of thousands of dollars.

Councilman Ross then went on to present his phase of the situation and incidentally to put forth the benefits that would accrue in the event of a schoolhouse being built on the opposite side of the street, where there was a greater elevation, and where, too, the means and requisites for a schoolhouse site were ideal.

Mr. Ross took occasion to score those who had sought to usurp the situation by a recourse to political tactics, and added that it would be better for the members of the association to allow such idiosyncrasy to pass unnoticed.

An exposition of the suitable topography of the lot between Madison avenue and Phipps street was then presented and Mr. Ross stated that he hoped the opinion of those present would vie and concur with that entertained by the members of the building committee.

He said that a unanimous agreement to accept the lot between Madison avenue and Phipps street, would mean the presentation of a petition calling for an appropriation for the same, would be made at the next meeting, whereas failure to reach agreement, would mean a public hearing, and also result in various other conditions that would tend to retard the erection of the new schoolhouse.

The sentiments of Councilman Ross were heartily endorsed and he was the recipient of many congratulations for his admirable suggestions. His advice was adopted, and the course which he outlined will be pursued.

Chairman Miller was called upon and gave a short resume of the situation, coinciding in his views with all that had been expressed by Councilman Ross.

"Beautiful Night" was then rendered by the Misses McCarthy, and a solo, "Sweetest Flower," rendered by Miss Josephine McCarthy, called for repeated applause.

Refreshments were served by the hospitality committee, consisting of Miss Eliza Dolan of grade three and Mrs. Fred Goodhue, Mrs. James Marr, Mrs. Richard Bishop and Mrs. C. Tallahsen. The meeting was most interesting and was pronounced the best ever held by the association.

Looking Upward.

(In 1999)—"Marie, bring out the peroambulator, and take baby up for an airing."—Judge.

CUILTY OF SHOPLIFTING

Doctor Says He Couldn't Be Honest After Release From Prison

Boston, Feb. 14.—On a charge of stealing from a Boston department store, Dr. William H. Wilson of Worcester was sentenced to a month in Charles street jail. He admitted his guilt, but appealed from the sentence.

Wilson, who maintains offices in Worcester, attracted attention in 1907, when he was arrested and three wagon loads of stolen property were taken from his offices in Boston. He served a prison term for these theits, and the police say he is a confirmed shoplifter.

He told the court that he had tried to be honest, but had found it impossible to build up a practice after his release from prison. He is a member of the class of 1903 of the Boston college of physicians and surgeons.

Town River Yacht Club Hosts at Annual Ladies' Night

VALENTINE DECORATIONS

Town River Yacht club observed its annual ladies' night, Wednesday evening at the club house on Edison park. The affair was one of the most successfull in every way that the club has ever held. The club house was gayly decorated in true Valentine fashion and together with yachting emblems, presented a very picturesque appearance.

The early part of the evening was taken up with a musical program and all the numbers being well rendered received much applause. Following the musical program, a reception was held at which time refreshments were served. Enclosed in the folds of each napkin were pretty valentines. Half pound boxes of chocalates were given to all present as favors with the compliments of the T. R. Y. C. E. P. Barrows acted as toastmaster. The program was as follows:

TREE MADE PRETTY SIGHT

The Ladies' Benevolent society met in the parlor of Memorial church, Wednesday afternoon. After the business was transacted the members were surprised to learn that they were to participate in a Valentine party. It did not need any announcement, for hearts and valentines were numerous, a tree having been trimmed with the latter, which was a very pretty sight.

The entertainment was in charge of Mrs. Lyndon Gurney, and the following program was rendered with much credit and greted with applause and appreciation:—

Violin solo, Miss Emma Walker, accompanied by Miss Annie Harding; reading, " The Settler's Story" by Will Carleton, Mrs. F. A. Bartlett; and in response to an encore, " The Little Torment;" song, "Voices of the Woods." Miss Annie Harding; and as an encore "Four Little Clouds," accompanied by Mrs. Harry Wells; and violin solo, Miss Emma Walker.

Dainty refreshments were served, Mrs. James Geekie having charge. Mrs. B. F. Thomas poured and Mrs. Lyndon Gurney and Mrs. MacKenzie McLeod assisted in the serving. Everything served was suggestive of the occasion, sandwiches and cakes being heart shaped, and the caps and aprons of the waitresses were adorned with hearts.

VALENTINE DECORATIONS

One of the prettiest of the many valentine parties held Wednesday evening, was that given by Miss Lillian Lindberg of Elm street, to twenty-five of her young lady friends. The cards bidding the guests to the party contained an original verse, and in a way prepared them for what was in store when they arrived. The decorations of her home were on an elaborate scale, of the valentine variety, chief of which was a tree from which was suspended twenty-five of what might be called fortune hearts. That is, the condition of the heart was supposed to represent that of the sweetheart of the young lady who received it.

Then there was a strictly valentine lunch, and as each guest assumed her seat at the table, she was confronted with a little red heart, on the back of which was a valentine sentiment, in original verse, each of which was written especially for the recipient, and the reading of these created no end of amusement. Everything was carried out in a strictly original style and was therefore all the more enjoyable.

MOOSE HEAD IS DEDICATED

The dedication of the Moose head, recently presented by Napoleon Martell, was the principal feature at the meeting of the members of the local lodge of the Order of Moose, held on Wednesday evening, in Faxon hall. The meeting was attended by a large number and the reports of the various officers showed the lodge to be in a most flourishing condition.

Mr. Martell, while hunting in Maine some time ago shot the Moose, whose head now appears handsomely mounted on one of the walls of the meeting place. It is highly treasured by the members, and will be kept as an emblem for the local lodge. A number of candidates were initiated at the meeting and plans were discussed bearing on the new clubhouse that is to be erected in the near future.

OVER ONE THOUSAND AT PARISH REUNION

Parochial School Hall the Scene of First Reunion in Ten Years of St. John's Parish

Program Includes Welcome Address by the Pastor, Rev. John J. Coan, Concert, Dancing and Refreshments

ST. JOHN'S CATHOLIC CHURCH, QUINCY, MASS.
Rev. JOHN J. COAN, Pastor.

For the first time in ten years, the parishioners of the church of St. John the Baptist were afforded an opportunity on Wednesday evening to meet one another and renew acquaintances. That it was a happy occasion and a pronounced success was attested by the fact that over a thousand people assembled for the reunion at St. John's school building, Phipps street. The spacious halls were crowded throughout the evening. The assembly hall was taxed to overflowing, as was the school building which presented the liveliest appearance in its history. All details were carried out to complete satisfaction of the energetic committee.

The affair opened in the school hall at eight o'clock with an address of welcome by the pastor Rev. John J. Coan, followed by a concert of a highly entertaining order, furnished by professional talent, the opening number being by James C. Grant, the well-known minstrel singer who rendered two solos that called for prolonged aplause. He was followed by Miss Celina Beliveau, who was also given a hearty ovation for her exquisite renditions.

Fred McDonald and Andrew Dinegan performed in their usual brilliant style and their work likewise evoked much applause. A recitation by Daniel Ring was next in order and proved a decided hit. Through the courtesy of Thomas Murray, manager of the Orpheum theatre, who also entertained with his fine tenor voice, the quartet, performing at the theatre this week, rendered a number of selections that elicited repeated applause.

Dancing commenced at 9 o'clock and terminated at an early hour in the morning, with a short intermission intervening at eleven o'clock.

Music for the dancing was by Provost's orchestra, which was forced to respond to many encores as the different tunes were sounded for the light fantastic. The dance order comprised eighteen regular numbers and four extras. A large number of devotees indulged in the terpsichorean art until the affair was brought to a close.

The floor was in charge of John W. Walsh. The assistant floor directors were: Frank Avery, William Lynch, John Heffernan, James M. Cantfill, Edward P. Histen, Raymond Brown, John Heaney, Leo P. Noonon, R. T. Foye, and Mathew Fay.

The following acted in the capacity of aids:— John J. Reardon, Thos. Dunphy, Raymond Coyle, Edward Larkin, Edward Barrett, M. T. Sullivan, John Lynch, Wm. T. Donovan, Frank J. Duffy, John Lyons, George Fallon, Wm. Carey, Timothy O'Connell, James Neary, Joseph Kennedy, Dennis Stone, M. J. L. Kennedy, Daniel Donovan, Thomas Curtin, Joseph Dunleavy, Waldo Galligan, David Warner, Daniel Sullivan, Wm. Houston, Alex. McLaughlin and Henry Talbot.

During the early part of the evening, whist was played in the corridor beneath the dance hall. In all, fifty tables were in play. The scorers were Misses Margaret Bruton, Philomena Gallagher, Gertrude Driscoll, Pauline Brogan and Elizabeth Osborne. Prizes were awarded Mrs. John Starr, who was given a handsomely framed picture of His Eminence Cardinal O'Connell; Miss Annie Cahill, bon bon dish; Timothy O'Connell, fancy dish; John F. Bruton, berry dish; Mrs. William Stark, soap ladle, and Mrs. M. E. Cook, berry spoon.

The whist was in charge of a committee comprised of H. T. Gallagher, Chairman, M. A. Cook, J. W. MacAnarney, William T. Donovan and R. E. Foye.

In the lower corridor, the "old timers" were afforded great attraction for in this section of the building, step and jig dancing held sway the greater part of the evening and met with exceptional favor. The music for these dancers was furnished by Joyce's orchestra, and the feature proved a decided hit.

In the basement, refreshments were served, consisting of ice cream, coffee, cake and sandwiches. Thus it could be readily seen that there was nod ull or idle moment throughout the entire celebration.

The refreshment committee was Mrs. J. J. Cunniff, chairlady, Mrs. D. McCormick, Mrs. H. T. Gallagher, Miss Mary Harkins, Mrs. William Sullivan, Mrs. Edward J. Curtin, Miss Margaret Gallagher, Joseph Dunleary, and Miss Mary A. Keefe. Mrs. John F. Bruton, Mrs. William De Coste, Mrs. Annie Sulilvan, Mrs. Robert T. Foye, Mrs. Herbert Lund, Mrs. Henry Osborne, Mrs. John Beliveau, Mrs. Daniel Chisolm and Mrs. Daniel J. Hartrey.

Many former parishioners were in attendance, while Rev. John J. Coan and Rev. Patrick J. Scannell, and also a number of visiting priests graced the occasion with their presence.

The reception committee included: Rev. John J. Coan, Chairman, John Harkins, John H. Dinegan, Thomas H. McDonnell, John H. Bruton, Thomas H. Ferguson, Henry McGrath, Peter McConarty, John A. Costello, Thomas McDonald, Joseph L. Heaney, James Kelly, Edward Lennon, Andrew Mischler, David Crotty, John Guerin. Michael Burns, John Avery, Patrick W. Driscoll, Timothy J. Deasy, John A. Mahoney, Philip Cook, Eugene Connor, B. Duran, Wm. Thompson, Dennis Connelly, James Tate, William Thompson, Michael Sweeney, John Lyons, James Gilcoine, William Mullane, Patrick Ward, James Govern, Joseph D. Griffin, Harry Gallagher, Peter J. Cahill, Thomas McGrath, John Mundy, Anthony Sweeney, Thos. Connelly, James Brogan, Peter Burns, Nicholas LeCount, Edward Powers, Thomas Cotter, Timothy Ford, Cornelius Moynihan, Frank McCormick.

A general committee of 400 parishioners, headed by Patrick W. Driscoll, as chairman, and Miss Mary E. Costello as secretary, had been actively engaged in preparation of the affair and much of the success attained must be credited to the work exhibited. The re-union was without doubt the best ever held by the parishioners of the church and when the gathering dispersed, a function of unparalled nature had been brought to a close.

—A new and eminently practical use for the flying machine has been found in California. A party of bandits, escaped from a sheriff, took refuge in the mountains, where pursuit with horses or automobiles was out of the question. Four aviators offered their services to search for the fugitives and were sworn in as special deputies for the purpose. The reports do not state whether or not the aviators captured their men, but it is presumed that the undertaking was successful. It looks as though the rapid development of the automobile for various practical purposes is likely to be duplicated in the case of this latest production of modern invention.—Milford Gazette.

SURPRISED BY SLEIGH PARTY

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas P. Jones of 44 Elm street were pleasantly surprised Wednesday evening by a party of thirty-five of their young friends from Hyde Park who arrived in a large boat sleigh, driven by the owner, R. Ward, a brother of Mrs. Jones. The approach of the surprisers was made known by the blowing of horns, the ringing of bells and the beating of drums, making a din which starteled the quiet neighborhood. Mr. Jones, who is one of the popular salesmen at the furniture store of W. G. Shaw, where he has been for the past five years, extended a cordial welcome to his guests who proceeded to enjoy themselves. Refreshments were servd during the evening and there was singing by a quartet with chorus by the party, and numerous piano selections. It was early morning when the party started on their homeward trip singing "We are a happy bunch."

Y. M. C. A. NOTES

Wirt W. Barnitz of Hanover, Pa., a well-known author, contributor to Lippincott's, Munsey's, Harper's Weekly and other well-known publications and a lecturer of note spoke to the members of the Y. M. Mr. Barnitz explained the uses of a manifold instrument used by detectives, which could serve as spy glass, opera glasses, sextant, revolver, measuring rod, etc., after which he gave a brief resume of the short story and then read one written by himself which appeared in Lippincott's a short time ago. The story dealt with the Pennsylvania Dutch people with whose life Mr. Barnitz is very familiar.

PARTY GIVEN FOR CHILDREN

Sunday School Children Have Grand Time at Wollaston

ENTERTAINMENT

One of the most pleasant gatherings were given for the Wollaston Unitarian Sunday school, took place Wednesday evening when a party was held for children of all ages in the Sunday school.

The program was in several portions and included games, stories, fancy dancing, a supper, dancing and a general good time. The affair was held under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Alliance.

The party opened in the afternoon at 3 o'clock when the Kindergarten class and the Cradle Roll babies were entertained by Miss Evelyn Cummings, assisted by Miss Gertrude Jones and Miss Mildred Polk.

The children were amused with games of pigeon house, valentine skipping games and others of equal interest. Following a collation of ice cream and fancy cakes the children adjourned to make room for the younger classes in the school.

These came at 5 o'clock and entered heartily into the games provided for them. Stories by Mrs. Herbert J. Gurney and Miss Marjorie Fay were read to the pleasure of the children.

Those present enjoyed a treat in the fancy dancing of Miss Helen L. Brunelle of Newton, who contributed three dances which were well received. These included the rag doll, the jumping jack and wooden doll dances.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

The great Justice Harlan left little money but very rich memories.

February cannot possibly be worse than January, having only twenty-nine days in which to perform.

Funny about the weather bureau—it's always hotter than it says it is, and always colder.

An Indiana man has been sent to jail for spanking his 16-year old wife. He should have let her mother do it.

Fromt he way Marse Henry Watterson lays about him, we judge that he wants to disclaim the reproach of being an innocent bystander as quickly as possible.

There is nothing to indicate, if Thomas Ryan walked up to Tammany hall with a campaign contribution, that they would throw the money indignantly into New York harbor.

While the National Congress of Mothers was adopting the slogan "We want better babies," Dad was doing his best to accomplish that end by walking the sleeping room floor with the youngster.

HOBBLE SKIRT AND CAR STEPS

A thrill of emotion will pass through the femine world, on learning that women about Boston have appealed to the Massachusetts Railroad Commission for lower car steps.

The public service corporations will feel aggrieved if they must issue new stocks and bonds in order to adjust their vehicles to the present style of women's skirts.

Therei s a tendency among railroad people, however, to overestimate the agility of the travelling public. To a man who spent his youth running over the tops of swiftly moving freight cars, and riding on engine cow catchers, a step of eighteen inches to two feet looks too trifling for any human being to consider.

The railroads might as well make up their minds that woman is queen over her own clothes, and all government, institutions, time tables, and rolling stock must conform to her convenience. Besides, there are other people who don't care for high car steps. If you are a travelling salesman, and have lugged a couple of heavy packing cases all over town and turn up breathless at the station, itd oes not make you feel any better to have to climb up on a car-step with your impedimenta as if you were mounting on horse back.

GUARANTEED GOODS.

One of the sophistries by which people excuse the habit of buying outside of their home community, is that such goods can be had at a lower price.

Stop and think a moment, however, of the cost of the pains which the home store takes to please the home public, which is essentially a guarantee of the value of goods.

When you have any real reason for feeling that goods are not what they were represented to be, it is generally customary for home stores to take the article back and give you your money or at least a credit.

It has sometimes happened in our personal experience that some article would prove disappointing, and we would take it back to our home merchant and ask him whether the trouble was in the goods, or because we did not know how to handle them. We have had home merchants offer to take back the things without question, or the extensive correspondence needed to do the business by mail, will probably be much more than any saving that could have been made on the original purchase price. Hence the distant store is largely saved this expense.

The practice by which the home merchant practically guarantees the value of his goods is a great safeguard to the buyer. But it costs money to the merchant, and is a part of the expense of his business.

The cost is not so much in the actual value of goods returned, and the time it takes to arrange these matters satisfactorily. The principal difference comes when the merchant buys his goods. He knows that hem ust have good quality, that will keep his customers satisfied, and never in the world can you get good goods without paying good prices. Were he less close to his customers in a position where he would not often be compelled to back up his wares, he could cut prices much below their present level. But does it pay to buy goods where the seller does not expect to be called on to back up their value?

WHO IS RESPONSIBLE?

It would be an interesting study in the problem of wages to inquire how much responsibility for a low wage may be attributed directly to the determination of so many people who buy whatever they have at the lowest possible price. Thousands of people are continually on the watch for "bargains," utterly oblivious to the fact that especially low prices can only be obtained through the misfortune of some one, or a crowding down of the price paid the producer. Those who buy goods in some different line from the one they themselves are in seem to care very little whether the employee by whose hand the goods were wrought gets a fair wage or not; and so the crowding goes on all along the line.—Barre Vt. Times.

SURPRISE PARTY.

A surprise birthday party was tendered Walter Mattie at his home on Penns hill by his friends Tuesday evening.

After presenting Walter with a handsome gold watch from his father, a gold fob from members of the Manet Social club of which he is a member, and many other gifts from relatives and friends, supper was served. The dining room was prettily decorated. There was a birthday cake with 21 lighted candles representing his age.

Music and dancing was enjoyed until a late hour, Miss Rose DeLorie of Dorchester being the pianist. Violin and graphophone music was also enjoyed and the evening spent in a most enjoyable manner.

Among those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Mattie, Mr. and Mrs. James Mattie, Mr. and Mrs. John DeCoste, Misses Rose DeLorie, Bessie Mattie, Margaret Sullivan, Elizabeth McVay, Mary Mattie, Cecilia Mahon, Mary McCarthy, Katherine McVay, Agnes McCarthy, Eliza Levangie, Margaret Mahon, Alice Mattie, Emily Landry, Blanche Picard, Frances McCarthy, Messrs Everett Boswick, Bernard McCarthy, John Bennett, Joe Levangie, Walter Landry, William Burke, and members of the Manet Social club and friends.

VALENTINE PARTY.

A valentine dance was held at the Wollaston Yacht club Wednesday evening, about fifty couple attending. It was an invitation party given by Mrs. Wiliam M. Chase and the Roundabout Whist club. Music was furnished by the Parkman orchestra.

The invitations were in the form of a heart and were worn by the dancers during the evening. The hall was prettily decorated with large hearts, and a very enjoyable evening was spent.

C. A. Franklin was floor director assisted by Frank D. Stiles.

S ONLY "SWEET SIXTEEN"

Girl In Texas Town Makes Her Fourth Matrimonial Venture

Fort Worth, Tex., Feb. 15.—Three times married and divorced, Mrs. A. M. Lewis, aged 16 years and 7 months, yesterday took out a leap year license and married for the fourth time, and husband number four had been husband number two.

The girl was married first just before she was 15 years old to George Anderson. Originally she was Miss Annie Dooley. She lived happily with Anderson for three months, then she obtained a divorce and was married to D. H. Glass. Glass, she said, would not work, so she obtained another divorce. Then A. M. Lewis, a railroad clerk, heard her musical voice over the telephone, and after a week's courtship married her, but soon afterward separated from her.

Glass came along just two days afterward, and as he vowed he would keep steadily at work she allowed herself to become Mrs. Glass again.

INSTRUCTOR SUSPENDED

Malden High School Girl Swears Out Warrant For His Arrest

Malden, Mass., Feb. 15.—Athletic Instructor Charles F. Cuddy of Malden high school was suspended yesterday from the teaching corps by Chairman Bickford of the school committee and Superintendent of Schools Dempsey, for conduct unbecoming a teacher.

At the Malden district court a warrant was sworn out by a young woman, member of the class of 1910 of Malden high school, making a serious charge against the athletic instructor.

Cuddy has not been at his desk at school since Monday. He was not at his home in West Somerville when officers called to serve the warrant. Cuddy is married and has been a member of the teaching staff of Malden high school since 1907.

HOUSE TO ABOLISH TWENTY-FIVE POSTS

Follows Advice of Experts of the War Department

Washington, Feb. 15.—The twenty-five army posts, which experts of the war department advocate abolishing, will not be provided for in the army appropriation bill now before the house. By a vote of 52 to 13 money for their maintenance or repair was withdrawn. A reduction of $100,000 in the fund for barracks and quarters also was made.

Secretary Stimson, on Jan. 28, urged the immediate abandonment of sixteen army posts, "in order to put an end to the extravagance and inefficiency resulting from improper distribution of the mobile army."

By concentration of the army in eight posts, it was asserted, the annual cost of its maintenance would be reduced by about $5,500,000 a year.

DEMANDS OF ENGINEERS

Higher Wages Are Sought by Employes of New Haven Road

New Haven, Feb. 15.—The text of the demands handed in to the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad company by the local heads of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers show that an increase of wages is asked for both passenger and freight engineers, based on capacity of engines, on a sliding scale.

Double pay is demanded for overtime, involving a large increase over the old rates. Engineers in electric service are to be under the same rules and rates of pay as those on steam locomotives. The increase for switching and belt line service is based upon the day. Higher pay is also demanded in cases of delay.

COURT SUSTAINS DADDY

Decides He Has a Right to Whip Suitors For Daughter's Hand

Milwaukee, Feb. 15.—Fathers are entitled to punish their daughters' sweethearts when an elopement is in progress, according to a decision in the district court in the trial of William L. Swann, wealthy contractor, and Arnold Bruegemann, on assault and battery charges made by William Feilbach, 26 years old, who sought to marry Miss Mabel Swann.

The alleged assault took place when the young persons were on a street car bound for Waukegan, Ills., to be married. The court held that Swann had a right to use force to protect his daughter from objectionable suitors and found both defendants not guilty.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

CHOCOLATE DAINTIES.

NO wonder an old botanist called chocolate "the food of the gods."

Chocolate contains 50 per cent of fat, which should be remembered when the housewife is considering the desirability of foods for winter use.

Some Simple Cakes.

Chocolate Doughnuts.—Take one cupful of light brown sugar, two tablespoonfuls of butter, two eggs, one cupful of buttermilk, one teaspoonful of baking soda dissolved in milk, two tablespoonfuls of grated chocolate, one teaspoonful of nutmeg. Add just enough flour to roll out a little at a time, cut and drop into hot lard.

Chocolate Drop Cakes.—Take two eggs, their weight in butter, sugar, flour and grated chocolate, using more chocolate than flour. Beat butter and sugar to a cream, add beaten eggs, flour and chocolate alternately. Lastly add one or two drops of vanilla essence and one [illegible]onful of bak[illegible]g add the whites of eggs beaten to a stiff froth.

Bake in strips in a moderate oven for half an hour. Cover with chocolate icing made as follows: Put three ounces of chocolate into a saucepan with half a pound of icing sugar, a little water, melt over the fire and while hot pour over the eclair.

Make a split in the center of each one and fill with whipped cream.

With Cornstarch and Rice.

Marbled Cornstarch.—Make a rich cornstarch custard, coloring with powdered chocolate. Pour this out into a sheet one inch thick and let cool. When cold cut up into dies about half an inch square in different sizes and shapes. Line the dish with a very thin crust, fill it with these chocolate dies in a careless manner, then have ready a cornstarch custard free from color. Pour this on the dies in the dish and it will run between them. Place this to bake in the oven till set. This cut in slices looks like marble.

Chocolate Rice.—Put four cupfuls of milk in a double boiler. When boiling add one-half cupful of rice, one-third teaspoonful of salt, six tablespoonfuls of sugar, two of butter, three of grated chocolate and one teaspoonful of

High School — Public Schools
Woodward Institute — Parochial School

At the special meeting of the School Committee held on Tuesday evening in the school committee rooms, the reports of the two special committees on vocational education were taken under consideration as the special order of the evening. There was absolute unanimity on the part of the members of the committee as to the need and desirability of embodying the recommendations of the report into the school system and in consequence the reports of both committees were accepted and adopted without amendment and the financial items necessary to set the work in motion were added to the annual budget. The responsibility of deciding whether Quincy shall take this next and vital step in Education now rests wholly with the City Council. As the cost will be very moderate in consequence of the State paying one half it is fair to expect that there will be little difficulty in establishing the course. The reports of the committee have been sent to the members of the City Council and they will have ample opportunity to study the projected plans before they are called upon to make financial provision for them.

At the same meeting of the School Committee the Annual Budget was submitted by the Committee on Finance and adopted, to be sent to the Mayor and City Council later.

The annual increase in the budget is considerable this year on account of the increase in salaries which was granted the whole teaching force, and which went into effect in September. New teachers, will be needed at the Montclair school and at the Wollaston, while the cost of fuel, janitor service and incidental expenses will also be increased because of the needs of these new buildings. The increased enrolment at the high school is also a considerable factor in the budget.

The School Committee has this year changed its form of accounting and will also use a different form in its budget classification in compliance with the request both of the State and the United States educational bureaus both of which are working to bring about a uniform system of accounting for school expenditures. While this may be slightly confusing at first it will allow comparison of costs to be made between different municipalities which can not be made at present because of the diversity in methods under the new classification. Expenses will be distributed under the following headings—Administration or general overhead expenses; Instruction; Text books; Stationery and other supplies ofr instruction; Operation; including janitors service, fuel, light, water, etc., Maintenance; Miscellaneous and Evening School.

At two more schools, meetings of parents are to be held during the coming week, at the Quincy school on the 20th and at the Washington school on the 21st. There have been no parents' meetings at either school for a good many years and the teachers will appreciate the opportunity of meeting all who are interested and care to come.

The low water pressure caused the school janitors to watch their boilers with unusual attention on Tuesday. None of the schools were obliged to close but there was very little margin at any building.

HIGH SCHOOL.

On Friday evening, February ninth, a reception and dance were given by the Sophomores of the High school, to the class of 1913. The gymnasium looked unusually attractive with its decorations of palms, flags, banners, and class colors. The grand march, with which the evening's entertainment opened, was led by Harry Burr, president of the Sophomore class, and Dorothy Edwards. All the pupils and teachers were received by the matrons, Miss Brown, Miss Salsman, and Miss Kirmayer. Pinkham's orchestra furnished the music. The committee in charge were:—Harry Burr, Marion McLoon, Dorothy Edwards, Irene Potterton, Fred Atwood, Charles Holmes.

Many of the guests considered the reception the most brilliant and successful affair of its kind ever held in the High School gymnasium.

On Thursday afternoon, February eighth, Miss Brown gave an informal party to the pupils of her home room at the High school. Games, dancing and a general good time were enjoyed in the gymnasium from three until six o'clock.

WILLARD.

The two eighth grades at the Willard School went on a sleigh ride Monday night after school. They were chaperoned by Miss Atwood and Miss Randall.

The invitations for the meeting of the parents and teachers to be held in the Willard school February twenty-sixth are being printed by the boys on the school printing press.

ALL SOULS' MEN'S CLUB.

Thoroughly delightful was the regular meeting of All Souls' Men's club held in Parish hall, Braintree, Wednesday evening.. At 6.30 was served a menu which is worthy of special mention. It consisted of hot roast beef, mashed potato, creamed parsnips, cabbage salad, macaroni, coffee and rolls and last but not least, hot apple dumpling with syrup.

After cigars were lighted, President Morrison introduced Prof. W. T. Sedgwick of the Mass. Institute of Technology who spoke on "The Truth about Cold Storage and Pure Foods."

The professor occupies the chair of biology at Technology and is also the curator of the Lowell Institute, Boston. He is an authority on sanitation and health and was the first man in the United States to make a bactereological examination of a city' milk supply.

Mr. Sedgwick is decidedly in favor of cold storage calling it one of mankind's greatest blessings because it gives an uninterrupted supply of pure food and enables us to conserve the summer's surplus supply for use during the unproductive season of winter. He blames "yellow" journals, cranks and magazines for the outburst against cold storage and thinks this hysteria due to false reformers and muck rakers who stir up trouble for their own selfish ends.

Contrary to Sec. Wilson and other so called authorities the professor thinks cold storage conducive to lower prices because of its making a bigger demand for commodities and affording the farmer a better market. He ascribes the high cost of living to the increasing population, outstriping the production of the country and thinks that eggs for instance would be $3.00 per dozen and chickens $1.00 per pound if it were not for storage facilities. He denied any connection with or influence by any storage company and said he spoke only for the benefit of the public.

He described the increasing population as pushing back the farms and that even now we import eggs from China and supplies from other places. Cold storage enables us to enjoy the fruit, vegetables and other products of distant places and climes and gives them to us pure and good at a not exorbitant profit to the storage men.

The speaker ridiculed the idea of storage goods being impure saying that they could not be so unless they were bad when placed in the warehouse. He told of one storage plant in Boston which uses 40 tons of coal daily to run its refrigerating machines and said that the business had become a necessity and had come to stay.

He paid a high tribute to the "Remsen" board and described the report of the Mass. commission on cold storage which is soon to be published as being in favor of this manner of preserving foods and holding the cold storage companies guiltless of many of the faults with which they are charged.

Professor Sedgwick says the American people have better food and more of it than ever before this result being largely due to cold storage and sanitary canning and pickling. He thinks the average milk supply a great menace and considers it much less dangerous to put water into milk than milk into water because milk contains so many germs. In other words we must have better milk and must be willing to pay a higher price before we can get it pure.

Professor Sedgwick praised the club for its excellent supper saying it was the only men's club he had ever attended where the viands were abundant, well served and hot. He also remarked on the homelike air and goodfellowship of the gathering.

He was asked many questions by his auditors and in the course of his remarks gave a very clear and interesting explanation of that great educational scheme the Lowell Institute, Boston. He deplored the great number of foolish and nonsensical bills which come before the Massachusetts legislature, something like 1800 last year and spoke strongly in favor of biennial sessions. He described this as due to the neurotic tendency of the times and said people in this country are suffering from "Americanitis" which is produced by hurry and worry and causes nervous prostration and other ills.

The professor's address evoked long and loud applause and he was voted a jolly good fellow. After a short business meeting the proceedings of the evening were closed at 9.30 o'clock.

TRICKS OF DEBATERS

SUBTERFUGES TO WHICH OVER EAGER CONTENDERS RESORT.

Deliberate Misquoting of Authorities Sometimes Resorted To—Penalty for Dishonesty in College Debates Is Severe.

Debating has shortcomings, even dangers. It is easy, for example, to manufacture evidence with little likelihood of detection. However, the penalty of such dishonesty when discovered is most severe, a writer in the Century states. In a debate in 1907 one of the speakers deliberately misquoted an authority. An unusually shrewd opponent walked over to the desk of his rival, picked up the book and read the statement exactly as it had been quoted. Then he continued: "Honorable judges, the gentlemen read the sentence as if it were punctuated with a period at this point. As a matter of fact the punctuation is a comma." He then read the final clause, showing the real intent of the authority, which was exactly opposite to the interpretation given by his opponent. The result was disaster for the dishonest debater.

There are still more subtle forms of dishonesty. Dozens of requests pour in from colleges and high schools upon every prominent debating team offering to buy, rent or borrow material. A typical letter read:

"Dear Sir: We understand that your university debated the question of commission government last spring. We shall be glad to procure a set of the speeches made and will pay any reasonable price."

Unless such dishonesty can be prevented it will soon bring deserved condemnation to an honorable sport Reputable institutions are refusing either to sell or buy material.

A third form of dishonesty sometimes arises. Coaches too frequently are far more responsible for the argument presented than are the debaters themselves. One debating coach has made a special study of trade unions for ten years He began in his school debates, followed it out in his college contests, and finally, taking charge of a college team, gave them three carefully prepared speeches to memorize Thus his students received none of the value which comes of working up a case. They were parrots, nothing more. For this evil there are two possible remedies. Many colleges among them Stanford, the University of California and Swarthmore, rightly throw the burden of preparation entirely upon the debaters, doing away with all coaching and trusting to the honor of their opponents to do likewise. Still better is reducing the time of preparation from three months to six weeks. Stanford and California pursue this method in their annual Carnot medal debates, which are models of the best debating in the country. The actual debating deteriorates under shorter preparation, but the exercise becomes far less academic and more nearly like the occasions of every day life. Teh debates under this system are contests not of voluminous research but of individual constructive thinking. Above all, this plan places the men upon their own responsibility, and as far as possible elliminates opportunities for dishonesty.

The President Laughed.

President Taft, who has difficulty in keeping his weight down to 300 pounds often cracks a joke or gets off a witticism about his size. One afternoon as he was leaving the White House to take a horseback ride, he met a group of newspaper correspondents, and among them was Matthew Tighe, an old friend.

After greetings had been exchanged Mr. Taft looked down at his legs encased in leggings which emphasized the girth of the limbs. He struck his left leg a resounding blow with his riding-crop, and, turning to Tighe asked with a smile:

"What do you think of that, Matt?"

"That," said Tighe, grinning, "would do credit to any piano ever manufactured."

And the loudest laugh about it came from the president.—Lippincott's Magazine.

Fishing at Biarritz.

In the neighborhood of Biarritz in southwestern France an original method of taking fish from the sea has been invented by the inhabitants along shore. Two poles forty or fifty feet tall and placed eight or nine yards apart are erected on the beach.

By means of pulleys a continuous line running over the tops of the poles and attached also to the top of another pole placed 500 yards out in the sea can be alternately drawn either shoreward or seaward.

Short lines with hooks and bait hang from the main line, and when they are loaded with fish the fisherman, sitting by his little cabin on shore, draws in his "take," rebaits his hooks and by pulling in the opposite direction replaces the row of baited lines in the sea. This apparatus is called a "va et vient" or "go and come."—Youth's Companion.

LOYAL TO HER FIANCE

Girl Charged With Contempt Is Freed by Court Which She Offended

Chicago, Feb. 15.—Miss Hazel Hogan, who for two months has been an inmate of the Cook county jail for contempt of court for having refused to testify on the witness stand against the man she was to marry, was released yesterday and her fine was remitted.

The order freeing the woman, who steadfastly refused to say a word in court, was entered by Judge Honore, the same judge who fined her $1700 and committed her to jail for contempt of court.

Miss Hogan wa released in bonds of $2300, as she is still under a charge of larceny. Miss Hogan's refusal to testify was in the trial of four men who were indicted for robbing her.

In spite of her refusal to testify three of the men were found guilty by the jury.

RHODE ISLAND TAX BILL

It Only Awaits Governor's Signature to Become a Law

Providence, Feb. 15.—With only one dissenting vote, the tax bill which has been urged by Governor Pothier for several years, and which is expected to increase the annual revenue of the state by about $400,000 to $700,000, was passed in concurrence by the senate yesterday afternoon. The measure was immediately laid on the governor's desk for his signature.

The act is essentially a corporation law, aimed to get at the tangible property of corporations which are taxed according to their corporate excess and gross earnings. The public service corporations will be taxed on their gross earnings and all others on their corporate excess. The state tax will be reduced from 18 cents to 9 cents.

MORSE AND HIS WIFE DEPART FOR EUROPE

They Fail In Their Plan to Elude Newspaper Men

New York, Feb. 15.—Traveling under assumed names, Charles W. Morse, the ex-convict banker whose sentence was commuted by President Taft, and his wife, sailed for Europe on board the steamship Kaiserin Auguste Victoria. They had secretly gone aboard the steamship and had hoped to leave the country without attracting any attention, but their plan was frustrated.

The former banker and his wife occupy the most expensive and luxurious suite on board the ship. It is on the sun deck, starboard side, and comprises a lounging room, bath room and bed chambers. The couple were down on the cabin list as Mr. and Mrs. N. H. Campbell.

Before the ship left her pier, Mrs. Morse received newspaper men, but begged that her husband be excused.

FORTY YEARS FOR ROBBERY

Brooklyn Judge Deals Severely With an "Habitual Criminal"

New York, Feb. 15.—Forty years in Sing Sing prison was the punishment meted out to Edward Smith, 28 years old, who was convicted in Brooklyn of highway robbery and assault. This is said to be the most severe sentence ever imposed in a like case in Brooklyn.

Smith was found guilty of beating Professor Frank W. Meissinger, a Brooklyn music teacher, and robbing him of $17 only six weeks after Smith had been released from prison for a similar offense. He was characterized by Judge Fawcett as an "habitual criminal."

A POLITICAL CONFAB

Taft, Crane, McKinley and Hilles Look Over the Situation

Washington, Feb. 15.—President Taft had a long talk last night with Senator Crane of Massachusetts, Representative McKinley of Illinois, the newly named manager of the pre-convention Taft campaign, and Secretary Hilles.

It was announced that the "general political situation" was discussed and that the president probably would go to Chicago to speak to the Scandinavian club of that city on March 9. An invitation to make a speech to the organization was extended about a year ago, but was not then accepted.

EXPLORATION OF THE SEA

House Approves Plan to Have Nations Save Commercial Fish

Washington, Feb. 15.—The house committee on foreign affairs reported favorably the joint resolution introduced by Representative Gardner of Massachusetts, providing for the participation by the United States in the international council for the exploration of the sea.

The council is composed of all the governments which have large fishing industries. Its purpose is to gain a thorough knowledge of those commercial fishes of the sea which are rapidly decreasing, and propose some permanent means to be taken for their preservation.

LORD RUSSELL'S BLUNDER

Manchester Cabman Refused to Stand for the Ill Nature of the Famous Judge.

The bluntness and impetuosity of Lord Russell of Killowen often caused him to do and say things for which he was afterwards genuinely sorry, and sometimes led him to get, quite unexpectedly, a Roland for his Oliver. This happened on one occasion in Manchester. He and a junior started for an appointment one afternoon when Russell was in a very disagreeable mood. Things had not been going well during the day. The cabman was a big, powerful, athletic-looking fellow. On approaching the cab, Russell, as was his wont, closely scanned the horse and the man. "Why," said he, "a big, powerful fellow like you ought not to be driving a cab; you ought to be doing something else."

"What the deuce is it to you," said the cabman, "what I do? Get into the cab, and mind your own business."

Russell, Barry O'Brien tells us, in his "Life" of the famous judge, read little. He was too much a man of action to be a man of books, but wherever he went he always carried two books in his bag—Locke "On the Human Understanding" and the "Imitation of Christ." He liked novels of excitement: "Monte Cristo" was a special favorite. He read Gaboriau's books, dipped into Tolstoi and Tourguenieff, and once, when he was ill at Leeds, he got his chief clerk, Mr. Block, to read the "Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" to him. But Russell made a bad blunder through lack of literary knowledge. On one occasion, when he was introduced to Mr. Stanley Weyman, he wished to be civil to that distinguished author, so he said: "My young people, Mr. Weyman, speak constantly of your books, and tell me I ought to read them. I have read your 'Prisoner of Zenda' with much pleasure."

"Oh! That's the other man," said Stanley Weyman.

Ships That Made History.

It is surely the very irony of circumstance which couples the names of the Alabama and the Kearsarge among the twelve American battleships which the secretary of the navy has reported to congress as no longer to be regarded as available for the first line of battle, and necessary to be replaced by 1920. Not far short of half a century has passed since that famous Sunday morning in June—almost as famous in its assistance to the making of history as another June Sunday of close upon half a century before which witnessed Waterloo—when the Federal war steamer Kearsarge fought and sank the Confederate cruiser Alabama in the roads off Cherbourg. The thrilling story of the fight was in all men's mouths for years afterward; and the Alabama, though under the waves, proved as perilous a craft for this country for long subsequently as she had done, when afloat, to the northern states. The only good that resulted from her existence, indeed, was to afford the first effective chance of proving the value of international arbitration.—Westminster Gazette.

SAYS HE WILL FREE BRANDT

What Gerard Will Do Unless Prisoner Is Pardoned

ROSALSKY DROPS THE CASE

All Proceedings Before Him Are Indefinitely Discontinued—Opening of Grand Jury Investigation Independent of Any Inquiry by Supreme Court Justice—Schiff Wants to Show That Scandals Are Untrue

New York, Feb. 15.—Supreme Court Justice Gerard has notified Governor Dix that unless Foulke E. Brandt is pardoned by tonight the habeas corpus proceedings in Brandt's behalf will be sustained and the prisoner freed.

Judge Rosalsky, before whom arguments were made Tuesday for a reopening of the Brandt case, announced that all proceedings before him are indefinitely discontinued. Rosalsky's statement followed opinions of able lawyers that Brandt is at present a prisoner of Supreme Court Justice Gerard, and that it would not be good form for him to take action which might interfere with the case before the supreme court justice.

Brandt was taken before Gerard in the supreme court, where decision on his writ was reserved and then lodged in the Tombs, where he will remain under the custody of the supreme court until a decision is handed down.

The grand jury yesterday inaugurated a special inquiry into the case of Brandt to determine whether the former valet of Mortimer L. Schiff, the banker, was sent to prison for thirty years for burglary in the first degree as a result of a conspiracy.

District Attorney Whitman is said to have certain evidence which he desires to bring before the grand jury, and this investigation would be quite independent of any inquiry made by Gerard, who has been appointed commissioner by Governor Dix to conduct a hearing on an application for executive clemency in the Brandt case.

A full airing of the Brandt case will be had at the hearing held by Gerard, as the statute gives him power to subpoena any and all persons and to cause the production of any books and papers. Counsel for Schiff has stated that his client desires that the case may be sifted to the bottom in order that "false and infamous scandals" may be shown to be untrue.

District Attorney Whitman conducted the probe in person. Joseph Wooldridge, the detective who furnished the "criminal record" of Brandt, which weighed heavily against the man at sentence time in 1907, testified that his conscience hurt him and that as far as he knew there was absolutely nothing criminal in Brandt's real record.

It was learned that when Whitman told Wooldridge that he was the one man who had investigated Brandt's career and asked him if he had found anything criminal in the valet's record, the detective answered "absolutely none."

KING OPENS PARLIAMENT

Speech Proves Colorless and Greatly Disappoints His Hearers

London, Feb. 15.—Parliament convened in a momentous session, with British statesmen brought face to face with measures of the greatest importance affecting the British empire in a decade.

The three principal questions up before the present session will be home rule, manhood suffrage and the disestablishment of the Welsh church.

Blank disappointment was easily read in the faces of his hearers over the colorlessness of the king's references to the historic legislation mapped out by the government. He failed to touch on many important matters, no mention being made of relations with Germany or of Haldane's recent visit to the kaiser.

CROCKER JURY BRIBERY

Hartnett Gets Two Years For Part He Played In It

Boston, Feb. 15.—William J. Hartnett was sentenced to two years in the house of correction by Judge Sanderson in the Suffolk superior criminal court for bribing the jury in the Crocker will case.

Hartnett had previously pleaded guilty of bribing two jurors and it was on his testimony that the indictments against George U. Crocker, Charles H. Leach and John J. Conroy were found. The indictments were not prossed when District Attorney Pelletier learned that Hartnett had been tampering with evidence.

FORTY-EIGHTH STAR ADDED TO OUR FLAG

Washington, Feb. 15.—President Taft signed the proclamation admitting Arizona as the forty-eighth state in the union. The ceremony took place in the presence of about forty prominent westerners and to the accompaniment of a battery of moving picture machines and clicking cameras.

In signing the proclamation President Taft brought within the sisterhood of states the last bit of territory within the confines of continental United States.

To perpetuate the scene for future Arizonians, the moving picture men invaded the White House for the first time.

Dr. Ferguson and Two Women Are Held In the Bolduc Case

Boston, Feb. 15.—Annie M. Reed, Dr. John D. Ferguson and Mary A. O'Neil were arraigned in the superior criminal court yesterday afternoon on the new indictments, charging them with being principals or accessories to an illegal operation which caused the death of Marie A. Bolduc of Manchester, N. H. All pleaded not guilty and were placed on bail.

The bail of Mrs. Reed, charged as principal, was increased $3000, making it now $9000. The bail of Miss O'Neil and Ferguson, each charged as accessory, remains the same, Miss O'Neil's $6000 and Ferguson's $3000. All of the defendants furnished cash bail. The trial will begin Feb. 26.

LINEHAN A CARPENTER

Job Will Occupy Former Senator's Attention For Next Two Years

Boston, Feb. 15.—Former Senator Frank J. Linehan, sentenced to two years at the Deer island house of correction, began his labor in the carpenter shop at the institution today.

Linehan was very quiet yesterday, his first day on the island, and had little to say to any of the officials. He expressed his satisfaction when he was told that he was to work in the carpenter shop, and said that was the work he would best like, during his term, as he was thoroughly familiar with it.

Lisbon, Feb. 15.—Fifteen hundred fighting bulls under training for the arena at the bull breeding establishment of Villafranca ran amuck after fire had destroyed the ranch buildings. They dashed through the country districts, trampling down everything that came in their path. Many persons were seriously injured.

Finally the herd was driven towards the river Tagus, into which they jumped, and over 1000 were drowned

Section Hands Join Ranks of the Lawrence Strikers

RANK WITH THE LOOMFIXERS

Skilled Workers Confer With Mill Agents, but Without Definite Results—"Parade" of Strikers Causes Much Annoyance to Merchants by Overflowing Their Stores—Defense Introduces Testimony In Hearing of Strike Leaders

Lawrence, Mass., Feb. 15.—The Lawrence textile strike as relapsed into a state of indefinite suspense, with the Industrial Workers of the World again the active factor.

At a meeting of the section men, a skilled class of operatives, ranking with the loomfixers, it was decided to organize under the I. W. W. standard and take an active part in the struggle. Officers were elected and a delegate chosen to the strike committee.

Nearly 300 operatives are numbered among the section men, about half of whom are now out on strike. Organization will bring the remainder out of the mills.

Failure of the Central Labor union committee to secure more than a hearing from the mill agents is regarded by the I. W. W. leaders as a defeat for the American Federation of Labor.

The committee reported last nigat at an executive meeting that the demands which they presented to the agents were taken under consideration, but that the corporation representatives refused to take any action for several days.

James R. Menzie, treasurer of the Central Labor union, declined to make any statement other than declare that the committee met with a courteous reception from the agents.

For two hours yesterday afternoon nearly 3000 I. W. W. strikers walked slowly up and down Essex street to demonstrate that a strike still exists in Lawrence.

There was no attempt to form a parade. Women and men, girls and boys, singly and in small groups, louged along the sidewalks on both sides of the thoroughfare, amusing themselves by gazing in show windows and watching the bulletin boards before newspaper offices.

The demonstration bothered merchants. A part of the plan consisted in an inspection by the strikers of the interior of every store on both sides of the street, with the understanding that nothing was to be purchased.

Instructions were carried out carefully. In several of the larger stores hundreds of strikers were packed at one time. They filled the aisles. Some perched on the stools before the counters. Embarrassed clerks and distressed managers finally sat back and waited until the strikers decided to leave, after several ineffectual efforts to make sales.

It was fun for the strikers. Since the strike orders issued by Colonel Sweetser against parading went into effect they have had little opportunity to make such a showing and a few ventured to poke good-natured jibes at the militiamen, knowing that as long as they did not congregate in any large number they were within the law.

The prosecution rested and the defense began the introduction of testimony yesterday in the hearing of Joseph J. Ettor and Arturo Giovannitti, charged with being accessories before the fact to the murder of Anna Popizzo during a riot of textile strikers and their sympathizers in this city on Jan. 29. It is expected that the defense will occupy the whole of today and possibly longer.

Tramp Not Wholly Lost.

A tramp stealing a ride on a train jumped off as it passed a burning hotel, aroused the sleeping lodgers and, his rescue work done, regained his place on the bumpers before the train left the yards. A pretty full volume of comment on American human nature is contained in the brief report of the incident.

FRECKLES

By Gene Stratton-Porter

COPYRIGHT, 1904, BY DOUBLEDAY, PAGE & CO.

SYNOPSIS.

Freckles, a homeless boy, is hired by Boss McLean to guard the expensive timber in the Limberlost from timber thieves.

Freckles does his work faithfully, makes friends with the birds and yearns to know more about nature. He lives with Mr. and Mrs. Duncan.

He resolves to get books and educate himself. He becomes interested in a huge pair of vultures and calls his bird friends his "chickens."

Some of the trees he is guarding are worth $1,000 each. Freckles' books arrive. He receives a call from Wessner.

Wessner attempts to bribe Freckles to betray his trust, and Freckles whips him. McLean overhears them and witnesses the fight.

Freckles' honesty saves a precious tree. He finds the nest of the vultures and is visited by a beautiful young girl.

She calls Freckles McLean's son. Freckles calls her "the angel" and helps the Bird Woman in taking photographs. McLean promises to adopt Freckles.

Freckles and the angel become very friendly. Assisted by the Bird Woman, they drive Wessner and Black Jack, timber thieves, from the Limberlost.

McLean fears more trouble, but Freckles insists upon being the sole guard of the timber. Freckles calls upon the angel's father.

The angel receives him as her equal, and her father is kind. Mrs. Duncan has exciting adventures in the Limberlost.

The Bird Woman and the angel again visit Freckles, and Freckles falls in love with the angel. The angel kisses him.

Freckles is bound and gagged by Black Jack's gang, and the timber thieves start felling a very valuable tree.

Wessner is to kill Freckles after the tree is stolen. The angel makes a daring effort to save Freckles and the tree.

McLean's men, notified by the angel, rush to save Freckles. All the timber thieves except Black Jack are captured.

A week later everything at the Limberlost was precisely as it had been before the tragedy, except the case in Freckles' room now rested on the stump of the newly felled tree. Enough of the vines were left to cover it prettily, and every vestige of the havoc of a few days before was gone. The new guards were patrolling the trail. Freckles was roughly laying off the swamp in sections and searching for marked trees. In that time he had found one deeply chipped and the chip cunningly replaced and tacked in. It promised to be quite rare, so he was jubilant. He also found so many subjects for the Bird Woman that her coming was of almost daily occurrence, and the hours he spent with her and the angel were nothing less than golden.

The Limberlost now was arrayed like the queen of Sheba in all her glory. The first frosts of autumn had bejeweled her crown in flashing topaz, ruby and emerald. About her feet trailed the purple of her garments, and in her hand was her golden scepter. Everything was at full tide. It seemed as if nothing could grow lovelier, and it was all standing still a few weeks, waiting coming destruction.

The swamp was palpitant with life. Every pair of birds that had flocked to it in the spring was now multiplied by from two to ten. The young were tame from Freckles' triparenthood, and so plump and sleek that they were quite as beautiful as their elders, even if in many cases they lacked their brilliant plumage. There were chubby little groundhogs scudding along the trail. There were cunning baby coons and opossums peeping from hollow logs and trees. Young muskrats followed their parents across the lagoons.

If you could come upon a family of foxes that had not yet disbanded and see the young playing with a wild duck's carcass that their mother had brought and note the pride and satisfaction in her eyes as she lay at one side guarding them it would be a picture not to be forgotten. Freckles never tired of studying the devotion of a fox mother to her babies.

The angel was wild about the baby rabbits and squirrels. Earlier in the season, when the young were still very small, it had so happened that at times Freckles could give into her hands one of these little ones. Then it was pure joy to stand back and watch her heaving breast, flushed cheek and shining eyes. Hers were such lovely eyes. They were forever changing. Now sparkling and darkling with wit, now humid with sympathy, now burning with the fire of courage, now taking on strength of color with ambition, now flashing indignantly at the abuse of any creature. She had carried several of the squirrel and bunny babies home and had the conservatory littered with them. Her care of them was perfect.

Brown butterfly time had come. The outer edge of the swale was filled with milkweed and other plants beloved of them, and the air was golden with the flashing satin wings of the monarch, viceroy and argynnis. They outnumbered those of any other color three to one.

Among the birds it really seemed as if the little yellow fellows were in the preponderance. At least they were until the red winged blackbirds and bobolinks that had nested on the upland came swarming by hundreds for these last few weeks before migration. Never was there a finer feast spread for the birds. The grasses were filled with seeds; so, too, were weeds of every variety. Fall berries were ripe. Wild grapes and black haws were ready.

They seemed to feel the new reign of peace and fullness most of all. As for hunting, they didn't even have to hunt for themselves these days, for the bounty now being spread before Little Chicken every day was more than he could master, and he was glad to have his parents come down and feast with him.

He was a fine, overgrown fellow, and his wings, with quills of jetty black, gleaming with bronze, were so strong they almost lifted his body. The funny little hops, springs and sidewise bounds he gave set Freckles and the angel, hidden out in the swamp watching him, into smothered chuckles of delight.

Sometimes he fell to coquetting with himself, and that was the funniest thing of all, for he turned his head up, down, from side to side, and drew in his chin with prinky little jerks and tilts. He would stretch his neck, throw up his head, turn it to one side and smirk—actually smirk, the most complacent and self satisfied smirk that any one ever saw on the face of a bird. It was so comical that Freckles and the angel told the Bird Woman of it one day.

When she finished her work on Little Chicken she left them the camera all ready for use, telling them they might hide back in the bushes and watch. If Little Chicken came out and truly smirked and they could squeeze the bulb at just the proper moment to snap him she would be more than delighted.

Freckles and the angel quietly curled down beside a log and with eager eyes and softest breathing patiently waited. They were becoming anxious, for the light would soon be gone and they had so wanted to try for the picture. At last Little Chicken lifted his head, opened his beak and gaped widely. He dozed a minute or two more. The angel said that was his beauty sleep. Then he lazily gaped again and stood up, stretching and yawning. He ambled leisurely down toward the gateway, and the angel said, "Now, we may have a chance, at last."

"I do hope so," shivered Freckles.

With one accord they rose to their knees and trained their eyes on the mouth of the log. The light was full and strong. Little Chicken prospected again with no results. He dressed his plumage, polished his beak, and when he felt fine and in full toilet he began to flirt with himself. Freckles' eyes snapped and his breath sucked between his clenched teeth.

"He's going to do it," whispered the angel.

Little Chicken nodded daintily and ruffled his feathers. He gave his head sundry little sidewise jerks and rapidly shifted his point of vision. Once there was the fleeting little ghost of a smirk.

"Now! No!" snapped the angel.

Freckles leaned toward the bird. Tense as a steel trap he waited. Unconsciously the hand of the angel clasped his. He scarcely knew it was there. Suddenly Little Chicken sprang straight up in the air and landed with a thud. The angel started slightly, but Freckles was immovable. Then, as if in approval of his last performance, the overgrown baby wheeled until he was more than three-quarters, almost full side, toward the camera, straightened on his legs, squared his shoulders, stretched his neck full height, drew in his chin and smirked his most pronounced smirk directly in the face of the lens.

Freckles' fingers closed on the bulb convulsively, and the angel's closed on his at the instant. Then the angel heaved a great sigh of relief and lifted her hands to push back the damp, clustering hair from her face.

Hand in hand they ran for the north end of the swamp, yelling, "We got it!"

The Bird Woman plunged into the watching behind to see if the train were not curling up and rolling down the line after him.

* * * * * * * *

Next day Freckles saw them coming. The angel was standing, waving her hat. He sprang on his wheel and raced, jolting and pounding, down the corduroy to meet them. The Bird Woman stopped the horse, and the angel gave him the bit of print paper. Freckles leaned the wheel against a tree and took the proof with eager fingers. He had never before seen a study from any of his chickens. He stood staring. When he lifted his face to them it was transfigured with delight.

"You see!" he exclaimed, and fell to gazing again. "Oh, me little chicken!" he cried. "Oh, me ilegant little chicken! I'd be giving all me money in the bank for you!"

Then he thought of the angel's muff and Mrs. Duncan's hat and added: "Or at least all but what I'm needing bad for something else. Would you mind my stopping at the cabin a minute and showing this to Mother Duncan?" he asked.

Freckles went hurrying on ahead, and they drove up in time to see Mrs. Duncan gazing as if awestruck and to hear her bewildered "Weel, I be drawed on."

Freckles and the angel helped the Bird Woman to establish herself for a long stay at the mouth of Sleepy Snake creek. Then she sent them away and waited what luck would bring to her.

"Looks as if some one had been cutting a flagpole," said the angel, running the toe of her shoe around a small stump, evidently cut that season. "Freckles, what would anybody cut a tree as small as that for?"

"I don't know," said Freckles.

"Well, but I want to know!" said the angel. "Nobody came away in here and cut it just for fun. They've taken it away. Let's go back and see if we can see it anywhere around there."

She retraced her steps and began searching eagerly. Freckles did the same.

"There it is," he exclaimed at last, "leaning just as naturally against the trunk of that big maple."

"Yes, and leaning there has killed a patch of bark," said the angel. "See how dried up it looks."

Freckles stared at her.

"Angel," he shouted, "I bet you it's a marked tree!"

"Course it is!" cried the angel. "It is one of Jack's marked trees."

The clear, ringing echo of strongly swung axes came crashing through the Limberlost.

"'Tis the gang," shouted Freckles. "They're clearing a place to make the camp. Let's go help!"

"Get out your hatchet," commanded the angel. "I predict this is the most valuable tree in the swamp. You found it. I'm going to play that you're my knight. Now, you nail my colors on it."

She untied a blue bow in her hair and doubled it against the tree. The angel had called him her knight! How he loved her! She must not see his face or surely her quick eyes would read what he was fighting to hide. He did not dare lay his lips on that ribbon then, but that night he would return to it. When they had gone a little distance they both looked back, and the morning breeze set the bit of blue waving them a farewell.

She reached him her hand, and, like two children, they broke into a run as they came nearer the gang. They left the swamp by the west road and followed the trail until they found the men. To the angel it seemed complete chaos.

In the shadiest spot on the west side of the line, close to the swamp and very close to Freckles' room, they were cutting down bushes and clearing out space for a tent for the men's sleeping quarters, another for a dining hall and a board shack for the cook. The teamsters were unloading, the horses were cropping leaves from the bushes, and each man was doing his part toward the construction of the new Limberlost quarters.

Pyramid Skyscrapers Advocated by Chicago Building Commissioner

Chicago, Feb. 15.—Building Commissioner Ericsson advocated a pyramid construction for future Chicago scrapers in an address before the Building Managers' association. The plan, he declared, would give a maximum of light and safety.

"A hundred-foot perpendicular wall; then an inset of five feet and another hundred-foot perpendicular wall, and then another inset of five feet," said the commissioner, "and all danger of collapse would cease." The plan also calls for the structures to be placed ten feet within the lot of boundaries.

COMPLICITY IN CONSPIRACY

Charge Against Those Alleged to Have Been Connected With Great Dynamite Bomb Plot—Head of Iron Workers and Other Officials of the Union Are Held—What the Indictments Charge

Indianapolis, Feb. 15.—By what was said to be the most sweeping federal action of its kind ever taken, the United States government, within a few hours, arrested a majority of the fifty-four men indicted for alleged complicity in a dynamite conspiracy which has spread from ocean to ocean for a period of six years.

At the head of those arrested was Frank M. Ryan, president of the Executive board of the Bridge and Structural Iron Workers. Many other officers, including Herbert S. Hockin, second vice president and successor to J. J. McNamara, the convicted dynamiter, as secretary-treasurer of the union, were arrested with Ryan in Indianapolis.

Michael J. Young, a member of the executive board of the Bride and Iron Workers' union, and president of Local No. 7 of Boston, is charged with assisting McManigal in blowing up a section of the Boston opera house in March, 1909, and with having sent McManigal to Springfield, Mass., where part of the municipal buildings were blown up.

Reports from all over the country showed also that five of the seven iron workers' executive board members and a half-dozen former members were taken into custody. These officials and their co-defendants are charged with violating the federal statutes regulating interstate shipment of explosives, which resulted from the activities of the McNamaras and McManigal "dynamiting crew," who carried dynamite and nitroglycerine in and about the country in passenger trains.

All the defendants are charged with conspiring to further the series of one hundred explosions, which were directed by labor union officials against iron and steel contractors and employers of non-union labor.

The most important move by the defendants on their arrest was to secure bond for their appearance here March 12. Ryan and Hockin each gave $10,000 bond and were released. On advice of counsel, Ryan and Hockin declined to make a statement until they had opportunity to confer.

Some of those indicted were members of the executive board when J. J. McNamara was directing his dynamiting operations from his office in Indianapolis and when he was receiving $1000 a month from the iron workers' union for which he was not required to make any accounting and which the government charges was used to purchase and pay for the transportation of explosives. These executive board members were present in McNamara's office when he was arrested last April.

The charges in the indictments are divided into two groups. The first group charges violation of the federal statutes regulating the interstate shipment of explosives, aiding and abetting to conceal the violation. The defendants in this class are termed accessors before and after the fact. The second group charges conspiracy to violate the law by furthering the plans for carrying explosives.

In the indictments it is held that the McNamara brothers and McManigal were merely the agents of a vast conspiracy, and that their work in blowing up structures, including the Los Angeles Times building in October, 1910, had been carried on for years at the behest of their superior officers and at the solicitation of officials of local unions.

The iron workers' union, whose headquarters are in Indianapolis, has about 13,000 members, with 107 local unions in the United States and Canada. Soon after it became known his officials were to be indicted Ryan asked the members of the union to establish a special fund of $7000 a month. It is believed this fund now will be utilized for defense at the trials.

GREAT TREAT IS PROMISED

Lovers of basketball will be treated to a game of a high class order by travelling to St. Mary's Hall, West Quincy, this evening, where the strong St. Mary's team of Boston contests with the members of the Quincy A. A. contingencies in games which give every promise of being the hardest fought that have yet taken place within the walls of the popular West Quincy assembly hall. The Cathedral Y. M. C. A. fives were scheduled to put in an appearance, but Manager Magee has severed connections with the Greater Boston Basketball league and as a consequence Manager Flynn, in order not to disappoint the many admirers of the local teams, succeeded in booking the St. Mary's combinations for the occasion.

To add to the attraction, dancing will be in order for the last time until after Lent and those who are accustomed to indulge in the light fantastic from time to time will be afforded a great chance to make a temporary halt by presenting themselves this evening. There is sure to be a large crowd on hand for the event and any one desirous of securing seating space, would do well to present himself before eight o'clock and be on hand for the start of the game between the second teams.

THE USE OF ADJECTIVES

The Observant Citizen in the Post says:

Attorney John W. McAnarney was conferring with Judge Flint of Norfolk County Probate Court, the other day, on setting a date for the continuance of a trial. "That date will suit me all right," said Mr. McAnarney. Unless I am called to a higher court." "Please be more careful in your use of adjectives," was Judge Flint's smiling response.

Days of the Pony Express.

The pony express service was established in 1861 to carry mails between St. Joseph, Mo., and California. The first of these daring riders left St. Joseph on April 2 of that year, and the 2,000 miles of desert, plain and mountain wild was covered by the relay of mounts in just twelve days—a perfect marvel of speed in those days.

The arrival of the first pony express at Sacramento on April 13 was hailed by throngs of pioneers with a mighty chorus of cheers. It was a memorable day in the history of their far-off land, and they cheerfully paid the toll of $5 each for the letters carried in the rider's pouch. Small wonder that these hardy state makers rejoiced at this revolution, for weary months of waiting for news of loved ones back in "the states' had come to an end.

This first express rider brought momentous news of the pioneers. He was the bearer of reports of an impending war of the states. But to them we are told that of vastly greater importance was the thunder of hoofs that told of the realization of the dream of years.

Colonel Cody (Buffalo Bill) was one of the first relay of pony express riders, and it was in this service that he first earned fame. Along the perilous route he soon came to be known as "Bill" Cody, despite the fact that he was then a mere stripling of fourteen years. He was soon recognized as one devoid of fear.

Contrary Effects.

"Funny, isn't it, about a prima donna's voice when it comes to contracts?"

"In what way?"

"Her liquid notes always turn into solid cash."

Nothing in a Name.

The Stranger—Queer place for a factory—right in the heart of your business section.

The Native—Yes, that's where they manufacture the pure country sausage.

SPORTING "DOPE"

By B. A.

Don't Knock, Just Boost.—B. A.

The members of the local High school track team have been billed to run Natick high in a relay race, in connection with the B. A. A. games, to be held in Mechanics building, Boston, Feb. 24.

The first indoor meet of the Houghs Neck Catholic Lyceum will be held in the club house Friday evening, and from present indications, everything points to success. Entries have already been received from many prominent runners, including a number of local performers. Frank Bruce will participate in a special event and will run five miles against Domenic Tasci and Domenic Sileno. The affair is to conclude with dancing and a most enjoyable time is in store for everyone who attends.

In the future all students of the Boston high schools will be required to learn the art of swimming. Such a movement is highly commendable, and is one that should receive a place in the curriculum of the Quincy high, because to know how to swim is an asset of the present day. Swimming is one of the greatest athletic pastimes, because no sport conduces to greater benefit and development of the body

The March Baseball magazine, which is a special Ty Cobb number, contains the greatest Ty Cobb stories ever written and many heretofore unpublished facts about the king of all ball players.

This special issue contains features on wrestling, boxing, six-day bicycling and stories by Hugh Jennings, William A. Phelon, John Evers, Alec McLean, besides a great detective serial story.

USE OF CROSS IN HERALDRY

More Than Four Hundred Forms of the Device Are Recognized in That Science.

In early pagan days the cross was a symbol of shame and ignominy, and only those deformed or misshapen trees that could be used for no other purpose were formed into crosses. But since the cross has become dear to Christians, says the "Ave Maria," the most precious woods and metals have been formed into it. To the third century may be traced the custom of making the Sign of the Cross. In the days of Constantine, Christians painted crosses on the entrances of their houses as a symbol of their faith.

The impetus to the use of the cross in heraldry was given by the Crusaders, who wore a red cross upon their right shoulder as a token of the obligation they had taken upon themselves. Its form and meanings in heraldic designs are many. In fact, over four hundred and seven different forms have been recorded by students of biography and genealogy.

In heraldry the cross is formed by two perpendicular and two horizontal lines crossing in the center of the shield. This form is modified in various ways by additions and combinations, thus expressing many meanings. It has been said that human intelligence has never devised a system so infinite in its varieties and so endless in its application as is to be found in the science of heraldry, in which figure twenty-seven basic or fundamental crosses.

The Greek cross has all four arms of equal length, while the Latin cross has the earth end longer than the other three arms. The Calvary or Christ Cross rests upon three steps or degrees. The Patriarch cross is recognized by its double crossbar. The St. Andrew's cross is an X, in token of the form of cross on which that saint suffered martyrdom by having his hands and feet bound to its four arms. The St. Anthony cross is shaped like a T, and has its name from the cross that St. Anthony, abbot, wore upon his cloak, though the origin of his cross seems to be Egyptian.

It is a matter of interest that many American families have the cross as the basic emblem of their escutcheons. Among them are at least five of the presidents. The Garfield shield has a blue cross in the dexter canton, and the family motto is, "In the cross I conquer." The Tyler shield had on it a bar, two crescents and a cross form. The shield of the Adams family was adorned by a large cruciform device.

Classification.

"What is your idea of a musical comedy?"

"It is usually a form of entertainment," replied Mr. Hibrow "in which the music and the comedy are less important than the costumes."

A Strong Hint.

"There is one good suggestion which Samson in his last performance gave all other performers."

"What was that?"

"When he brought down the house, he did not attempt an encore."

Helen's Independence

Helen looked up at the conductor with a flushed face. "I'm sorry," she said, "but I'm afraid that I have no money."

"I guess you can find it if you have to," he snorted as he passed on. "Look again—and hurry up."

He went out on the rear platform for a moment, but soon he followed another incoming passenger up the aisle.

"I really can't find a single coin," said Helen, looking up from her disordered purse.

"That's all right," was the more gracious response. "A gent out on the platform staked you."

"Was it that man in the soft hat?" she asked as she caught sight of Harvey Tennant trying to look unconcerned.

"Sure thing," he assented. "Shall I send him in?"

"I do not care to be under obligations to the gentleman," she said coldly. "Please stop the car."

It was intolerable that after last night Harvey should presume to pay her car fare. Had it been a total stranger she would have been grateful, but a man who only the night before had assured her that she could not get along without him! She would show him that she could, and she swept off the car with a majestic dignity that caused Tennant to smile

"Look here, Nell," he protested as he followed her to the sidewalk, "you must not be here alone. It is one of the toughest districts in town."

"So I judge from its inhabitants," she said with a meaning glance at him. "It seems that they take pleasure in annoying unprotected women."

"That's just the trouble," he said placidly, though his face reddened "Don't be foolish. Let me lend you a nickel. You can send it back tonight It is only what I would do for any woman in the same fix."

"I do not have to trespass upon your chivalry," she declared, with a scornful accent upon the last word "I am amply able to take care of myself."

"I believe we discussed that to no purpose last night," he said coldly "I adhere to my original opinion."

"And I to mine," she sniffed, as she began to walk on. Harvey dropped back a few paces and followed her The dozen blocks bordering the freight yards bore a most unsavory reputation. No gently-bred woman was safe from insult.

And just because he had ventured to criticise her boldness in venturing out alone on her charity visits she had broken their engagement the night before with the scornful statement that she was amply able to take care of herself and would have naught of a husband who already showed such a disposition to bully.

He did not have long to wait for his revenge. On the next block a crowd of half-drunken loafers reeled from a saloon. Helen shrank to the edge of the sidewalk and by her very precaution attracted their attention.

"There's me mussis," shouted one as he lurched toward her. "Come here, me dear, and let hubby have a few coins for his beer."

As he staggered toward her Helen raised her hands to ward him off, and in doing so dropped her bundles. With a wild yell the rest of the crowd drove after the parcels just as Harvey dashed up.

A few well-directed kicks scattered the crowd, but the first speaker was less easily disposed of. The idea that Helen was his wife had entered his drunken brain and refused to be dislodged and he made an attempt to clasp her in his arms while demanding of the new comer why he should seek to separate a loving pair.

Harvey's answer was a blow that sent him sprawling, but he scrambled to his feet in an instant and staggered toward his assailant, waving a cotton hook that had dangled from his belt.

With a scream Helen sought to throw herself between the two men, but Harvey thrust her quickly aside. The man in his drunken insanity would make no distinction and it was a fight man to man.

He had had some experience on the mat. Had been the wrestling champion of his club for two seasons, and he maneuvered for an opening. It was no easy matter for he had seen fights among the longshoremen and know that a cotton hook was far more dangerous than a knife. It was some time before he could find his opening, but at last he closed in with a rush, pinioning his adversary's arms close to his side. After that the fight was a short one. Once at a disadvantage the rough collapsed and through a sudden turn of his thoughts became lachrymose. Harvey tearfully lamenting the loss of his wife while he assisted Helen to regain such bundles as had been left her.

"I presume that you will not refuse car fare now," he said as he straightened out his overcoat.

"Don't you think we could have a cab?" she suggested, "because you see, Harvey—we can hold hands in a cab."

Contemptible.

"They say he failed for $50,000."

"Well, he always was a fellow that would do almost anything for a little money. I wouldn't think of failin' for as little as that."

SURPRISE FOR QUINCY TEAM

Forced to Lower Colors to Strong St. Joseph's Team

BEST GAME OF SEASON

The absence of Hebert and Kelly from the lineup was considerably felt by the Quincy A A., last evening, for the leaders of the Greater Boston Basketball league lost two games to the St. Joseph's A. A., at the Blossom street Wardroom. Jenkins, one of the mainstays of the second team covered the pivot position for the first team of the local association, and accredited himself in grand style. The first team was beaten by a score of 23 to 16, while the second team succumbed to an 11 to 9 defeat.

Ths Duggan boys did not display their usual brilliant form, for only one basket from the floor was credited to "Sid," while "Dan" failed to register a single one. O'Rourke was the star player for the local team, while Maguire excelled for the winners.

The game between the second teams resolved into a warm contest, and was won by the Boston players in the last few minutes of play. "Butus" Chapman played a fine game for the Quincy A. A., second combination, while Manning excelled for the winners. The summaries:

LION'S SHARE TO A QUINCY BOY

Arthur J. Woodward Given $1340 of Page Murder Reward

FOUND KNIFE SHEATH

By the findings of the selectmen of the town of Weston made public Thursday, Arthur J. Woodward of West Quincy, gets the lion's share of the reward of $2,681.94 offered by the town eight years ago for information that would lead to the arrest and conviction of the murder of Mabel Page.

There were many claimants for the reward but that of the Woodward boy was considered to be the most deserving and he will get fifty per cent of the amount, or $1,340.97.

On the day of the murder of the Page girl, Charles L. Tucker met Woodward, who was driving through Weston on a fish cart and getting onto the wagon rode some distance with him. After Tucker had left the team Woodward found a knife sheath on the seat which later proved a valuable piece of evidence in the trial, as the government proved that the knife which caused the girl's death fitted the sheath, and the knife was found hidden in Tucker's house.

Woodward later informed his father of his finding of the sheath and he took him to Boston thus furnishing the first clew that led to the arrest and conviction of Tucker.

After the trial Woodward put in a claim for the reward through his attorney J. J. McAnarney. Several hearings have been held by the Selectmen but owing to the many claimants it has taken some time to determine to whom the reward should go.

Patrick J. McAuliffe, chief of the Weston police, is awarded $670.40 for the part which he played in the arrest and conviction of Tucker. The other awards were: William Harvey, a Waltham newspaper man, $402.30; Joseph B. Emerson, $134.09, and A. R. Kingsbury, $134.09.

Chief McAuliffe found the knife during the search of the Tucker house.

Harvey, the newspaper man, interviewed Tucker and wrote the first story connecting Tucker with the case. He also proved Tucker's whereabouts nearer the Page house than any of the witnesses that appeared at the trial.

QUICK RUN BY AUTO CHEMICAL

The alarm from Box 69 at 4.06 Thursday afternoon was for a slight fire in a house at Montclair occupied by a Mrs. Burns. The fire started in the sewing room and was caused by a lamp exploding. A telephone call was sent to Combination 2 house at Atlantic and the apparatus arrived at the fire just as the alarm was rung. The fire was extinguished with a hand chemical.

This is one of the fires which serves as an illustration of the efficiency of an auto piece of apparatus. In just two minutes from the time of the first blow on the fire alarm for the box the auto chemical went through the City Square at a rapid gait. It passed the hook and ladder truck from the Wollaston station before the fire was reached and pulled up to the house at the same time as did the Wollaston hose wagon.

When it is considered that the Wollaston apparatus is all of two miles nearer the box than the auto and that both started at the same time some idea may be had of the speed at which it must have travelled in answering the alarm. It is the first few minutes at the start of a fire that counts and there is no question but what the auto is the apparatus for quickness.

ONE SECRET OF SUCCESS

After a dozen years of rapid growth, we know what we have always believed to be true, that real success is built only on honor.

The firm that has a reputation for doing exactly what it agrees to do, and that believes in the full measure and the honest weight is the firm that wins out in the community every time.

It is the house built upon a rock—the rock of its patrons' faith.

LEGISLATIVE HEARINGS ON IMPORTANT QUINCY BILLS

Revised Bill for Neponset Bridge Reduces Cost to $175,000 and Quincy's Share to 15 per cent

No Opposition to Bills for Dredging Town River and Deepening Channel at Wollaston. St. Ry. Bill

NEPONSET BRIDGE

One of the most important hearings before the legislature Thursday, in which the City of Quincy is deeply interested was that before the Committee on Bridges on the bill appropriating $350,000 for the building of a new bridge between Neponset and Quincy. This was the second hearing on this bill. At the first hearing Mayor Stone vigorously opposed on the ground of the excessive expense and again because the bill called for Quincy to pay 20 per cent of the cost of the new bridge.

At the hearing Thursday, the Committee practically agreed on a revision of the bill which should call for an appropriation of $175,000, as the engineer of the Mayor had reported that a substantial iron bridge could be built for that amount. It is also to be provided in the new revised bill that the City of Quincy shall pay but 15 per cent of the cost. Mayor Stone agreed to this proposition.

Of the remaining cost the bill will provide that the railway shall pay 20 per cent, the county of Plymouth 5 per cent, City of Boston, 45 per cent and the county of Norfolk 15 per cent.

TOWN RIVER DREDGING

The two Quincy waterways bills were given hearings Thursday before the committee on Harbors and Public Lands. Both bills were given strong local support and neither met with any opposition. For the Mayor's bill, Representative Piper stood sponsor and opened the hearing by briefly explaining the bill and calling attention to the fact that the requirements of the bill are such as to make it absolutely safe for the State to take up. He said that all it asked was that the Directors of the Port of Boston make an investigation of conditions in Town river and if, in their discretion, they found it feasible to undertake the widening and deepening of the channel then the work should go on under their supervision. He called Frank Fessenden Crane, Commissioner of Water Fronts, Water Ways and Navigation as the first speaker. Mr. Crane stated that it was his intention to be as brief as possible, since there were a number of other speakers and he wanted them all to be heard. He characterized the bill as a purely business proposition with the purpose in view of improving the water front for business pursuits. He described in detail the location and course of Town river, and the various wharf property situated thereon. He said that no public money had been expended on the river since the appropriation of the 51st Congress which amounted to $50,000. Except in a few places, there is no water at the head of navigation in the river, at certain times. He announced that the city was prepared to appropriate $100,000. for a new public dock but until the river was made to accommodate goodly sized vessels that it would be folly to build such a dock. Asked by the chair if he thought the amount asked for in the bill ($25,000) would be enough, Mr. Crane said "Yes, that would be enough to start the commercial end of it and if the city developed enough business, as he expected it would, that the state would probably be asked for more money. He went —Next Summer's military manoeuvres will include an attack on New York city by the New England militia and detachments of the regular army. This force is to be mobilized at New London and Boston and transferred by sea to some point off the Connecticut coast and there landed on the beach. From there a forward movement against New York will follow.

ST. RAILWAY BILL

At the hearing before the legislative labor committee on the A. F. of L. bill for the limitation of the hours of work of the motormen and conductors of the state to nine hours in 11, Chairman Ross called for those of the large number of car men who filled the hearing room who were in opposition to the bill to rise. He estimated that fully three-quarters of those present arose showing a three to one majority against the bill.

The question of the exact meaning of the bill was early brought into discussion and led to specific questions being asked the street car men on this point. Many of the car men who appeared in favor of the bill reported that their unions had voted overwhelmingly in its favor, but when asked as to how the men understood the bill a number replied that they understood and the men voting understood that it meant that they could not be compelled to work more than nine hours in a day, but that it permitted them to work more if they desired to. Other thought it meant that 9 hours in 11 was the limit of the day's work whether the men wanted to work more themselves or not. From what it was said by members of the legislature committee it was apparently believed by them to mean the latter, a compulsory 9-hour day and no more. It was apparent from the testimony that many of the members of unions voting in favor of the bill did so under the misapprehension stated.

John Weaver Sherman appeared as counsel for those in favor of the Bentley bill while Bentley W. Warren led the opposition.

The arguments in favor of the bill put forth that because of the increase in the size of the cars, the number of automobiles, other vehicles and pedestrians in the streets that the work was more wearing than formerly and that 9 hours was enough to work to insure the health of the men and the convenience and safety of the public. It was argued that it meant better service to the public. The statement was made that the average length of service of car men in the state was 3 1-2 years.

The management of the street railway companies opposed the bill on the grounds that the new bill would render it impossible to split up runs without putting on a great number of extra men who could work but a few hours each and consequently could be paid so little money that enough for the purpose could not be obtained; that it would be impossible to arrange runs of nine hours inside of 11 and

LEAP YEAR PARTY BY LADIES' AID

A Leap year party that bids fair to be treasured in memory as one of the prettiest of the season, took place Thursday evening in Colonial hall. It was attended by about fifty couples and the evening proved most enjoyable.

A short intermission took place at ten o'clock, during which refreshments were served after which dancing was again in order until midnight.

The committee in charge included Mrs. Arthur W. Merritt, Mrs. Frank Hobart, Mrs. George E. Sprague and Mrs. John Smith.

The party was given under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid society of the Universalist church.

QUINCY POINT CLUB GUESTS

The Wollaston Methodist club held its monthly meeting Thursday evening with the members of the Quincy Point Men's club as its guests.

Walter Perry, secretary of the Point club, brought the greetings of that organization and invited the Wollaston men to their next meeting. J. A. Sedgwick read the monthly number of the Wollaston Herald and told in a humorous way of his attempts to secure editorial assistance.

The program closed with the discussion of questions of the day by the club members. Refreshments and a social hour were enjoyed.

WORK OF THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

Round Table Talk at First Presbyterian Church

THE SPEAKERS

About fifty Sunday School teachers, officers and the Ladies' Bible Class of the First Presbyterian church met Thursday evening at six o'clock in one of the class rooms of the Sunday school, where they participated of a well-prepared supper, with Dr. James A. Worden, president of the Presbyterian Board of Sabbath School Work, Mr. Forsythe, of Hyde Park, a Sunday school missionary and Rev. Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Thompson, pastor of the United Presbyterian church, were the guests of the evening.

After supper there was a round-table talk and remarks were made by Rev. Mr. Thompson, Mr. Forsythe, Mr. J. A. Matheson and points on Sunday school work by Dr. Worden.

This being over, all assembled in the Sunday-school room and listened to a very impressive address by Dr. Worden.

He spoke of Sunday school as being the greatest organization and the best uplift and help to mankind that was ever formed.

He emphasized the fact that if we want children to grow up true christians, we must teach them when very young to grow up in the right way. He also told of his own life and his experiences during the civil war and later going to Princeton University and studying for the ministry, which was his mother's yding wish and today is head of the Presbyterian Board of Sunday School Work.

Mr. Forsythe also spoke a few words, during which he said he was to leave in a few weeks for Missouri to take up his work there. and of the good work of Dr. Worden and his long life of usefulness.

At four o'clock, Dr. Worden was greeted by about sixty or seventy young people and spoke to them, taking for his subject, " Pray without ceasing."

—A member of the Legislature must have considerable nerve to introduce a bill to abolish the $2 poll tax. The present poll tax is but a small assessment for the support of schools, good roads, etc., which every male inhabitant, of lawful age, should be willing to contribute.—Athol Chronicle.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

VALENTINE'S DAY.

This festival of Cupid is a very different sort of thing from that of yore. The robust frankness with which the old time and unafraid lover put down his sentiments in black and white, has disappeared from our pallid displays of affection.

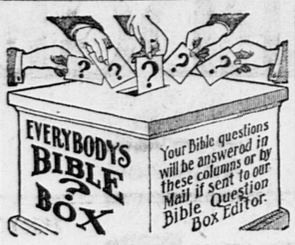

Years ago, if the lacey affairs they sold in the stores were not warm enough in their displays of ardor, the lover took pen and ink and drew his own hearts and cupids, and created his own selection of adjectives to set forth his torrid affection.

They tell about old valentines made by German manufacturers, that on the surface represented a bachelor sitting solitary and dejected in all his forlorn lonesomeness. They you pulled a cleverly concealed string, showing the same man under the revivifying influences of marital affection, wreathed in smiles.

Most of us grown-ups can remember when we too used to dispatch valentines expressing warm sentiment. With what bashful and sheepish faces we looked over the stock at the stationer's! How we debated over the choice, wanting in our heart of hearts to send the most fervent of all, yet not quite daring. And how, having dared to select it, it took another effort of resolution to drop it into the post office box. And then with what trembling eagerness we waited for a reply, or scarcely dared walk the streets for fear of meeting our inamorata face to face!

Our young folks of to-day have too keen a sense of humor for that sort of thing. Where her mother cherished the fond missive in her bosom, her daughter of 1912 would show it to all her mates, and great would be the laughter for many a day. And it is just as well. Our young folks do not do well to drop the impersonal comradeships of boy and girl life for the precocious sentiments of calf love.

So Valentine's day has descended to a smaller growth of youngsters, who swap picture post cards expressing sentiments which their innocent little hearts do not recognize to be loaded with dynamite.

Q.—Has woman a soul? We read that man "became a living soul," but nothing is said about the woman having a soul! Hence my question. (L B.)

Answer.—As the Scriptures are silent on this subject, and as much as the gentler and fairer sex is to be admired, to be in harmony with the Bible, and to answer the question therefrom, (however painful it may be to state the fact) it is necessary to set forth the awful truth that women do not have souls! But what is still more painful to relate, according to the Bible, man does not possess a soul, either! Some good, well-meaning people who have read their Bibles but not wth careful thought have been rather careless in the use of language when referring to Scriptural matters. No one has a soul; but every living, breathing creature is a soul. In the quotation above it is stated that "man became a living soul" and not that he was given a soul. The breath of life, the energizing principle imparted to the body by the Creator, was not the soul, any more than the body alone is the soul. It was the union of the two, the life and the body, which produced the intelligent creature—the soul. Woman, therefore, is as much a soul as man.

THE DYNAMITE ARRESTS.

Every good citizen of this republic will hope for a fair and speedy trial of the 54 men who have been arrested for alleged conspiracy in the dynamite plots.

If these men are innocent of this charge, a grave injustice has been done, not merely to them, but to the organizations they represent, composed of men who are doing the best they can to advance their scale of living to a clean and helpful American basis.

If these men are guilty of this bloody conspiracy, they are striking at the very foundations of this republic. Our government is a joint partnership. In a business concern, if some of the partners refuse to abide by the rules of the company, and plunder and destroy the property of the other members, the end of the partnership is in sight. Similarly in a partnership formed for the purpose of government.

The fact that courts have often been unjust and that capital has often bribed officials, is no excuse for resorting to dynamite. In the long run the ballot will be a more efficient weapon than violence. If the battle is to be fought with dynamite, the capitalist can buy more than any one else. No legislatures, courts, nor congresses, can long stand out against the voice of the people expressed by legal methods, provided that voice is in accordance with the principles of human justice.

NATHANIEL C. PEMBER.

Funeral services for Nathaniel C. Pember, brother of Mrs. John Ramsdell, were held at M. E. church, Plymouth, on Wednesday.

Mr. Pember at one time resided in Atlantic where he made himself very popular and won many friends. For the past eight years he has been with the Lord Electric Co., of New York City, where he won the reputation of being industrious, temperate, and of unquestioned moral character. He had charge of the completion of the electric work at the New York Public Library building, 42d street.

Many and beautiful were the floral offerings sent, among them being a set piece from the Sympathy Friends of the New York Public Library; beautiful pillow with the name Nat as he was familarly called and flat bouquets of sweet peas, pinks and violets were in profusion.

Selections from the hymns "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere" "Saved by Grace" and "Gathering Home" were sung by a quartet.

Four brothers and three sisters mourn his loss.

CHINA ELECTS YUAN SHI KAI

Unanimous Ballot by Assembly In Favor of Premier

CONSIDERED MASTER STROKE

Statesman Who Wields Great Influence Over Manchus and Imperialist Troops Takes Place of Sun, Whose Resignation Is Accepted With Regret—Tribute to His Purity of Purpose and Self Sacrifice

Nanking, Feb. 16.—Yuan Shi Kai, one of China's foremost statesmen and premier in the declining days of the Manchu dynasty, was elected president of the republic of China, succeeding Sun Yat Sen, who resigned in Yuan's favor. Yuan was was chosen president by the Republican assembly after it had accepted the resignation of Sun and his cabinet.

Word of his elevation was immediately telegraphed to Yuan in Pekin by his southern representative, Tang Shao Yi. Yuan was asked to come to Nanking at his earliest convenience to be sworn in and to take part in counsels over the formation of a new cabinet.

Tang Shao Yi is prominently spoken of as the first republican premier. It is virtually assured that Sun Yat Sen, Wu Ting Fang and General Li Yan Heng, formerly commander-in-chief of the revolutionary army, will have places in the new cabinet.

The election of Yuan is regarded as a master stroke by statecraft on the part of the republicans because of Yuan's vast influence with the Manchus and his unquestioned authority over the imperialist troops. By his elevation the imperialist army of the north is practically placed beneath the republican flag.

There was a touching scene in the assembly when Sun handed in his resignation. The letter in which he offers to lay down the office of chief executive says:

"Yuan Shi Kai has declared that he adheres unconditionally to the national cause. He would surely prove a loyal servant of the state. Besides this Yuan Shi Kai is a man of constructive ability, upon whom our united nation looks with the hope that he will bring about the consolidation of its interests. The happiness of our country depends upon your choice. Farewell."

The national assembly afterwards passed a resolution paying great tribute to Sun, as follows: "Such an example of purity of purpose and self sacrifice is unparalleled in history. It was solely due to his magnanimity and modesty that north China was won over."

WANTS CHARGE OF SHILOH

"Anointed Man of God" Seeks Aid of Governor of Maine

Augusta, Me., Feb. 16.—Governor Plaisted gave an interview to Rev. Arthur Hersee of Vancouver, B. C., who has announced his claim to be the "Anointed man of God to take charge of Shiloh," as the successor to Rev. Frank W. Sandford, the convicted leader of the Holy Ghost and Us society. Hersee charged that Shiloh under the present system is a disgrace and a menace to the state, and asked Plaisted to help him get possession of the colony.

He desired the governor to force Rev. Charles E. Holland, the new leader, to turn Shiloh over to him. Plaisted informed Hersee that he had no authority in the matter, and advised him that if he had a complaint to make, he should see the county attorney of Androscoggin county.

RICHESON'S BIRTHDAY

His Thirty-Sixth In Marked Contrast to That of a Year Ago

Boston, Feb. 16.—Yesterday was Clarence V. T. Richeson's birthday. It was in marked contrast to that of a year ago, when passing the 35-year mark among friends and those who were near and dear to him, besides receiving many gifts appropriate for the occasion.

In marked contrast was the celebration yesterday of his 36th birthday confined in a cell behind steel bars in the county jail without a solitary message from friends or relatives or a word on the occasion from the guards who watch his cell. He spent the day walking up and down his cell and reading magazines.

DOINGS ON THE STAGE OF

LOCAL AND BOSTON THEATRES

"THE COUNTRY BOY."

If you want to do a little "looking backward," you substantial business men who are the envy of the youth of today; if you want to see yourself as others saw you and as you have probably looked the picture over in quiet moments when memory held sway and led you back to the first few weeks of your experience of life in a great city, just go into the Park Theatre, Boston, and see "The Country Boy" and spend an evening swallowing the lump in your throat and feeling a sort of delightful pity for your yesterday self. It's all there,— the whole boarding house. They only show you the basement, dining room and the dingy parlor on the stage but you know that the hall bedroom, which was about the size of one of your mother's clothes closets at home, is upstairs somewhere, and that the bigger rooms that you couldn't afford are there also. The never varying "grub" is there in small portions. The landlady with her groanings over bills is there. The letter from home and the week end when you find you haven't got the wherewith to square up with the landlady and you hang out until you think she is in bed and then you creep in to find that she has left word that she wants to see you before you go to bed and she hasn't gone to bed at all and hears you come in and comes down to have the little talk with you, it's all there.

That's the setting which most of us who began life as country boys stepped into when we first bowed acquaintance to the city. It is enough in itself to bring tears to the eyes of the old stager, but when a young hopeful is introduced and put through the old, familiar paces and you have to sit by, powerless to help him and see the thing happen again just as it happened years ago,—Well, you needn't be ashamed. The fellow next you is doing the same thing. He may have his program up close to his nose, but he's back there, all right, looking out through the rain.

CASTLE SQUARE.

"The Product of the Mill" begins its fourth week at the Castle Square on Monday, and it is in every way duplicating the success of "The End of the Bridge." In it, Miss McFadden has written a strongly moving and emotional drama of actual life, and from act to act it discloses realites that take the strongest hold of an audience. Mother love pervades the entire play, and that in itself is sufficient testimony to its worth and to the reasons for its success. The theatre is crowded at every performance and most enthusiastic in every way is its reception.

Mary Young heads the cast with her impersonation of the mother, and as the two little children, Henrietta McDannel and Madeline Moore could not be equalled. John Craig plays the father with skill and finesse and George Hassell contributes a fine character study as old Hinks. Others in the cast are Donald Meek, Walter Walker, Al Roberts, Robert Middlemass, Mabel Montgomery and Mabel Colcord. Seats should be secured at once for the two weeks to come of "The Product of the Mill" at the Castle Square.

NAZIMOVA AT HOLLIS STREET

All Boston is ringing with the praises of Nazimova, who enters upon her second week at the Hollis Street Theatre on Monday next. The engagement will be all too short at best, but in addition to the regular Wednesday and Saturday matinees, a special afternoon performance will be given on Thursday, Washington's Birthday. Seldom in Boston's theatrical history has there been such a flood of enthusiastic commendation visited upon any stage favorite as has surged upon the once Russian, now almost wholly American, dramatic genius.

A resume of the reviews that followed the opening performance of "The Marionettes" would contain an array of adjectives that would be startling in its variety and that would leave the dictionary almost a skeleton.

Nazimova's art has, for seven years been known and appreciated in Boston, but never before have such tributes been paid to it. It may well be that appearing for the first time in comedy, she exhibits phases of it that always existed, but with which the public was unfamiliar until set forth so brilliantly in the French comedy of the modest, unassuming and unsophisticated wife, who wins the love of a neglectful husband through her transformation into one of the butterflies of fashion, to whom he has always paid such devoted court.

B. F. KEITH'S.

Nora Bayes and Jack Norworth, the world-famous song writers, musical comedy stars and composers, will make their first appearance in Boston in several seasons at B. F. Keith's Theatre this week. For this season these two clever and versatile people have arranged one of the most novel and entertaining acts ever seen in America. It is entitled "The Musical Surprise Party," and it everything that the name implies. Miss Bayes and Mr. Norworth have surrounded themselves with a company of clever people, most of whom have never appeared in Boston. No other song composers on the American stage can boast of a longer list of song hits than Bayes and Norworth. Their "Harvest Moon," "Wise Old Owl," "How Can They Tell I'm Irish," "Turn Off Your Light, Mister Moon," and "Has Anybody Here Seen Kelly," have been whistled and sung all over the country. In addition to these popular successes Bayes and Norworth will introduce several new compositions written by them, and never before sung in Boston. Bert Kalmar and Jessie Brown, the novelty dancing duo, will return after a long absence with a brand-new series of eccentric dances. Franklyn Ardell & Co., will be seen for the first time here in an original comedy, "The Suffragette," which is described as a scream from start to finish. El Cota the xylophone king, will introduce several splendid selections; and other big features yet to be announced will round out one of the best shows of the season.

WILLIAM FARNUM,
In "The Littlest Rebel," at the Boston Theatre.

PLYMOUTH THEATRE.

The fifth and positively last week of the engagement of Miss Viola Allen in Rachel Crothers' greatest play "The Herfords," at the Plymouth Theatre, Boston, will begin Monday. If you haven't seen this absorbing play of mother-love don't lose this last opportunity. If you fail to witness this play you will always regret it. "The Herfords," which deals admirably with a modern subject that all modern women are combating with, has proven one of the greatest plays in recent years. It is a play of mother-love versus career and the manner in which the former conquers is best told in the last act in the scene between mother and daughter. This scene which is being discussed by all those who have witnessed the play, is one of the best scenes which Boston has witnessed in a long time. The mother-love herein expressed, the ingenuousness of the 16 year old daughter as she confesses her love affair with the school chauffeur—the shock to the mother as she realizes her baby has grown and formed an attachment for one of the opposite sex and the mother's tactful "third degree" of the daughter is a work of art. There will be an extra matinee Washington's birthday.

STRIPPED OF HIS OFFICE

Row Among Shoulder Straps Results in Ainsworth's Removal

Washington, Feb. 16.—Major General Ainsworth, adjutant general of the army, was stripped of his office by order of President Taft and will appear before a court martial on charges said to embrace conduct prejudicial to good order and discipline and insubordination. His relief from duty was brought about in a letter to him from the secretary of war, which bristled with sharp criticism.

General Ainsworth's removal is considered the outcome of many years' struggle for control between the line and the staff of the army. Major General Wood, chief of staff, leads a contingent which believes control should be vested in those officers actually in touch with the fighting strength. Others, among whom Ainsworth was a leading figure, have contended that supervision should be vested in the heads of powerful bureaus.

ALL ROADS LEAD TO ELKS' BALL

All roads tonight will lead to Music hall where the fifth annual charity ball of Quincy lodge of Elks will be had. From the tickets already sold for the affair it promises to be the most successful of any previous efforts. The decorations of the hall will be on a most elaborate scale. The decorators began their work Thursday and it will require the greater part of today to complete the decorations. A glance into the hall this morning gave a little insight into the decorations, and they are certainly fine. Music for the occasion will be furnished by Wilson's orchestra of eight pieces. Cars for all parts of the city will leave the hall after the ball.

SONS OF ST. GEORGE.

To celebrate its twenty-sixth anniversary, Granite Lodge, 193, O. S. S. G., of Quincy will give a minstrel show and ball in Music Hall on Washington's birthday eve. Those who have witnessed the rehearsals for the show say that it will be the best exhibition of the black face art that has been seen in Quincy for some time. John J. Phelan is director, Matt Fay will be the interlocutor and on the ends wil be seen: "Phil" Savard, Bill Collins, Herb. Collins, Geo. Davey, Chas. Vaner, Roy Prout.

TRAIN CRASH IN MAINE

Lives of Engineer, Fireman and Brakeman Are Sacrificed

North Yarmouth, Me., Feb. 16.—Engineer Elmer Barnes, Fireman Raymond B. Jordan and Brakeman Arthur Corliss lost their lives in a head-on collision of two freight trains on the Grand Trunk railway here. The other trainmen escaped with only slight injuries.

Corliss was still alive when found, but he was pinned under a burning box car so that he could not be moved, and the would-be rescuers could do nothing but administer chloroform to render him unconscious before the flames reached him.

The trains had orders to meet here, but the Portland-bound train, on the first locomotive of which Jordan and Corliss were riding, passed the station at the rate of forty miles an hour, and, turning a bend, struck the train from Portland, which had nearly stopped in readiness to take the switch.

Kansas Women Open Campaign For Complete Suffrage

Kansas City, Kan., Feb. 16.—Kansas women here fired the first real gun in their campaign for complete suffrage. The occasion was a luncheon by the Wyandotte Equal Suffrage association to the officers of the Kansas state organization. Mrs. Lucy B. Johnson, wife of the chief justice of the supreme court of Kansas and president of the Kansas State Equal Suffrage association, said in part:

"The extension of political freedom to the Mary Anns of Kansas seems not only to have been divided into three steps, but to move in quarter of a century cycles. The first step was school suffrage, granted fifty years ago. The second, municipal suffrage, granted twenty-five years ago, and the third step, which will bring us right up to John's side, we trust, will be taken next November."

care for the extra traffic at rush hours which did not come within the 11 hours' limit. On the other hand they urged that the men themselves do not want it, that many of those voting for it so voted in the belief it allowed them the discretion of working more hours if they wished and that it must mean the cutting down of the wages of the men.

Mr. Warren plainly stated that it must inevitably mean either the abandoning of many trips and curtailing the service to the public or the cutting down of the men's wages.

Mr. Sherman, Mr. William French chairman of the conference board of the Bay State Street Railway Co.'s employees, Patrick F. Sheehan secretary of the latter board, Alexander Smythe of Reading, William E. Sproul of Lowell, John J. Kane of Holyoke, Peter J. Rooney of Worcester, Patrick J. O'Brien of Springfield, C. G. Symonds of Lawrence, James B. Whalen, Moses Shea and others appeared in favor of the bill.

John Bendie of Salem, Walter Baker of Taunton, Michael A. Butler of Worcester, John H. Parker of Marlboro and other car men representing many of the street railways of the state appeared against the bill. They agreed that the work was easier than years ago and did not want the bill because it would reduce their wages and they wanted the privilege if they needed some extra money to work extra time if they wanted to. A large number of other street railway men were present to appear against the bill but time was not allowed owing to the lateness of the hour.

Superintendent of Transportation A. S. Richey of the Bay State St. Ry. Co., explained the effect the new bill would have and the difficulties to be encountered in arranging the runs under it. He said it would be absolutely impossible to adjust without either dropping many trips or putting many more men on for very short runs. He quoted figures to show that the companies under the new bill would either be obliged to drop 3498 trips or 11.4 percent of the total trips now run or employ 3294 more men or 46 percent of the total number now employed at a cost of about $1,238,600 or 21 per cent of the total wages now paid. He showed that the average length of service of the men at present in the service over one year in the state is 8.14 years and that 551 men or 7.7 per cent of those employed 20 years or more ago are still in the service. In 20 years the open car capacity has increased 48.5 per cent and that of closed cars 36 per cent Twenty years ago no cars were equipped with air brakes while now 31.6 per cent are so equipped. No cars then had arc headlights while 27.8 per cent now have them. But 36 interurban cars in the whole state are not so equipped. The increase in the weight of the rail has been 54 per cent.

Vice President C. S. Sergeant of the Boston Elevated Company said he felt in opposing the bill that he was speaking in behalf of the men themselves. He explained the impossibility of taking care of the rush hour traffic under the new bill for the reason that these periods, morning and night, extended over the 11-hour consecutive limit. Aside from that on the majority of runs they are so divided that in the middle of a man's time he has an hour and a half lay-off and rest. Under the new bill in these cases the hour cut off would have to come out of this time to come within the 11 hours which he did not believe the men would like or would be good for them or the service. Further than this as the men are paid by the hour it must mean a reduction in their wages. The company could not afford to pay for work which was done. The street railway business is different from manufacturing or similar industries in that in the latter there is a possibility that a man may do as much work in nine hours as he did in 10. This would be impossible in running cars. The bill would mean a great cutting down of the number of trips his road could give the public or the putting on of many hundreds of extra men which he did not believe could possibly be hired for such short runs as would be necessary.

New York, Feb. 16.—Twenty-five thousand dollars in currency was stolen from a taxicab in the heart of the financial district by three highwaymen who sprang into the vehicle and overpowered W. F. Smith and Frank Wardwell, messengers of the East River National bank.

Both messengers were badly injured and the robbers escaped with the money, $15,000 in $5 bills and $10,000 in $100 bills. The currency was being transported from the Produce Exchange bank in the lower part of the city.

TOWN RIVER DREDGING

on to say that large concerns such as the Quincy Electric Light and Power Co., and the granite industries had to use scows and lighters as a means of transportation between their plants and the deep water. "At a conservative estimate" said Mr. Crane "I believe there would be a difference of $30 to $60 cost on every vessel that came up the river, if the river were made deep enough to accommodate them."

Mayor Stone spoke next and reiterated Mr. Crane's remark about the proposed public dock. He said there was no doubt about the city's end of it, and explained that last year's legislature gave the city the power to borrow money for the specific purpose of building the dock, but the city had not exercised its power pending the outcome of this petition. The mayor enumerated some of the business interests that would be affected by the proposed new legislation and said that Town river represented the city's principal shipping points, and further that he knew that Quincy could double its shipping busines if this act went into effect. He stated that the $25,000. would be ample to clear all obstructions and make it easy for the city to develop its commercial prospects.

Attorney Arthur G. Wadleigh, representing the Baker Yacht Basin, strongly favored the passage of the bill and said that his clients had a large interest at stake. He declared the Baker Yacht basin to be the best in the state if not in the country and had an investment representing $300,000. He emphasized the fact that the work proposed would be done under state supervision and that in itself would protect the state's money from any private schemers.

He was followed by Alfred O. Diack, President of the Granite Manufacturers' Association, who dealt chiefly with advantages of the proposed public dock, the establishment of which hung on the success of this bill. Ex-Representative Peter T. Fallon said he had shipped more granite on Town river than any man living and that the granite shipments went to 100,000 tons per year. He stated that the river in its present unnavigable condition was a matter of great hindrance and loss to the granite interests. He demonstrated the advantages that would accrue if certain points in the river channel were straightened and pointed out on the map just where those points are.

Captain Hiram Phillips claimed that as a citizen of Quincy for 50 years and as a resident on the banks of Town river he was in a good position to testify to the infinite possibilities for commercial purposes that the river possesses. He summed the present condition up tersely by saying that "the banks of the river are too near together and the bottom is too near the top" which raised a general laugh.

Captain Daniel Higgins, a sailing master, state and United States pilot for a half century said he knew every foot of Town river and had not the slightest doubt but what the river could be made navigable and safe enough for the vessels that now have to lighten their cargoes a long distance. He cited a case where he had great difficulty last fall in getting a small vessel up to Johnson's lumber wharf, and which task would be easy if the provisions of the bill were put into effect.

Ex-Mayor John O. Hall was called upon to speak but said he could only endorse the statements of Mayor Stone and Mr. Crane. He wanted to go on record as strongly favoring the desired legislation. Senator Barnes, Representative Leslie and J. Q. A. Field were also so recorded.

There were several others present in favor of the bill who did not have an opportunity to speak among whom was Elijah P. Barrows who represented the Town River yacht club, 200 strong, all of whom were in favor of the bill.

CHANNEL DEEPENING.

Representative Leslie then took up the bill which was presented on his own petition and which provides for widening and deepening the channel in Quincy Bay that leads up to the Wollaston and Squantum yacht clubs. Mr. Leslie said that the members of both clubs had decided that an appropriation of $6000 would cover all necessary costs and he had therefore amended his bill to read that way. He explained that the state now owns the shore property adjoining the clubhouses and that any improvement would be to the state's interests as well as to the residents of that section and the yachtsmen. The Squantum Yacht club was represented by Commodore Drew, Ex-representative Badger and Hamilton Flood while the Wollaston Yacht club spokesmen were Commodore Edward A. Bean, ex-commodore C. E. Crosscup, Vice-Commodore Charles Austin, F. F. Taylor and C. A. Pinkham. The yachtsmen told of the way the channel had filled with sand and of the immediate necessity of dredging. It was explained to the committee that the combined membership of the two clubs was about 350, most of whom are voters. No opposition appeared and the committee announced that it would probably take a trip to Quincy and view the sites of the proposed work at Norfolk Downs and Town river before recommending legislature to General Court. Those present were entirely satisfied that the cases had been presented to the committee in a forceful and intelligent manner and freely predicted that favorable action would result therefrom.

NO REASON FOR LACK OF WATER

A Boston paper speaking of the break in the water main in Quincy Tuesday morning says:

"About one-half of the supply of 5,000,000 gallons in the emergency reservoir at Wollaston was used up in supplying the city of Quincy with water Tuesday, because of the break in the metropolitan main at East Milton. Of the remaining supply 700,000 gallons, in round figures, is not available because upwards of two feet of the surface water is frozen.

Tuesday was the first time the emergency supply has been used since the reservoir was built ten years ago, and its value is now recognized by hundreds of Quincy residents who heretofore have not given much thought to such a contingency. For two hours or more Tuesday there were sections of Quincy that had no water, and the Metropolitan Water and Sewerage Board is investigating the matter, for there was no reason, so far as the officials know, why the supply should have been cut off at all."

UNION MEN IN DYNAMITE PLOT

Evidence Is Given Out by District Attorney Miller

INDICTED MEN SEEK BONDS

Iron Workers' Officials Unable to Comply With Requests For Assistance, as Aggregate Required For All Reaches $340,000—Young, Eastern Business Agent For Union, Surrenders Himself at Boston

Indianapolis, Feb. 16.—Sensational and specific charges that the dynamite conspiracy was conducted with full knowledge of members of the executive board of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers, including President Frank M. Ryan; that the whole conspiracy, extending over years, was recorded on paper, and that Ortie E. McManigal, the confessed dynamiter, was shifted shuttle-like over the country on missions of destruction, were made public last night by District Attorney Miller.

Mr. Miller announced the contents of an indictment known as that covering "unconsummated acts" of the conspiracy, and it is to be the basis upon which the government intends to conduct its prosecution.

The indictment charges Ryan, Herbert S. Hockin, M. J. Young, John T. Butler and Frank C. Webb with conducting the conspiracy through the mail and names all of the fifty-four defendants as abettors.

It says that a regular system of pointing out non-union steel and iron construction jobs was carried on and that the executive members not only contributed money to buy explosives, but assisted in the work which McManigal was to do.

The basis of all the charges lies chiefly in 40,000 letters and telegrams taken from the iron workers' international headquarters. These letters purport to be between Ryan, Hockin, Webb and various other officials and business agents.

Official reports received by the government show that only six out of the fifty-four men indicted in the conspiracy have not been arrested.

Those not arrested or in custody, according to government advices, are: J. J. McCray, formerly an iron worker of Wheeling, W. Va., but said to have left there; J. W. Irwin, Peoria, Ills., local union official; Frank K. Painter, Omaha, local union official, said to have left there; Milton H. Davis, Philadelphia, former member executive board; Patrick Ryan, Chicago, local business agent, and William K. Benson, president of the Detroit Federation of Labor.

District Attorney Miller was in communication with federal authorities at Boston in reference to the search for Young, who could not be found Wednesday. Miller said the government was particularly anxious to apprehend Young, who is one of the five executive board members indicted. The other members are Frank M. Ryan, also president of the iron workers; Herbert S. Hockin of Detroit, John T. Butler of Buffalo and Patrick A. Cooley of New Orleans.

Appeals came to Ryan from many points asking the Iron Workers' International union to assist indicted men in securing bail and thus prevent them from going to jail. Some of the appeals were said to have come from those who had escaped serving of warrants for their arrest, and who were endeavoring to be assured that they would not have to go to jail.

To the appeals generally the iron workers' officials replied that the union was in no position to furnish bonds, as the aggregate of $340,000 required for all the men made it impossible.

Young Surrenders
Young Gives Himself Up

Boston, Feb. 16.—Michael J. Young, eastern business agent of the Structural Bridge and Iron Workers, was surrendered yesterday afternoon to United States Marshal Murchie. Melvin O. Adams, representing Henry V. Cunningham, counsel for Young, made the arrangements for producing him.

Young was immediately arraigned before Commissioner Hayes, charged with conspiracy in connection with the dynamite cases in Indianapolis. Bail was fixed at $10,000.

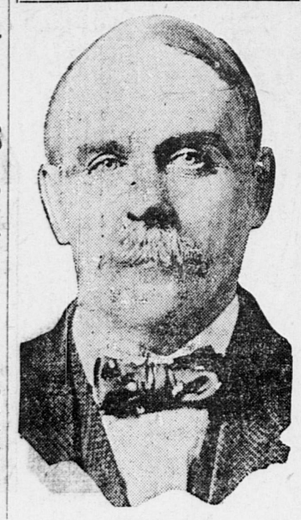

As Young surrendered himself in the corridor of the fourth floor of the federal building, Frank J. Higgins, the second Boston man under arrest in connection with the wholesale dynamite prosecution, was being formally arraigned before Hayes. Attorney Dorsey urged a reduction in the bail, fixed at $5000, claiming that his client has always enjoyed an excellent reputation in the community. Mr. Garland stated that he would submit the request to United States District Attorney Miller. The hearing in the cases of Higgins and Young was put over to Saturday.

Washington, Feb. 16.—The Roosevelt national committee opened headquarters here and issued a statement declaring an analysis of the national political situation showed the almost certain defeat of the Republican party with Mr. Taft as the standard bearer and a similar assurance of victory if Roosevelt leads the party.

McGill McCormick, the former Chicago publisher, is in charge of the headquarters. Jackies Object to Inoculation Against Typhoid Norfolk, Feb. 16.—Because several hundred men refused to submit to inoculation against typhoid fever, 200 men on the battleship Vermont, now at Guantanamo bay, are in irons, according to reports received in Norfolk.

It is rumored the trouble started when the men were told that they must submit to inoculation against the dreaded malady, because of the prevalence of typhoid in Cuba. Several hundred on the Vermont protested, saying they were in good health and did not want to be made sick in an unhealthy country. They claim scores of sailors have been made seriously ill by inoculation recently.

The trouble grew so alarming, the report says, it was necessary to call for assistance from other ships in the fleet, and the battleship Minnesota responded. When reserves from the Minnesota reached the Vermont trouble was averted. The 200 men in irons will be tried by special court martial.

Pittsburgh, Feb. 16.—That a man can live with a silver spoon eight inches in length in his stomach was proved in the dissecting laboratory of the University of Pittsburgh when a spoon of this dimension was taken from the abdomen of a man. Death in the case was caused by pneumonia and not by the foreign object in the stomach.

Dr. Edgerton, an instructor of the medical department of the university, stated that the spoon may have been in the stomach for months or perhaps years, and it was lying in a snug position against the wall of the stomach and in no way interfered with the passage of food.

Thomas Jennings, a negro, was convicted of the murder in Chicago of Clarence B. Miller, a railroad official.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

TOASTED BREAD.

THERE are few households in which at some time or other there is not dry bread to be disposed of. Very often this is thrown away. It is too bad that it should be wasted. With the thrifty housewife its uses are legion.

One excellent means of using up dry bread is in making toast. The ways of serving toast are many, and as a breakfast dish it is nearly always acceptable.

Hot With Butter.

Buttered toast is the usual kind. If properly prepared buttered toast is not to be despised. Here is one way of making it:

Buttered Toast.—Cut some bread a day old into slices half an inch thick, toast evenly before a clear fire and butter abundantly on both sides.

Put the buttered toast on a hot plate, piled one piece on top of another; cut them through into triangles or squares and serve very hot.

Creamed Toast.—Toast slices of two days' old bread, dip quickly in hot salt water, butter and lay in a flat pan; then pour a little cream over it and place in a hot oven for about five minutes.

Take up on a dish and pour two tablespoonfuls of cream on each slice; place the platter in the oven just long enough to heat through and serve at once.

A Health Food.

Whole Wheat Toast.—Take whole wheat bread which is a day old. Cut in thin slices and toast slowly until a golden brown.

Spread with butter to which are added dry mustard, paprika and onion juice to suit the taste.

Dust with a little grated cheese and set in the oven to toast the cheese slightly before serving.

Minced Toast.—Mince any meat you wish to use. Season it with pepper, salt or herbs.

Moisten the meat with gravy or cream. Make all thoroughly hot in a stewpan without reaching the boiling point.

Place the meat on squares of buttered toast.

Ornament the tops with egg yolk, chopped parsley, etc., and serve on a hot dish.

HOW TO DO CHOPS.

LAMB or mutton chops are best broiled. Broiling requires some attention and patience, for if the meat is not frequently turned it will be burned.

If the broiling is done by a coal fire there must be neither flame nor smoke. Grease the broiler a double one, with fat, place the chops in it and hold it near the coals while slowly counting twelve. Turn over and expose the other side for the same length of time, counting as before. Keep turning for about a minute, then hold farther from the fire and turn until the chops are brown.

The Broiling Process.

Just before removing from the fire season with salt and pepper and expose to the coals for a few seconds so the seasoning may cook in.

When cooked place on a platter spread with butter and garnish with parsley, watercress or lemon.

Nourishing and appetizing is a tender, well broiled mutton chop. It is best prepared by removing all skin and most of the fat. When broiled it may be seasoned with one finely sliced tomato from which the seeds have been removed and which is seasoned with salt or a little vinegar and sugar.

Breaded and Broiled Chops.—Take as many chops as required, trim off a little of the fat if necessary, brush them over with a little warmed butter, then at once, while the butter is still warm, dip them in freshly made white bread crumbs.

Heat the gridiron, rub it well with a piece of the fat you trimmed off, lay on the chops, broil over a quick, clear fire, turning them about every two minutes—they will take from eight to ten minutes—brown them nicely on each side, lay on a very hot dish and sprinkle a little finely chopped parsley over each.

A Novel Method.

Italian Chops.—Take nice loin chops and trim away nearly all the fat. Fry these lightly in a hot dry pan, set in a stewpan and dredge thickly with brown flour.

Cut in slices two or three large onions, season with black pepper and fry till a golden brown. Scatter the onions over the chops, and into the pan pour enough hot stock to cover the surface.

Have a pint of chestnuts boiled and peeled. Add these and place a cover on the stewpan and cook the contents slowly for two hours.

To serve take up the chestnuts and onions, pile in the center of a hot dish, arrange the chops around, strain the gravy, thicken and pour slowly over the chops.

Scatter chopped parsley over the chestnuts and serve.

HAS REVOLUTIONIZED COOKING

Famous English Chef Who Worked Out and Perfected Popular System of Paper Bag Cooking.

Women readers of this paper will be interested to learn that we have arranged to publish a series of articles on the famous Soyer system of paper bag cooking with recipes that have been carefully worked out by M. Soyer and Martha McCulloch Williams, the well known American cooking expert. The system of paper bag cooking, once understood, has been eagerly adopted by housewives and cooks all over the country.

Some months ago M. Nicholas Soyer, chef of Brooks' Club, London—himself one of the world's most noted living chefs, and grandson of that Soyer, "the immortal Alexis," who has been called the gastronomic regenerator of the Nineteenth Century—worked out and perfected a system of cooking in paper bags.

After years of study and effort he this—and then he told of his system and its advantages over the old pot and kettle method.

M. Soyer's system of paper bag cookery is unquestionably fast revolutionizing household cooking in England, for a thousand years noted fo its ultra conservatism. All classes c housewives are hailing it with delight; and, to cap the climax of praise which has risen about M. Soyer's ears, his fellow chefs have pronounced his paper bag system of cooking a practical success in every way, and have adopted it for much of their cooking.

PAPER BAG COOKING CONVERT

Martha McCulloch Williams Declares Soyer System Is Latest Gift to Woman's Greatest Art.

Mrs. Martha McCulloch Williams, one of America's foremost cooking authorities, is a strong advocate of paper bag cooking. She has prepared a number of recipes for good dishes that will be printed in the series of articles on M. Soyer's famous system of paper bag cooking that we have arranged to run.

Mrs. Williams proclaims herself joyously a selfmade cook, and mighty proud of her ability in that line. Indeed she says she thinks it a shame that so many millions are wasted in the endowment of colleges, libraries and so on—the money would bring so much greater increment of happiness and human comfort were she endowed liberally enough to permit of her cooking all the time, and all the things she likes.

"I am keenly interested in public affairs—almost as much so as in paper bags. But you couldn't chase me with the ballot—to give it to women would mean the spoiling of two excellent-good things. 'The profession of woman' I regard as the finest in the world—and sufficient to satisfy the most supreme talent. But in cooking lies my real enthusiasm. It is the one art that might tempt me into capital letters. And paper bags are the last best gift of it."

Mrs. Williams keeps house, and delights in dinners for six—which she cooks and serves herself. Thus what she has to say in this series carries the weight of experience.

QUEER RACES OF MEN

Explorer Tells of His Discoveries In the Heart of Africa

Los Angeles, Feb. 16.—Dr. Carl Kumm, African explorer and scientist, arrived here en route to Washington, where he will lay evidence before the heads of the National Geographical society that he has discovered men with the faces of dogs and of birds living in the heart of the "Dark Continent."

"I have proof," declared Kumm, "that I have found negroes with the faces of dogs. They spoke in a low guteral bark not unlike that of the canine.

"In another part of Africa, far from the haunts of white men, I discovered a tribe of negroes who ran about like storks on one leg. Their other leg was never used and they carried it bent or drawn taut.

"In still another part of Africa there are negroes whose faces are virtually like the beak of a bird. They live in trees."

A FIRM UNION MAN

Governor of Arizona Declines to Use Non-Union Built Stand

Phoenix, Ariz., Feb. 16.—Governor Hunt, the newly installed executive of Arizona, created a mild stir just after he had subscribed to the oath of office by refusing to occupy a reviewing stand built by non-union labor. The governor and his party retired to the capitol, while another stand was being erected by union men. After it had been completed the governor and his friends took seats and remained until the parade was over.

The inaugural ceremony was simple. The new governor-to-be walked to the capitol, declining all offers of automobiles. After the inaugural ceremonies, a parade composed of military, civic bodies and school children was reviewed by Governor Hunt, William J. Bryan and others from the rotunda of the capitol.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

FRECKLES

By Gene Stratton-Porter

COPYRIGHT, 1904, BY DOUBLEDAY, PAGE & CO.

SYNOPSIS.

Freckles, a homeless boy, is hired by Boss McLean to guard the expensive timber in the Limberlost from timber thieves.

Freckles does his work faithfully, makes friends with the birds and yearns to know more about nature. He lives with Mr. and Mrs. Duncan.

He resolves to get books and educate himself. He becomes interested in a huge pair of vultures and calls his bird friends his "chickens."

Some of the trees he is guarding are worth $1,000 each. Freckles' books arrive. He receives a call from Wessner.

Wessner attempts to bribe Freckles to betray his trust, and Freckles whips him. McLean overhears them and witnesses the fight.

Freckles' honesty saves a precious tree. He finds the nest of the vultures and is visited by a beautiful young girl.

She calls Freckles McLean's son. Freckles calls her "the angel" and helps the Bird Woman in taking photographs. McLean promises to adopt Freckles.

Freckles and the angel become very friendly. Assisted by the Bird Woman, they drive Wessner and Black Jack, timber thieves, from the Limberlost.

McLean fears more trouble, but Freckles insists upon being the sole guard of the timber. Freckles calls upon the angel's father.

The angel receives him as her equal, and her father is kind. Mrs. Duncan has exciting adventures in the Limberlost.

The Bird Woman and the angel again visit Freckles, and Freckles falls in love with the angel. The angel kisses him.

Freckles is bound and gagged by Black Jack's gang, and the timber thieves start felling a very valuable tree.

Wessner is to kill Freckles after the tree is stolen. The angel makes a daring effort to save Freckles and the tree.

McLean's men, notified by the angel, rush to save Freckles. All the timber thieves except Black Jack are captured.

CHAPTER XIX.

FRECKLES OFFERS HIS LIFE.

THE gang had been carefully sifted, and McLean now felt that there was not a man in it that was not trustworthy.

They had all heard of the angel's plucky ride for Freckles' relief, and several of them had been in the rescue party. When she was ensconced on the wagon load of tenting she sat on a roll of canvas like a queen on her throne. There was not a man of the gang that would not have fought for her.

As they raced toward the wagon—"Let me tell about the tree, please," she begged Freckles.

"Why, sure," said Freckles.

He would probably have said the same if she had proposed to cut off his head. When McLean rode up he found her sitting on the wagon, flushed and glowing.

"Everybody listen!" cried the angel. "I have something to say. Freckles has been guarding here over a year now, and he presents the Limberlost to you, with every tree in it saved, and for good measure he has just this morning located the rarest one of all—the one around in from the east line that Wessner spoke of that first day, nearest the one you took out at first. All together! Everybody! Hurrah for Freckles!"

With flushing cheeks and gleaming eyes she led in three cheers and a tiger. Freckles slipped back into the swamp and held himself tight for fear he might burst wide open with pride and with his love for her.

The angel subsided on the canvas and explained to McLean about the maple. The boss was mightily pleased. He took Freckles and set out to relocate and examine the tree. The angel was interested in the making of the camp and preferred to remain with the men. With her sharp eyes she was watching every detail of construction, but when it came to the stretching of the dining hall canvas she proceeded to take command. The men were driving the rope pins when the angel rose on the wagon and, leaning forward, spoke to Duncan, who was directing the work.

"I believe if you would swing that around a few feet farther you would find it better, Mr. Duncan," she said. "That way will let the hot sun in at noon, and the sides will cut off the best breeze."

"That's a fact," said Duncan, studying the condition.

So by shifting the pins a little they obtained comfort, for which they blessed the angel every day.

When Freckles joined in the work about the camp he caught glimpses of her enthroned on a soapbox cleaning beans. She called to him that they were invited to stay for dinner and that they had accepted the invitation.

She was having the time of her life when McLean came back, jubilant from his trip to the tree. How jubilant he only told the angel, for he had been obliged to lose faith in some trusted men of late and had learned discretion by what he suffered. He planned to begin clearing out a road to the tree that same afternoon and to set two guards every night, for it promised to be a rare treasure.

"I am coming to see it felled," cried the angel.

"Tell me, angel," the boss said jestingly; "I think I have a right to know. Who really did locate that tree?"

"Freckles," she answered promptly and emphatically.

The boss smiled significantly at Freckles, who had just come up, for they had planned that they would instruct the company to reserve enough of the veneer from that very tree to make the most beautiful dressing table they could design for the angel's share of the discovery.

"What will you have for yours?" asked McLean of Freckles.

"If it's all the same to you, I'll be taking mine out in music lessons—begging your pardon—voice culture," said Freckles with a grimace.

The angel gave McLean the head of the table. She took the foot, with Freckles on her right, and the lumber gang, washed, brushed and straightened until they felt unfamiliar with themselves and each other, filled the sides.

It was several days before they completed a road to the noble, big tree and were ready to fell it. When the saw was well in Freckles began watching down the road where it met the trail leading from Little Chicken's tree. He had gone to the tree ahead of the gang and taken down the blue ribbon. Carefully folded, it now lay over his heart. He was promising himself a good deal of comfort with that ribbon when he should go to the city next month to begin his studies and dream the summer over again. It would help to make things tangible. When he was dressed as other men and about his work he knew where he meant to home that precious bit of blue. It should be his good luck token, and he would wear it always to keep bright in memory the day on which the angel had called him her knight.

How he would study, and, oh, how he would sing! If he could fulfill McLean's expectations, and make the angel proud of him! If he could only be a real knight!

He could not understand why the angel had failed to come. She had wanted to see their tree felled. She would be too late if she did not arrive soon. The men were sending ringing blows into the felling side of the tree when the boss rode up.

His first word was to inquire for the angel. When Freckles said she had not yet come McLean gave orders to stop work on the tree until she arrived. As the men stepped back a stiff morning breeze caught the top that towered high above its fellows. There was an ominous grinding at the base, a shiver of the mighty trunk, and directly in line of its fall the bushes swung apart and the laughing face of the angel looked in on them.

A groan of horror burst from the dry throats of the men, and, reading the agony in their faces, she stopped short, glanced up and understood.

"South!" shouted Mc Lean. "Run south!"

The poor child was helpless. It was patent that she did not know which way south was. There was another slow shiver of the tree. The rest of the gang stood as if rooted, but Freckles sprang past the trunk and went leaping in great bounds. He caught up the angel and dashed through the thicket for safety. The swaying trunk was half over when, just for an instant, a nearby tree stayed its fall. They saw Freckles' foot catch, and with the angel he plunged headlong.

A cry broke from the men, and McLean covered his face. Instantly Freckles was up, with the angel in his arms plunging on again. The outer limbs were on them when they saw Freckles hurl the angel, face down, in the muck, as far from him as he could send her. Springing after, in an attempt to cover her body with his own, he whirled to see if they were still in danger, and with outstretched arms braced himself for the shock. The branches shut them from sight, and the awful crash rocked the earth.

McLean and Duncan ran with axes and saws. The rest of the gang followed, and they worked like madmen. It seemed an age before they caught a glimpse of the angel's blue dress, and it renewed their vigor. Duncan fell on his knees beside her and tore the muck from underneath her with his hands. In a few seconds he dragged her out, choking and stunned.

Freckles lay a little farther under the tree, a big limb pinning him down. Duncan began mining beneath him, but Freckles stopped him.

"You can't be moving me," he said. "You must cut off the limb and lift it. I know."

Two men ran for the big saw. A number of them laid hold of the limb and bore up. In a little time it was off, and Freckles lay free.

The men bent over him to lift him, but he motioned them away.

"Don't be touching me until I rest a bit," he pleaded.

Then he twisted his head until he saw the angel, who was digging muck from her eyes and wiping it off her face on the skirt of her dress.

"Try to get up," he begged.

McLean helped the angel to her feet.

"Do you think any bones are broken?" gasped Freckles. "You see if you can find any, sir."

McLean assured Freckles that she was not seriously injured.

Freckles settled back with a smile of ineffable tenderness on his face.

"Thank the Lord!" he hoarsely whispered.

The angel broke from McLean.

"Now, Freckles, you!" she cried. "It's your turn. Please get up!"

A pitiful spasm swept Freckles' face. The angel took hold of his hand.

"Freckles, get up!"

It was half command, half entreaty.

"Easy, angel, easy. Let me rest a bit first," implored Freckles.

She knelt beside him. He reached his arm about her and drew her up closely. He looked at McLean in an agony of entreaty that brought the boss to his knees on the other side.

"Oh, Freckles!" McLean cried. "Not that! Surely we can do something! We must! Let me see!"

He tried to unfasten Freckles' neckband, but his fingers shook so clumsily that the angel pushed them away and herself laid Freckles' chest bare. With just one hasty glance she gathered the clothing together and slipped her arm under his head. Freckles lifted eyes of agony to hers.

"You see?" he said.

The angel nodded dumbly.

Freckles turned to McLean.

"Thank you for everything," he panted. "Where are the boys?"

"They are all here," said the boss, "except a couple that have gone for doctors, Mrs. Duncan, and the Bird Woman."

"It's no use trying to do anything," said Freckles. "You won't forget the muff and the Christmas box. The muff especial?"

SKILLED HANDS DISAPPOINTED

Lawrence Mill Agents Delay Answer to Their Demands

DESERTIONS AMONG STRIKERS

Lack of Enthusiasm Also Regarded as Victory For Employers—Aldermen Declare That Police Force Is Demoralized—Activity on Their Part Urged by Adjutant General—Hearing of Strike Leaders Adjourned

Lawrence, Mass., Feb. 16.—Announcement by mill agents that they have no power to grant the operatives' demands without authority from the corporations, rumors of secret offers to the I. W. W. for a settlement, the continuation of the Ettor-Giovannitti hearing until Monday and increased probability of a withdrawal of, or at least a material reduction in the militia forces; all developments of Thursday, tend to increase the air of uncertainty which surrounds the textile strike, five weeks old today.

Many believe the strike completely broken. The heavy gains in the number of operatives at work in the mills and a noticeable lack of enthusiasm among the strikers are regarded as an indication of a victory for the employers.

Considerable disappointment is expressed among the skilled workers, whose committees, under the auspices of the Central Labor union, presented demands to the agents Wednesday, over the delay while the wage schedules are being considered by the owners.

It was understood that the agents had full power to refuse or grant the demands, on account of a telegram sent to the strikers by the legislative committee last week, in which it was stated that the corporations refused to take a hand in any arbitration, delegating any such action to their local representatives.

I. W. W. leaders refuse to state whether they have been corresponding secretly with the mill agents in regard to a settlement. A persistent report to this effect has been current.

At a stormy meeting of the city council Aldermen Hannagan and Mahoney severely criticised the Lawrence police force and declared that it was the most demoralized body of men in Massachusetts. Commissioner of Public Safety Lynch was blamed for this condition.

Mayor Scanlon read a letter from Adjutant General Pearson in which was suggested that the city authorities assume control of the city as soon as possible. Pearson complained that the militia is doing nothing but police duty and asked the mayor to furnish him the following information:

The ordinary number of police officers on active duty in the city, the total number of regular and extra officers now employed, exclusive of the state and metropolitan police, the number of additional officers the city will provide in case of a withdrawal of the militia and what hours of the day the police can relieve a part or all of the militia from guard duty.

The council passed an order authorizing Lynch to appoint any number of special officers or to take any other action necessary for the safety of Lawrence, in case the militia is withdrawn.

Late yesterday afternoon Judge Mahoney ordered an adjournment in the trial of Ettor and Giovannitti until Monday. It is believed that the case will not be completed for at least two more days.

At a meeting of English speaking operatives, William D. Haywood directly accused the local police of causing the death of Anna Lopizzo, in whose murder Ettor and Giovannitti are being held as accessories. In speaking of the London police, who are not armed, he said: "If the Lawrence police did not carry revolvers, Anna Lopizzo would be alive today."

A DISCOURAGING REPORT

Sixty-Five Percent of Boston School Pupils Physically Weak

Boston, Feb. 16.—Boston's board of health is satisfied that 65 percent, or nearly two-thirds, of the school children of this city are physically defective, as the result of a report which Dr. Gallivan, the chief of the school physicians, has just made.

Dr. Gallivan reports that of the 82,224 children who have been examined by the school physicians 53,503 have been found physically defective.

The examinations disclosed that about 65 percent of the defective children have diseases that centre in the mouth and largely grow out of bad teeth, throat and nose trouble.

President Names Osborne to Be Customs Collector at Gloucester

Washington, Feb. 16.—Walter F. Osborne was nominated for collector of customs of the district of Gloucester, Mass., by President Taft, succeeding William H. Jordan, who has served for twelve years.

This is a victory for Representative Gardner, who recommended Osborne after refusing to abide by the result of a voting contest between Jordan and Ralph W. Dennen, in which the collector won.

WASHED FLOORS BEAT CARPETS

The hearing of the divorce libel of Ethel P. Norrie of Quincy against her husband, John Norrie, was being heard before Judge Fessenden in the Norfolk superior court at Dedham, was finished Thursday up to the arguments, which will be heard later at Boston.

Mr. Norrie, in his story yesterday, denied that he had failed to support his wife properly, declaring that he had given her all of his pay except $1.65 which he kept for himself. He received from $18 to $20 per week. He helped his wife, he said, about the housework, built the fires, washed the dishes, beat carpets and washed the floors. He said his wife had crying spells and he could not stop them.

THIRD ANNUAL ATHLETIC MEET

Hull Draftsmen Win Bowle's Trophy by Default

PRIZE WINNERS

The third annual indoor athletic meet of the draughtsmen connected with the Fore River Shipbuilding Company, was held in the gymnasium of the Quincy Y. M. C. A. The meet was won by the hull department, on default, caused by the failure of the members of the engine department to put in an appearance, as a result of some dissatisfaction with the management that had absolutely no bearing from an athletic standpoint.

The meet was largely attended and the failure of the engine department to compete proved a source of disappointment. Despite this fact, many interesting features developed and many exciting and spectacular races were in order.

The sack race was closely contested and it was only after a most gruelling struggle for first place had been made, that Robertson managed to emerge to the front and carry off the honors.

Another feature that demanded close attention was the baseball game, which resulted in a 6 to 5 victory for the team captained by Floyd. The spectacular play of the game was contributed by G. B. Barnes, who made a wonderful catch of a line drive in the second inning. Harold England played well behind the bat and displayed great efficiency in throwing to bases. Wood of the winners, did great work with the willow.

The challenge cup, presented by Admiral Francis T. Bowles as a perpetual trophy to be kept in the draughting room, was awarded the hull department, by default. Bronze medals were given as prizes for first places in the individual events and to each member of the championship relay team. Prize ribbons were given for 2nd and 3d places in individual events, and for winners in the obstacle relay race, baseball and basketball contests.

The individual point prize was won by Floyd, who had a total of 12 points to his credit. The prize consisted of a box of 150 cigars, donated by William Kemp, the purchasing agent.

During the evening B. G. Barnes, on behalf of the draughtsmen, presented physical director L. F. LaRose with a handsome gold medal, as a token of their appreciation for his valuable services rendered during the past year.

The following is the summary of events:

Fifteen yard dash—Won by Floyd. second, Allison, third, Chippendale. Time 2 minutes, 3-5 seconds.

Running high jump—Won by Floyd, second, Robertson, third, Allstein. Height 4 feet, 8 inches.

Shot put—Won by Debes, challenger holder, second, Robertson, third, Allstein. Distance 35 feet, 3 inches.

Potato race—Won by Allstein, second, Allison, third, Floyd. Time 23 minutes, 3-5 seconds.

Three legged race—Won by Allstein and Chippendale, second, Allison and Butler, third, Floyd and Seeley.

Sack race—Won by Robertson, second, Allison, third, Seeley.

Wrestling—Light weight class, Seeley defeated Neale in 1 minute, 25 seconds, and Elton defeated Allison in 5 minutes, 45 seconds.

Special Middleweight class—Horbanessian and Butler wrestled 15 minutes to a draw.

Obstacle race—Won by Allison's team—Allison, England, Seeley and Chippendale.

Indoor baseball—Won by Floyd's team. Score 6 to5. Batteries for Floyd's team—Floyd, Seeley, and Allstein; for Barnes' team, Allison and England.

Relay race—Three laps for each man. Won by Allison's team—Allison, England, Seeley and Chippendale. Time 1 minute, 18 seconds.

At the conclusion of the meet refresments consisting of sandwiches, ice cream, coffee and cake, were served.

The officials were:

L. Brath, E. C. Bennett, W. Rhodes, F. P. Larkin, F. V. Kolb, L. F. LaRose, J. McArdle, J. Wilson, P. Wood, C. Parker, A. B. Cassidy.

CONCERT AT FINNISH CHURCH

A highly entertaining concert, furnished through the kindness of A. Fitch Bromley, secretary of the local Y. M. C. A. was provided the members of the Finnish Congregational church, Thursday evening. The concert took place in the church and was attended by a large number of the parishioners.

So greatly enthused was the audience at the rendition of selections given from time to time, that it was found impossible to refrain from giving vent to applause and even the pastor himself, Rev. J. E. Lillback was forced to clap his hands in admiration of the affair:

The Wollaston Military band played numerous selections. Besides, local talent entertained those in attendance while the regular choir of mixed voices and a choir of male singers also added greatly to the enjoyment of the evening. Miss Alma Honkamaki, a teacher in the Normal School in New York city, gave a number of piano solos. The happy event was brought to a close shortly after nine o'clock by the serving of refreshments.

JAMES DD. KELLEY.

The funeral of James D, Kelley, a well-known and highly respected citizen of this city, took place from his late residence, 108 Liberty street, this morning at 8.30 o'clock. A high mass of requiem was celebrated in St. John's Church at 9 o'clock by Rev. Patrick J. Scannell. The musical portion of the mass was the Gregorian chant furnished by the regular choir under the direction of organist John Mahon.

During the mass solos were rendered by Miss Angela McCarthy and Mrs. Mary Burns King, the former rendering the "De Profundis" at the offertory and the latter singing the "Pie Jesu" after the libera. The pall bearers were Bartholemew Duran, Patrick Igo, Michael Burns and Daniel Dennon. Interment was at St. Mary's cemetery, West Quincy.

The late Mr. Kelley had been a resident of this city for a number of years and had endeared himself to a large circle of friends, who now share with the family in their bereavement. A widow, four daughters and two sons survive him.

She Felt Unworthy

"I don't suppose you are hungry, but we saved some supper for you, dear," said Jane's mother to Jane as that young person slowly approached, dragging her white lace parasol across the stump-infested lawn of Jane's family's summer cottage.

Jane sank with emphasis into a cane rocker and gazed moodily into an unusually fine sunset.

"Thanks, I'm not hungry," she said, briefly.

Jane's brother, who was tastefully attired in soiled white trousers and a track shirt, reared the upper half of his body from the cool grass and regarded her critically.

"You look seedy, sis," he remarked. "What did they do to you at the Hon. Mrs. Biggs' deckle edged and hand tooled party?"

"Do!" cried his sister, turning pink. "They didn't do a thing but make me feel that I ought to blush for my temerity in presuming to exist, let alone my unpardonable pretensions to social standing in the community. It's a good thing Mrs. Biggs' superior eye has never fallen upon your present costume, Jim, or the Biggses might invite us to leave the colony."

The youth addressed kicked off a tennis shoe delightedly and crowed in derision of Mrs. Biggs.

"My dear Jane!" protested their mother. "James, don't be rude."

"The first thing I heard when I got to the party," proceeded Jane, "was Mrs. King bemoaning the fact that the like is so dirty. She said that she just shuddered every time she went in, and the very moment she got out she always ran for the bathtub and turned on the hot water! And yet I had almost broken my neck to take my dip in that same lake at 1:30, so as to be all nice and fresh for the party!"

"Swat the fly; he is a deadly peril!" quoted Jane's brother, pawing the turf in ecstasy. "How does it feel to be in the insanitary class, sis?"

"Well, of course, that set me right at once as to the kind of people who were there," pursued Jane, "and when I looked carefully over those present I was sorry I hadn't brought along our storage warehouse receipt just to intimate to all assembled near that this dress I'm wearing isn't the only one I have in the world." She paused. Then she went on, pensively: "One of the simplest costumes at the party was a heliotrope satin, appliqued in real lace and veiled in black marquiette—sort of a tight effect."

"You've got it!" declared Jane's brother, delightedly. "I saw that woman yesterday trying to climb on the board walk in front of the inn and flying signals of distress."

"Then the conversation turned on servants," said Jane. "Mrs. King simply couldn't find a laundress that she could trust with her little things, and Mrs. Biggs had really hesitated about taking the cottage this year when she remembered what a state her French embroidery was in at the end of last season. Then they compared notes as to how many pieces each one sent out to be washed each week. Mrs. Holmes led with 40 hand towels. That was rather sad conversation for you to attempt to participate in when you've passed the morning bending over the soapsuds doing the family washing for seven!"

"I see you doing it, sis!" encouraged her brother, admiringly.

"Further," reported Jane, "Mrs. Browne is much dissatisfied with several little matters, so prepare to shed a sympathetic tear. She wants to give a lawn party, but she would be ashamed, actually ashamed, to invite any one to her lawn; she counted 15 stumps from the window of her breakfast room alone! I thought of this." Jane waved her hand.

"Jeems," said her brother, with sudden severity, "I desire you to extract the stumps from this greensward at once. Then seed it down with the best quality of lawn grass and engage a bright young landscape artist to plant a border of dwarf redwoods around the pump!"

His sister laughed. "Well, I don't care, Jim; it was pretty awful," she said. "Goodness, I really and truly am hungry; caterers never fill me in a way that you could call satisfactory. I believe I'll go out to the kitchen, mother, and find that supper you saved for me."

QUINCY'S TAKE BOTH GAMES

Large Crowd at Basket Ball Games in St. Mary's Hall

DANCE FOLLOWS

That the members of the Quincy A. A. basketball five are still possessed with a firm determination to bring the laurels of the Greater Boston Basketball league to the Granite City, was attested to a crowd that taxed St. Mary's hall, West Quincy, to overflowing last evening. On the night previous local players were forced to taste the spoils of defeat, administered by the much heralded St. Joseph's constellations, but all such incumbrances to the championship aspirations of Manager Flynn's team were put in the shade last evening, when the local players took the teams representing the St. Mary's A. C. of the North End, into camp by decisive scores.

The senior team was victorious by a score of 31 to 19, while the second team rested contendely with 25 to 16 win. While it cannot be said that the games measured up to those classed as the best ever played in St. Mary's hall, still the exhibition of basketball given by both teams, was of a high class order and caused both contests to prove of exceptional interest.

As regards the games between the first teams, it must be stated that the visitors did look dangerous in the early stage of the game, but the endurance necessary to sustain such form was lacking and as a consequence the vim and stamina of the Quincy A. A. team proved sufficient to offset this seeming advantage gained in the first half.

As has been the case in the majority of games in which they have participated this season, the Duggan boys and O'Rourke seemed to shine forth in the limelight most conspicuously. "Dan" Duggan had seven baskets from the floor to his credit, which number was one beter than O'Rourke attained. Boyle and Hebert also played a fine backfield game. Weiss proved to be the star player of the visiting combination.

The summary of the main game:

QUINCY A. A.	ST. MARYS
O'Rourke rf	lb Mead
Kelley lf	rb Keating
P. Duggan lf
D. Duggan c	c Weiss
Boyle rb	lf Flaherty
Hebert lb	rf Grant

Score, Quincy A. A. 31. St. Mary's 19. Goals from floor, O'Rourke 6. P. Duggan 2, D. Duggan 7, Mead 2, Weiss 4, Flaherty 2. Goals from fouls, O'Rourke, Keating, Grant 2. Referee, Coady. Scorer Flynn. Timer, McCue. Time 20m periods. Attendance 300.

ELKS' CHARITY BALL
A SCENE OF SPLENDOR

Scheme of Decoration Carried out on a Scale Never Equalled in Quincy

Features Were Many and Novel. Guests and Committees

Never has Music hall presented a more entrancing scene than on Friday evening, on the occasion of the fifth charity ball of Quincy lodge of Elks. The decorations were on a most elaborate scale. Aside from many beautiful effects, made possible by varied colored electric light bulbs, the decorative scheme was entirely new for Quincy. Along the side walls as well as in front of the balcony, and platform was a lattice work entwined with ivy. At each chandelier was a large cluster of artificial flowers from which shown forth a tiny electric light making an effect hard to describe, but beautiful to look upon.

On the lattice work in front of the balcony and stage was entwined ivy and at intervals shown forth electric lights some in yellow others in red. Along the sides of the hall, in front of the seats, was a lattice work fence with square posts at stated intervals. On top of these posts was a pot of artificial roses from the petals of which shone forth an electric light. The same scheme of fencing and posts was also in front of the platform, completely hiding the orchestra from view.

Suspended from the centre chandelier was the five pointed illuminated Elks' star. In the remainder of the decorations the color scheme was purple and white, the Elks' colors. The rarely beautiful effect of the decorations was not seen until during the dreamy waltzes when all lights were extinguished save those in the floral boquets.

THE ELKS' TOAST.

Apparently this included all the decorative features, but the committee had another which did not present itself until 11 o'clock, the hour most sacred to all Elks, when all worldly things are laid aside and a moment given in silent thought to those who have gone to the great beyond. As the hour of 11 approached the orchestra left the platform and a small drop curtain at the back of the stage was raised disclosing a large Elk's head, above two silk American flags. Between the antlers was the familiar clock dial with the hands pointing to five minutes of the mystic hour. The lights in the hall were extinguished and as the brothers gathered in a circle in the centre of the hall, the dial was illuminated and slowly the minute hand begun to move toward the hour. As the hour was reached a cathedral gong struck eleven. Then Joseph N. Shafer, editor of The Eastern Elk recited the ode to "Our Absent Brother" in a silence so intense that the dropping of a pin might have been heard. As he concluded Harry Hudson sang the Elks toast. Dancing was then resumed.

The affair was a pronounced success in every way. The attendance was large and during the early evening hours rather too crowded for dancing in comfort.

THE MUSIC.

The decorations were by the Atlantic Decorating Co., and the music by Wilson's orchestra. From 8 to 9 o'clock there was a promenade concert during which the following numbers were given:

March, "Greeting" Kral
Overture, "Hungarian Lustspiel" Kela Bela
Concert Waltz, "Southern Roses" Strauss
Duet, ""Il Travatore Miserere" Verdi
Cornet, Trombone
Selection, "The Red Rose" Berney
Finale, "Friendship" Bendix

While the guests and participants were arriving, their wants were carefully looked after by an efficient committee, every brother constituting himself as a special committee to see to the comfort of the guests. This committee was distinguished by a bow of purple and white ribbon worn on the coat lapel. The chief marshals was distinguished by a purple sash across the shirt front, the chief of aids red sash and the aids, the committee of arrangements and reception committee blue sashes.

THE GUESTS.

The principal guests were Mayor Stone who is also a member of Quincy lodge, Chief Frank E. Reynolds of Hull, Chief Frank E. Burrell of Quincy, Joseph N. Shafer of The Eastern Elk, Representatives Walter E. Piper and William J. Leslie, Senator Geo. L. Barnes and ex-Mayor William T. Shea, also a member of Quincy lodge. Mr. Shea who has been in the south since early in the year arrived home at 7 o'clock Friday night and two hours later was renewing friendships and receiving friendly greetings at the hall.

THE MARCH.

The march and waltz which opened the ball was started a few minutes after 9 o'clock. It was a short march but very prettily executed. Instead of the usual marching about and then coming up the centre in twos, fours, eights and sixteens, the couples separated, after completing one circle of the hall and in this manner executed a serpent like figure in the centre of the hall.

The march was led by Exalted Ruler, Robert J. Williams, Jr., and Mrs. Williams. Then came Mayor Stone with Miss Blanche Tirrell, ex-Representative William R. Thomas, P. E. R. Marshal and Mrs. Thomas, Marshal John W. Sweeney and Mrs. Sweeney, ex-Mayor William T. Shea, and Miss Rita Lyons, Joseph N. Shafer and Mrs. George H. Hatchet, Chief Frank E. Reynolds of Hull, and Mrs. Reynolds, Representative William J. Leslie and Miss Mildred Huston, Marshal George A. Jordan and Mrs. Jordan, James W. Sweeney, chairman of the committee of arrangements and Miss Charlotte Sweeney and upwards of seventy-five couples.

THE BALL.

The dance order contained twenty numbers, not every number, other than the square dances received encores which were given. One waltz which the party did not seem to tire of was to the music of "Il Travatore." As many as seven encores were given this number.

From 9.30 until 1 a buffet lunch was served in the Annex by C. C. Whittemore.

General dancing was in order until 2 A. M. at which time cars were in waiting for all points.

COMMITTEES.

The floor officers and committees to whom much credit for the success is due were as follows:

Chief Marshal—Robert J. Williams, Jr., E. R.

Marshals—William R. Thomas, P. E. R., John W. Sweeney, Edward L.

ST. MARGARET'S GUILD SUPPER

Many Valentine Novelties at Fifth Annual Supper

HELD IN PARISH HOUSE

The fifth annual valentine supper of St. Margaret's Guild of Christ church was held Friday evening at the parish house and was a pronounced success. The house was very prettily decorated to carry out the valentine scheme with numerous red hearts and cupids, while over the platform was the sign that is good to look upon "Welcome."

Six long tables were required to accommodate the diners and these tables were also decorated in a pretty manner, emblematical of St. Valentine's day. On each was a large red heart over which was a swinging cupid and at each plate was a red heart between the leaves of which was the menu and program. Protruding from the folds of the napkins was a small heart pierced by cupids arrow. The supper menu included, ham, potato salad, escalloped oysters, cranberry sauce, pickles, cake, pie, rolls and coffee.

Following the supper was a short program which included, a cello solo by Theo Smith with Miss Violet Smith as accompanist, and a reading by Mrs. Richard E. Armstrong entitled, "The Seamstress" At the conclusion of the program there was dancing.

EXCEPTIONALLY FINE CONCERT

The members of the Quincy Y. M. C. A. listened to an exceptionally fine concert last evening, given under by Walter Francis Vreeland, a guitar soloist and teacher of much note, and Erastus Osgood, whose fame as an entertainer is too well-known to require any further announcement. The affair was largely atended and and both gentlemen were forced to respond to repeated encores. The following program was presented:

Pensee Nocturne, Buckley
Under Balcony—a serenade Vreeland
Fantasie—a Russian melody Pettoletti
Alexandria concert Vreeland

MERCHANTS CARNIVAL.

The ladies of the Auxiliary promise many attractions at the Merchants' Carnival at the Y. M. C. A. Tuesday and Wednesday. Not least among these being the boys' gymnasium exhibit and the Chinese laundry, both of which will especially interest the children.

A tempting menu will be served each evening under the able supervision of Mrs. A. H. Gilson, and there will be music for the entertainment by young men from the Wollaston Methodist and Baptist churches. The tableaux as arranged by Mrs. E. S. Tenney, are truly artistic and of sufficient variety to give a most attractive program on both evenings and be well worth seeing. There will be music by the Y. M. C. A. orchestra.

The price of rubber having fallen, Mr. Taft might well store several cart loads of golf balls in the white house barn cellar.

Uncle Sam is said to be a poor debtor when it comes to collecting claims against him. The old gentleman means well, but his guardians demand their compensation before they let him pay his debts.

Isn't it funny that for every person who would buy a ticket for the grandest oratorio or opera ever produced, there are probably five who would pay their good money to hear Gaby Deslys sing her highly intellectual song, "Deedle Dum Dee?"

ORGAN RECITAL.

An organ recital and musicale is to be given in Memorial church Tuesday evening which promises to be a musical treat for the people of Atlantic. Leon Von Vliet, the celebrated violoncellist will render "Reverie" by Dunkler and "Menuetling" by Beethoven, "Traumerei" by Schumann and "En Sourdine" by Sellam.

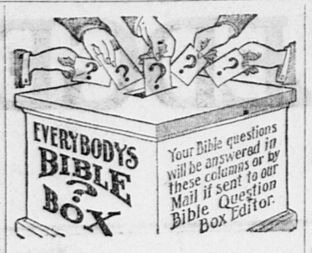

Claude Launier, of the Estey Company is to give the organ recital, assisted by Luchvig Carl Fichtner baritone soloist at Emmanuel church Boston and Miss Maud Elizabeth Read of Atlantic, elocutionist.

If the Benevolent society charged admission for this musicale they would have put the price at fifty cents but as the sentiment is to keep the church auditorium free from the commercial element a silver collection will be taken at the door; the only restriction being that children under fifteen years will have to be accompanied by parents and sit with them.

LADIES' NIGHT.

The annual ladies' night of Wollaston Masonic lodge will be held in Alpha and Union halls on Friday evening March 1. The program will include an entertainment, refreshments and dancing. The committee are Charles E. Monroe, Charles E. Cherrington, Carroll E. Bates, Charles F. West, J. Arthur Sparrow, Charles B. Hall, Charles L. Seavey, and Alfred H. Richards. The affair will be confined to Masons and their ladies.

PRATT'S BREAD is more expensive, but it is worth more.

Q.—In Genesis ii, 7 we read that "man became a living soul;" and in Job xiv, 22 we read, "his soul within him." Is the soul a part of man, or is the whole of man a living soul? (E.)

Answer.—For ages, one of the most momentous questions, and one most frequently propounded, has been "What is the soul?" The Bible answers the question so directly and simply that students of the Scriptures are now marveling that this question should ever have perplexed any in the past. The life-giving quality, the energizing principle, in union with the organism, or body, forms the living, intelligent being. This being, whether sheep, elephant, horse, man, angel, or devil is the soul. For proof of this in the Scriptures carefully note the following citations, the first two in the marginal readings of the Authorized Version. (Genesis i, 20, 30; ii, 7.) The word soul in this connection, is from the Hebrew nephesh which means literally "a breathing creature." Man does not possess a soul, but he is a soul. The entire being is soul. Job's expression must be understood in the poetic sense, and signifies that man would suffer and mourn from his inmost being, "from the bottom of his soul," as is sometimes said in the vernacular. Statements have appeared in the public press from time to time, emanating from some reputed authorities, to the effect that the "soul" has been weighed and photographed. This can easily be accomplished by any amateur photographer equipped with a camera and a pair of freight scales!

GENTLEMEN'S NIGHT.

Gentlemen's night, which took the form of a Valentine party, was a successful social affair given Wednesday evening by members of the Woman's Guild of St. Chrysostom's church in the parish rooms. All the decorations were colored hearts and cupids. Candle sticks with red shades added to the prettily arranged tables. The place cards were large red hearts on which the subject to be talked about was written, and any deviation called for a forfeit.

The men were provided with a bib on which was a red heart, the maiden name of the lady being on the hearts caused considerable hunting on their part to find their partners for supper, when found a bow of red ribbon was pinned in her hair.

The feature of the early part of the evening was a roast turkey supper with all the usual fixings.

A social hour and games which caused much merriment was followed by stereopticon views showed by Mr. Purdom among which was the rector, Rev. Mr. Steentra with his son Edward, the former rector Rev. Mr. Clattenburg and the church and new parish house where he is now located at Devil's Lake, North Dakota.

EPWORTH LEAGUE MEETING.

The regular monthly business meeting of Epworth League of Hall Place M. E. church was held at the home of the president, Joseph M. Francis, Monday evening. The meeting was called to order by the president at 8.15. After the usual Devotional exercises with prayer by the pastor, the records and reports were read and accepted. The resignation of Miss Catherine B. Hodgkinson as fourth vice-president was accepted and Miss Helen Martin elected to fill the unexpired office. It was voted to have a debate on some popular subject, Friday evening, Feb. 23, J. M. Francis, Rev. T. C. Martin and Miss Helen Martin to arrange for the same. Other matters of interest were taken up and discussed. After the business session a social hour was enjoyed and games were played. Ice cream and cake were served.

AINSWORTH IS OUT OF ARMY

Charges Against the Adjutant General Are Quashed

YIELDS TO ADVICE OF FRIENDS

Application to Be Placed Upon Retired List Promptly Granted by President—Puts an End to Court Martial Proceedings Against Veteran Who Has Been Commissioned Officer of Army Thirty-Seven Years

Washington, Feb. 17.—Adjutant General Fred C. Ainsworth, who was relieved of his office on charges assumed to be those of conduct prejudicial to good order and discipline, has been placed on the retired list on his own application.

This precludes the possibility of a court martial. President Taft approved Ainsworth's application because of the officer's thirty-seven years of service.

Friends of Ainsworth in the house of representatives, who resented the charge that the adjutant general had been surreptitiously giving information to the military affairs committee, were planning a thorough investigation of the war department, but Chairman Hays of the committee says that so far as he is concerned, the officer's decision ends the agitation in congress.

Mutual friends as said to have prevailed upon Ainsworth to take the course he did. His communication to the war department was dated Feb. 16 and read:

"The Acting General of the Army:

"Sir—Having served continuously for more than thirty-seven years as a commissioned officer of the army and being worn with the heavy burden of care and responsibility that I have borne for many of these years, I do not desire, in any circumstances, to retain longer the position that I now hold on the active list of the army. I, therefore, respectfully ask to be retired from active service and to be placed on the retired list, under section 1243 of the revised statutes.

"Very respectfully,
"F. C. Ainsworth,
Adjutant General."

This letter was submitted to Acting Adjutant General McCain. It passed successively through the hands of General Wood, chief of staff, and Secretary Stimson, and was finally submitted to the president.

President Taft promptly forwarded the following note to Stimson:

"To the Secretary of War:

"Upon his own application, Major General F. C. Ainsworth, the adjutant general, is hereby retired under section 1243, R. S., and the proper order may be issued.

"William H. Taft."

As a retired officer of his rank Ainsworth will draw an annual salary of $6000. He will lose his allowance of approximately $2000 which he had while on active duty.

This unexpected turn of events, which occurred late yesterday afternoon, put an end to the department's preparation for the court martial.

General Ainsworth became a major general on April 23, 1904, and was next in rank to Major General Wood, who was commissioned Aug. 3, 1903.

The charges against Ainsworth were the outcome of a long smothered ill feeling between the adjutant general and his former fellow army doctor, Wood, chief of staff. Stimson and Wood, both Republicans, are violently arrayed against the Hay bill for the reorganization of the army. Ainsworth, a Democrat, has been doing his utmost to secure its passage.

The house had already taken notice of Ainsworth's suspension. Representative Hay, chairman of the house committee on military affairs, resented the insinuation that the adjutant general in any way was responsible for the changes in the army organization proposed in the Hay bill.

The men who have intimated that he had a hand in framing the legislation say that Ainsworth, Hay and Slayden, the latter with Hay a member of the house committee on military affairs, have been close friends for a long time. It is also said that prior to the introduction of the first army bills by Hay at the extra session, the two representatives named and the general were frequently in conference and that army officers of high rank frequently joined in.

Friends of Ainsworth in the house were said t obe preparing the resolution of investigation, and it was said that effort would be made to have the scope of the inquiry so widened as to include an inquiry into the adminis- Wood was military governor of the island.

Meantime the house of representatives has taken a hand in war department affairs by adopting an amendment to the army appropriation bill consolidating the offices of chief of staff, adjutant general and inspector general into a single bureau of the general staff. The chief of staff would be the supreme directing head, with the adjutant general and inspector general members of the staff.

SUNDAY 12 TO 1—SHARP
Bethany Church, City Square
If YOU are a young man, and not associated with any other Quincy church, YOU are most cordially invited to come to our meeting.
A warm welcome—Hearty singing—A helpful hour together.

—A movement has been started at Wakefield in favor of single and apartment houses. The erection of "three deckers" is to be discouraged. The men and women who are interested in the proposed improvement hope to create a public sentiment that will lead to the erection of houses that will be sanitary, fireproof and substantial, and an ornament to the town.

FOUND NOT GUILTY OF BUYING A VOTE

Murphy and Lawton of New Bedford Freed by Jury

Taunton, Mass., Feb. 17.—John E. Murphy of New Bedford was found not guilty on the charge of vote buying in New Bedford at the last state election.

The jury reached its decision after a three-hours deliberation. There were two counts in the complaint against Murphy. One alleged that he promised money to a voter at the polls. The second count, that he did make payment several days after the election, was thrown out by order of Judge White, who decreed that any payment for a vote must be made before the ballot is cast in order to make it a crime.

In the same court George Lawton of New Bedford was by the order of the court found not guilty, "by reason of a variance," of a complaint that alleged vote buying. Lawton had been indicted by the grand jury on a complaint that he paid money to a voter.

ENVIED JANITOR'S PAY

School Principal Registers a Kick and His Feelings Are Soothed

Sag Harbor, L. I., Feb. 17.—Principal Grover C. Hart of the Pierson high school, who always thought his $1350 salary was insufficient, learned that he was paid $30 a year less than the janitor, John McMahon. He presented the facts to the board of education and his ruffled feelings were soothed by a raise. He will now draw $1600.

McMahon's income was reckoned by estimating the rental of the house he gets free at $180. McMahon gets a salary of $900 a year and receives $25 a month for winding the Mrs. Russell Sage clock in the school tower.

ACQUIRE TASTE FOR RUM

Robin Redbreasts In Georgia Have Fallen Into Wicked Ways

Lyerly, Ga., Feb. 17.—Robins in this vicinity have acquired habits of insobriety. The "bird licker" that intoxicates them is believed to be obtained from China berries which grow in profusion near here.

Many of the robins that have been found in a drunken condition have been watched during the time of their stupefaction, and it has been observed that in a few hours the birds revive and immediately go back to the China berry tree.

MUST LET BOOZE ALONE

Two New York Men to "Ride on Water Wagon" For a Year

New York, Feb. 17.—Two men were sentenced by Magistrate Appleton in the Yorkville court to "ride on the water wagon" for one year, and during that time the magistrate warned them that they could not drink any intoxicating liquors, whether at picnics, balls, weddings or wakes.

The men were Thomas McCarthy and Edward Schmidt. James Brown, a negro, said they attacked him while they were drunk.

HITS AMERICAN PRODUCTS

Russia Would Bar Our Cotton and Agricultural Implements

St. Petersburg, Feb. 17.—The Russian cabinet has prepared for submission to the douma a bill calling for an appropriation of $275,000 to be utilized for the purpose of the extension of the growth of cotton in Turkestan and the replacing of American agricultural machinery by implements made in Russia or other countries.

Premier Kokovsoff and the majority of the members of the cabinet disapprove of the granting of a state guarantee, but are in favor of advancing cheap loans to cotton growers in order to make Russia independent of foreign cotton and especially of American cotton.

MAINE RAILROAD WRECK

May Be Found to Have Been Due to Criminal Negligence

Portland, Me., Feb. 17.—From twelve to twenty witnesses will be examined before the Maine railroad commissioners at a hearing to be held in this city Tuesday, to determine the responsibility for the accident to two Grand Trunk freight trains at North Yarmouth, in which the lives of three trainmen were sacrificed.

The officials are not entirely satisfied with the explanation that the brakes failed to work. There are said to be circumstances which made it appear that some one was criminally negligent.

"Obey" May Be Omitted

COASTERS BADLY HURT

Fourteen Lives Imperilled as Double Runner Strikes an Auto

Haverhill, Mass., Feb. 17.—When the helmsman lost control of the big double runner on which fourteen young men and women were riding at 9:30 last night, the sled collided head-on with a touring car and nine were injured, five of them so seriously that they were taken to a hospital, while four others were cared for by Dr. John Sproul, who owned and was in the auto with which the sled collided.

The party was coasting down Broadway, a long, steep hill, and were, according to others on another coaster, immediately behind them, on the wrong side of the street. When the pilot saw the auto he became confused and the sled with its human freight, going at a rate of forty miles an hour, ploughed into the touring car.

FEAR EFFECT ON BUSINESS

Senators Somewhat Shy About Investigating "Money Trust"

Washington, Feb. 17.—Not a move has been made in the senate committee on interstate commerce with reference to a proposed "money trust" investigation, outside the personal statement of Senator Cummins that such an investigation would be made by the committee under its general powers.

The majority of the committee are "conservative" and could prevent any inquiry if they chose to do so, but probably the insistance of Cummins, Kenyon and Lee will prevail. The committee will not join with the house and will try to avoid the appearance of undertaking any sensational project for fear of the effect on business.

THE PHILERGIANS.

The concert, Monday evening was a great success and was appreciated by the music lovers of Braintree. The well filled audience room must have been very gratifying to the music committee. The club appreciates the courtesy of the Parish Committee of the All Souls' church who, by allowing the use of their hall, made the concert possible.

The next meeting of the Philergians will be held Feb. 20 at 2.30 P. M. in Cochato hall. The report of the State Federation meeting will be given at that time. Col. Edward Anderson of Quincy, will give an illustrated lecture "In Labrador with Grenfell." This lecture is based upon his own experience and promises to be exceptionally interesting.

After the installation a collation was served. The remainder of the evening dancing was enjoyed.

SERIOUS FIRE.

The alarm sounded from box 52 last evening at 6.45 o'clock was for a fire which completely destroyed the house owned and occupied by Mr. A. Linwood Morrow and family at 21 Standish avenue, Braintree Highlands. The blaze was caused by an overheated furnace and spread very rapidly. It was impossible to save the building because of its great distance from the nearest hydrant and the long run necessary for department to reach the scene. The firemen responded promptly and did very good work. A portion of the furniture was saved and it is understood that the house and furnishings were partially covered by insurance.

The house and barn belonging to Philip A. Thompson and situated nearby was saved by a corps of volunteers who threw on snow and pails of water thus preventing the spread of the flames until the apparatus arrived and the water was turned on. The all out was sounded at 10.15 o'clock.

AGENTS MAKE CONCESSIONS

May Bring Lawrence Strike to a Speedy Close

BUT ONE DEMAND WAIVED

Offer of Five Percent Increase In Pay Instead of Fifteen Percent Made by Independent Concerns—Willing to Grant Fifty-Six Hours' Pay For Fifty-Four Hours—Belief That Offer Will Be Generally Accepted

Lawrence, Mass., Feb. 17.—A compromise between the striking mill hands and the mill agents of those mills in Lawrence not immediately controlled by the American Woolen company was reached last night, conceding all the demands of the strikers except the 15 percent increase of wages.

At this secret meeting of the mill agents, held last evening in the home of one of them, the strikers were given their demand for a fifty-six-hour schedule for fifty-four hours, with an increase of pay of 5 percent instead of the requested 15 percent.

Although not officially offered to the strikers, this compromise, it is expected, will be eagerly accepted by the strikers. As an evidence of the sincerity of the arrangement, it was said that the employes of the Lower Pacific mills, of whom about 80 percent are back at work, were paid off yesterday according to the terms of the compromise.

At the secret meeting of the mill agents, which has been covered up with great care by all who attended it, the Wood mills, the Washington mill and the Ayer mills were not represented. The agents in session coming to this compromise represented the Everett, the Upper and the Lower Pacific, the Atlantic, the Pemberton and the Duck mills.

Such a concession on the part of the employers of about two-thirds of the striking operatives is considered a virtual victory for the strikers.

It is considered even more of a victory for the sub committee of the strike board of the Central Labor union, which met the agents of the compromising mills Friday and suggested some such compromise and practically assured the agents of cessation of hostilities if such an offer were made.

Because of the failure of the Industrial Workers of the World to participate in the peace overtures, it is considered a strategic victory for the Central Labor union, which has not been closely co-operating with the western organization during the strike.

Those strikers claiming allegiance to the Central Labor union will accept gladly the terms offered.

Although the I. W. W. leaders are opposed to the 5 percent compromise, the general feeling in Lawrence is that the terms will be accepted, regardless of the advice of these leaders.

It is expected that Monday will see large gains of workers in all the mills agreeing to the above proposition.

At the meeting of the general strikers' committee yesterday it was voted to issue a proclamation to the workers of the entire world calling attention to the existing conditions in Lawrence. The committee voted not to send any more committees to the city officials or to Mayor Scanlon. A large number of reports were made of alleged acts of injustice on the part of the militia.

Fifty extra police officers were sworn in last evening by Alderman Lynch, commissioner of public safety, following a conference of the city officials with Colonel Sweetser. About forty of the men are on the eligible list, having passed the civil service, and the others will take examinations next week.

These additional officers were detailed this morning with the permanent force to cover the city north of Haverhill street, thus relieving the state militia, which has been patrolling that section.

The fact that the local force has been augmented does not mean that the military force will be withdrawn at the present, but that the city may be prepared for any outbreak that might occur, following the dismissal of the troops. The extra police will mean an added expense of $300 a day to the city.

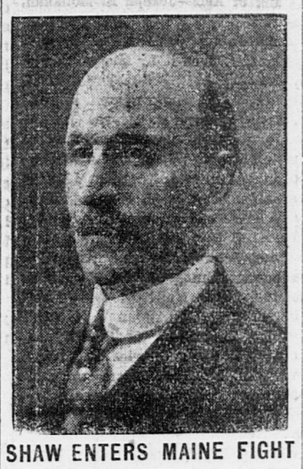

As a whole Friday was a quiet day. The militia patrolled practically every street in the city, and there was no trouble and no arrests. The mill men claim that 65 percent of the workers have returned to their looms, but it is believed that this estimate is rather large. The strikers say that only about 20 percent of the employes have returned.

Letters and Photos of Women Seized in Brandt's Room Were Burned

New York, Feb. 17.—Adjournment was taken yesterday afternoon by the grand jury investigating the circumstances surrounding the imprisoning of Foulke E. Brandt, Mortimer L. Witnesses who did testify told that the letters and photographs of a woman, or women, seized in Brandt's room at the time of his arrest, had since been destroyed by order of General Bingham, when the latter was police commissioner, on recommendation of William W. McLaughlin, then inspector in charge of the detective bureau.

FRECKLES

By Gene Stratton-Porter

COPYRIGHT, 1904, BY DOUBLEDAY, PAGE & CO.

SYNOPSIS.

Freckles, a homeless boy, is hired by Boss McLean to guard the expensive timber in the Limberlost from timber thieves.

Freckles does his work faithfully, makes friends with the birds and yearns to know more about nature. He lives with Mr. and Mrs. Duncan.

He resolves to get books and educate himself. He becomes interested in a huge pair of vultures and calls his bird friends his "chickens."

Some of the trees he is guarding are worth $1,000 each. Freckles' books arrive. He receives a call from Wessner.

Wessner attempts to bribe Freckles to betray his trust, and Freckles whips him. McLean overhears them and witnesses the fight.

Freckles' honesty saves a precious tree. He finds the nest of the vultures and is visited by a beautiful young girl.

She calls Freckles McLean's son. Freckles calls her "the angel" and helps the Bird Woman in taking photographs. McLean promises to adopt Freckles.

Freckles and the angel become very friendly. Assisted by the Bird Woman, they drive Wessner and Black Jack, timber thieves, from the Limberlost.

McLean fears more trouble, but Freckles insists upon being the sole guard of the timber. Freckles calls upon the angel's father.

The angel receives him as her equal, and her father is kind. Mrs. Duncan has exciting adventures in the Limberlost.

The Bird Woman and the angel again visit Freckles, and Freckles falls in love with the angel. The angel kisses him.

Freckles is bound and gagged by Black Jack's gang, and the timber thieves start felling a very valuable tree.

Wessner is to kill Freckles after the tree is stolen. The angel makes a daring effort to save Freckles and the tree.

McLean's men, notified by the angel, rush to save Freckles. All the timber thieves except Black Jack are captured.

Freckles guards the angel against Black Jack's vengeance. He tells McLean of his hopeless love for the angel.

Black Jack is killed by a rattlesnake. The Bird Woman gets a photograph of the baby vulture. Freckles and the angel find a valuable tree.

The tree falls, and in an effort to save the angel from death Freckles is struck and very badly injured. He appears to be dying.

There was a movement above them so pronounced that it attracted Freckles' attention, even in that extreme hour. He looked up, and a pleased smile flickered into his drawn face.

"Why, if it ain't me little chicken!" he cried hoarsely. "He must be making his very first trip from the log. Now Duncan can have his big watering trough."

"It was little chicken that made me late," faltered the angel. "I was so anxious to get here early I forgot to bring his breakfast from the carriage. He must have been very hungry, for when I passed the log he started after me. He was so wabbly, and so slow getting from tree to tree and through the bushes, I just had to wait on him, for I couldn't drive him back."

A spasm of fierce pain shook Freckles, and a look of uncertainty crossed his face.

"All summer I've been thanking God for the falling of the feather and all the delights it's brought me," he muttered, "but this looks like"—

He raised questioning eyes to McLean.

"I can't help being Irish, but I can help being superstitious," he said. "I mustn't be laying it to the Almighty, nor to me bird, must I?"

"No, dear lad," said McLean, stroking the brilliant hair. "The choice lay with you. You could have stood a rooted dolt like all the rest of us. It was through your great love and your high courage that you made the sacrifice."

"Don't you be so naming it, sir!" cried Freckles. "It's just the reverse. If I could be giving me body the hundred times over to save hers from this, I'd be doing it and take joy with every pain."

He turned with a smile of adoring tenderness to the angel. She scarcely seemed to hear or understand what was coming, but she bravely tried to answer that smile.

"Is me forehead covered with dirt?" he asked.

She shook her head.

"You did once," he gasped.

Instantly she laid her lips on his forehead, then on each cheek, and then in a long kiss on his lips.

"Freckles," said McLean brokenly, "you will never know how I love you. You won't go without saying goodby to me?"

That word stung the angel to quick comprehension. She started as if arising from sleep.

"Goodby!" she cried sharply. "Goodby! What do you mean? Who's saying goodby? Where could Freckles go, when he is hurt like this, but to the hospital? You call up the men. We must start right away."

"It's no use, angel," said Freckles; "I'm thinking ivry bone in me breast is smashed. You'll have to be letting me go!"

"I will not," said the angel flatly. "You are alive. You are breathing, and no matter how badly your bones are broken, what are great surgeons for but to fix you up and make you well again?"

"Oh, angel!" moaned Freckles, "I can't! You don't know how bad it is. I'll die the minute you are for trying to lift me!"

"Of course you will, if you make up your mind to do it," said the angel. "Really you have to do it, Freckles, no matter how it hurts you, for you did this for me, and now I must save you, so you might as well promise. You will promise, Freckles?"

"Angel, darlin' angel," pleaded Freckles, "you ain't understanding, and I can't for the life of me be telling you, but, indade, it's best to be letting me go."

He appealed to McLean.

"Dear boss, you know! You be telling her that, for me, living is far worse pain than dying. Tell her you know death is the best thing could ever be happening to me!"

CHAPTER XX.

LOVE AS A REMEDY.

She caught Freckles' hand to her breast, and, bending over him, looked deep into his stricken eyes.

"'Angel, I give you my word of honor that I will keep right on breathing.' That's what you are going to promise me," she said. "Do you say it?"

Freckles hesitated.

"Freckles," imploringly commanded the angel, "you do say it!"

"Yis," gasped Freckles.

The angel sprang to her feet.

"Then that's all right," she said, with a tinge of her old time briskness. "You just keep sawing away like a steam engine and I will do all the rest,"

The eager men gathered about her.

"It's going to be a tough pull to get Freckles out," she said, "but it's our only chance. You four there get on those wagon horses and ride to the sleeping tent. Get the stoutest cot, a couple of comforts and a pillow. Ride back with them some way to save time. If you meet any other men of the gang send them on here to help carry the cot. We won't risk the jolt of driving with him. The rest of you clear a path out to the road, and, Mr. McLean, you take Nellie and ride to town. Tell my father how Freckles is hurt and that he risked it to save me. Tell him I'm going to take Freckles to Chicago on the noon train and I want him to hold it if we are a little late. If he can't then have a special ready at the station and another on the Pittsburg at Fort Wayne, so we can go straight through. You needn't mind leaving us. The Bird Woman will be here soon.

When they stood ready to lift Freckles the angel bent over him in a passion of tenderness.

"Dear old Limberlost guard, we're going to lift you now," she said. "I suspect you will faint from the pain of it, but we will be just as easy as ever we can, and don't you dare forget your promise!"

A whimsical half smile touched Freckles' quivering lips.

"Angel, can a man be remembering a promise when he ain't knowing?" he asked.

"You can," said the angel stoutly, "because a promise means so much more to you than it does to most men."

A look of strength flashed into Freckles' face at her words.

"I am ready," he said.

With the first touch his eyes closed, a mighty groan was wrenched from him, and he lay senseless. The angel gave Duncan one panic stricken look. Then she set her lips and gathered her forces again.

"I guess that's a good thing," she said. "Maybe he won't feel how we are hurting him. Oh, boys, are you being quick and gentle?"

She stepped to the side of the cot and bathed Freckles' face. Taking his hand in hers, she gave the word to start. She told the men to ask every ablebodied man they met to join them so that they could change carriers often and make good time.

The Bird Woman insisted upon taking the angel into the carriage and following the cot, but the angel refused to leave Freckles and suggested that the Bird Woman drive ahead, pack them some clothing, and be at the station ready to accompany them to Chicago. All the way the angel walked beside the cot, shading Freckles' face and holding his hand. At every pause to change carriers she moistened his face and lips and counted each breath with heartbreaking anxiety.

She scarcely knew when her father joined them, and, taking the branch from her, slipped an arm about her waist and almost carried her along. To the city streets and the swarm of curious, staring faces she paid no more attention than she had to the trees of the Limberlost. When the train pulled in and the gang placed Freckles aboard, Duncan made a place for the angel beside the cot.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

LETTERS TELL OF MANY JOBS

Charges Cover Hundred Explosions In Bomb Plots

CARRIED ON FOR SIX YEARS

Indianapolis, Feb. 17.—New disclosures made in the dynamite conspiracy cases through 40,000 letters and telegrams quoted in the indictments as implicating practically all of the officials of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers will be the basis, it is declared, upon which the government will seek to convict the fifty-four defendants who are charged with committing or abetting in almost 100 explosions.

The correspondence, contained in one of the thirty-two indictments and embracing what are termed "uncounsummated acts of conspiracy," is held as showing that a vast plot, known to and furthered by Frank M. Ryan, president of the iron workers, and to members of his executive board and many business agents, was carried on for six years to destroy property of steel and iron contractors who employed non-union labor.

It charges all the defendants with being equally guilty as abettors. It also purports to reveal evidence that "jobs" became the accepted term to be sent through the mail to designate some place that was to be blown up, and that gradually the officials of local unions began to call on the international headquarters in Indianapolis to assist by dynamite and nitroglycerine in increasing the expenses of "open shop" contractors. Ortie McManigal, Herbert S. Hockin, second vice president, and James B. McNamara became, it is charged, an organized "dynamiting crew."

Letters are included to show regular fees were paid to McManigal and that the cost of doing local "jobs" frequently were discussed in letters.

A letter from Olaf A. Tvietmoe of the local union in San Francisco to J. J. McNamara in Indianapolis after the Los Angeles Times disaster stating he "hoped Santa Claus would be as kind and generous to you with surprises," is quoted to show that the conspiracy spead from Boston to the Pacific.

Four more indictments not yet made public supplement the principal indictment containing the correspondence. These indictments name all the fifty-four defendants as implicated in the general conspiracy.

The wide scope of the thirty-two indictments, which contain in all 128 counts, is due, it is announced, to the theory of the government that the defendants' alleged guilt is equal, no matter how small an individual's personal activity in the conspiracy may have been. District Attorney Miller said it has been determined to press all the counts of the indictments against each of the defendants.

Intimations are said to have been received by the government that some of the defendants in the dynamite conspiracies are preparing to "tell all they know."

Asked if any negotiations had been opened with him concerning the defendants, Miller said: "I wouldn't be surprised if it is shown soon that something like that had happened."

W. N. Harding, counsel for Ryan and the international officials of the iron workers, talked for a long time with Miller yesterday, but it was not disclosed what was considered.

Between now and the defendants' arraignment before Federal Judge Anderson here on March 12, the government will proceed with preparation for the trials, which probably will be early in May. Some of the defendants, reported in various cities to be unable to secure bond, may be brought here within a week.

It is said the government will question as many as possible. The federal grand jury which returned the indictments has not been dismissed and it is said if any information warrants it, the jurors will be reconvened.

GRIEG RECITAL

Eurico Barraja gave the second of his informal readings of piano classics, at his studio in hotel Greenleaf, Thursday evening. Edward Hagerup Grieg was the composer of the evening.

A short interesting reading in regard to him was given by Joseph Barraja-Frauenfelder. Greig, the son of the English Consul in Bergen, was born June 15, 1843. From his mother he received his first musical instruction, continuing his education at the Leipsic conservatory from 1858 to 1862. After 1880 he made his home in the city of his birth, devoting his time to composition only. His works embrace every branch of instrumental and vocal music, except church music. Shortly before his death which occurred a few years ago, he received the Nobel prize. The program given by Mr. Barraja was as follows:

Peer Gynt, Suite No. 1, Piano 4 hands
Morning mood
The death of Ase
Anitra's dance
In the hall of the mountain king.
Mr. Barraja and Miss Bizzozero

Lyric Pieces, Piano
Solitary traveler
Little bird
Eroticon
To the Spring
Sailor's song
Mr. Barraja.

Songs for tenor
La Principessa (in Italian)
I love thee (in English)
Le Printemps (in French)
Mr. Stroppiana

Sonata for paino, Op. No. 7.
Allegro moderato
Andante molto
Alla Menuetto
Finale—molto allegro
Mr. Barraja.

The numbers were most discriminatingly chosen giving a clear idea of the range of Grieg's genius, showing him, the great, unfettered artist, who understands so perfectly how to adapt nature's materials to his own lofty ideas. The wonderful contrasts of the Peer Gynt, Suite 1 were finely interpreted by Mr. Barraja, and Miss Rina Bizzozero in a four hand arrangement. Miss Bibbobero is a pianist of marked ability and feeling and she ably seconded Mr. Barraja in interpreting the delicacy, the tragedy, the airiness, and the splendid pomp, respectively of this most characteristic composition.

In the group of lyric pieces, Mr. Barraja was equally at home, in the melodious "Bereuse," the captivating "Little Bird," the sentiment of the "Eroticon" and the untramelled swing of the "Sailors Song." The songs were given by Mr. Leone Stroppiana, a pupil of Mr. Barraja, who has recently come to this country. He possesses a mellow, tenor voice of good range, full of temperament, and sings with admirable taste and musical feeling. These qualities were shown to great advantage in the widely differing songs, rendered by him.

Mr. Barraja's playing of the Sonata Op. 7, the only sonata written by Grieg, was a fitting finale to a rare program. It was splendidly given and aroused the audience to such a burst of enthusiasm, that the player kindly responded by giving Chopin's exquisite Prelude Op. 28, no. 15.

Those who are privileged to attend these recitals are indeed fortunate. It is rarely that Quincy people have such an opportunity to hear the best music, interpreted in the most artistic, sympathetic manner by a pianist who is past master in his art.

NICHOLS—WEHLE.

S. Walter Nichols, son of Mrs. Mary A. Nichols of Botolph street, Atlantic, and Elsa L. Wehle, a former teacher in the public schools of New York city, were maried in Dallas, Texas, Jan. 28. Rev. John Hubbard performing the ceremony. The wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Hurst, friends of the groom, little Elizabeth Hurst, aged four, acting as ring bearer.

The ceremony was performed at 6 o'clock. after which the party were taken in taxicabs to the Oriental hotel, where Mr. Cobb, a friend of the groom, did the honors, by giving the banquet, thus fulfilling a promise of long standing to the groom, said promise being conditional that Mr. Nichols be married in Texas. Mr. Witchell furnished the decorations of beautiful white roses. Following the banquet came congratulations and wishes for the couple for every good fortune along life's journey together.

Mr. and Mrs. Nichols were the recipients of many beautiful gifts, including cut glass, silver, linen of various kinds. china, bric-a-brac, pictures, fancy work, and money to the amount of $550, from the various sources.

Mrs. Nichols is a charming person to meet, as was proven by those of Atlantic, who met her during her visit at the home of the groom in 1910. She has a host of friends in New York city where all her life has been spent.

The groom left Atlantic two and a half years ago at which time he traveled for a Philadelphia firm. He is now of the firm Harry & Nichols building material and contractors' supplies, Dallas, Texas, and has bright prospects for a brilliant future. He is the brother of Mrs. Chester F. B. Lewis, Cedar Grove, Dorchester. His many friends in Atlantic wish him success and much happiness.

They have furnished a bungalow in South Dallas, which is an ideal residential section of Dallas. Mrs. Mary A. Nichols, his mother, anticipates with much pleasure a visit to her son and new daughter-in-law next fall.

The folowing clipped from a Dallas paper will be interesting to Mr. Nichols' friends in this section:

NICHOLS A BENEDICT.

Noticing the unusual placid countenance of S. W. Nichols of the firm of Harry & Nichols of Dallas, wreathed in smiles, one of our representatives inquired of that gentleman if he had inherited a fortune. "Something better than that," was the answer "I am the happy possessor of a bride. Last Sunday evening, at the residence of C. F. Hurst on St. Louis street, Rev. J. B. Hubbard uttered the sacred words which made Miss E. L Wehle, recently of New York City and yours truly, man and wife. After the ceremony a few friends were the guests of Mrs. Nichols and myself at the Oriental hotel. Sunday has always been a favorite day of mine; yesterday to me was the most blessed of them all."

MAYOR STONE ON NEW POLITICS

Interesting Talk Before Quincy Point Men's Club

NOTHING NEW IN POLITICS

The men's club of the Washington Street Congregational church held "A Pleasant Sunday Evening," meeting in the afternoon, at 5 o'clock, a lunch was served and at 6.30 the meeting was held the address being made by Mayor Stone whose topic was "The new politics." There were over fifty men at the meeting which was a most interesting one. Mayor Stone in his address said:

The subject of "New Politics" is really a new subject although, as a matter of fact, nothing is ever new in politics. It might perhaps be well before I take up the subject that I am to speak on this evening, to review for a few moments the way in which politics have been handled in the past. To make a comparison with politics of today and a few years ago, if you will remember, officers both for important City Offices and those for the General Court, were nominated for their office by delegates in convention and therefore, the people apparently had very little to say with regard to whom should represent them as their Mayor or their members of the General Court. In fact the voters today, under the present regime in politics choose their man by going to the polls the same as they do on election day and therefore, get in close touch and become more interested in the affairs of the day.

Under the old system of nomination by convention it is a well-known fact that those not directly interested in politics and there are a great many people who do not interest themselves and are not in touch with those who would represent them. But, under the new system every voter may exercise his rights of franchise. Many of the States have already adopted the policy of electing United States Senators by the people and Massachusetts will, undoubtedly, in the near future. The new conditions regarding the management of political affairs today are educating the people along the lines of good Government by bringing them in direct touch with the affairs of the day and placing more responsibility on the shoulder of the voter.

NO REDUCTION RECOMMENDED

Commission Wan's More Data on Telephone Rates

REPORT

The highway commission, which has the supervision of telephone rates, has sent to the Senate a communication which says that there has been shown a tendency to use the measured service. The highway board does not recommend a reduction of rates until further studies have been made.

The report is sent in answer to a request of the Senate for information upon the reduction of rates. In its report the board reviews the recent investigation of telephone rates and the new schedules by zones. The report of the board to the Senate says in part:

"During the past year over 15,000 new subscribers have taken service under the new rates, which demonstrates that they were desired by a large number of people who formerly had no telephone.

"A very large majority of all the telephones subscribed for, are now on the measured-service basis. The fact that over 16,000 subscribers have taken the new two-party measured service in the Suburban district since the new rates went into effect shows clearly that there was a demand for such a rate.

"Until these data are available, and until the new rates have been in effect sufficiently long, not only in the central and suburban districts, but throughout the State, to show fairly the results thereof, the commission feels that it would not be justified in saying that further readjustments or reductions could be made at the present time with fairness to the company or its subscribers."

RESIGNATION OF ORGANIST

It is with feelings of deep regret, that members of Bethany church, learn of the resignation of Madame Morey as organist,of the church. She has been faithful to her duties in season and out, ever taking a conscientious interest in the welfare of the choir and interpreted the music sympathetically. She will be missed and it is hoped she may be prevailed upon to reconsider her resignation as her place will be hard to fill.

The first annual dance of the Houghs Neck Ladies' Catholic Aid Society took place in the Bungalow dance hall, last Saturday evening and was attended by a large number. The affair started at eight o'clock and concluded at midnight.

RECEPTION TO FR. ROCHE

Many From Quincy Present at Watertown Reception

EX-MAYOR SHEA SPEAKS

Many prominent residents of this city were numbered among the nine hundred friends who taxed the hall of St. Patrick's Parochial school, Watertown, Sunday evening and tendered a reception to Rt. Rev. Mgr. Ambrose F. Roche, pastor of the church,in honor of his recent elevation by Pope Pius X to the dignity of domestic prelate, with the title of monsignore. Monsignore Roche had labored, as a priest, for a number of years in this city, and during that time had greatly endeared himself to all with whom he came in contact, as was evidenced by the tributes paid to him by the local speakers who participated in the exercises.

Hon. William T. Shea spoke in behalf of the St. Mary's C. T. A. and M. R. Society and outlined the activity the Monsignore Roche displayed in the interests and welfare of that organization. James F. Burke, president of the Norfolk Branch, Catholic Federation of Societies, addressed the gathering on behalf of the West Quincy parishioners and paid a glowing tribute to the career of Monsignore Roche, while he was pastor of St. Mary's church.

Michael T. Sullivan spoke as a representative of the old St. John's society, which was organized by Monsignore Riche, while he was affiliated with St. John's Church, and for which he worked with untiring zeal and earnestness. The last Quincy speaker to address the gathering was City Solicitor John W. McAnarney, who dwelt at length on the remarkable accomplishments of Monsignore Roche, and depicted the many benefits that had come to the citizens of Quincy at large as a result of his activity along lines of a varied nature.

Thomas H. Buttimer of Hingham also spoke for the catholics of the town, and told of the esteem in which Monsignore Roche is held. P. Sarsfield Cunniff of Watertown, presided and other speakers included Hon. James H. Vahey, Charles A. Daly and James Tobin.

Other Quincy people present at the reception, who made the trip in automobiles included Mr. and Mrs. John C. Ballou, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Ballou and Mrs. James L. Fennessey, and Vincent Bolger and friend. Dr. and Mrs. A. R. Ballou of Neponset were also in attendance.

GEORGE ANDERSON.

The funeral of George Anderson, for a number of years, a well-known and respected resident of this city, was held this morning from his late residence, 1 Quarry street. A high mass of requiem was celebrated at nine o'clock by Rev. John J. Casey.

The music for the occasion was the Gregorian mass, furnished by the regular choir, under the direction of John Mahon, organist. Interment was at the family lot in St. Mary's Cemetery.

ACCIDENT TO EXPRESSMAN

While endeavoring to turn his horse out of the car tracks, to give way to an approaching electric car, Kenneth McKenzie, of North Weymouth, was thrown from his team, on Hancock street, in the vicinity of City Square, about 7 o'clock Saturday evening and sustained severe injuries and abrasions to the head and legs. As chance had it, the team did not run over him. The electric car was brought to a standstill when but a short distance from him.

McKenzie is conducting the express business in Weymouth, formerly owned by the Clement Company. He was treated by Dr. Burke.

USE OF SCHOOLHOUSES.

Miss Mary P. Follett of this city and Boston, was one of the speakers, Saturday at the meeting in Brookline of the Playground and Recreation Association of America and her words should have weight as she is chairman of the committee on the extended use of school buildings of the Woman's Muncipal League of Boston.

Miss Follett says the movement for the extended use of public school buildings is suffering at the present time from the fact it is approached in the wrong way.

"Unless there is some real, urgent need for using the school buildings, it doesn't matter if they are dark or empty after 4 o'clock," she said. "There is no virtue in simply getting them used. We are alive to certain vital pressing needs in our cities, and therefore the use of the school buildings to meet some of these needs. I am pleading for an extension of our educational system, rather than for the extended use of the school buildings."

SEVEN ENTER FOR AVIATION

Meet in July to be Good One. Several Ladies to Enter

MANY CONTESTS

Since the announcement of an aviation meet at Squantum next July Manager Willard has received definite word from seven of the foremost aviators that they will compete for the prizes in the several events.

One of the chief attractions will be Lincoln Beachey, who was easily the star of last year's meet. Aviator Beachey has since his last appearance in Boston become one of the most daring and thrilling aviators in this country. His performance last year was the talk of the meet, and since that time he has added much to his reputation. Last August he established an altitude record at Chicago of 11,474 feet. This record was recently broken again by a foreign aviator.

The other aviators who have sent their contracts to Manager Willard are Hugh A. Robinson, William Hoff, Charles F. Walsh, Charles Whitmer, Beckwith Havens and George W. Beatty. During the coming week, it is expected, the word will be received from as many more aviators, and that the total number who will compete probably will be over 15.

Several foreigners have signified their intention of coming to Boston to participate in the events. Negotiations are pending with two operators of the Wright biplanes and their entries are expected every day.

Do You Want Your Vanity Tickled

— OR —

Your Purse Fattened?

A TRUE STORY

We had a journeyman coat-maker in our employ one time, who at the same time was making coats for other firms, among which was a real swell tailor who's prices were high in point of value. This coat-maker complained of our schedule prices, but accepted our work however, as it helped him fill in his time. He made a contrast by saying "I am getting twelve dollars for their coats and a dollar extra for every try-on. Sometimes they find it necessary to try on coats five or six times." This was interesting, so we inquired if he made changes every time. He remarked that the changes were made only on the first try-on, THE OTHERS WERE MADE TO TICKLE THE MAN'S VANITY, and added: "If the garment could have been finished completely in the first instance he could have made the changes more effectively."

NOW MEN, to come right down to brass tacks, DO YOU WANT YOUR VANITY TICKLED or DO YOU WANT YOUR PURSE FATTENED?

We are fattening purses every day, and especially for the next ten days by letting you take your choice of our $25 Suits at

$21.50

If you want your vanity tickled we will give you a straw as we will not be a party to letting you spend your money foolishly.

Washington's Birthday

¶ Thursday, February 22 (Washington's Birthday) the edition of The Ledger will be omitted.

The Ledger Friday will contain a full account of the celebration in our city.

If Germany has really discovered a new type of engine, our naval millinery will be out of style before the spring openings are held.

Edwin Hawley's will can not be found. The proper place to look for it of course is in that knot hole on the attic stairs.

The Mexicans would be more popular with our army if they did their revoluting in winter, when people are looking for a warm climate.

It is proposed to have bachelors labeled so as to protect girls from married flirts. But can they make the married men willing to flirt with their own wives?

How the old time politicians long for the good old days when the chief end in view, harmony, was usually realized, and there was pie enough to go around.

The international cost of living commission would find out more by banging around our country clubs, automobile garages, and plumbing and carpenter shops, than by a junket to Paris and Monte Carlo.

BOWLING.

The sporting editor used to find but dry pickings in winter. While the thirst of the base ball fan for gossip concerning his favorite basemen and pitchers is limitless, there is an end to the amount of "dope" that can be fed out. After you have told of the aches and pains that may fall the way of the ball players during the winter, and recorded all the guesses and negotiations and contracts for the next summer's season, there used to be a great big hole left on the sporting page.

On many papers, the sporting editor was frequently taken over in winter to cover the theatres, although the ability to score a triple play is very different from the ability to tell whether an actor is making a faithful picture of the recondite emotions of the human heart.

Today the sporting editor is helped out in winter by the tremendous vogue of bowling and basket ball.

Basket ball, if measured by the cheers of the crowds, the newspaper space given to the fine points of the game, and the columns of "dope" handed out by the press agent, is much more of a factor.

But when you look over the reports of the bowling alley matches as recorded in any metropolitan paper, and see what a tremendous lot of men were matching up their eye and form against the slippery and elusive ten-pin last night, you begin to see what a power bowling is in the winter life of a thousand cities and large towns.

The basket ball matches are between hard athletes of Young Men's Christian Associations, Young Men's clubs, schools and colleges. The bowling matches are between somewhat older men, representing stores, banks, offices, factories, professions and trades.

Blessings on the game that keeps a magnetic attraction over the fellow who has passed the first flush of athletic possibility. Such a game goes beyond mere sport. It becomes a builder of physique that equips the business man for this battle with the bad air and the nervous contacts of the morrow in the office.

To the novice, the incessant repetition of the one motion and the one act that constitutes the bowling match looks monotonous enough. Yet few other games have any more of the dramatic uncertainty that keeps the hope and fear of contestants so much on the balance. The path of the ball may seem absolutely true, and yet through some elusive lack or twist or angle it may leave a wicked remnant of standing pins, so scattered that their fat faces seem to smile in defiance at the futile shot.

QUINCY OWLS LOSE CHARTER

The charter of Quincy Nest of Owls with that of Malden Nest have been revoked by the supreme president of the order, John W. Talbot of South Bend, Ind., ast hey have affiliated themselves with D. P. J. Dilon and others, who it is claimed are trying to form an Improved order of Owls.

There has been much dissatisfaction among the Massachusetts members because a per capita tax of ten cents quarterly must be paid the suprem body. Th members claim that they get absolutely nothing in return for this tax except the privilege of using then ame. They also claim that they have no representation and that the power of the home nest is absolute.

The Owls is a beneficial order which claims to pay a sick benefit of $7 per week for thirteen weeks and a death benefit of $100. It is said that there is something over 150 members in Quincy. The local lodge was instituted some months ago.

All Massachusetts lodges have seceded from the mother lodge and have formed local orders for themselves, and will hold their first convention Feb. 22.

PEOPLE'S FORUM.

"Progressiveness in Politics" was the theme on which Ray Stannard Baker addressed the Braintree People's Forum last Sunday afternoon. Mr. Baker travels extensively and with his wide acquaintance with prominent men is well qualified to speak on political and economic questions. He began by telling of the fight against the hookworm scourge in the South and told how this battle against the disease was inspired first by scientific research, secondly because of a desire to help afflicted humanity and lastly because of a broad vision of greater things to come in the way of social and other reforms.

Mr. Baker said that this medical crusade, though opposed in many ways has accomplished wonders in its line and strange to say was bringing about a great educational, political and social awakening so that the good results were certain to be far reaching and permanent.

The speaker referred to the unrest of the times as affording in many cases striking parallels to situations prior to the Civil war. He however was hopeful of the future and seemed to feel that the ship of state would later sail on smoother waters. Mr. Baker mentioned the prominent political parties and their views and dwelt at some length on the "progressives" as opposed to the "stand-patters." He prophesied a powerful party of the near future made up of the progressives of the two greater parties of the present day and pledged to give the people more power, thus insuring to the country a still more democratic or popular form of government than we have today.

In answering questions from his audience, Mr. Baker declared himself as opposed to the election of Mr. Roosevelt and also the return of Mr. Taft for a second term. The discussion provoked a lively debate on socialist principles and Mr. Baker was broad enough to see some good in all the great political parties of the day. Next week Rabbi Harris of New York will speak on a most interesting subject.

PLAN A MARCH TO MANCHESTER

Strike Leaders Are Preparing a "Free Speech" Campaign

NEW ARRIVAL AT LAWRENCE

Socialist Organizer From California Says He Will Swamp Jails With Five Thousand Men If Necessary—Another Critical Day In Strike Situation—Mill Owners Say Business Does Not Warrant Increase In Pay

Lawrence, Mass., Feb. 19.—A "free speech" campaign, similar to the ones conducted in the western states in 1910 and 1911, will be inaugurated in Manchester, N. H., this week, according to Industrial Workers of the World leaders in Lawrence.

John J. Bajam, formerly a Socialist organizer in California, and one of the leaders in the I. W. W. movement on the Pacific coast states, who arrived in Lawrence Sunday, makes the boast that Manchester will be made the Fresno of the east.

"We expect to march 1000 volunteers from the ranks of the Lawrence textile workers to Manchester, and before we get through they will be glad to give us free speech. Yes, a lot of them probably will be arrested, but while they are in jail they will be sure of three meals a day, and that is more than some of them get now.

"If that number isn't sufficient to give us the right to speak to our fellow workers of Manchester, well, we can bring 5000 men into that city, and I reckon that will swamp the jails. I took an active part in the march to Fresno and in the campaign in Spokane, Wash., and I can tell you that those demonstrations will be mild to what will take place in that little New Hampshire mill city if the authorities see fit to refuse us the privilege of speaking on the street corners."

Today, as it has been every Monday, will be the critical day of the week. The mill men are anticipating great gains in the number of returning workers, while, on the other hand, the strikers' committee is confident that at least 300 more operatives will join the ranks of the strikers.

Leaders in the Industrial Workers of the World movement practically admit that should the prediction of the mill men prove true the backbone of the strike will be broken. From the rostrums of many halls in this city yesterday these leaders urged the strikers to stand firmly together today, to keep up their courage a few days longer, when funds from sympathizers throughout the country will come rolling in and enable them to fight the mill owners on equal ground.

More and more remote seems the probability that the striking textile workers will be able to secure the advance in wages and other concessions for which they have been contending for more than five weeks.

It has become known that the subcommittee of the Central Labor union which had been in conference with the mill representatives twice had been told that no concessions would be made to the strikers at this time.

The reasons given by the mill agents are, in effect, that business conditions at present would not permit of any increase in the wages paid to employes; that the uncertaintly of congressional action in connection with the tariff is another reason, and finally that there was no likelihood of any settlement of the questions at issue through the medium either of the A. F. of L. or the I. W. W.

The sending away of two more groups of strikers' children, one to New York and the other to Barre, Vt., led to the subsequent notice of Colonel Sweetser, in command of the troops here, that he will permit no more to be taken unless he is satisfied that it is with the consent of their parents.

This so-called "exiling" of the juveniles, whose ages range from 5 to 14 years, has aroused much adverse criticism, and there has been complaint that coercion was being exercised in inducing parents to part with their little ones.

Some of Sweetser's officers witnessed the embarking for the distant cities. The report that they brought back was followed by his issuance of a letter to the strike committee putting the ban on any further proceedings of this sort unless it could be shown to him that the parents were a willing party to the affair. Nearly 100 left for New York, doubling the number that are now in that city, and about one-third as many went to Barre.

Firemen's Call Follows Doctor's Visit

Woburn, Mass., Feb. 19.—Half an hour after a physician had visited the home of Albert Pierce, a widower, aged 60, and prescribed for him, the firemen were called to the house, and when they forced their way in found Pierce dead, with all of the clothing burned from his body. The fire was caused by the upsetting or explosion of a lamp.

WILL INVESTIGATE WAR DEPARTMENT

Washington, Feb. 19.—Investigation of the war department as an outgrowth of the differences between the secretary of war and General Wood and ex-Adjutant General Ainsworth, which culminated in the latter's retirement after a threatened court martial, now practically is assured.

General Ainsworth has been subpoenaed to appear before the house committee on expenditures in the war department. He was directed to produce papers of the department relating to the charges against Major Ray, but members of the committee admitted that Ainsworth would be asked about many other things and that the entire administration of the war department would be probed.

The house committee on military affairs will undoubtedly act on a resolution calling upon Secretary of War Stimson to produce all papers, correspondence and orders having any bearing on the letter by Stimson to Ainsworth setting forth the charges of insubordination which led to his retirement.

INFORMATION FROM THE INSIDE

Gives Assurance That Roosevelt Will Be a Candidate

HOPE OF HARMONY IS GONE

Republicans In Congress Realize That Battle For Former President Will Soon Be On—Regulars Urged to Rally Forces Because of Bass' Activity In New Hampshire—Bay State Leaders Working For Taft

Washington, Feb. 19.—Republicans here are stirring vigorously in anticipation of Theodore Roosevelt's early declaration of his candidacy. While there has been scepticism about Roosevelt getting into the race, it was dispelled by inside information to Massachusetts Republicans here.

At about the same time Senator Gallinger received a letter from political friends in New Hampshire sounding the alarm and stating that all hope of Republican harmony was gone. The regulars and others cooperating with them might as well rally their forces, this letter stated, because Governor Bass had returned from a conference with Roosevelt and was plainly making ready for a fierce campaign.

There is considerable talk among the Massachusetts leaders here as to what they should attempt to do at home. Nothing very definite has been reached in the way of conclusions, but there is a purpose not to allow the Roosevelt workers to gain ground unduly in the interim before he comes out with his announcement.

There is speculation, of course, as to what Senator Lodge will do and whether he can remain neutral when a red-hot fight for delegates is waging within his own constituency. As the alignment proceeds it will be increasingly difficult to keep from getting on one side or the other.

As far as New Hampshire is concerned, Gallinger said that the fight was undoubtedly on and would go to the limit. Republicans had hoped for harmony, but it was now useless to expect it. The regulars and those who are with them for the renomination of President Taft must accept the gage of battle thrown down by Bass.

"I have not the slightest doubt what the outcome will be," said Gallinger. "We will lick them to a finish and elect Taft delegates from New Hampshire."

Gifford Pinchot, in a signed statement made public last night, announced that he has withdrawn his support from Senator La Follette's presidential candidacy, and that he will hereafter advocate the nomination of Roosevelt.

Pinchot declares that the events of the last month have made it apparent that La Follette's candidacy will neither hold the progressive Republicans together as a fighting force nor prevent the nomination of "a reactionary Republican."

COULON STILL CHAMPION

Gets Decision Over Burns In Fast Bantamweight Bout

New Orleans, Feb. 19.—Johnny Coulon of Chicago was still the bantamweight champion of the world at the end of his twenty-round fight with Frank C. Burns of Jersey City Sunday afternoon before the West Side A. C. The fight was fast and clever from the first bell, Coulon at all times carrying the fighting to Burns' corner.

He was met with such an onslaught, however, that a number of Burns' supporters thought he at least should have had a draw. Coulon was credited with the only knockdown, which occurred in the first minute of the last round.

WEDDING IS DELAYED

Suffragette Refuses to Agree to "Obey" Part of the Ceremony

Richmond, Feb. 19.—Miss Bessie S. Moss, suffragette leader, declined to subscribe to the word "obey" in the Episcopal marriage service, and in consequence, her wedding to Albert E. Chamberlain of New York was postponed.

The minister who was to have officiated refused to leave out the objectionable word. He was sustained by his bishop.

The couple withdrew the wedding invitations and will be married next Wednesday by a Baptist minister, who has agreed to respect the suffragist's objections.

The members of the Rand and Walther classes have been invited to attend a social in the South Boston Baptist church, Tuesday evening. It is hoped that a large number from these classes will attend. The invitation comes through the Rand class of South Boston.

FIRST CHURCH.

It is to be regretted that there was not a larger attendance of patriotic organizations at First church, Sunday morning to hear the patriotic address of Rev. Melvin S. Nash, for it was a most able address. His topic was "Christian Citizenship" the words of his text being found in St. Matthew 22, 21. "They saith unto them, Render therefore unto Caesar, the things that are Caesar's."

"There was never a greater Patriot," said the speaker, "than Jesus of Nazareth. There was never a man who loved his country as did this great Master. We are living today," said the speaker, "in the light of two of the greatest lives, the greatest statesmen, the country ever knew, and we should consider some of the things for which they stood. This is the day of all days in this United States when there is more disregard for God than ever before. It is a day when men should stand for all that is highest, and reverence is the cornerstone. Once in New York where one of these two great statesmen was to speak, he was asked by the presiding officer to tell the greatest thought that occupied his human mind, above all other things, and his answer was 'My individual responsibility to God.' That man was Daniel Webster. It is for you and I to promulgate something of that spirit. We must recreate a new inspiration and reverence for the Father. Men should stand for truth and principle and not policy. Abraham Lincoln lived and died on the rock of principle. He stood for all and his light is revered today, as a standard of the highest type of christian citizenship. We must inculcate into human society the christian citizenship, there men stood for.

"It took nobility of character, when our ancestors said this church should stand for God. You love this church better for the men and women who made it. They were willing to lay down their lives to keep this grand old church. We go back to the civil war and find men lying down their lives for principle.

"We cannot be christian citizens in the light of Washington and Lincoln unless we are true to our patriotic ideas." The speaker then spoke of all the forms of desecration that take place on that sacred day, meaning Memorial day, a day so sacred that he wondered if our ideals were being lost. There came to his vision scenes of the civil war. Here the speaker brought vividly to mind some of the stirring events of that civil war as an illustration of patriotism and principle. "Let us have reverence for those patriotic ideas that made this American nation. Rise up oh generation, Rise up oh nobility for that banner, and the lives that stood for it. Bring your line up to the colors, and God will plan a victory of the highest type of christian citizenship."

Previous to the Sunday school session there was also a patriotic address of Charles H. Johnson.

WOLLASTON UNITARIAN.

Rev. George W. Cutter of Neponset, occupied the pulpit at the morning service, in exchange with Rev. Carl G. Horst. Having taken the parable of the talents for the scripture reading, Dr. Cutter took his text from the same chapter of Matthew and took as his subject the man with one talent, to which class the rank and file of people belong. The people of genius and unusual ability were compared to diamonds and other precious stones of which there are few, in comparison with the large and useful quantites of granite and iron which the earth yields, and to which he likened the prudent and dependable people. It is with the commonplace masses that the safety of the world rests with those whose daily diligence and fidelity may be relied upon, who, knowing themselves quite the reverse of brilliant, are still willing to add their small contributions to the necessary labor of the world.

"Even one talent of small magnitude" declared the preacher "is worthy our reverent cultivation, for it is the same in kind as the larger abilities of those more richly endowed by nature, and all our gifts are from the Father, whose plan may not be carried out fully without the loyal co-operation of each in his place, be it large or small."

The Unitarian Sunday School Union of Greater Boston holds its February meeting in the South Congregational church, Boston tonight at 6 o'clock, subject: "Patriotism." Speaker: Rev. Thomas Van Ness.

The Junior Lend-a-hand club will hold its meeting at the home of Judith Page, 103 Grandview avenue, Tuesday at 3.45 p. m.

The Wollaston Young People's Social society meets in the vestry, Tuesday, at 8 p. m.

The mid-week noon service at King's chapel ,Wednesday will be conducted by the Rev. Roger Forbes of Dorchester.

The annual festival of the children of Barnard Memorial will be held on Washington's birthday in Mechanics' Hall, Boston, from 10 a. m. to 1. p. m. and from 2.15 p. m. to 5.30 p. m.

The Unitarian Church Helpers will meet with Mrs. Harold Green, 125 Lincoln avenue, Wednesday, at 2 p. m.

The Lenten study class under the auspices of the Women's Alliance will be held at the minister's home, Friday, at three o'clock.

The first in the series of special Lenten services will be held Wednesday, Feb. 28 at 7.45 p. m. Preacher: The Rev. Sheed Anderson of Roxbury, organist: Mrs. Chandler W. Smith.

Members of the Y. P. R. U. will attend the Boston Federation of Young People's Religious Unions in Channing church, East Cottage street, Dorchester, Sunday, Feb. 25 at 4 p. m.

The Rev. Joel H. Metcalf, Ph. D., of Winchester, who is always a welcomed visitor to our church, gave a most instructive lecture on "A Pilgrimage to the home of St. Francis" at the Y. P. R. U. meeting last evening. Dr. and Mrs. Metcalf were guests of Rev. and Mrs. Carl G. Horst, while in the city.

The annual colection for the American Unitarian Association will be received Sunday morning, March 3.

BETHANY CHURCH.

Bethany church was well filled Sunday morning Dr. Asher Anderson occupied the pulpit and took for his text, Isaiah 32: 1-2, "And a man shall be as a hiding place from the wind, and a covert from the tempest: as rivers of water in a dry place, as the shadow of a great rock in a weary land, and the eyes of them that see shall not be dim, and the ears of them that hear shall hearken." The topic of the discourse was, "An appeal to man."

Dr. Anderson said in part: The two verses of the text contain a principle and a suggestion and there is a connection between the two which we shall understand as we proceed. There is also a key-note of comfort, pervading the words of the text, which inspires and uplift us, to attain greater faith in God and fill our souls with radiance and give us strength and peace.

Some are disposed to believe that reference is made to the coming of the Messiah. The Lord shall make a king to reign. The people of those times were very cheerful, the most optimistic on earth but when the Lord did appear they were too dark to appreciate him. The political conditions of the times tended to discourage ways of righteousness and the higher vision of spiritual things.

History runs in drifts: in the pages of the Bible, in books and biographies we read of men audacious and not inspiring: others noble, grand courageous, who followed the teachings of Jesus and walked with Him in loving service to humanity.

Among these noble men were Luther, Charles Martel, Washington, Lincoln who dared to protest against that drift of sin and dishonest dealing. Jesus Christ stood against sin. And this is the God idea, to fill the heart with goodness when there is no place for sin. And then shall follow peace, faith and love. This is our prayer and our hope and new duties, new privileges, new responsibilities will come into our lives: "As rivers of water in a dry place, as the shadow of a great rock in a weary land.

Appropriate music was rendered by the choir.

MEMORIAL CHURCH.

At the morning service of Memorial Congregational church, Atlantic Rev. Thomas W. Davison spoke on "The Hope of Glory."

He said in part: "Glory is something that always seems to be in the future. To seek for glory with any hope of winning recognition by men would be defeated, and would be silly pride, which would cheapen life and be worthy of true manhood and womanhood. The men whom the nation have honored were men who rendered such service that future generations called blessed. Moses received glory from Israelites after he had passed away, but in life he had to meet murmuring and grumbling. He lived in hope, but glory was only given after his death. The men of our country had to face discouragements, but their glory was given by future generations.

"As we look over our own lives, no matter how good the past has been it is unsatisfactory. The struggles of today keep us back from any feeling of exultation or rejoicing. We are all buoyed up by the future hope. We feel that the best Christian attainment is not worthy to be called our best. Our best work is still before us, we hope.

"The best work of the Christian church is still before us. We marvel at the growth of the church numerically—we truly glory in the modern missionary era, but we look for the great intensive growth when hollowness, insincerity, indifference and smallness shall be a thing of the past. Our hope is that a high purpose, deep and holy convictions, self-sacrifice for the common good shall be the natural thing for the Christian.

"The glory of nations is in their victories. Scotland thinks of Bannockburn, Greece in its Marathon. England rejoices in its Waterloo. We glory in Bunker Hill, Gettysburg and Manila.

"The victory of the church is in its victories over sin in making men better, in relieving social evils. The great hope of the christian is in the glory that is still to come. We may seem materialistic, but when earth seems to recede, our joy will be in the glories of a world beyond. We make light of it when in health and strength, but the moment will come when our whole interest will be in the glories of the future."

The senior chorus furnished part of the music and Charles Wade of Wollaston sang a solo.

Next Sunday evening the Christian Endeavorers will take charge of the service. Rev. George H. Gutterson of the American Missionary Association will give a stereopticon lecture.

The Ladies' Benevolent society gives an organ recital Tuesday evening with some of Boston's best talent and the people of Atlantic are promised a rare treat.

FIRST UNITED PRESBYTERIAN.

Morning topic—"The message of John the Baptist."

The Sabbath school had a good attendance.

The Y. P. S. C. E. had a fair attendance. Quite a number of the young people took part.

There was a good attendance at the evening service. Mr. Henry Patterson sang a solo which was well rendered. The pastor's topic was:—"The Sin of our first parents." He said in part: "Sin did not originate on earth. It originated in Heaven. Why God who hates sin more than he hates anything else should have permitted it to originate in any part of his vast universe is a question which never has been answered by mortal man.

Our first parents were created holy but liable to fall under the power of temptation. It seems strange to us that a creature so loathsome as the serpent should have been employed by the arch-enemy of man to be the instrument of man's fall. Milton's supposition with regard to the form of the serpent before the fall if correct may throw some light upon the question as to how it was that our first parents being perfectly holy, should be so easily tempted to listen to the voice of the tempter. In describing the appearance of the tempter he says:—'He above the rest in shape and gesture proudly eminent, stood like a tower; his form had not yet lost all his original brightness. Appearing thus he was not so dreaded, and especially when Eve finds him capable of addressing her in the way in which he did. Paul says in 1st Tim. 2:14 'That the woman being deceived was in the transgression.' He also says that the 'man was not deceived.' If Paul is right and we have no reason to question his statement, was not the man the guiltier of the two? Was he not aware that he represented his posterity? He was. Was it not possible for him to have resisted the temptation? It was. Supposing he had not fallen and the woman had, could not God have provided another helpmate for Adam? He certainly could. But the sad truth is that both fell. And this double fall brought 'death into the world and all our woe." By their fall they have bequeathed to us a double legacy of guilt and impurity. But Christ has more than restored to us by his active and passive obedience what we lost by the fall."

VALUE OF CHURCH GOING.

It is sometimes said that a man can be just as good, just as upright and noble who does not attend church as the man who regularly attends religious services. It is a false statement unless the man has some other influence bearing in upon his subconscious life, which shall automatically make strong and sure right feelings and noble impulses.

As well say that the citizen patriot will make as good a soldier untrained and undisciplined as the citizen soldier who has stood guard, marched and counter-marched, drilled and exercised in barrack and in field. Bravery, steadiness, the doing of the right thing at the right time, the needed calmness in danger, all this is something more than a matter of will, than just merely the decision to be brave. It represents long hours of practice, of duty done, in short, it means that the subconscious has been trained so that in the moment of peril , mechanically the nerves are steady, the eye sure, the muscles without fright and the mind calm; it means that at the supreme moment the subjective self works with and not against the momentary resolution of the conscious personality.

There is only one institution which makes for its chief object the establishment of right habits in moral conduct, that is the Church. For that reason we need the help of the Church for spiritual exercise as we need the gymnasium for right physical exercise.

As the soldier in the barracks gets a military training he knows not of —the training of his feelings, of his nerves——so the worshipper in a Church gets a spiritual training he knows not of.—Rev. Thomas Van Ness.

HAS "STOMACH ACHE"

New Jersey Shoemaker Is Found to Be Full of Brass Tacks

Delanco, N. J., Feb. 19.—After suffering from "stomach ache" for nearly a year, Abraham Le Coney, a shoemaker, failed to get relief from all the tried and true remedies, and submittted to an X-ray examination.

Physicians discovered the cause of his pain in the presence of nearly a hundred brass tacks sticking into the walls of his stomach.

Le Coney had swallowed the tacks during his work, when he invariably used his mouth as a tack box. He was taken to a Philadelphia hospital and physicians will do the tack lifting act for him.

WOMAN IS COMPLAINANT

Florida Land Company and Its Officers Indicted by Grand Jury

Tampa, Fla., Feb. 19.—Charging fraudulent use of the mails in influencing purchasers of Florida land on misrepresentations, the federal grand jury returned indictments against the Florida Land and Orchard company and its officers, W. E. and E. H. Guilford and A. B. Morton.

The parent office is in Boston. This is the first of a series of indictments expected to result from alleged misrepresentation of Florida lands.

Miss Lillian Crosby of Danvers, Mass., was complainant against the Boston company. She alleged she was sold land under a guarantee that it was suited for agriculture of all kinds, that there was free rural delivery and that if she were not satisfied with the tract she could exchange it.

MADERO FEARFUL OF PLOT

Many Serious Engagements and Executions of Rebels In Mexico

Mexico City, Feb. 19.—In three battles between federals and insurrectos fought simultaneously in different parts of Mexico nearly 100 men were killed and thirty-five prisoners of war were put to death in pursuance with Madero's "iron hand" policy.

Seven hundred of Zapata's men clashed with 400 federals under Colonel Castro at Los Elotes, near Cuervavaca, where twenty were killed and eighteen executed; at Jijutla twenty-three were killed and twelve executed, while forty-five were killed and five prisoners executed in Morelos.

The president, fearful of a plot, keeps a constant bodyguard about him and refuses to see all newspaper reporters.

BRIEFS

Mrs. Fred E. Drake of Upland road is visiting friends in Keene, New Hampshire.

Sunday was an ideal spring day, although the walking was anything but ideal. The warm sun thawed the snow and ice and the sidewalks in many places were wet and nasty.

Mr. and Mrs. John Albert Severance of Fayette street, are receiving congratulations on the birth of a son born Feb. 15. They have a little daughter, so the advent of a son is most pleasing.

President Hobbs of the City Council is confined to his home with a severe cold. Saturday he was quite seriously ill and pneumonia was threatened. His physician however succeeded in breaking up the fever.

Mrs. Adaline A. Hayden, of 778 Washington street was given a surprise on Sunday by about forty of her friends in observance of her 78th birthday and it was a most happy occasion for Mrs. Hayden and those participating.

Mrs. C. A. Franklin, entertained the members of the Roundabout Whist club at her home, 62 Billings road, Saturday evening. A very enjoyable evening was spent playing progressive whist which was followed by a lunch.

A regular meeting of the City Council will be held tonight and it will be an important one. The annual budget of the Mayor and Treasurer will probably be forwarded to the council and there are numerous committee reports.

GIRL INJURED.

Mary Benechi aged 7 years, of 12 Quincy street was knocked down by one of the water department wagons at South Quincy, Saturday afternoon and considerably bruised. The team is said to have been driven by Jaquees Choinard. It was held up at the railroad crossing by the gates being down. As the gates were raised the team drove across, the driver evidently not seeing the little girl. She was struck a glancing blow and knocked down. She was attended by a physician and taken to her home. She is not severely injured.

DICTAGRAPH IN HEAD OFFICE

Government Has Record of Iron Workers' Conferences

STENOGRAPHERS HEARD ALL

Presence of Instrument Hidden Last October Under Drawer of Desk About Which Union Officials Gathered Is but Just Discovered—Many Volumes of Stenographic Notes Taken and Will Be Used by Federal Officials at Trial of Accused Men

Indianapolis, Feb. 19.—Whatever Frank M. Ryan and other indicted union officials have said in their office about the dynamite conspiracy since last October is alleged to have been learned by the government from a dictagraph discovered in the headquarters of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers.

The dictagraph, hidden under a drawer in a desk about which Ryan, the president, Herbert S. Hockin, the secretary treasurer, and O. T. Butler, first vice president, and other officials conferred concerning their defense and pleas, is said to have enabled two government stenographers in a room below to take daily reports of the conversations.

The use of the instrument was disclosed Saturday, when the government decided it was no longer of value, because a woman clerk in Ryan's office was heard to say:

"Well, I suppose they are hearing now whatever we say."

That, with the statement by Ryan, convinced District Attorney Nichols that the dictagraph was no longer useful.

The dictagraph was hidden in the desk once used by J. J. McNamara, the dynamiter, and upon which he is alleged to have arranged his alarm clock scheme for regulating the time at which bombs were to be set off.

The discovery of the dictagraph followed soon the reports that the government had received intimations that some of the defendants were ready "to tell all they knew."

District Attorney Miller said the dictagraph had worked satisfactorily for months and many volumes of stenographic notes had been taken and would be used at the trials. The instrument was still working Saturday when the following was recorded:

"Woman's voice: 'I wonder if one of those wires goes to the jail and whether they are listening to us now?"

"Voice: 'I suppose so. I wish I could find out where that sounding board is.'"

After that Nichols said he had no doubt that Ryan knew of the dictagraph.

As further showing the operation of the dictagraph Nichols gave out a sample of a conversation known to have taken place last Wednesday, soon after the arrests were made. Ryan was then told there was a dictagraph in his office.

When told that records had been taken of conversations in the office since last October, Ryan said the government must have a transcript of many consultations between officials of the union on the subject of the investigation of the dynamiting conspiracy.

The wires from the dictagraph annunciator ran from the back of Ryan's desk through the floor and into a room below, rented by the government. Here sat every day two stenographers under the direction of Rowland Evans, official stenographer of the federal court, with the receiving apparatus at their ears. The stenographers worked in relays except at such times when it was desired to take a double record for corroboration.

Both Ryan and Hockin said they were amazed that a dictagraph had been in operation in the office, though they had speculated on the possibility of such an arrangement by the federal investigators.

"They are weocme to anything I have said," said Hockin. "None of my conversation has been incriminating because I have done nothing wrong. I did suspect some eavesdropping; but my first thought was that our telephone wires might have been tapped."

OPPOSES KNOX'S VISIT

Colombian Minister Writes Insulting Letter to State Department

Washington, Feb. 19.—A grave diplomatic situation between the United States and Colombia has been precipitated by the publication of a letter which Pedro Nel Ospina, the Colombian minister, has written to Acting Secretary Wilson of the state department, suggesting that it might be "inopportune" for Secretary Knox to visit Colombia during his projected tour of Central America.

After drawing attention to the fact that the views are his own, the Colombian minister seriously criticises the United States for not submitting to arbitration the differences with Colombia growing out of this government's acquisition of the Panama canal zone.

Inasmuch as the letter is admittedly the personal expression of the minister, written without having communicated with his government, it was received at the state department in the nature of a personal insult to this government.

The incident has stirred officials of the United States to such an extent that the recall of the Colomian minister is expected as a mattter of course.

REPENTS ON DEATH BED

Father Leaves a Million to Son Whom He Had Cast Off

Little Rock, Ark., Feb. 19.—William Springer of this city, son of the late Warren Springer, the Chicago millionaire, has been notified that he is to receive $1,000,000 of the Springer estate, after having been cast off during his father's life and all but disinherited by the latter's will.

Mrs. Marguerite Springer, the widow, proposes to divide the estate, it is said, in response to a death bed request by her husband. He apparently repented the clause in his will leaving the son only $5000.

Springer has been working here as a sign painter. He is 45 years old. He was born in Plane, Mich. Springer left today for Chicago.

COAL CRISIS NEAR IN GREAT BRITAIN

Colliery Owners Insuring Mines and Their Residences

London, Feb. 19.—The acuteness of the crisis in the British coal trade is emphasized by the prohibitive rate of 94½ percent asked by Lloyds on insurance against a national strike.

Both sides in the contest are making every preparation for war. The colliery owners are insuring not only the collieries, but their private residences as well, against damage. Military authorities have also been making inquiries in the coal districts as to the facilities for billeting soldiers in residences, inns and hotels.

No fewer than 800,000 miners have already handed in their notices to quit work on March 1. Unless one side or the other unexpectedly yields, the country will face a national stoppage which will paralyze every industry and send up the cost of necessaries of life to famine prices.

SENTENCE IS SUSPENDED

Plea of Forger's Friends Has Weight In an Ohio Court

Ashtabula, O., Feb. 19.—Practically every store in Ashtabula was closed because 100 business men shut up shop to go to Jefferson, the county seat, and intercede with Judge Reynolds in behalf of M. S. Davis, former agent for the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern railroad here, who was arraigned on a charge of forgery.

The interceders made the trip in a special car, taking with them a petition signed by 531 prominent men of Ashtabula county.

Davis, when arraigned, pleaded guilty, but Reynolds, after imposing a sentence of two years in the penitentiary, suspended it.

M. S. P. C. A. AGENT'S STORY

ED. H. PACKARD GIVES ACCOUNT OF TRIP THROUGH THE STATE.

Many Animals Suffer From Intense Cold. Says Interesting Things. Kind Care of Animals Pays.

Ed. H. Packard, the general field agent of the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, has been all through the state this winter in the interest of his organization, visiting the back country farms as well as the towns and noting the protection given to animals duirng the cold weather, besides studying conditions at the slaughter houses. In relation to these subjects he has the following to say:

For a good many years this matter of the winter housing of dumb creatures has been very much on my mind. I have passed the winter on farms once or twice in my career and recently have had my sympathies thoroughly aroused in behalf of the poor hogs and fowl which are compelled by the thoughtless owners to half freeze to death during our long winter nights because they are not adequately housed and bedded.

TWO HORSES DIED IN THIS OLD SHACK. NATURE MERCIFULLY PROVIDED A BLANKET OF SNOW TO KEEP OUT SOME OF THE COLD. IMAGINE YOURSELF STANDING STILL ALL NIGHT IN THIS ICE BOX AT 20 BELOW. A SHIFTLESS, HARD-HEARTED OWNER OF SUCH A MAKE-SHIFT AS THIS, NEVER DREAMS OF BLANKETING AN ANIMAL OR OF GIVING THEM PROPER BEDDING.

This winter has been one of the hardest on animals ever known and they have suffered intensely from the cold. The winter housing of animals and fowl is left optional with the owner. As far as I have observed, the average well-to-do farmers are considerate of their beasts and give them tight quarters, warm bedding and proper care, but in every community there are shiftless, ignorant or calloused men who seem to have no more feeling for their dumb creatures than for a log of wood. They are a class who should be "lined up" by law.

All over Massachusetts are men who have cooped up their hogs and hens in miserable old shacks, open to the weather on all sides besides top and underneath, no bedding, no place to exercise and there they have to stand through these bitter cold nights and days. The way some dumb creatures are made to suffer with the cold is a shame and ought to make every humane person a worker for animals' rights until a law is passed requiring every owner of captive dumb creatures to provide tight weather-proof winter quarters and warm bedding for them. The state has animal inspectors for every town to watch out for disease and to see that hygienic conditions exist.

This is a forward step. Let the state now add to the inspectors' duties the matter of the proper winter housing and bedding of all cattle and fowl and a great act of justice and mercy will be done. The responsibility for this suffering is yours. It will never be remedied until the people rise up and demand it. I hope all the granges will get to work and especially the women. It seems to me that something can be done by another winter to forever protect our dumb captives from the cold and guarantee them comfortable housing.

The M. S. P. C. A. has prosecuted many animal owners for neglect this winter; some of them were sentenced two and three months in jail besides a fine. Anyone who knows of dumb creatures exposed to the weather is asked to give the particulars to the M. P. S. C. A., 45 Milk St., Boston, who will investigate at once. There is no need of giving your name should you not care to do so. The revised laws of Massachusetts impose a maximum punishment of $250 and one year's imprisonment for unnecessarily failing to provide food, drink, shelter or protection from the weather for animals.

The Humane society needs funds sadly to cover the entire state with a paid patrol to guard these dumb creatures' rights and ferret out any cruelties or hardships. The matter requires eternal vigilance through a corps of field workers and I hope the people will give money liberally for it. Officers of the society have the dumb animals near to their hearts and are working and planning for them constantly.

The society is working hard to bring about more humane slaughtering of food animals, after the methods employed in government abattoirs abroad and has plans afoot for the erection at Boston of a modern hospital for the care of sick and disabled animals of the poor anywhere throughout the state.

More than once in the history of the nation Massachusetts has blazed out the way for reforms that have been a blessing to the race and in humane endeavor today with over 3,000,000 Band of Mercy members organized by the M. S. P. C. A. into the American Humane Education Society and directed by Dr. Francis H. Rowley, president of both societies, Massachusetts leads the world in general achievement for dumb creatures.

George Thorndike Angell, the first president and founder of the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals was also joint founder of the Illinois, Wisconsin Louisiana, Florida, Minnapolis, Saratoga, Baltimore, Hartford, Detroit Washington, D. C., and many other humane societies.

ALL OVER MASSACHUSETTS THIS WINTER WITH THERMOMETER 10 TO 40 BELOW, CATTLE AND FOWL HAVE BEEN COMPELLED TO STAY AND SUFFER IN APOLOGIES FOR SHELTER LIKE THIS WHILE MANY HOGS AND FOWL ARE LEFT ABSOLUTELY UNPROTECTED. THE HUMANE SOCIETY SADLY NEEDS FUNDS TO PATROL EVERY ACRE OF LAND IN THE STATE TO FERRET OUT THESE CRUELTIES AND PUNISH THE OFFENDERS.

FRECKLES

By Gene Stratton-Porter

COPYRIGHT, 1904, BY DOUBLEDAY, PAGE & CO.

SYNOPSIS.

Freckles, a homeless boy, is hired by Boss McLean to guard the expensive timber in the Limberlost from timber thieves.

Freckles does his work faithfully, makes friends with the birds and yearns to know more about nature. He lives with Mr. and Mrs. Duncan.

He resolves to get books and educate himself. He becomes interested in a huge pair of vultures and calls his bird friends his "chickens."

Some of the trees he is guarding are worth $1,000 each. Freckles' books arrive. He receives a call from Wessner.

Wessner attempts to bribe Freckles to betray his trust, and Freckles whips him. McLean overhears them and witnesses the fight.

Freckles' honesty saves a precious tree. He finds the nest of the vultures and is visited by a beautiful young girl.

She calls Freckles McLean's son. Freckles calls her "the angel" and helps the Bird Woman in taking photographs. McLean promises to adopt Freckles.

Freckles and the angel become very friendly. Assisted by the Bird Woman, they drive Wessner and Black Jack, timber thieves, from the Limberlost.

McLean fears more trouble, but Freckles insists upon being the sole guard of the timber. Freckles calls upon the angel's father.

The angel receives him as her equal, and her father is kind. Mrs. Duncan has exciting adventures in the Limberlost.

The Bird Woman and the angel again visit Freckles, and Freckles falls in love with the angel. The angel kisses him.

Freckles is bound and gagged by Black Jack's gang, and the timber thieves start felling a very valuable tree.

Wessner is to kill Freckles after the tree is stolen. The angel makes a daring effort to save Freckles and the tree.

McLean's men, notified by the angel, rush to save Freckles. All the timber thieves except Black Jack are captured.

Freckles guards the angel against Black Jack's vengeance. He tells McLean of his hopeless love for the angel.

Black Jack is killed by a rattlesnake. The Bird Woman gets a photograph of the baby vulture. Freckles and the angel find a valuable tree.

The tree falls, and in an effort to save the angel from death Freckles is struck and very badly injured. He appears to be dying.

With the best physician to be found, and with the Bird Woman and McLean in attendance, the four hours' run to Chicago began. Not for an instant would the angel yield her place, or allow any one else to do anything for him. The Bird Woman and McLean regarded her in amazement. The only time she spoke was to ask McLean if he was sure the special would be ready on the Pittsburg line. He replied that it was made up and waiting.

At 5 o'clock Freckles lay stretched on the operating table of Lake View hospital, while three of the greatest surgeons in Chicago bent over him. At their command, McLean picked up the unwilling angel and carried her out to the nurses to be bathed, have her bruises attended to, and be put to bed.

In a place where it is difficult to surprise people, they were astonished women as they removed the angel's dainty stained and torn clothing, peeled off hose muck baked to her limbs, soaked the dried loam from her silken hair and washed the beautiful, scratched, bruised, dirt covered body. The angel fell fast asleep long before they had finished, and lay deeply unconscious, while the fight for Freckles' life was being waged.

Three days later she was up early and hovering near Freckles' door.

The surgeon was with him. The angel had been told that the word he brought that morning would be final, so she curled up in a window seat, dropped the curtains behind her, and, in dire anxiety, waited the opening of that closed door.

Just as it unclosed, McLean came hurrying down the hall and up to the surgeon, but with one glance at his face he stepped back in dismay, and the angel, who had risen, sank to the seat again, too dazed to come forward. The men faced each other. The angel, with parted lips and frightened eyes, bent forward in tense anxiety.

"I—I thought he was doing nicely?" faltered McLean.

"He bore the operation well," replied the surgeon, "and his wounds are not necessarily fatal. I told you that yesterday, but I did not tell you that something else would probably kill him, and it will. He need not die from the accident, but he will not live the day out because he so evidently prefers death to life. If he were full of hope and ambition to live, my work would be easy. If all of you love him as you prove you do, and there is unlimited means to give him anything he wants, why should he desire death?"

"Is he dying?" demanded McLean.

"He is," said the surgeon. "He will not live this day out, unless some strong reaction sets in at once. He is so low that, preferring death to life, nature cannot overcome his inertia. If he is to live, he must be made to desire life."

"Then he must die," said McLean.

"Does that mean that you know what he desires and cannot, or will not, supply it?"

"It means," said McLean desperately, "that I know what he wants, but it is as far removed from my power to give it to him as it would be to give him a star. The thing for which he will die he can never have."

"Then you must prepare for the end very shortly," said the surgeon, turning abruptly away.

McLean caught his arm roughly.

"Look here!" he cried in desperation. "You say that as if I could do something if I would. I tell you the boy is dear to me past expression. I would do anything—spend any sum. You have noticed and repeatedly commented on the young girl with me. It is that child that he wants! He worships her to adoration, and knowing he can never be anything to her, he prefers death to life. In God's name, what can I do about it?"

"Barring that missing hand, I never handled a finer man," said the surgeon, "and she seems perfectly devoted to him, why cannot he have her?"

"Why?" echoed McLean. "Why? Well, for a good many reasons. I told you he was my son. You probably knew that he was not. A little over a year ago I had never seen him. He joined one of my lumber gangs from the road. He is a stray, left at one of your homes for the friendless here in Chicago. When he grew up the superintendent bound him out to a brutal man. He ran away and landed in one of my lumber camps. He has no name or knowledge of legal birth. The angel—we have talked of her. She has ancestors reaching back to Plymouth Rock and across the sea for generations back of that. She is an idolized, petted only child, and there is great wealth. He sees it more plainly than any one else could. There is nothing for the boy but death if it is the angel that is required to save him."

The angel stood between them.

"Well, I guess not!" she cried. "If Freckles wants me all he has to do is to say so, and he can have me!"

"That he will never say," said McLean at last, "and you don't understand, angel. I don't know how you came here. I wouldn't have had you hear that for the world, but since you have, dear, you must be told that it isn't your friendship or kindness Freckles wants; it is your love."

"Well, I do love him," she said simply.

McLean's arms dropped helplessly.

"You don't understand," he reiterated patiently. "It isn't the love of a friend, or a comrade, or a sister, that Freckles wants from you; it is the love of a sweetheart. And if to save the life he has offered for you you are thinking of being generous and impulsive enough to sacrifice your future—in the absence of your father it will become my plain duty, as the protector in whose hands he has placed you, to prevent such rashness. The very words you speak and the manner in which you say them proves that you are a mere child and have not dreamed what love is."

"I have never had to dream of love," she said proudly. "I have never known anything else in all my life but to love every one and to have every one love me. And there has never been any one so dear as Freckles. If you will remember, we have been through a good deal together. I do love Freckles, just as I say I do. I don't know anything about the love of sweethearts, but I love him with all the love in my heart, and I think that will satisfy him."

"Surely it ought!" muttered the man of knives and lancets.

"As for my father," continued the angel, "he at once told me what he learned from you about Freckles. I've known all you know for several weeks. That knowledge didn't change your love for him a particle. I think the Bird Woman loved him more. Why should you two have all the fine perceptions there are? My father is never unreasonable. He won't expect me not to love Freckles, or not to tell him so, if the telling will save him."

She darted past McLean into Freckles' room, closed the door and turned the key.

Freckles lay raised on a flat pillow, his body immovable in a plaster cast, his maimed arm, as always, hidden. The angel's heart ached at the change in his appearance. He seemed so weak, so utterly hopeless and so alone. She could see that the night had been one long terror.

For the first time she tried putting herself in Freckles' place. What would it mean to have no parents, no home, no name? No name! That was the worst of all. That was to be lost, indeed—utterly and hopelessly lost. The angel lifted her hands to her dazed head and reeled as she tried to face that proposition. She dropped on her knees by the bed, slipped her arm under the pillow, and, leaning over Freckles, set her lips on his forehead. He smiled faintly.

"Dear Freckles," she said, "there is a story in your eyes this morning, tell me?"

Freckles drew a long, wavering breath.

"Angel," he begged, "be generous! Be thinking of me a little. I'm so homesick and worn out, dear angel, be giving me back me promise. Let me go?"

"Why, Freckles!" faltered the angel. "You don't know what you are asking. 'Let you go!' I cannot. I love you better than any one, Freckles. I think you are the very finest person I ever knew. I have our lives all planned. I want you to go to be educated and learn all there is to know about singing just as soon as you are well enough. By the time you have completed your education I shall have finished college, and then I want," she choked on it a second, "I want you to be my real knight, Freckles, and come to me and tell me that you—like me—a little. I have been counting on you for my sweetheart from the very first, Freckles. I can't give you up unless you don't like me. But you do like me—just a little—don't you, Freckles?"

Freckles lay whiter than the coverlet, his eyes on the ceiling and his breath wheezing. The angel awaited his answer a second, and when none came, she dropped her crimsoning face beside him on the pillow and whispered:

"I LOVE YOU BETTER THAN ANY ONE, FRECKLES."

"Freckles, I—I'm trying to make love to you. Can't you help me just a little bit? It's awful hard all alone! I don't know how, when I really mean it, but Freckles, I love you. I must have you, and now I guess—I guess maybe I'd better kiss you next."

She bravely laid her feverish, quivering lips on his. Her breath, like clover bloom, was in his nostrils, and her hair touched his face.

"Freckles," she panted, "Freckles! I didn't think it was in you to be mean!"

"Mean, angel! Mean to you?" gasped Freckles.

"Yes," said the angel, "downright mean. When one kisses you, if you had any mercy at all you'd kiss back, just a little bit. Now, I'm going to try it over, and I want you to help me a little. You aren't too sick to help me just a little, Freckles?"

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

WRECKED IN HEAVY STORM

Ten of Those Who Were on British Ship Erne Are Missing

Boston, Feb. 19.—The British steamer Cuban, which arrived at Liverpool last night from New Orleans, brought into port nine of the crew of the British ship Erne, which was wrecked in a heavy storm at sea.

The Erne was bound from Boston, Feb. 1, for Buenos Ayres. The Cuban passed her Feb. 8, in latitude 40 north, longitude 50 west, and rescued those of the crew who had managed to keep alive.

Six of the crew were drowned, while the master of the Erne, Captain Temple A. Fickett of Hampden, Me., his wife, the second mate and a passenger are missing. Only the cargo was keeping the wreck afloat.

FAITH AND RESPECT

Millionaire Alsop Will Enjoy Both From His Young Bride

New York, Feb. 19.—"I married Mr. Alsop because I have the greatest admiration, the greatest respect and greatest faith in him—more than I have ever had in my life for any other man, and so why shouldn't I have married him? As long as we live I shall never regret the step, for he is all goodness and kindness."

Thus spoke the bride of Edward B. Alsop, the millionaire steel merchant, who is 75 years old. "Ned and Hal, my sons," said the 19-year-old bride, demurely, "are splendid boys." The sons are both older than their new stepmamma.

CONTROLS 62 PERCENT OF SUGAR BUSINESS

Thorough Investigation Shows That Trust Exists

Washington, Feb. 19.—The Hardwick "sugar trust" investigation committee, after almost continuous work since last May, reported to the house that a sugar trust exists. The report makes no recommendation whatever about how the alleged trust and those responsible for it shall be dealt with, suggesting that this phase of the situation is one to be handled by a standing committee of the house.

About the effect of the combination on the cost of sugar to the consumer, the committee expresses the belief that monopoly keeps the price up, but makes no attempt to fix accurately the extent to which reasonable prices that might exist under competitive conditions are exceeded.

The report severely condemns the original promoters of the sugar trust.

COOK IS "INDISPOSED"

"Frost" In Vermont Proves Too Severe For North Pole Discoverer

Bennington, Vt., Feb. 19.—The frost in the Arctic when Dr. Frederick A. Cook arrived was Palm Beach compared to what the North Pole doctor would have experienced if he kept his date in Bennington.

On the date of the advertised lecture Cook's manager found that two seats had been sold.

A few hours later the theatre manager received a telegram announcing that the discoverer of the North Pole was "indisposed" and would be unable to appear.

IT MUST BE TRUE

Quincy Readers Must Come to That Conclusion.

It is not the telling of a single case in Quincy, but scores of citizens testify. Endorsement by people you know bears the stamp of truth. The following is one of the public statements made in this locality about Doan's Kidney Pills.

Charles J. Somers, barber, 17 Newcomb street, Quincy, Mass., says: "It is a pleasure for me to tell of my experience with Doan's Kidney Pills, for the benefit of other kidney sufferers. This remedy worked wonders in my case. Lame back and weak kidneys bothered me for ten years and nothing helped me until I procured Doan's Kidney Pills. The promptness with which this remedy cured me was astonishing. My strength and energy was restored and my health improved one hundred percent. I shall always endorse Doan's Kidney Pills when I have the opportunity." (Statement given September 2, 1908.)

A LATER ENDORSEMENT.

On August 9, 1911 Mr. Somers was interviewed and he said: "I am only too pleased to verify my former endorsement of Doan's Kidney Pills. I still take this remedy occasionally and it keeps me in good health."

SEVEN ENTER FOR AVIATION

Besides the men, plans are being formulated to have three women aviators from the Curtiss school fly at the meet. Miss Blanche Scott, Miss Matilde Moisant and Miss Harriet Quinby are the ones whom Manager Willard hopes to secure.

The United States Army School may furnish one or two aviators and Lieutenant Milling is desirous of competing if he can arrange for a leave of absence. He is now off duty and is taking a short vacation with his family in the South.

Four hours and a half of flying is promised for this year and with popular prices in effect. The flying is scheduled to start at 2 and will end at 6.30.

The speed races will be greatly changed and all the machines will start from the getaway and their handicaps will be added at the finish of the races. In past years the machines have started one after another and there has been little excitment in the events. Under the new arrangement plenty of excitement will be furnished. In other cities the aviators have fought their way to the pylons and in going around these marks there has been much excitement.

TO USE BRIDGE WEDNESDAY

It was announced this morning that the planking of the Quincy Point bridge would be advanced far enough by Wednesday to allow the street cars to pass over and that the bridge would be open for team travel in about three weeks. The news that the street cars will be able to use the bridge will sound good to passengers who have been obliged to walk over the bridge all winter, as on some of the cold days,when there was a high wind it was not any too pleasant.

JEREMIAH CONNELL.

The funeral of Jeremiah Connell, of Sea street, Houghs Neck, took place this morning from the Church of St. John the Baptist, where a high mass of requiem was celebrated by the pastor, Rev. John J. Coan. The Gregorian music was chanted during the mass by the regular choir, under the direction of organist, John Mahan. Interment was at the family lot in Rockland.

The deceased conducted a blacksmith shop in Rockland, for a number of years, but was well and favorably known in local circles. A widow two sons and two daughters survive him.

SUB STATION WANTED.

Councilman Devaney is circulating a petition among the residents in the vicinity of Washington and River street to have a sub postal station established near the junction of these two streets. The petition is being largely signed, Mayor Stone being the first to affix his name to the petition.

GOOD GAME PROMISED.

Members of the Oliver Ames High basketball team invade the local gymnasium tomorrow afternoon to try conclusion with the local High school five. Quincy High is the only team to date that has taken the measure of the North Eastern boys on the basketball court of the latter, and as both combinations are keen rivals, a record breaking attendance should be noticeable. The game will surely be a warm one and any one desirous of witnessing the real article of basketball should make an especial effort to be present.

BOXING TOURNAMENT.

A boxing tournament, the like of which has never before been offered to the membership of an amateur organization, has been arranged for tomorrow evening by the management of the Quincy A. A. for the benefit of those who are enrolled in the membership of this flourishing local association. Patrick J. A. Duggan has been officiating in the capacity of matchmaker and his efforts to bill great drawing cards have certainly been crowned with success, as is clearly evidenced by the card he offers to those who are to be in attendance.

The bouts will take place in St. Mary's Hall, West Quincy, and it is expected that the members will turn out in large numbers for the occasion. A special bout in the 115 pound class has been arranged between Henry Morley, the coming Roxbury performer and Tommy Reagan, holder of the New England championship of that respective class, the mere announcement of which is sufficient proof of what is to be expected.

All the bouts scheduled are sure to be of a high order.

A Brother Interferes

"If Reggie cares for you I'll be the most astounded mortal in this wide world," observed Hilda's elder brother Edward.

"Strange that you can't conceive of anyone admiring your sister," answered Hilda.

"A girl is really fortunate to have a brother to advise her. Did you ever notice that the popular girl, whom every fellow rushes after and likes to be seen with is not the first to catch the desirable eligible husband?"

"Stop your philosophizing and tell me what are you trying to insinuate."

"That Reggie is only amusing himself in your society while another has captivated his heart's desire," answered Edward.

"There's not the shadow of a doubt about it."

"You must be mistaken," answered Hilda, hoping that he was.

"A lot of us fellows were discussing girls the other evening when Reggie became offended at the flippant tone some of the fellows took," replied Edward earnestly.

"He told of some girl whose picture he carried in his watch—what she meant to him. We kidded him, but he declined to show the picture until he showed us the girl some day. I felt pretty cheap because some of the fellows thought he meant you, but I explained differently at the first opportunity."

"That must be Shirley who he's always quoting," said Hilda.

"Be sensible, Sis, don't listen to his soft words. Give him the shake," asserted Hilda's brother.

"Reggie," said Hilda that night when he started to tell her how much sweeter than ever she looked, "I'm weary of your profuse praise and laudations. It only inspires in me contempt for your insincerity and hypocritical actions. You doubtless shower compliments on every girl you meet, only varying them according to her size, the coloring of her hair, and eyes."

"But I am honest when I say that your eyes are like the stars in the heavens above," he contended. "Only bluer than the sky, and as the stars are sure to shine don't ever hesitate or distrust my love for you, or that I fail to appreciate your many alluring attractions. For some caprice you pay little attention to anything I say. I even wrote to Shirley today."

"Shirley, who's Shirley?" interrupted Hilda in a strained voice.

"If practice makes perfection maybe she is responsible for your adept way in making one think with your cajoling and soft words that she is your ideal when the reality is an entirely different person."

"Your pretty ears are the only ones that hear those words," persisted Reggie.

"Who's Shirley?" repeated Hilda. "It's always Shirley, this and that. Possibly she will not be so delighted to learn that others have been the recipient of some of the same sweet phrases that she is accustomed to receive."

"The compliments you pay your favorite sister-in-law are vastly different from those tributes you give the girl whom you hope to marry."

"Don't think for a moment," said Hilda, "that I am anxious for your society if you contemplate marrying another girl. Neither do I care to be conspicuous by your devoting your time to me. The girl whose photo is in your watch will appreciate your lover-like attitude vastly more."

"Will she?" said Reggie as he opened his watch. "It's about time. Behold her picture."

Curiously Hilda took the watch. "Why, it's my likeness," she ejaculated.

"Naturally," assented Reggie. "Your brother must have told you about the girl whose picture I carried."

Hilda nodded her head.

"He insinuated something, but if I heeded his advice, dear, I never would have realized how much we loved each other."

"I took it for granted that you knew Shirley was my elder brother's wife.

"It was a great blow to my parents when my brother married her, as she was only a governess minus a fortune. They have become reconciled, however, and simply adore her. No need to be jealous of her, for she's nearly old enough to be your mother."

"Thank heavens for that," said Hilda. "If I'd only known sooner."

"She was my governess," continued Reggie, "and is everlasting thankful to me for writing to my brother about her beauty and loveliness, so that he was prepared to lose his heart."

Just then Edward sauntered in, and saw by his sister's blushing countenance that he just arrived in time to save her the humiliation of receiving any more adulation from Reggie.

"I have a present for you," cried his sister.

"This isn't my birthday," he replied vehemently, taking a look and starting to read.

"I want to present a brother-in-law to you, just the kind you like, my dear," said his sister Hilda with a twinkle in her eye.

"Congratulations!" said the amazed young man.

"It certainly does help a lot," said his sister, "to nearly spoil a romance to have a brother listen to other fellows' remarks at the club."

CARRIES OFF PUPPY PRIZES

Norman T. Harris, formerly of this city, but now a senior student in the University of Pennsylvania veterinary department achieved much success with his exhibit in a recent bench show of the Philadelphia Boston Terrier club.

We quote from a Philadelphia daily: "The regular puppy match was held for the best puppy bred by exhibitor, and Norman T. Harris carried off the blue, and incidentally the gold, that the club offers for the first, Evergreen Evelyn III being the name of his exhibit. This is a daughter of Evergreen Progenitor and Evergreen Evelyn II both winners in all the large shows.

This makes three months in succession and six times out of the last seven that pups by Evergreen Progenitor have won this match.

SQUANTUM YACHT CLUB.

At a special meeting of the Squantum Yacht club last week it was determined to "doll up" the clubhouse a little bit more for the benefit of the winter yachtsmen and any visitors that may appear. The billiard room will be refinished in fine style and the winter home of the yachtsmen wil be more beautiful and comfortable. Several new members were admitted. Commodore Eleazer F. Drew presided.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

MAKING PRUNES APPETIZING.

PRUNES are dried plums, and if only a good quality of the fruit is bought and they are daintily served there should be no reason for the prejudice that usually exists against them.

Tough or mouldy looking prunes should be shunned.

When stewing prunes the addition of a little lemon juice will be found to improve the flavor.

When Stewed.

The simplest way of cooking prunes is by stewing them. Soak them in cold water overnight if they are to be served for breakfast. Use enough water to cover them.

They may be stewed without sugar if they are placed on a moderate fire and allowed to cook slowly for an hour.

Prune Trifle.—Prepare the prunes thus: Take one pound of prunes and steep them in tepid water for four or five hours.

Place six ounces of sugar in a clean stew pan, add to it a gill of water and half a wineglassful of grape juice.

Bring it to a boil, then add the prunes, and simmer slowly until tender.

Take out, rub through a sieve and use.

If the prunes are very dry they should be soaked for a couple of hours longer, and rather more water should be added when cooking.

The quantity of sugar used may be increased or decreased, according to taste.

Dainty Desserts.

Prune Pudding.—Wash and soak some prunes, then stew very gently till partly cooked. Drain these and set in a buttered basin.

Beat one egg in four ounces of flour and by degrees moisten with half a pint of milk.

Have ready a steamer with the water under it boiling.

Pour the batter over the prunes, tie over with a cloth and steam for two hours.

Turn out to serve, and pour a sweet sauce around.

Take four whites of eggs, a dozen and a half of prunes, four tablespoonfuls of sugar, vanilla and a pinch of salt.

Stew the prunes without sugar until tender.

Drain and cut in small pieces, beat the eggs to a stiff froth, with a pinch of salt added. Fold in the prunes, pour the mixture into a buttered baking dish and place in a pan of hot water. Bake in a moderate oven for ten minutes. Then remove the covering to allow the pudding to brown slightly.

Serve cold with whipped cream.

Supplanting Mr. Howells.

Prof. Brander Matthews, at a dinner in New York, said of literary criticism:

"A good deal of it, too, is biased. A good deal of it is like Mr. Walton's.

"Mr. Walton's daughter, a college girl, wrote, at the age of 18, a novel which her father brought out for her at his own expense.

"During the Christmas holidays Mr Walton gave a party in his daughter's honor, and at this party the young girl read from an improvised platform chapters out of her book.

"Her fond old father was carried away by the reading. So tremendously indeed did his admiration for his daughter's talent enkindle him that, as the girl read on, the old man could be heard muttering over and over:

"Howells be hanged! Howells be hanged!"

MAYOR STONE SENDS FIRST VETO MESSAGE TO COUNCIL

Question of City Departments Paying for Water Used an Executive Function

Monday Night's Session the Busiest of the Year

One of the most important meetings of the City Council of the year was held Monday evening. There was a vast amount of business before the council, which included the annual budget of the Mayor and Treasurer, with estimates of amounts needed by the several departments. In the absence of President Hobbs, who is confined to his home by illness, councilman Richards was President pro tem, and he ran the business of the evening through without friction..

Councilman Gauthier, the oldest member called the meeting to order and Councilman Richards was elected as President without opposition.

The first business of the meeting was a communication from the Mayor returning without his approval the order requesting the heads of departments to include in their budget the amounts needed for water. It was the first veto of the Mayor! and on motion of Councilman Cunningham, it was laid on the table. The veto was as follows:

A VETO

A communication was received from the Mayor returning without his approval the resolve requesting the Mayor to have the heads of departments and School Committee include in their estimate the amount needed for water in their departments. The Mayor in his veto says:

"As stated in my inaugural address, I believe each department should be metered and a record kept of the quantity of water used by it, not only for the purpose of learning the amount of water used, but also, so that we may know whether there is any waste of the water, and if so, have it stopped. I do not believe there is any occasion for putting an item into the budget in favor of each department appropriating money for water to be used therein, and then later crediting the money to the water department as a receipt. I believe such a course would be unwise and I see no advantage to be derived from so doing.

"Whether each department shall be compelled to pay the water department for the amount of water it uses, is in my opinion, a matter to be determined by the Executive and Administrative departments of the city government, and not by the Legislative branch thereof, and until such a rule has been definitely and legally established there can be no occasion for having the department heads include an item for water to be used in their repective departments, in their estimate for the ensuing year.

"If this resolve had been only directed to the Mayor and asked him to have the heads of department, under his immediate control, comply with the request therein contained, notwithstanding my objection to it, I might not have regarded it as necessary to veto the same, but would treat it as a request which in the exercise of my discretion should be complied with, or not, as seemed best. But in view of the fact the resolve is also directed to the School Committee, I consider it to be one I should deal with as any other order or resolve of the council and approve or disapprove. I therefore for the foregoing reasons, return the order without my approval."

SCHOOL BUDGET.

A communication was received from the school committee inclosing its annual budget. The budget is classified this year in a new way, in accordance with a request of the State Board of Education. The grand total, including $2,200 asked for industrial evening and day schools and $1,400 for special art manual training, is $175,425, as against a total of $159,250 given the department last year. The items in this year's budget are as follows:—

Salaries, rent, census and overhead expenses, $5,360; Instruction, $130,815; Text books, $4,750; Stationery supplies for instruction, $4,750; Fuel, janitors' salaries and expenses, $22,300; Maintenance and plant, $250 Tuition, graduation exercises and miscellaneous printing, $1,600; Evening schools, $2,000; Total $171,825. Industrial evening school, $1,000; Industrial Day school, $1,200; Special manual at classes, 1,400.

ADDITION TO CITY HALL.

The Mayor forwarded a plan for an addition to City Hall and recommended an appropriation of $3500 for the same. Referred to Committee on Public Buildings.

SEWER CONSTRUCTION.

The Mayor forwarded a communication from the Commissioner asking for an apropriation of $35,000 for sewer construction. Referred to Committee on Sewers.

SCHOOL LIGHTS.

From the Commissioner asking for an appropriation for installing lights in the Washington school. Laid on table until later when Councilman Studley offered, an order for $55 which was adopted.

From Mayor inclosing notice of hearing of Port of Boston Commission on petition of C. F. Adams et. to build a pile wharf in Quincy bay. Referred to Committee on Legislative matters.

From Mayor appointing Francis N. Curtis, a public weigher, Nasar S. Nahas, and Daniel K. Barnes, constables, John Evans and Frank F. Crane as fence viewers. Confirmed.

CHIEF'S AUTOMOBILE.

From the Mayor requesting an appropriation of $620 for an automobile for the Chief Engineer. Laid on the table until later when Councilman Studley offered an order for that amount. Referred to Finance Committee.

From Mayor and City Treasurer inclosing the annual budget. Referred to Finance Committee. The budget will be found in full elsewhere.

From the Mayor recommending that Saville street be laid out as a public way to Upland road. Referred to Committee on Streets.

PLAYGROUND WANTED.

A petition was received from residents of the Massachusetts Fields school district asking that a playground be provided for the school children. Referred to Committee on Public Buildings.

THE MERCHANTS' CARNIVAL WEEK

Quincy Y. M. C. A. Rooms Resemble a Department Store

TODAY'S PROGRAM

All roads lead to the Y. M. C. A., today, where the Ladies' Auxiliary are holding their big Merchants' Carnival. The men have had to give way and make room for different tables, which ocupy the library, parlor, alcove, pool room and a part of the auditorium upstairs. The downstairs decorations are especially attractive and one can be pardoned for imagining herself in some ideal department store instead of the staid old Y. M. C. A.

The young men who are in the habit of frequenting the library, parlors and pool room, stroll around with their mouths open looking as if they felt about as much at home as a fish out of water. However some of the young men have been overpersuaded by the charming women who are in charge and may be seen hustling about bristling with bundles and full of business.

This afternoon, the Junior Boys are to give an exhibition in the gym, consisting of tumbling, pyramids and apparatus work.

The tableaux under the direction of Mrs. Tenney, promises to be more than amusing and the popular young men from Wollaston who are to take part in them should draw a crowd especially from the northern part of the city.

Tuesday and Wednesday, dinner will be served upstairs, a la carte. The menu is very tempting and unfortunate is the man whose appetite is too poor to force him to "bite."

One of the attractions which is sure to draw a coterie of young men is the Chinese laundry where a number of demure damsels of the yellow hue will pass out laundry in exchange for grab bag checks. Music will be furnished by the Y. M. C. A. orchestra on both evenings.

ENTERTAINS ON HER BIRTHDAY

Monday evening, the home of Mr. and Mrs. William E. Lee of 29 Thompson street was the scene of gay festivities, in honor of the seventeenth birthday of their daughter M. Helen Lee. Mirth and merriment prevailed throughout the evening.

A unique feature was the George Washington Cherry Tree game, the winners being Miss Lulu Moody, Miss Mildred Bonney, Charles Partington and Alfred Artis. The mysteries of the cake were discovered by Miss Muriel Sewell, Harry Brown and Miss Lee. After having spent a most enjoyable evening and leaving many tokens of esteem for their hostess the party broke up at a late hour.

Among those present were: Miss Muriel Sewell, Miss Edith Middleton, Miss Esther Stowell, Miss Helen Mayer, Miss Isabel Foster, Miss Mattie Chisholm, Miss Lulu Moody, Miss Mildred Bonney, Mrs. Carrie Partington, Miss Olive Barnicoat, Chas. Leet, Clarence Sewell, Harry Brown, Charles Partington, Rudolph Schlenker, Alfred Artis and Harold Mayer.

—The queer statement was made in Pittsburg the other day by a men and religion forward movement speaker that every immigrant is "worth $1800 to this country." Why? Because if costs $1800 to rear a man from childhood. Import men full grown, and all this cost is saddled on foreign countries, and the American nets the $1800. He made no reference to the earnings sent abroad by foreign workers in the United States which go to the payment of this initial cost, nor to the low wages paid to many immigrants—or would he count their cheap labor as part of the profit they bring the country? The logical conclusion of his argument would of course be that the faster the birth rate falls the better. For every child born, bang goes $1800!—Milford Gazette.

JUST ESCAPES BAD ACCIDENT

Stone Team Goes Over Embankment onto Railroad Tracks

TRAINS DELAYED

An accident, that came near resulting seriously took place Monday afternoon near the West Quincy depot when a two-horse team of Calvin Fletcher loaded with three tons of granite went over the embankment and stone wall onto the railroad tracks, blocking the tracks for nearly an hour. The team which was driven by Charles Moses was coming down the steep hill, leading to the Railway quarry, when the rear wheels began to slew. The driver attempted to stop the team but was unable to do so for it continued to slew until the team had made almost a complete turn.

Seeing that an accident was unavoidable the driver jumped and saved himself. Just as he jumped the team went over the embankment and then over a stone wall onto the railroad tracks, one of the horses being pinned to the ground by a heavy piece of granite.

Fortunately there was no trains due at the time or a serious accident must have happened, as the place where the team landed was hidden by the bridge and curve in the tracks. As it was, trains were delayed an hour or more. One of the horses was so badly injured that he will probably have to be killed.

Twenty-four years ago, Councilman Sandberg met with a similar accident at exactly the same place, his team at that time going over onto the track.

The street which is a private way, leading to the quarry is very steep and extremely dangerous but some steps should be taken by the railroad to protect the street so that similar accidents may not again happen. This could be done by building a stone wall along the street. It is probable that the Board of Trade will take up the matter at its next meeting.

UTOPIAN CLUB THEATRE PARTY

The members of the Utopian club, an organization of young ladies, enjoyed a theatre party Monday evening, leaving Quincy shortly after seven o'clock. On arrival in Boston, they proceeded to the Colonial theatre, where they enjoyed "The Pink Lady." The party included—Misses May Kennedy, Mary Marr, Nellie McGilvray, Sadie Abrams, Julia Shea, Carrie Godfrey, Mary Stevens, Flosale Belcher, and Evelyn Moriarty; chaperoned by Mrs. J. A. Hever.

CAMP ROUND-UP AT Y. M. C. A.

The Camp Round-Up in the Y. M. C. A. on Saturday was one of the most enjoyable occasions of the year for the boys H. W. Gibson, state secretary for boys, met with the fellows at 4.30 and talked camp with them for an hour. At 5.30, supper was served with Sturgis Hunt and Fred Ward as chefs and Willett Safford, George Dahlquist, Carl Ahlstrom, Wesley Brown, Winthrop Sherman, Ralph Prout and Leslie Andrews as waiters.

Following the "feed" was a stereopticon talk on Camp Becket by Mr. Gibson, who has been in charge of this and other camps for the past twenty years.

MRS. STEPHEN H. EDWARDS.

Mrs. Ellen B. Edwards, wife of Stephen H. Edwards, died Monday morning at her residence 53 Walker street, Atlantic. She was well known in the Atlantic section of Quincy, where she has resided the past twenty-six years, and also in West Quincy where she was born. Mrs. Edwards was 57 years of age and is survived by her husband and six children.

SUDDEN DEATH JAMES L. RAND

Well-Known Newspaper Man Dies at Home in Wollaston

HEAD OF ASSOCIATED PRESS

James L. Rand, New England Manager of the Associated Press, died suddenly Monday evening, at his home in Wollaston. Mr. Rand came from Boston in the early evening, apparently as well as usual. He was intending to attend the reception at the Baptist church, and was preparing to get ready to go to the church when he complained of feeling ill, and almost immediately expired.

JAMES L. RAND.

Mr. Rand was very much interested in the Baptist church, being the successful leader of the Rand class. Previous to coming to Quincy he conducted a similar class at South Boston under the same name.

At the recent election he was a candidate for a member of the school committee. When he was sought to become a candidate he said "I believe the public school system exists for one purpose only—to provide for each child in the community, as far as conditions will permit, the training best calculated to give him the foundation for an intelligent, productive and contented citizenship."

These sentiments briefly but truly expressed his views and were in a measure the views that prompted him to form in his church a class of young men.

Mr. Rand was born in West Lebanon, Maine, in 1866, but his early years and school life were passed in Dover, New Hampshire, where he graduated from High school in 1884, with the honor of class president. While a student at High school his spare time and evenings were spent at a local printing office, where he qualified as a journeyman printer, and caught the fever for a career in the journalistic field.

His public school education was supplemented by a three-years' special course at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, for a certificate granted in 1887. The four years following were spent in Philadelphia where Mr. Rand was connected with one of the largest manufacturing establishments in the city; but the newspaper germ was at work, with the result that in addition to the demands of his vocation he undertook a two-years' course at Temple College, specializing for journalism.

Mr. Rand then spent two years as a reporter in Philadelphia and Boston, and was then promoted to an executive position. For twenty years he has steadily advanced in his profession, until he became the manager of the New England district of the Associated Press.

He has been a resident of Wollaston for ten years.

OVER 900 PRESENT AT ANNUAL PARISH REUNION

Parishioners of St. Mary's Church Renew Acquaintances and Have Grand Time

Reception, Entertainment, Refreshments and Dancing

Over nine hundred people congregated in St. Mary's hall, West Quincy, Monday evening, for the annual reunion of St. Mary's church. The work of the various committees was in evidence everywhere and the occasion was the best in the history of the parish one which memory will treasure up for many a day to come.

The hall which had been prettily decorated was not large enough to accommodate all and during the concert program many assembled in the banquet hall, greeting acquaintances and enjoying themselves as best they could.

Previous to the reunion, a reception was held by Rev. Henry T. Grady and Rev. William J. Duffy, pastor and assistant respectively, in one of the ante rooms adjoining the lower hall. At eight o'clock Fr. Grady gave an address of welcome, and from that time until two A. M. mirth and gladness reigned.

The concert was provided by talent affiliated with the parish and was most enjoyable. At the conclusion of the concert, refreshments were served in the lower hall and the upper hall cleared for dancing which began shortly before eleven o'clock, music being furnished by Joyce's orchestra.

Many former parishioners turned out for the reunion and many a bond of friendship of a long time standing was more firmly cemented.

James F. Burke was floor marshal. His assistant was Daniel E. Duggan, who was assisted by an efficient corps of aids comprising:—Charles J. McGilvray, Dr. John H. Ash, Dr. John T. Reynolds, Ambrose Milford, John Ryan, Councilman John J. Mahoney, Charles Reardon, John Kapples, Jr., Hon. John D. Smith, Herman Schatzl, Thomas H. O'Brien, Paul Morissette, John Joyce, William H. LADIES' NIGHT WALTHER CLASS

Supper, Entertainment and Address the Evening's Program

A MAN'S JOB

Ladies' night was observed Monday evening by the Walther class with a supper and entertainment in the chapel of the Wollaston Baptist church.

At seven o'clock, an excellent supper served by the entertainment committee consisting of Kendall F. Harriman, William Waring, W. F. Chase, Mr. O'Connell, H. L. Wilson, E. B. Neal, Philip Dresser and Lester Porter. Beautiful flowers adorned the tables and before the evening was over found their way to the fair sex. The blessing was asked by Rev. Joseph Walther.

Eben Hardy, president of the class, cordially welcomed those present and announced as the first number on the program a violin duet by Marion Hardy and Francis Hildebrand.

A vocal solo, " The Angels' Serenade" by Miss Ruth Hardy with violin obligato by Mrs. Adelaide Thomas Sutherland was enjoyed; accompaniment by Mrs. Joseph Walther. An encore "I'm thirty, she's only two," was given by Miss Hardy.

Rev. D. M. Lockrow, associate pastor of Tremont Temple, Boston was introduced as the speaker of the evening and kept all agog with merriment with his never ending fund of humorous stories.

Mr. Lockrow is teacher of the largest men's class in the country with an enrollment of over 750 and having the other Sunday, a record attendance of over 400.

Not only did Mr. Lockrow crack jokes but he drove home some striking facts in regard to a man's work in the church. His subject was "A Man's Job." He urged service and told his audience to put themselves in the place of their fallen fellowman where but for circumstances they themselves would be. Mr. Lockrow spoke of service as being the eternal thing while gold, pleasure, and fame are only temporal. Closing with the story of a soldier's loyalty he told his audience to obey the commands of their superior officer above and in the end they would be remembered with the blessed phrase, "Dead on the field of honor."

The evening closed with a violin selection by Marion Hardy, "My Ain Folk" a vocal solo by Miss Ruth Hardy and a group of violin solos by Mrs. Adelaide Thomas Sutherland.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Washington's Birthday

¶ Thursday, February 22 (Washington's Birthday) the edition of The Ledger will be omitted.

The Ledger Friday will contain a full account of the celebration in our city.

The politicians have considerable nerve to fix the date of the political conventions before the base ball schedules are made out.

It is noted that none of the presidential candidates claims to have been born in a log cabin, but those that came from poor but honest parents stand a chance to get by.

As Gen. Weaver lived twenty years after running for president, it is not likely that his end was caused by grief because Uncle Uncle Sam would not rent him the White house.

We propose to ask the money trust investigators why they turned down our offer for government bonds, after we had displayed our financial stability by putting up a postage stamp?

C. W. Morse became angry when the photographers tried to take him leaving Atlanta. He will never get a good picture until he learns to look pleasant.

There is much demand for Dickens' works on account of the centenary. They are far better fun than the loves of Algernon Saphead and Genevieve Softleigh, which largely constitute the Six Best Sellers.

RIVER AND HARBOR BILL.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 19, 1912

The River and Harbor appropriation bill which will probably be reported this week, the committee having worked indefatigably of late to that end, will further emphasize the policy of the committee in the 61st Congress, that in order to secure the best results from waterway development, there should be an annual river and harbor bill, fashioned along the lines of the army, the navy and the postoffice budgets.

Congressman John H. Small of North Carolina, a member of the Rivers and Harbors committee, who has been an enthusiastic advocate of a broad and comprehensive policy of waterway development on the part of the general government, has some pronounced views on the subject of water terminals essentially necessary to perfect water transportation. He contends that the control of port terminal facilities is the key to securing traffic by waterways, and no water line may expect to secure a satisfactory traffic unless it controls adequate terminals at each port or landing where business is invited.

"The time will come," says Mr. Small, "When all appropriations by Congress will be predicated upon the establishment of appropriate terminals by muncipalities and while due regard must be had to the varying conditions of different sections, yet subject to this limitation, the necessity for the terminals is so apparent as to command early and serious consideration.

"These terminals must comply with several conditions. There must be sufficient area. Commodious warehouses are necessary and they must be equipped with up-to-date mechanical appliances, for the transfer of freight to and from the vessel and the warehouse and the car. Such terminals must have trackage connection with the railroad or railroads with which traffic is exchanged. And these terminals should be provided by muncipalities or some other convenient public agency to the end that they should be regulated and controlled in the interest of the whole people.

"Every facility for their use should be extended to water carriers and they should be operated without the expectation of profit above the interest upon their cost and maintenance."

The importance of this question is emphasized by General W. H. Bixby, the Chief of Engineers of the U. S. Army who, in a recent address said: "Another important point developed in Europe in the past year is the fact that no waterway can be used to its full capacity until it is provided with improved terminals, having all modern facilities for unloading and re-loading and for transfer of cargo between railroads and steamboats in such way as has been done for years on the Great Lakes at the ore docks of Lake Superior and at the coal docks of Lake Erie.

"Another point of great importance," continued Genl. Bixby, "is the necessity of all proper control of these terminals by the muncipalities of commercial ports and the establishment of arrangements by which railroad lines will give through bills of lading and all loading and other transfer facilities to any freights as may be desired to shippers along and over lines of mixed railroads and water routes."

LEAP YEAR GIRLS' DANCING PARTY

A pretty Leap Year dancing party was held in Colonial hall Monday evening by the Leap Year Girls. The hall had been very appropriately decorated for the occasion, hearts and darts being conspicuous among the streamers of varied colors that draped the hall from one side to the other.

Robsham's orchestra furnished music and the dance order comprised sixteen numbers, the feature of which was a Leap Year Waltz. Refreshments were served during intermission and the affair came to a close at midnight.

The committee in charge were: Misses Beatrice Isaacson, Annie Nelson, Ruth Gullickson and Marion Beale.

TO WASHINGTON.

E. W. Lundahl.

Washington! undying fame
Will ever crown that glorious name,
Today let bells from sea to sea
Ring out in wildest ecstasy.
Though centuries shall onward roll,
Our nation always will extoll
This man so true, so pure in soul:
Washington! our Washington!

Washington! the bells shall chime
A tribute sweet througout all time.
A soldier brave, a statesman true,
His like past ages never knew.
Let prince and sage here halt and rest
No longer need for earnest quest;
For virtue dwelt within his breast.
Washington! our Washington!

Washington! no need to fear
While bells acclaim it far and near,
The hand that 'stablished liberty
Did also shape our destiny.
No prophet's creed, nor tyrant band,
Can desolate our native land
While freemen sing that name so grand,
Washington! our Washington!

Washington! O sing his worth,
Ye favored land that gave him birth.
Make joyful music with the bells
Till every heart with rapture swells.
Let flags their gleaming folds display,
On this our hero's natal day
Teach foreign lips his name to say:
Washington! our Washington!

Washington! of royal mould!
No sceptre bore, nor crown of gold,
Yet never ruled more kingly man
Then he our great American!
While billows roll o'er mighty seas,
While light shall shine from Pleiades,
The bells shall ring upon the breeze,
Washington! our Washington!!

SECRET KEPT WELL GUARDED

Taft Names Mahlon Pitney For the Supreme Court

CHANCELLOR OF NEW JERSEY

Former Member of Congress and Lawyer and Jurist of Thirty Years' Practice—Fifth Justice of High Court to Be Named by Chief Executive—Why Hook and Nagel Were Turned Down

Washington, Feb. 20.—President Taft sent to the senate the nomination of Chancellor Mahlon Pitney of New Jersey to be an associate justice of the United States supreme court. He also nominated Julius M. Mayer of New York city to be judge of the United States district court for southern New York and Ferdinand A. Geiger of Cassville, Wis., to be district judge, eastern district of Wisconsin.

The fact that Mr. Taft would likely select Chancellor Pitney for the supreme court vacancy did not become known until Sunday night and then it was discussed only among some of the president's closest friends. Unusual efforts were made to guard the secret and the president had planned to send the nomination in as a complete surprise. Mr. Taft does not anticipate any opposition to the nomination in the senate.

Chancellor Pitney long has been a prominent figure in New Jersey. In casting about for a successor to Harlan, the president first looked beyond the Mississippi river. At one time it seemed certain that he would name Judge Hook of the United States circuit court, and again it seemed that Secretary Nagel of the department of commerce and labor would be the president's choice.

There was a protest against Hook because of his decisions in two Oklahoma cases, one involving the 2-cent carfare law and the other the "Jim Crow" car law. The latter case, in which Hook decided in favor of the railroads and against the contention of the negroes affected, is said to have been the final cause of the president's turning from the Kansas jurist. Labor organizations protested against Nagel on the ground that he had been too lenient in the enforcement of the immigration laws.

When Pitney shall have been confirmed by the senate and has taken his place on the supreme court, President Taft will have had the extraordinary experience of having constituted a majority of the highest tribunal in the land—a bench on which it had been his supreme ambition to serve as chief justice.

In addition to naming five new justices on a court of nine, President Taft also had the distinction of elevating Associate Justice White to the chief justiceship, making in all six supreme court appointments during the three years he has been in the White House. The five associate justices named by Taft were Messrs. Lurton, Hughes, Van Devanter, Lamar and Pitney.

Mahlon Pitney, a member of congress for two terms; is a lawyer and jurist of thirty years' practice. He is just a little more than 54 years old. He served as associate justice of the New Jersey supreme court from 1901 to 1908, and became chancellor in the latter year. His term would expire in 1915. His home is in Morristown.

RAY PAPERS ARE MISSING

Wanted by Committee on Expenditures in War Department

Washington, Feb. 20.—Search for missing papers in the case of Major Ray, U. S. A., paymaster at Chicago, has been begun by the house committee on expenditures in the war department.

That there have disappeared from the war department certain documents and correspondence relating to charges against Ray when he was paymaster in the Philippines, Chairman Helm and other members of the committee are satisfied, and it is their intention to find the originals.

The committee, after conferring with Adjutant General Ainsworth, retired, learned that copies of some of the missing papers, if not all of them, are in existence. This information caused a stir in the committee and later it was reported that in the Ray case certain persons attached to the war department had carefully kept copies of correspondence, anticipating that the originals might be spirited away.

You need the Ledger every day.

The Test of Friendship.

In friendship, as in most matters, it is the little things that count. Not promises of eternal fidelity, but thoughtfulness about trifles assures us that our friend really cares for us. The one who knows instinctively what subjects of conversation may be unpleasant to us, what subject we do not like to hear jested about, who, knowing too when we wish to be silent, humors us in our wish—that is the one with whom we love to associate. We can never retain a friend long if we are not willing to take pains to find out his peculiarities and respect them.

GOVERNOR REFUSES $420,290 TO "AGGIE"

State Institution Criticized In Message From Foss

Boston, Feb. 20.—Governor Foss, in a message sent to the legislature, severely criticises the management of the state agricultural college, and refuses to approve an increase of $420,920 asked for by the trustees for the maintenance of the institution and special improvements.

"I cannot find," the govenor says, "that the present growth of the college is proceeding along any definite plan for ultimate development. Less than half the teaching staff are employed directly upon agricultural topics, although the original intention of the school was to teach practical agricultural subjects and to provide suitable college training for young farmers."

The governor urges the appointment of a special unpaid commission to investigate and report as to the best line of future development to be mapped out for the agricultural college.

Resolved, That Isaac Stephenson was not duly and legally elected to a seat in the United States senate by the legislature of the state of Wisconsin.

Joining Jones in submitting the report and resolution are Senators Clapp of Minnesota, Kenyon of Iowa, Republicans; and Kern of Indiana and Lea of Tennessee, Democrats.

MRS. STEWART UNDER ARREST

Is Friend of Shaw, Absconding Shoe Manufacturer

DETECTIVES PUT TO WORK

Belief That Man Who Wrote That He Was About to Commit Suicide Is Hiding In New York and Intends to Depart For South America—Amount Stolen Placed at $200,000 by Heaviest Creditor

Boston, Feb. 20.—Mrs. Georgia M. Stewart was arrested at her apartments in the Albemarle Chambers, Back Bay, yesterday afternoon, on a warrant charging her with being an accessory before and after the ract to the larceny of $10,000 by A. W. Shaw, the missing shoe manufacturer of Freeport, Me.

After repeated refusals to open her sumptuous apartments, the police, with the house surrounded, entered by breaking down the door.

The warrant on which the arrest was made was sworn out by the Pinkerton agency on behalf of the Boston Bank association.

Mrs. Stewart yesterday received this letter from Shaw:

"Dear Georgia:

"It is too late for me to return home and settle up, but I would be able to make a whole bundle of money soon, and then everything would be all right, as my wife would set me free, and then we could be married.

"Come and join me. Get out of town and don't let anyone see you.

"I think that the boat route is the easier one, and if you have to have any assistance write to me here. I want you with me very much. I do not think I have made a mistake so far, although it is awfully hard for you, I know. I have all the money I want to go into the business I told you about.

"I want you to leave as soon as you can get away, for I must leave here in a few days. If I am not here when you arrive my friend L. will let you have my address and he will also furnish you money.

"I do not know exactly where I am going, but I think it will be Brazil."

"I had to meet some men in Savannah from South America and they said that they would fix me up down there. I beg of you for all there is between us to join me at your first opportunity. In any event, let me hear from you at once. Yours,

"Arthur."

Latest developments in the sensational case of Shaw go to show that his thefts from the widely known firm of A. W. Shaw company instead of being only $50,000 may amount to fully $200,000.

It is also learned that the creditors are preparing to seek the intervention of the United States government and ask that all ships entering the port of Rio Janeiro from United States ports be held up and careful search made of them to see whether or not Shaw is aboard. If he is the creditors will ask that he be held awaiting the action of the United States authorities that he may be brought back to this state or Maine to answer charges which the creditors have no hesitancy in saying will be preferred against him without delay.

The fact that Shaw's defalcation may amount to $200,000 was told by the firm's heaviest creditor. At the time the announcement of Shaw's absconding was made public by his partner, Jacob W. Amick, this creditor was in the west. He was informed by his office and started at once for Boston.

Upon his arrival in this city little had been done to guard the creditors against possible loss. No action had been taken against Shaw, nor had any effort, other than a half-hearted one, been made to discover his whereabouts. No detectives had been placed upon his trail or detailed to watch Mrs. Stewart.

At the meeting of several of the creditors in the offices of the Lincoln Trust company on Saturday he was most active in urging that some immediate step be taken to apprehend Shaw and guard against Mrs. Stewart leaving Boston or withdrawing her balance from the bank. As a consequence of his activity Attorney Bancroft was chosen to represent the creditors, and he was authorized to engage the services of a detective agency.

Several of them were at once detailed to proceed to New York and see if they could trace Shaw's movements from the time he left the Grand Union hotel on the morning of Feb. 2. The belief is strengthened that he has not yet left that city, but is waiting there in hiding.

Attorney Bancroft was yesterday appointed ancillary receiver of the A. W. Shaw company by Judge Jenney in the equity session of the Suffolk superior court on the petition of the two Maine receivers, Jacob W. Amick and Edward W. Wheeler. His duty will be look after the interests of the Massachusetts creditors of the company.

WILL BECOME A QUEEN

Princess Olga of Russia Betrothed to Future King of Bulgaria

St. Petersburg, Feb. 20.—After many domestic "scenes," it has been decided that Grand Duchess Olga, Czar Nicholas' eldest daughter, shall wed Prince Boris, the eldest son of Czar Ferdinand of Bulgaria, and its future sovereign. The official announcement is expected next August, when Ferdinand will be crowned with all the pomp of Byzantine glory at Tirnovo, the most ancient city in the Balkans.

This betrothal puts an end to the schemes of certain court circles to wed the grand duchess to Prince Arthur of Connaught, a great favorite here but not considered good enough for Olga, as he will never be king anywhere.

Then Russia's foreign policy scores with the Bulgarian match. Russia wants much more influence in the Balkans and will surely get it now.

RESOLUTION KEPT SECRET

Iron Workers Called a Temporary Halt on Bomb Explosions

Indianapolis, Feb. 20.—That the dynamiting plots were brought to the attention of certain committees at the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers' convention in Rochester, N. Y., in 1910, came to light as one of the government's charges against the fifty-four indicted men.

It is charged by federal authorities that a resolution demanding that "no more bombs or explosives of any kind be exploded while this convention is in session" was written out in regular form by a delegate at the convention, was secretly referred to a committee and, without the action upon it becoming known, was subsequently found by the government among the papers taken from the iron workers' headquarters in Indianapolis. The government claims to have the original resolution.

CARRIED A LOADED REVOLVER IN BOSTON

New Hampshire Sheriff Finds Badge Does Not Protect Him

Boston, Feb. 20.—John Shorey, deputy sheriff of Carroll county, N. H., resident of Conway, though he showed his badge to Judge Sanderson in the superior court, was told it gave him no right to carry a revolver in this state and was sentenced to three months in the house of correction. A charge of assault and battery against him was placed on file. The sentence was on appeal from the lower court.

Shorey boarded a train at Conway for Boston, bound for a good time in this city. He was so hilarious when he stepped off the train at the North station that Officer Walsh arrested him on a charge of carrying a loaded revolver.

Last summer Shorey came to Boston and got into similar trouble. He claimed that a man attempted to rob him at the South End and that the shots he (Shorey) fired at that time were for the purpose of scaring the robber. He paid a fine in court for this offense.

AFTER FINE FOR ASSAULT

Legal to Sentence For Homicide If the Victim Should Die

Washington, Feb. 20.—The question whether a person fined for assault is afterwards liable to prosecution for homicide if the victim dies was decided in the affirmative by the supreme court of the United States in the case of Gabrial Diaz against the United States, originating in the Philippines.

Diaz was arrested for assaulting a laborer in his employ and fined. Afterwards the laborer died and he was charged with homicide and sentenced to prison for fourteen years.

TRIO OF POSTAL THIEVES

Former Employes of Uncle Sam Are Given Jail Sentences

Boston, Feb. 20.—Three sentences of imprisonment for embezzling from the mails were imposed by Judge Dodge in the United States district court. Clarence R. McCarrick, former transfer clerk at the north postal station, was given one year at East Cambridge; Henry Donahue, superintendent of carriers at the Newburyport postoffice, and Leroy B. Foster, clerk at the Beverly postoffice, were given nine months each at the jail in Ipswich.

Smudge Suffocates Two Sisters

Springfield, Mass., Feb. 20.—Annie and Mary Mack, sisters, 43 and 45 years of age respectively, were suffocated in a slight fire in their apartment on Burnham street. One of the women accidentally overturned an oil stove and the smudge which followed caused the women's death.

Fire Destroys Opera House

St. Paul, Feb. 20.—One fireman was killed and another fatally injured in a $100,000 fire which destroyed the Grand opera house.

HERDING OFF LITTLE ONES

Unfortunate Mistakes Have Been Made at Lawrence

MOTHERS WORRY OVER THEM

Some Children Sent to Distant Cities Without Parents' Knowledge or Consent—Strike Leaders Threaten to Send Six or Seven Thousand Men to Manchester If Necessary In Their Jail Filling Campaign

Lawrence, Mass., Feb. 20.—Wanderlust fostered by strangers met on the streets, the idea of a big new city and strange world, together with promises of food, clothes and entertainment has taken its hold on the children of the poor here.

These things, and ignorance among some mothers, have caused them in many instances to be separated from little ones who might otherwise now be at home. Sometimes the separation was with parents' consent, but frequently without it, when the children had been lured away by the numerous promised attractions.

It may be days before it is known how many little runaways thus left Lawrence, and today mothers are anxious when they kiss their children good bye and send them to school in the morning or out on some other mission. They do not know when they will see them again.

Investigation of complaints made by mothers and other relatives of children, to the police, shows that by the method in which the children were herded off, unfortunate mistakes were made.

In some instances the children went without parents' knowledge or consent and in other cases mothers were ignorant as to the circumstances under which their little ones were taken from them.

The difficulty seems to be that those in charge of the children seemed unable to prevent children who had run away from home or school going along with the others whose parents had consented.

Probation Officer McEaneney admits that there may be many children of foreign parents who didn't attend school very regularly and whose absence may not be reported for days who have also run away and gone along with the strikers' children.

Thousands of Industrial Workers of the World from all over the entire country will begin to arrive in Manchester, N. H., next week to take part in the proposed free speech campaign, according to I. W. W. strike leaders.

Fred J. Wolf, who was arrested in Manchester Saturday night with five other agitators, arrived in Lawrence to confer with James Thompson, who will have charge of the campaign. Wolf secured bail yesterday and came directly to this city.

"We will know for certain within a few days whether we will start the free speech demonstrations," said Wolf. Our first move will be to throw more than 1000 workers into Manchester. These will be followed by others, in delegations of from 500 to 1000, until we have filled their jails with 6000 or 7000 people. Then we will sit back and see what they will do about it."

Another critical Monday passed without a material change in the textile strike situation. All the mills claim a slight gain in operatives, but the number that returned to work was not large enough to alarm the strike leaders, who urged only that everyone be out on the picket line today, especially the women.

It was the woman workers who were particularly active in doing picket duty yesterday. As a result, Johanna Radsiarlowicz was arrested and fined $10 for intimidation and two other Polish women were arrested for molesting soldiers. The sentences of the latter two, however, were suspended by Judge Mahoney.

Interest of the day centred on the hearing of Joseph J. Ettor and Arturo Giovannitti on a charge of being accessories in the murder of Anna Lopizzo. Ettor was on the witness stand all day and will be cross examined further by District Attorney Atwill today. The defense has twenty-five other witnesses who will testify.

MURDERER SHOWS NERVE

Laughingly Asks to See His Wife as He Is Hanged

Mobile, Ala., Feb. 20.—J. L. Odom, convicted of the murder of three persons, was hanged here yesterday. He refused the ministrations of a clergyman who labored with him all night and those of his own son—a Catholic priest.

When asked to say his last prayer, he requested that his 5-year-old daughter Hazel be brought to him to remove the black-cap. He mounted the gallows stoically, and laughingly asked to see his wife.

Odom was convicted of killing Charles Golang, Joseph Stokes and David Gartman. They had been witnesses against him in police court on a charge of cruelty to a dog.

Disillusioning Carson

With a little cry of pain, Alice sank to the snow covered pavement. Beneath the fresh fallen snow was an icy patch, and her ankle had turned under her.

She had been detained at the office rather late and the street was deserted. Even the policeman on beat had sought shelter from the storm.

She made an effort to rise, but sank back helplessly as she placed a strain on the injured ankle and she began to cry softly. For perhaps ten minutes she lay there, then from around the corner came a muffled form and she gave a glad little cry that attract attention.

"What's the matter?" called a cheery voice. "Had a slip?"

"I have sprained my ankle," she explained. "I can't get up and it began to look as though I should have to spend the night here."

"I guess not," was the cheerful response. "Live far from here?"

"Four blocks down and one over."

"Not worth while calling a cab," he commented, as he took a quick glance around. "I don't think we could get a cab if I telephoned for one. This seems to be the proper caper."

In a nearby basement some boy had left his sled, and the man caught it up. "This will do finely," he announced. "I'll have you down there in no time at all."

Gently he raised her in his strong arms and disposed her comfortably on the sled. Then he grasped the ropes and started off at a brisk trot.

"It reminds me of the times when I used to draw my sweetheart to school on my sled," he called over his shoulder. "Ever live in the country?"

"Long ago," she answered. "It seems ages."

"Then I guess this makes you young again, too."

"That's polite," she replied with a laugh.

"I didn't mean that," he stammered. "I meant it would make you a kid again. I didn't suppose that you were an old lady, though with that brown veil, you might be my own grandmother."

"Thank you again," she cried.

"I guess I won't say anything more," he chuckled. "Perhaps I wasn't built to pay compliments. Is this where your turn."

"To the right."

"Right it is," and the sled swung around the corner. Presently, at her word, he drew up in front of a house and again he lifted her in his strong arms. The ankle hurt terribly, but there was something comforting in the sense of his strength.

It was only a moment before his ring was answered and as the door swung open and the yellow light streamed out, Mrs. Donaldson gave a cry of surprise.

"Why, Ned Carson, what are you doing here?"

"I've a bundle marked 'damaged in transit,'" he explained, smilingly, "but I did not know that it was for you. Is it Alice?"

"Certainly, the poor child. Take her in the parlor and I'll be right along with hot water and bandages."

Carson carried the girl into the parlor and deposited her carefully upon the sofa.

"I never thought," he said softly, "when I spoke of carrying my sweetheart to school, that it was my real one-time sweetheart that I was talking to."

Alice colored vividly. She remembered those old days, and how they had plighted their childish troth. Ned had gone away and they had lost sight of each other. What would he say when he heard of her engagement?

"I'll run away with that borrowed sled before the police get after me," he announced briskly. "Then I'll be back to see if I can be of any use."

"Alice heard the front door close and settled weakly back upon the pillow. It seemed cruel, just as he had found her again and just when circumstances recalled their childhood, that she should repay his kindness with disillusionment. She had been genuinely fond of Ned in the old days, and she hated to give him pain. Yet it was best that she should tell him frankly. It was a generous cruelty.

Presently he came stamping back to announce that he had caught the small boy just going for a policeman, and that he had compromised for a quarter.

His good humor was infectious, and Alice found herself forgetting her pain in listening to his recital of his experiences in getting ahead. He was so frankly proud of his success that it seemed a shame to dispel the newly-awakened romance by a word, yet she nerved herself to the task.

"I have a surprise for you," she began. "After all this talk of old times, doesn't it seem funny to hear that I'm engaged. I'm going to be married in the spring."

She shrank back against the pillows, awaiting the look of disappointment she feared. Ned's face lighted with kindly interest.

"Take my advice," he said, "and go to Washington for your honeymoon. They are so used to bridal couples there that no one notices them. That's where we went last year."

Then, blushing guiltily, they looked into each other's eyes and—laughed.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

FOR LOVERS OF COOKIES.

OLD fashioned cookies have a popularity all their own. Even the name is attractive. So simple are they to mix that there are few housewives so unskilled that they cannot in an emergency roll out and bake a panful.

When mixing cookies it is important that the sugar and butter should be well creamed together before the other ingredients are added. If not the cookies will be heavy. The ingredients must be mixed gradually, stirring all the time. The flour must be sifted.

The cookies should be golden brown when baked and round up slightly in the middle.

Some Recipes.

Spiced Cookies.—Take half a coffeecupful of butter, a cupful of sugar, two and a half cupfuls of flour, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, an egg, a quarter of a cupful of milk and a very little ground mace.

Cream together the butter and sugar, also adding the mace. Then stir the baking powder in the flour, sift both together and add alternately with the milk and eggs to the butter and sugar.

This will form a soft dough. Flour the pastry board and rolling pin, cut a quarter of the dough and roll it as thinly as possible.

Cut the cakes with a small round biscuit ring and place them on a buttered tin, scarcely touching each other. Bake them a light brown in a quick oven.

Cheap Cakes.

Eggless Cookies.—Take two cupfuls of sour milk, two cupfuls of sugar, a teaspoonful of salt, two level teaspoonfuls of saleratus dissolved in a little water.

Beat the cream and sugar together, add salt and soda, and stir in flour, but do not beat it. Have it as soft as can be rolled. Sprinkle sugar over after rolling to a quarter of an inch. Press with rolling pin and bake in quick oven.

Walnut Cookies.—Cream together two-thirds of a cup of butter and two-thirds of a cup of brown sugar and add an egg.

When well beaten stir in a cupful of rolled oats and two-thirds of a cupful of English walnuts chopped fine.

Last add a cupful of flour and a teaspoonful of baking powder. Sift the baking powder with the flour.

FIVE CAUGHT IN DEBRIS

One Man Killed When Large Building Crumples Like Eggshell

Pittsburgh, Feb. 20.—One man was killed and four were injured in the collapse of a 3½-story concrete and steel office building of the Spang Chalfant & Co. steel plant at Etna.

The building, which was nearing completion, was 1000 feet long, and without warning, from a cause yet unknown, about 500 feet of it crumpled up like an eggshell and fell into the cellar, a mass of debris and twisted steel work.

FRECKLES

By Gene Stratton-Porter

COPYRIGHT, 1904, BY DOUBLEDAY, PAGE & CO.

SYNOPSIS.

Freckles, a homeless boy, is hired by Boss McLean to guard the expensive timber in the Limberlost from timber thieves.

Freckles does his work faithfully, makes friends with the birds and yearns to know more about nature. He lives with Mr. and Mrs. Duncan.

He resolves to get books and educate himself. He becomes interested in a huge pair of vultures and calls his bird friends his "chickens."

Some of the trees he is guarding are worth $1,000 each. Freckles' books arrive. He receives a call from Wessner.

Wessner attempts to bribe Freckles to betray his trust, and Freckles whips him. McLean overhears them and witnesses the fight.

Freckles' honesty saves a precious tree. He finds the nest of the vultures and is visited by a beautiful young girl.

She calls Freckles McLean's son. Freckles calls her "the angel" and helps the Bird Woman in taking photographs. McLean promises to adopt Freckles.

Freckles and the angel become very friendly. Assisted by the Bird Woman, they drive Wessner and Black Jack, timber thieves, from the Limberlost.

McLean fears more trouble, but Freckles insists upon being the sole guard of the timber. Freckles calls upon the angel's father.

The angel receives him as her equal, and her father is kind. Mrs. Duncan has exciting adventures in the Limberlost.

The Bird Woman and the angel again visit Freckles, and Freckles falls in love with the angel. The angel kisses him.

Freckles is bound and gagged by Black Jack's gang, and the timber thieves start felling a very valuable tree.

Wessner is to kill Freckles after the tree is stolen. The angel makes a daring effort to save Freckles and the tree.

McLean's men, notified by the angel, rush to save Freckles. All the timber thieves except Black Jack are captured.

Freckles guards the angel against Black Jack's vengeance. He tells McLean of his hopeless love for the angel.

Black Jack is killed by a rattlesnake. The Bird Woman gets a photograph of the baby vulture. Freckles and the angel find a valuable tree.

The tree falls, and in an effort to save the angel from death Freckles is struck and very badly injured. He appears to be dying.

CHAPTER XXI.

SEEKING A BIRTHRIGHT.

FRECKLES' sinewy fist knotted into the coverlet. His chin pointed ceilingward and his head rocked on the pillow. "Wait a bit, angel!" he begged. "Be giving me a little time!"

The angel rose with controlled features. She bathed his face, straightened his hair and held water to his lips. It seemed an age before he reached for her. She took his hand and leaned her cheek upon it.

"Tell me, Freckles," she whispered softly.

"If I can," said Freckles, in biting agony. "It's just this. Angels are from above. Outcasts are from below. You've a sound body and you're beautifulest of all. You have everything that loving, careful raising and money can give you. I have so much less than nothing that I don't suppose I had any right to be born. It's a sure thing—nobody wanted me afterward, so, of course, they didn't before. Some of them should have been telling you long ago."

"If that's all you have to tell, Freckles, I've known that quite awhile," said the angel stoutly. "Mr. McLean told my father, and he told me. That only makes me love you more, to pay for all you've missed."

"Then I'm wondering at you," said Freckles, in a voice of awe. "Can't you see that if you were willing and your father would come and offer you to me, I couldn't be touching the soles of your feet, in love—me, whose people brawled over me, cut off me hand, and throwed me away to freeze and to die! Me, who has no name just as much because I've no right to any, as because I don't know it. When I was little, I planned to find me father and mother when I grew up. Now I know me mother deserted me, and me father was maybe a thief and surely a liar. The pity of me suffering and the watching over me has gone to your head, dear angel, and it's me must be thinking for you. If you could be forgetting me lost land, where I was raised, and that I had no name to give you, and if you would be taking me as I am, some day people such as mine must be might come upon you. I used to pray ivery night and morning and many times the day to see me mother. Now I only pray to die quickly and never risk the sight of her. 'Tain't no ways possible, angel! It's a wildness of your dear head. Oh, do, for mercy sake, kiss me once more and be letting me go!"

"Not for a minute!" cried the angel. "Not for a minute, if those are all the reasons you have. There are thousands of young couples who come to this country and start a family with none of their relatives here. Chicago is a big city, and grown people could be wiped out in a lot of ways, and who would there ever be to find to whom their little children belonged? It's all so plain to me. Oh, if I could only make you see!"

She buried her face in the pillow and presently lifted it, transfigured.

"Now I have it!" she cried. "Oh, dear heart! I can make it so plain! Freckles, can you imagine you see the old Limberlost trail? Well, when we followed it, you know, there were places where ugly prickly thistles overgrew the path, and you went ahead with your club and bent them back to keep them from stinging through my clothing. Other places there were great shining pools where lovely, snow white lilies grew, and you waded in and gathered them for me. Oh, dear heart, don't you see? It's this! Everywhere the wind carried that thistledown, other thistles sprang up and grew prickles and wherever those lily seeds sank to the mire the pure white of other lilies bloomed. But, Freckles, there was never a place anywhere about the Limberlost, or in the whole world, where the thistledown floated and sprang up and blossomed into white lilies! Thistles grow from thistles and lilies grow other lilies. Dear Freckles, think hard! You must see it! You are lily, straight through! You never, never could have drifted from the thistle patch.

"Where did you get the courage to go into the Limberlost and face its terrors? You inherited it from the blood of a brave father, dear heart. Where did you get the pluck to hold for over a year a job that few men would have taken at all? You got it from a plucky mother, you bravest of boys. You waded single handed into a man almost twice your size and fought like a demon, just at the suggestion that you could be deceptive and dishonest. Could your mother or your father have been untruthful? Here you are, so hungry and starved out that you are dying for love. Where did you get all that capacity for loving? You didn't inherit it from hardened, heartless people who would disfigure you and purposely leave you to die, that's one sure thing. Yet you will spend miserable years torturing yourself with the idea that your own mother might have cut off that hand. Shame on you, Freckles! Your mother would have done this"—

The angel deliberately turned back the cover, slipped up the sleeve and laid her lips on the scars.

"Freckles," she cried, "come to your senses! Be a thinking, reasoning man! You just must see it! Like breeds like in this world! You must be some sort of reproduction of your parents, and I am not afraid to vouch for them, not for a minute.

"And then, too, if more proof is needed here it is: Mr. McLean says that you are the most perfect gentleman he ever knew, and he has traveled the world over. Then there's your singing. I don't believe there ever was a mortal with a sweeter voice than yours, and while that doesn't prove anything there is a point that does. Just the little training you had from that choirmaster won't account for the wonderful accent and ease with which you sing. Somewhere in your close blood is a marvelously trained vocalist; we every one of us believe that, Freckles.

"Why does my father refer to you constantly as being of fine perceptions and honor? Because you are, Freckles. Why does the Bird Woman leave her precious work and stay here to help look after you? I never heard of her losing any time over any one else. It's because she loves you. And why does Mr. McLean turn all of his valuable business over to hired men and watch over you personally? And why is he hunting excuses every day to spend money on you? My father says McLean is full Scotch close with a dollar. He is a hard headed business man, Freckles, and he is doing it because he finds you worthy of it. Worthy of all we can all do and more than we know how to do, dear heart! Freckles, are you listening to me? Oh, won't you see it? Won't you believe it?"

"Oh, angel," chattered the bewildered Freckles, "are you truly meaning it? Could it be?"

"Of course it could," flashed the angel, "because it just is!"

"But you can't prove it," wailed Freckles. "It ain't giving me a name or me honor!"

"Freckles," said the angel sternly, "you are unreasonable!" Why, I did prove every word I said! Everything proves it! You look here! If you knew for sure that I could give you your name and your honor, and prove to you that your mother did love you, why, then would you just go to breathing like perpetual motion and hang on for dear life and get well?"

A great light leaped into Freckles' eyes.

"If I knew that, angel," he said solemnly, "you couldn't be killing me if you felled the biggest tree in the Limberlost smash on me!"

"Then you go right to work," said the angel, "and before night I'll prove one thing to you: I can show you easily enough how much your mother loved you. That will be the first step, and then the rest will all come."

Freckles caught her sleeve.

"Me mother, angel! Me mother!" he marveled hoarsely. "Did you say you could be finding out today if me mother loved me? How? Oh, angel! All the rest don't matter, if only me mother didn't do it!"

"Then you rest easy," said the angel, with large confidence. "Your mother didn't do it. Mothers of sons like you don't do such things as that. I'll go to work at once and prove it to you. The first thing to do is to go to that home where you were and get the little clothes you wore the night you were left there. I know that they are required to save those things carefully. We can find out almost all there is to know about your mother from them. Did you ever see them, Freckles?"

"Yis," said Freckles.

The angel literally pounced on him.

"Freckles, were they white?" she cried.

"Maybe they were once. They're all yellow with laying, and brown with blood stains now," said Freckles, the old note of bitterness creeping in. "You can't be telling anything at all by them, angel."

"Well, but I just can!" said the angel positively.

"But how? Angel, tell me how!"

"Why, easily enough. I thought you'd understand. People that can afford anything at all, always get white for little new babies—linen and lace, and the very finest things to be had. There's a young woman living near us who cut up her wedding clothes to have fine things for her baby. Mothers that love and want their babies make fine seams, and tucks, and put on lace and trimming by hand. They sit and stitch, and stitch—little, even stitches, every one just as careful. Their eyes shine and their faces glow. When they have to quit to do something else, they look sorry, and fold up their work so particularly. There isn't much worth knowing about your mother that those little clothes won't tell."

A new light dawned in Freckles' eyes.

"Oh, angel! Will you go now? Will you be hurrying?" he cried.

"Right away," said the angel. "I won't stop for a thing, and I'll hurry with all my might."

She smoothed his pillow, straightened the cover, gave him one steady look in the eyes, and went quietly from the room.

Outside the door, McLean and the surgeon anxiously awaited her. McLean caught her shoulders.

"Angel, what have you done?" he demanded desperately.

The angel smiled defiance.

"What have I done?" she repeated. "I've tried to save Freckles."

McLean groaned.

"What will your father say?" he cried.

"It strikes me," said the angel, "that what Freckles said would be to the point."

"Freckles!" burst out McLean. "What could he say?"

"He seemed to be able to say several things," said the angel sweetly. "I fancy the one that concerns you most at present was, that if my father would offer me to him he would not have me."

"And no one knows why better than I do," thundered McLean. "Every day he must astonish me with some new fineness."

He gripped the surgeon until he almost lifted him from the floor.

"Save him!" he commanded. "Save him!" he implored. "He is too fine to be sacrificed."

"His salvation lies here," said the surgeon, stroking the angel's sunshiny hair, "and I can read in the face of her that she knows how she is going to work it out. She will save him!"

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

CARMACK AMENDMENT IS CONSTITUTIONAL

Initial Carriers Are Responsible For Damage to Goods

Washington, Feb. 20.—For the third time, the supreme court of the United States declined to declare unconstitutional the "Carmack amendment" to the interstate commerce law, passed by congress in 1906, and making railroads on which shipments originate liable for loss or damages incurred to the goods during any portion of the route.

The decision concerned a shipment of mohair from Uvalde, Tex., to Lowell, Mass., over the Galveston, Harrisburg and San Antonio railway. The Texas state courts not only upheld the law, but declared that state courts as well as federal courts would enforce it.

Do You Want Your Vanity Tickled

— OR —

Your Purse Fattened?

A TRUE STORY

We had a journeyman coat-maker in our employ one time, who at the same time was making coats for other firms, among which was a real swell tailor who's prices were high in point of value. This coat-maker complained of our schedule prices, but accepted our work however, as it helped him fill in his time. He made a contrast by saying "I am getting twelve dollars for their coats and a dollar extra for every try-on. Sometimes they find it necessary to try on coats five or six times." This was interesting, so we inquired if he made changes every time. He remarked that the changes were made only on the first try-on, THE OTHERS WERE MADE TO TICKLE THE MAN'S VANITY, and added: "If the garment could have been finished completely in the first instance he could have made the changes more effectively."

NOW MEN, to come right down to brass tacks, DO YOU WANT YOUR VANITY TICKLED or DO YOU WANT YOUR PURSE FATTENED?

We are fattening purses every day, and especially for the next ten days by letting you take your choice of our $25 Suits at

$21.50

If you want your vanity tickled we will give you a straw as we will not be a party to letting you spend your money foolishly.

SPORTING "DOPE"

By B. A.

Don't Knock, Just Boost.—B. A.

All plans have been completed for the indoor meet, to be held on the afternoon of Washington's Birthday, in the Coliseum and judging from the list of entries, the affair should prove the centre of attraction for all local sporting bloods who are desirous of being treated to some fine running races. William J. Hackett, twice a Brockton marathon winner, and who is travelling at a fast rate at the present time, will compete in a five mile run against John Davis and Verranti, both of whom are by no means to be overlooked, when it comes to a question of speed and endurance. A three mile skating race, in which the participants will beFred Connors, Peter Fontaine and "Jockey" Reynolds, will also add to the enthusiasm of the meet during the afternoon.

Joseph F. Phelan, George Sullivan and Everett Prout, three local sprinters of wide repute, will also be seen in action as will also Herbert Thayer, the former star Harvard College sprinter. Relay races have been arranged between Malden and Chelsea High schools, also between Quincy High and the relay team of Medford High school. The meet is to be conducted under the auspices of the Italian American A. C. of this city and a special feature will be the two mile run, open to Italians only. In this event, Frank Bruce, the local pride, will run against competitors from Providence, Haverhill and Boston.

The remaining events include, a 30 yard dash, 600 yard run, 1000 yard run, and a 10,000 yard run.

Joseph F. Phelan competed as a member of the Cathedral Y. M. C. A. in the Boston College indoor meet, held in the college gymnasium last evening. He was first man on the relay teams of that association which defeated the Brookline Gym relay team. He was pitted against "Billy" Meanix, the former star interscholastic athlete, and performed very credibably, displaying great form throughout.

A local ball player, with the nome de plume John Flynn, has signed up with the Haverhill team of the New England league for the coming season. Evidently his many friends will not have a chance to wish him luck, while he is striving for a berth under that name, yet we all hope that he makes good.

The bouts at St. Mary's hall this evening should attract the entire membership of the Quincy A. A.

BRIEFS

Mrs. Lucretia W. Fuller of Botolph street, has been confined to her home the past week, the victim of a severe cold.

Oliver Ames High and Quincy High clash in a basketball game in the local gymnasium this afternoon that bids fair to be the best of the season.

Miss Ethel Randall of Spear street had the misfortune to fall on the ice early this morning, necessitating assistance in getting to her home and the attendance of the doctor.

One Way to Get Auburn Hair.

It has been found that the way to obtain auburn hair is to get a job in a soda ash manufactory. A new soda ash plant started abroad employs many men in the processes of changing the salt as it comes from the huge veins which underlie the locality. When these men went to work they wore hair that ranged from the light blond of the natives of northern Europe to the dark and shiny locks that grow upon the heads of other races.

Gradually it was noted that the hair of the blond men was assuming a golden tinge and as time wore on the golden hue deepened until now the hair ranges through all the shades of red from a golden auburn to a fiery red. The change from the brown hair of some of the men to the reddish tinge appeared to be slower, while the black hair resisted longest, but now virtually every man who has worked in the plant more than a ye can truly say that his hair is Mustaches and beards have beep fected the same way.

Tribute to Amazons.

The magnificent example of the women of Dahomey should be made widely known wherever their more civilized sisters are to be found struggling for their rights. Frederick Martyn of the French foreign legion, who fought in the recent Dahomey campaign, tells us emphatically that "the female of the species is more deadly than the male." The Senegalese tirailleurs were attacked by the Amazons and Mr. Martyn says that "any one inclined to sympathize with the Amazons on account of their sex and to look upon the combat between them and our men as unequal, may take i from me that their sympathy would be misplaced. These young women were far and away the best men in the Dahomeyan army, and woman to man were quite a match for any of us They fought like unchained demons and if driven into a corner, did not disdain to use their teeth and nails.' It may be an error of policy to make these facts known, and thus to stimulate a militancy already vigorous enough.

Unseen Universe.

In the vicinity of the star S. Coronæ Australis Innes and Worsel have found a patch of sky 25 minute of arc in diameter where no star ca be seen with a 9-inch refracting tele scope.

According to Innes, who discusses the subject in "Transvaal Observatory Circular No. 5," the apparent absence of stars in this region is due to the occurrence of some absorbing medium, interposed between us and distant parts of the universe.

Stars in the neighborhood of the dark region are enveloped in nebulæ; while just on the border of it there i a star which has been observed t fluctuate in magnitude between 11.(and 12.2, and which was invisible during the years 1899-1901.

The latter fact is accounted for or the supposition that the absorbing me dium was for a time in front of the star, but has since withdrawn from it.

WORK OF THE LEGISLATURE

Talk by Representative Leslie at Men's Club Smoker

QUINCY BILLS

One of the most successful meetings of the season was held by the Men's club of St. Chrysostom's parish, Monday evening, the meeting taking the form of a "smoker" at the rectory.

Representative William J. Leslie was the speaker and gave an interesting account of legislation on Beacon Hill. He told in particular of the progress a bill made from the time it is filed until it is passed for enactment and sent to the Governor for his signature or veto. Each bill is read and referred to the other branch for concurrence after which it is referred to a committee who holds a hearing. There have been some 1800 of these bills during the present session and last Tuesday alone 110 hearings were held.

Mr. Leslie called attention to the number of times when any bill is debatable and may be defeated, thus preventing legislation being hastily engineered through. A number of instances of freak bills were given and several were read at length.

Bills relating to Quincy were read and explained, among them the completion of Furnace Brook parkway, deepening Town river, a new Neponset bridge, the Yacht club channel and others of similar interest.

The redistricting bill was gone into at length and by means of maps the speaker described the plans proposed.

Representative Leslie was accorded a rising vote of thanks by the club and the meeting adjourned for refreshments. A social hour followed closing with songs by the members with George B. Curran at the piano.

Throws Away $39,160.

Misers have great resourcefulness in selecting hiding places for their treasures, but they rarely adopt the methods employed by a traveler on the railway line between Lescar and Pau, in France. This individual, who owned an estate worth about $48,700, sold all his property and insisted upon being paid the full purchase price in negotiable bearer shares and in coupons payable to the Bank of France.

He disposed of some of his money, and then during a brief halt of the train approaching Pau threw his pocketbook containing the remainder, approximately $39,160, into a hedge bordering the line.

There it was found recently by a hedge clipper, who deposited his find at the nearest police station. By the laws of France it will become his property at the end of twelve months unless the original owner claims it and proves his right.

Realism Indeed.

Jings—How was the new play last night?

Minks—Biggest thing yet. One scene shows Broadway natural as life; wonderful thing, wonderful! Real wagons, real horses, real paving stones, real escavations, real dirt and genuine imported Italians digging at it.—New York Weekly.

BRAVES DANCE AT ALPHA HALL

Officers Appear in Full Regalia at Ball of Red Men

THE GUESTS

Alpha hall presented a most pleasing and attractive scene Tuesday evening, when fully three hundred people assembled in merry concourse, for the second grand dance of Hodenosaunee Tribe, No. 62, Improved Order of Red Men.

No tomahawks were wielded during the evening or war dances indulged in, as the significance of the event might indicate, but the officers of the tribe, clad in full regalia of office, contributed to the success of the afafir.

Many members of other tribes of Red Men were in attendance and the event, as a whole greatly eclipsed the dance of last year. Willis H. Wardwell, the six year old son of George A. Wardwell, made quite a hit, as he passed out dance orders, attired as an Indian.

Wilson's orchestra furnished the music giving a concert from eight o'clock until nine, after which dancing was in order till midnight. The dance orders were of unique makeup, resembling birch bark.

The special guests included George Murray, of the Clan Mac Gregors; A. R. Mackay, of the local order of Heptasops; Verne G. Brooks, commander of the Spanish War Veterans and Frank Stoddard, commander of the Sons of Veterans.

A short intermission took place at 10.30 o'clock, during which refreshments were served.

Joseph G. McGue was floor director and the assistant floor director, Charles Y. Waterhouse. David Hansen was chief of aids and was ably assisted by the following aids:—Matthew Kenneburg, W. Rogers, F. A. Browne, Arthur Phillips, H. H. Holmes and Wiliam Maninion.

The reception committee included Sachem A. J. Clapp and Past Sachem George La Velle, George A. Wardwell, Edward M. Dunn, George A. Dickey and William A. Waterman.

The following are officers for the ensuing year:—
Sachem—A. J. Clapp.

FAREWELL PARTY.

Mrs. Henry M. Wright of Hancock street gave a neighborhood party Tuesday evening in honor of Mrs. Ralph L. Lovell, who is moving the last of the month to her new house on Edgemere road. The guests were mostly members of the Neighborhood Whist club. It was a pretty and jolly party, the decorations being in keeping with the holiday, souvenirs of George Washington being used most effectively, the hatchet and cherries predominating. Cards were enjoyed as was also the very dainty and pretty lunch served by the hostess.

As it was, they attended the union service and were again awarded the banner for the best attendance. They had special cars to help them in their efforts to be well represented.

LARGE CROWD AT CARNIVAL

Auspicious Opening Merchants' Carnival at Y. M. C. A.

THOSE IN CHARGE

The two days' Merchants' Carnival at the rooms of the Quincy Y. M. C. A. opened auspiciously Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock and will continue through this evening. There was a large attendance Tuesday evening and the ladies in charge of the several booths and Baltimore lunch room reported a good trade. The rooms on the main floor were very prettily decorated for the carnival, American flags and bunting of the national colors prevailing.

In the reading room at the right of the main entrance was the grocery booth. Here there was on sale a large amount of foods, of the kind that are put up in cartoons. Breakfast foods of all kinds predominated as well as some bottle goods, all of which were contributed by well known wholesale houses.

There were three booths in the parlor at the left of the entrance. In the northerly corner was a booth decorated with red crepe paper. Here confections of various kinds were on sale. Over in the alcove corner was a special exhibit of Payson & Mitchell, the well known gentlemen's furnishing goods firm. Here there was a fine display of things that appeal to the men and youth, such as neckwear, gloves and the like. The decorations here were American flags, the booth having these for a background.

In the remaining corner of the room was a booth where subscriptions for popular magazines and periodicals were received and periodicals were on sale.

Coming into the main room again the first things that strikes the visitor is the numerous little girls dressed as Chinese maidens going about with their hands full of little red slips upon which were numerous characters, representing the mysterious marks seen on the checks given you by a Chinese laundryman.

In the little fireplace cosy room, was the Chinese laundry, decorated with numerous lanterns, sunshades and sofa pillows. Across the entrance was a counter upon which were numerous bundles resembling laundry packages. These were disposed of in the grab bag style. That is the little checks sold by the Chinese maidens contained a number which corresponded with a number on one of the laundry packages. There were two kinds of checks, one which sold for five cents and the other for ten cents, according to the size of the package that was desired.

The entrance to the pool room was partitioned off and here delicious ice cream was on sale. Up stairs was the lunch room where a lunch, Baltimore style, was served, the menu consisting of soups, cold meats, salads, coffee, ice cream, etc.

The attraction in addition to the several booths was an entertainment In the afternoon at 4.30 there was an exhibition in the gym by the junior boys and in the evening there was an entertainment which included a series of tableaux, representing local and familiar advertising.

The general committee in charge included Mrs. W. F. Cummings, Mrs. Carrol E. Bates, Mrs. George W. Abele, Mrs. A. F. Bromley, Mrs. T. C. DuPlessis, Mrs. A. H. Gilson, Mrs. L. F. LaRose, Mrs. James M. Matheson, Mrs. A. M. Thompson, Mrs. W. A. Thompson, Mrs. E. R. Stone, and Mrs. E. I. Beal. Those in charge of the several booths, lunch, etc., were as follows:

Chinese laundry,—Miss Mary M. Newcom, Miss Addie Park, Miss Emma Spaulding, Miss Marjorie Rideout, Mrs. Charles Hall, Mrs. George W. Abele.

Chinese girls,—Misses Eleanor Whittemore, Margaret Hunt, Dorothy Packard, Esther Beckford, Dorothy Green, Frances Ward, Beatrice Johnson, Ethel Beal.

MERCHANTS EAT AND TALK SHOP

The monthly business meeting of the Quincy Retail Merchants' Association of the Board of Trade was held Tuesday night in the Masonic banquet hall, Hancock building, where Quincy's popular caterer, Henry P. Furnald, served one of his best menus, consisting of escalloped oysters, salads, rolls, coffee, frozen pudding, harlequin ice cream and cake which was greatly appreciated by all.

W. G. Shaw, president of the association, was toastmaster of the evening, and after a few stories called upon Eben W. Sheppard, the first president of the association, for a speech. Other speakers of the evening were, Messrs R. E. Foy, H. Everett Crane, Nathan Ames, Henry L. Kincaide, C. C. Hearn, Fred Zoller, George W. Jones, Eben Prescott, M. J. L. Kennedy, J. A. Keating and Myer Sockett.

Nearly fifty members were present, and the outlook of the association for the future is very encouraging for the members were active and harmonious.

The committee on merchants' week rendered a report, and all present were quite enthusiastic to make this year's Merchants' Week the best yet. This was discussed at length and as the meeting was about to close, there was a lively discussion upon the question of local papers and advertising. The meeting adjourned at eleven o'clock.

BRIDGE OPENED TO STREET CARS

As announced in the Ledger a few days ago the street cars commenced to run over the Quincy Point bridge, Tuesday noon. The delay in opening the bridge to street cars has been caused by the failure of the lumber for the planking to arrive. This was shipped by a vessel early in the year but owing to bad weather the vessel never reached this port. After waiting for some time the lumber finally arrived by freight. Work is now in progress planking the main bridge and it will be opened to team travel in a few days. The Ledger has in preparation an interesting history of the Quincy Point, or the Fore River bridge as it is now known, which will appear in a few days.

TO LECTURE HERE.

Three weeks from tonight, March 13, Geo. I. Aldrich, superintendent of public schools in Brookline, comes to deliver a lecture at the union meeting of the Adams and Cranch Parents' and Teachers' Associations at the Coddington school hall. Not only the former pupils of Mr. Aldrich and the many teachers, to whom he was always a good friend, but personal friends and citizens interested in education are keeping this date in mind, and a large and appreciative audience is assured.

STUDENTS GIVE GERMAN PLAYS

Efforts of Quincy Mansion School Girls Appreciated

THE CAST

Livermore hall of the Quincy Mansion school was filled with an appreciative audience, Tuesday evening, for the German plays which are annually presented by the pupils. Before the plays Miss Lummis, teacher of German at the school, sketched the plays in detail which added much to the evening's enjoyment.

The first play was "Weihnachtsleid und Weihnachtsfrend" (Christmas sorrows and Christmas joys). The three orphans, the Countess, her daughter, and the washwoman's daughter all gave their lines clearly acted easily and naturally and made an especially attractive picture, in the last scene, when seated around the Christmas tree. Typical German costumes added to the effectiveness of the play and the sweet singing of the Christams carols added to the attractiveness of the setting.

In the cast were: Miss Rachel Drinker, Miss Eleanor Drinker, Miss Helene Hamilton, Miss Mary Sheffield Miss Hope Carpenter and Miss Elizabeth Ellsworth.

During the intermission Miss Dorothy Dunn charmingly and sweetly sang three German lullaby songs.

The second play "Gott sei dank, der Tisch ist gedickt" (Thank goodness, the table is set,) was easily followed all the impersonations were cleverly taken and acted naturally, just a little facial expression, a shrug or motion giving vent to the turbulent thoughts within. The parts were well sustained throughout, after quick tempers and shrewish tongues had had their say. All ended well and they lived happly ever afterwards.

The cast was:

Butler—Miss Catherine Litchfield.
Maid—Miss Fentress Kerlin.
Young husband,—Miss Mary Faxon.
Young wife,—Miss Margery Pickard
Old gentleman,—Miss Ruth Gifford.
Old lady,—Miss Priscilla Briggs.

Each play was followed by instant and hearty applause.

After the plays congratulations were showered upon Miss Lummis and her pupils, who showed not only the result of her work as a teacher but the splendid material she had to work with in coaching the players which should be most gratifying.

—That was a neat solution to a prize conundrum won by a lady in Oklahoma: "Why is a newspaper like a woman?" She sent in the following reply: "Because every man should have one of his own, and not run after his neighbor's." Let us hope that there has been no domestic infelicities in her own family.—Rockland Standard.

Washington's Birthday

Thursday, February 22 (Washington's Birthday) the edition of The Ledger will be omitted.

The Ledger Friday will contain a full account of the celebration in our city.

We met a man the other day who said he had not been indicted for anything and he didn't look cheerful either.

It is generally agreed that if Giff Pinchot had been around when G. W. chopped the cherry tree, things would have been different.

It is said that the price of the aeroplane will soon be in the reach of every one. It usually is after a fellow gets a tumble in it.

King George and Queen Mary have got back from India, but they could not equal Mr. Taft's record unless they had taken the train next morning for Idaho.

Senator La Follette is going abroad for two months. He is more likely to be found ripping the upholstery off a few of their thrones than going through the picture galleries with his nose in a Baedeker..

MONEY AND NEWSPAPERS.

Just how far the attack made by Senator La Follette on the newspapers of the country, in his speech to the publishers at Philadelphia, was due to a physical break down we do not know. But when Mr. La Follette said that the money power controls the newspaper press, he was a long way from being right.

The worst thing ever seriously charged against any large section of the newspapers, is the tendency sometimes observable to suppress unpleasant items reflecting on the personal friends of the publishers, or on advertisers. After the Angel Gabriel gets appointed editor-in-chief, no doubt such things won't happen. When the proprietor of the big department store pays $5 for committing assault and battery, he will then get his equal share of publicity.

But in so far as this regrettable tendency may exist, is it any more than the reciprocity that exists between men elsewhere? Who is there that will not shield his own personal friends, and will not return favors to those that favor him?

As respects discussion of public events, the idea of a trust bought press makes us laugh. The typical editor is a long haired creature who chooses his business, not because there is much money in it, but because he is by nature a kind of unconventional Bohemian and free lance.

Of course there are plenty of purchasable men in the business. But the majority of editors enter this calling because they are more attracted by the chance for a free expression of individual opinion than they are by money. An editor who is purchasable soon reveals his character, and his paper has so little influence that no one wants to buy its support.

Here and there in the metropolitan press are newspapers that show the result of too close intimacy with the stock exchanges. But buying up the smaller city papers and the country press—Great Caesar, it reminds us of Samson trying to tie the foxes' tails together, with the difference that Samson only had 300 foxes while the newspaper press is 20,000 strong.

The great trouble with the press is not that its silence and its influence are bought, but that it is too free, too outspoken, and that it is too much given to reckless and hasty expression of ill considered opinion.

NO DELAY OF TRAINS.

Editor Daily Ledger:

In justice to the men who on Monday worked so swiftly and skilfully to remove the horse, stone team and load of granite from the New Haven tracks at West Quincy, it should be stated that the only train delayed was the 4.35 P. M. train, Boston for Cohasset, which was held less then ten minutes.

NEW COUNTY COMMISSIONER

The vacancy in the board of County Commissioners of Norfolk county caused by the death of Silas A. Stone of Sharon was filled Tuesday at a joint meeting, of the two remaining members on the board, and the Clerk of Courts Louis A. Cook, by the appointment of William Craig of Brookline. Mr. Craig will serve the remainder of the year as the vacancy will be filled at the election in November.

The new commissioner is a former member of the selectmen of Brookline. He was born, Jan. 15, 1847, at East Corinth, Vt., and educated at the district schools of Vermont and New Hampshire and at Thetford Academy. He came to Boston as a young man and engaged in the provision business in Faneuil Hall Market in the employ of Hall, Chessman & Co.

Later he went to work for Winn, Ricker & Co., and at the end of 10 years was able to buy a half interest in that firm, of which he is now a partner. He has been vice president and for two terms president of the Boston Fruit and Produce Exchange and its delegate to the Associated Boards of Trade. He has also been president of the Branch League of Commission Merchants of the United States.

He was first elected a selectman of Brookline in 1904 and was regularly re-elected until 1909. For a number of years he was chairman of the board and retired from this position at his own request. He is widely known throughout the northern portion of Norfolk County. He lives at 15 Columbia street, Brookline.

Mr. Craig's principal contestant for the office was Dr. Everett M. Bowker, a member of the present Board of Selectmen of Brookline.

KISS WALTZ AND TAG DANCE

Forty couples enjoyed the pretty dancing party given in Electa hall, Tuesday evening by Miss Margaret Bisson, a well-known young lady. The affair took the form of a Leap Year party, beginning at eight o'clock and concluding shortly before midnight.

Music was by Campbell's orchestra and the dance order included twenty numbers, the main features of which were the Kiss waltz, the Tag gallop and the Confetti dance. The last was a decided hit, occurring shortly before intermission when showers of confetti were hurled at the dancers.

The hall had been prettily decorated the streamers of red, white and bule being especially conspicuous and hearts and darts were evrywhere.

Refreshments were served at intermision and when the gathering dispersed, all voted it a most enjoyable evening.

MANET CLUB FIFTH ANNUAL

Music hall presented a scene of gaiety and festivity Tuesday night when the fifth annual dance, under the auspices of the Manet club was held.

Miss Risemar's orchestra of eight pieces furnished the music, and played exceedingly well. There were eighteen numbers on the program, but the orchestra responded to numerous encores.

Gilbert Booth was floor director assisted by Roy Finley and the following aids: Murray Kerr, Leo Howley, John Conway, Thomas Sullivan and William McDermott.

It was one of the largest and most successfully carried out parties of the season. The hall was well filled, about three hundred couples being present.

Every one enjoyed themselves and spoke highly of the committee which had the party in charge. They are to be congratulated upon their executive ability. May their sixth annual surpass their fifth.

A POWERFUL EXPLOSION

Causes Big Waves In Lake as Dry Starch Factory Is Blown Up

Waukegon, Ills., Feb. 21.—The Corn Products company's dry starch factory here, which as demolished by an explosion eight years ago, killing four men, was again destroyed yesterday in a similar manner. This time two employes were injured, but none fatally. The loss is $40,000.

So great was the force of the explosion that three big waves resembling the tidal variety were caused in Lake Michigan, throwing huge ice cakes over a nine-foot embankment.

ENACTMENT OF LIABILITY BILL

Urged by the President In a Message to Congress

HE POINTS OUT ADVANTAGES

Is of Great Benefit to Poor Labor and Would Aid Work of Courts—Contributory Negligence Ruled Out—Twenty-Five Percent Increase In Benefits to Be Paid by Railway Corporations to Injured Employes

Washington, Feb. 21.—President Taft submitted to congress the report of the employers liability commission and the commission's proposed employers liability and workmen's compensation bill, accompanied by a message urging the enactment of the measure, which is the most advanced piece of liability legislation yet presented.

"I sincerely hope that the act will pass," says the president. "I deem it one of the great steps of progress toward a satisfactory solution of an important phase of the controversies between employer and employe that has been proposed within the last two or three decades."

The main provisions of the measure are sketched in the message and then Mr. Taft takes up and disposes of three objections that have been advanced by its opponents.

President Taft then alludes to the alleged injuries attending personal injury litigation. He declared perjured testimony, emotional juries and badly constructed laws, limiting liability, have tended to hamper the administration of exact justice, while the heavy expense of litigation has rendered it almost impossible for the poor man to command his rights.

In referring to the condition of the courts because of this form of litigation, the president said:

"The administration of justice today is clogged in every court by the great number of suits for damage for personal injuries. The settlement of such cases by this system will serve to reduce the burden of our courts one-half by taking the cases out of court and disposing of them by this short cut."

The report of the commission is accompanied by the draft of a bill in which the commission eliminates the common law doctrine of negligence with what it characterizes as the unjust defenses of assumption of risk, fellow-servant fault and contributory negligence. Compensation, with a general basis of an equivalent to one-half wages, is to be paid in every case except where the injury or death is caused by the wilful intention of the employe to injure himself or another or in case of intoxication on duty.

The combined railroad companies of the country are paying out to their employes for accidents in settlements and judgments approximately $10,085,000 and the proposed law, as nearly as the commission can estimate it, will raise this by 25 percent. Figuring on the periodical payments extending over a term of years and capitalized at 5 percent, the committee points out that the total received by the beneficiaries would reach an aggregate of $15,000,000 annually.

The proposed bill declares it is the policy of congress to consider the burden of payments for personal injuries as an element of the cost of transportation and directs the interstate commerce commission to recognize and give effect to this policy.

The bill would provide that every common carrier engaged in interstate or foreign commerce by railroad shall pay compensation to any employe who sustains personal injury in line of duty or to his dependents in case of his death. It abolishes all existing common law and statutory remedies and applies to all railroads in the District of Columbia as well.

It would exclude from compensation the first fourteen calendar days, except that the employer is to furnish all necessary medical and surgical aid, including hospital services, and is to continue so to furnish after the fourteen days under specific provisions.

Jury trial rights are preserved, but are to be deemed waived except on demand. Provision is made for appeals and to the supreme court, and for guardians to act on behalf of infants, under 18, or the mentally incompetent.

Monthly payments of death benefits are to be made for eight years. Personal injury compensation is made on the basis of 50 percent of monthly wages for life for permanent total disability. No payments are to be made while the employe is at work at wages 90 percent of those he received at the time of his injury.

Absorb Water Through the Skin.

Experiments have been made with frogs which tend to show that those animals rapidly absorb water through the pores of the skin. Emphasis is laid by certain authorities upon the fact that frogs never take water by the mouth. On being exposed for several hours to dry air some frogs experimented with lost 14 per cent. of their weight, but this was nearly all regained within 24 hours when they were placed in a dish containing water only one centimeter in depth.

"HUSTLE" THEIR MOTTO.

"Hustle for Framingham" is the motto of the women of that town, whose organizations, the Auxiliary to the Board of Trade and the Woman's club have outdone the men in bringng about changes for civic betterment, have established public playgrounds, school savings banks, and are now supporting one of their number for the school committee.

That Framingham has an active board of trade is well known to those who have watched the railroad centre grow to be an industrial centre and have seen this hustling organization of nearly 500 members bring to the town such large industries as the Gurney Heater Company, Ames Plow Company, Guiler Engineering Company and others in the last year. But perhaps it is not as well known that the members of the association are matched in activity and resourcefulness by the Woman's Auxiliary.

Every meeting of the Auxiliary is attended by a large number of women, for the most part wives of the board of trade members, who are thoroughly alive to the requisites of an ideal town and whose interest in civic affairs is translated into activity and achievement.

One of the plans of the ladies for the coming summer is to have a general "clean-up day" and a committee has been named to have this matter in charge.

A committee has also been named to stimulate interest in the movement for a public bathing place at one of the town's several ponds as advocated at previous meetings. This committee is authorized to make investigations and see what can be done along this line, the idea being to have a bathing place, suitably supervised, which may be used by adults as well as children.

Due to the Auxiliary of the Board of Trade public supervised playgrounds were well sustained in the town the past summer by the efforts of this organization composed of women. To the ladies belongs the honor of opening the first playground in one of the school yards and the Women's Auxiliary of the Board of Trade maintained a supervised playground in another section of the town.

The gymnasium and the domestic science departments of the high school have been equipped through the agency of these women. They are doing much in the locality for civic and educational advancement and for town betterment.

The Auxiliary of the Board of Trade is composed for the most part of the same ladies who make up the Woman's Club, an organization that has been no less active than the Auxiliary.

BAG COOKERY BUFFET LUNCH

Fourth Demonstration Lecture by Mrs Janet McKenzie

VALUABLE HINTS

The fourth in the series of five demonstration lectures under the auspices of and for the benefit of Wollaston Kindergarten was given Monday afternoon in Brasee hall, Wollaston. A hundred and twenty-five ladies wre present to hear Mrs. Janet McKenzie Hill teach paper bag cookery and dishes for buffet luncheons and it certainly was a most instructive lecture. In all of her lectures Mrs. Hill is giving many valuable hints and happy suggestions as to the easiest as well as the most practical way of doing many things which are jotted down in note books by her audience.

In a paper bag was cooked to perfection a haddock which had been filled with a dressing made of bread crumbs, melted butter, salt, half green pepper, onion, parsley, pickles and capers, chopped fine and a little sweet basil. On the top had been placed a preparation to take the place of the usual basting. It was served with an English butter sauce and potato balls, garnished with parsley. It was an excellent dish. Fish is invaluable as an article of food said Mrs. Hill and is not used enough in our families. It is easily digested, should take the place of meat, more often for children and especially by those past middle age.

For chicken cutlets, Parker house style, the cutlets were piped with hot mashed potato and a spoonful of hot peas was placed in the centre of each and made an especially good luncheon dish. These were cooked in a paper bag. She told how to prepare the bag, fasten it, etc., and also named several dishes especially good cooked in bags. In the preparation of this dish was a white sauce to hold the mixture together, which brought out many points on sauce making, also how to make salmon and lobster cutlets.

Macedoine in tomato jelly salad contained onion, gren pepper, olives, hard boiled eggs and with gelatine was formed in little moulds and each placed on a lettuce leaf with mayonnaise dressing. It was pronounced the best ever tasted, a delicious concoction. Mrs. Hill also explained how cold veal, chicken, tongue, or ham could be used in the preparation of a salad. In making the mayonnaise dressing, Mrs. Hill's way—there is no danger of the mixture curdling and is far easier to make than the usual way of drop by drop and very quickly made and just here many points regarding oil were given.

Jellied chicken was a handsome dish, the clarified chicken broth used as the jelly was as clear as crystal and it was served with lettuce and mayonnaise.

Mrs. Hill's recipe for Twin Mountain muffins was simply delicious and they were as light as a feather.

The next lecture, Feb. 26 will be cake, frostings, and candy.

CLUB WOMEN DETERMINED.

To Permit no Impure Foods or Dishonest Labels to be Exhibited in the Domestic Science Exposition Next March In Worcester.

In a recent interview with Mrs. George A. Slocomb, president of the Worcester Woman's club, she stated that impure foods and dishonest labels would be rigorously excluded from the forthcoming Domestic Science Exposition to be held in Mechanics hall, Worcester, in March, by the Grocers' Association, assisted by the Woman's club. Mrs. Slocomb stated that the club had become associated in this exposition because it offered them an opportunity to put into practical service some of the principles which underlie the work of all progressive clubs. To place before the public at large, object lessons in all those things that constitute the vital interests of the home, in such a manner that they will appeal to thoughtful, intelligent women, and help arouse the careless and indifferent, is distinctly in line with the best club ideals.

To carry out this plan in the most comprehensive manner possible, the exhibits in this exposition are to be divided into three groups.

First, the selection of sites, building plans, the laying out of the grounds, building materials, in fact, exhibits of everything provided by home finders for home seekers, by architects, builders, manufacturers and dealers of everything that pertains to the ideal home, from the selecting of the site to the completed home, from cellar to garret.

Second, interior equipment, that is furnishings, decorations, labor-saving devices, kitchen utensils, improved home laundry equipment, heating, lighting, cooking, cleaning and latest plumbing devices will be represented.

Third, pure foods. These will constitute the largest per cent of the entire Exposition, and here the greatest strictures will be observed. Space will be rented to those manufacturers, only, who are known to adhere scrupulously to the Pure Food laws and the honest label requirements.

Ten billion dollars are spent annually in the United States for food, shelter and clothing. Women do ninety per cent of the buying. They are, therefore, responsible for standards and values, and in this Exposition we shall emphasize the tremendous advantage women have in the "buyers' power," especially in regard to pure food, which is the basis of all efficiency. A prominent feature of the exposition, therefore, will be lectures by well-known authorities each afternoon and evening on the proper way to select, prepare and serve pure foods; care of the children; home industries; care of the home and grounds; harmony in the home; pure milk; home decorations, etc. Lectures and demonstrations in cooking will be given twice daily; in fact the entire Exposition will be a vast educational enterprise for the betterment of homes and home conditions.

No fakers or show features will be tolerated. It will be a strickly high-grade, first-class, well-conducted exposition that will be in keeping with the standing and dignity of our club, the association which we are assisting, the honorary committee who have honored up by becoming members, and the exhibitors who have made the holding of such an exposition possible.

AT $1000 A SQUARE FOOT

Morgan Firm Buys Land For New Banking Site In Gotham

New York, Feb. 21.—The firm of J. P. Morgan & Co. will soon begin work on a new skyscraper office building to replace its present headquarters at Wall and Nassau streets. The Morgan firm has just completed the purchase of the property, which has heretofore been in the hands of the Drexels.

The plot is considered the most valuable piece of its size in the world. Real estate men estimate its market value at nearly $1000 a square foot.

The property has a frontage of 83 feet on Wall street and 113 feet on Broad street. At $1000 a square foot it would be worth about $9,000,000. Anthony Drexel bought a part of it in 1872 for $250.000.

Ex-Sergeant-at-Arms of Ohio Senate Must Serve Sentence

CONVICTION IS AFFIRMED

Ex-Sergeant-at-Arms of Ohio Senate Given Three Years For Bribery

Columbus, O., Feb. 21.—Rodney Diegel, former sergeant-at-arms of the Ohio senate, must serve three years in the penitentiary for complicity in legislative bribery. The state supreme court affirmed the decision of the lower courts, which convicted Diegel of aiding in the alleged bribery of State Senator Andrews.

This decision means that several members of the general assembly under indictment will have to stand trial.

Diegel's conviction was due principally to evidence secured by a phonographic device which recorded conversations between the alleged bribe givers and takers.

Why the Passengers Kicked.

A motor-bus while traveling in Bow road recently was struck in the rear by a tram car, and the impact forced it on to another bus, which was stationary. The latter mounted the pavement and smashed some railings. Passengers in each bus complained of cuts from broken glass.—London Daily News.

EIGHT WEDDINGS AT ONCE IN ONE CHURCH

Pittsburg Experiences Boom In the Matrimonial Line

Pittsburgh, Feb. 21.—Pittsburgh's record wedding, numerically, was performed here yesterday when sixteen persons were made over into eight married couples at the same time in St. Stanislaus' Catholic church. The approach of Lent is given as the cause for the boom in the matrimonial line.

So unusual was the sight of eight brides at once that employes and owners of produce houses took time off to witness the ceremony. When it was concluded the eight couples found an impromptu reception awaiting them, consisting of several hundred people who had gathered outside the church.

SURGEON LOSES APPENDIX

Watches Others Complete Job Which He Had Begun on Himself

San Francisco, Feb. 21.—Dr. Bertram E. Alden, chief surgeon of the French hospital here, carried out in part his theory that self-operation for appendicitis is not impossible.

On diagnosing his symptoms, Alden called in his professional friends as witnesses. In the operating room he injected the spinal anaesthesia which left his mind clear and gave him the control of his arms.

He made the necessary abdominal cuts, but at this point the matter was deemed too serious for experiment, and two fellow surgeons completed the operation, removing the appendix while Alden remained an interested witness of their operations. He is rapidly recovering.

BOSTON POLICE LOCATE SHAW

Absconding Shoe Manufacturer Arrested In Los Angeles

A LETTER TO MRS. STEWART

Addresses Her as "Own Dear Sweetheart" and Directs Her to Join Him and Bring Along All the Money—Plans Tour Around the World After Getting Real Estate Business Properly Swung

Boston, Feb. 21.—Betrayed by a letter sent to Mrs. Georgia M. Stewart, his woman friend in this city, Arthur W. Shaw, absconding shoe manufacturer of Freeport, Me., has been located in Los Angeles, Cal., on the very day his woman accomplice was arraigned here. The letter is dated Feb. 14 and reached here yesterday afternoon. It was written from 1503 Figuerra street, Los Angeles, where Shaw is known as Arthur S. Willis.

In the lengthy epistle to the Stewart woman, whom he addresses as "My own dear sweetheart," Shaw tells of the real estate possibilities in California and of the plans he had arranged for the future of himself and the woman who is now under arrest in this city.

He directs Mrs. Stewart to join him and to take with her all the money. "Don't leave behind any, not a cent, except a small balance in O. C.," is part of his advice.

He directs her to telegraph or write him under the name of Arthur S. Willis at Los Angeles. "Soon after you start I shall move and change my name to George M. S.," he writes.

Shaw had been in Pasadena, and he was overcome with the beauty of this city. He wrote with the imagination of a good real estate man, and with the facility of a trained journalist. After descanting on this flower-filled city he exclaims:

"Ye gods! I never saw such streets, such beautiful homes, such comfort in all my life."

Then he becomes the practical business man. He tells what he eats and what it costs. He tells of cottages that he visited and what they cost. He was on the verge of investing at once. But he said: "All my money is with you."

Then Shaw outlined his plan for his future with Mrs. Stewart. It was done clearly, succinctly. He made four chief points:

First, he said he would buy two income properties—rent one and live in the other and rent rooms.

Second, he would deal in real estate.

Third, he would purchase an automobile in which to visit customers.

Fourth, in two or three years, when the whole business had been properly swung, he and Mrs. Stewart would go around the world.

And that's just about as nice a proposition as any man could think of under certain circumstances. After finishing that dream on paper Shaw with optimistic assurance added:

"I'm good for twenty years yet. I will make enough to pay my creditors every dollar, and I'll be able to do these things with you to cuddle me."

Shaw in the latter part of his letter told Mrs. Stewart what to do with the money he had left with her, how to carry it so that she would not be robbed, and to let him know just what hour she would be in Los Angeles so that he could meet her.

Just about the time he expected she would start westward the door of her apartment was broken down and she was taken a prisoner. The letter which Shaw wrote to her will probably be used to help fasten the charge upon her that she acted as an accessory to the larceny of $10,000.

During the proceedings of Mrs. Stewart's arraignment yesterday afternoon she did not speak a word, or lift her veil. When the charge was read she stood up, and through her counsel entered a plea of not guilty.

She was held in $3000 for hearing Feb. 27. Not being able to furnish the bonds she was committed.

A telegram was sent to Los Angeles asking for the arrest of Shaw an hour after Mrs. Stewart had been brought into the Boston police court. Shaw was arrested in Los Angeles last night.

OVER A HUNDRED DEAD

Further Fighting In Mexico, With Heavy Loss by the Federals

Mexico City, Feb. 21.—One hundred and twenty men were killed in an all-night battle between federals and Zapatists at Santa Maria and Cruz Piedra.

The federals were supported with machine guns. The insurrectos drew off shortly before dawn and are now in retreat. The federals suffered the heavier loss because the rebels were protected by trenches, but lack of ammunition compelled the revolutionists to withdraw.

BOMB IN COFFEE POT

New York Policeman Extinguishes Fuse of Dynamite Contrivance

New York, Feb. 21.—Patrolman Storjan, passing a tenement house on Avenue B in the East Side, rubbed his eyes and pinched himself when he suddenly noticed a blackened coffee pot reposing on the icy doorstep and steaming and spluttering as though a red-hot stove was beneath.

The policeman went closer to investigate and saw sparks coming from the spout. The lifting of the cover revealed a long, smoking fuse, communicating with a black mass in the bottom of the pot.

Storjan scooped up a hat full of snow and packed it down tight over the fuse, extinguishing the spark. Then he carried the pot gingerly to his precinct headquarters, where the experts diagnosed it as one of the most dangerous dynamite bombs that has been found in many months.

Detectives questioned all the dwellers in the tall tenement, but none of them could give any clue to the attempted outrage.

"MYSTERIOUS LADY" DIES

She Had Been Inmate of Philadelphia Hospital Sixty-One Years

Philadelphia, Feb. 21.—Sarah Keen, known at the Philadelphia hospital, where she has been an inmate for the last sixty-one years, as "the mystery lady," died yesterday afternoon of old age and general debility. She was 87 years old.

The woman was taken to the institution long before any of the present attaches of the hospital were born. She had smallpox and was cured, but in the curing she apparently lost her memory. To questions as to who she was or where she came from she simply shook her head. That was in 1851.

The hospital authorities have started on what they consider a hopeless task to find some relatives of the aged woman, as it is understood she had some wealth.

FALSELY ATTACKED MRS. SCHIFF'S HONOR

Charge Which Banker's Counsel Makes Against Brandt

New York, Feb. 21.—De Lancey Nicoll, attorney for Mortimer L. Schiff, charged that Folke E. Brandt had sought to obtain his release from prison by falsely attacking the honor of Mrs. Schiff and he demanded that Commissioner Hand obtain from Governor Dix—and make public—the application in Brandt's behalf for executive clemency.

With Schiff, his client, nodding his approval in the hearing room, where the commissioner's investigation into the case had just begun, Nicoll declared that this was the only way in which his client's side of the case could be made known. He asked the opportunity to expose what he termed the "vile lies" and the "vile plot" of Brandt.

Only one witness had been heard when the clashes between opposing counsel over the question of whether Schiff and his former personal counsel, Howard Gans, should be allowed to testify, reached such a stage that Hand adjourned the hearing until next Tuesday in order to allow Governor Dix to pass on the matter.

A $2,000,000 BOND ISSUE

Plaisted Favors Proposition For Building Roads In Maine

Portland, Me., Feb. 21.—Governor Plaisted, at a good roads meeting here last night, practically indorsed the proposition for a $2,000,000 bond issue by the state to build roads, the receipts from automobile taxes to take care of the interest and provide a sinking fund.

The governor said in his address that if the bonds were to run forty-one years they could be easily paid at the expiration of that time and that if the business men of Maine wanted to stand back of the matter it could be presented at the special session of the legislature, which is to convene March 20.

GIVE UP OLD FORM

Primary System to Elect Rhode Island Democratic Delegates

Providence, Feb. 21.—The Democratic state central committee has decided to choose the ten Rhode Island delegates to the Baltimore convention by the direct primary system, and the ten alternates will be elected in the same way.

This eliminates the old state convention form of choosing delegates, and it will be the first time presidenial delegates have ever been elected in this manner in the history of the state.

Waltham's Mayor Takes a Bride

Waltham, Mass., Feb. 21.—Mayor Patrick J. Duane of this city was married last evening to his cousin, Miss Mary J. Flannagan of Watertown. The ceremony was performed in the parochial residence of the Sacred Heart parish of Mt. Auburn.

Anty Drudge has no Patience with the Woman who "Never gets Through."

Neighbor—"I am going shopping this afternoon. Lots of bargains advertised. Will you go with me?"

Friend—"What! Go shopping on Monday afternoon! Why I won't be done with my washing until dark."

Anty Drudge—"If you used Fels-Naptha soap, as your neighbors do, you could get done by twelve and have the afternoon for shopping."

What is the cost of your Monday wash?

Isn't it what you expend of muscle strength, nerve force and health?

Do you know that you can cut this "labor cost" in two by using Fels-Naptha soap?

Fels-Naptha is the "new way" soap. It lifts the load because it is a scientific soap. It atomizes the dirt—dissolves it into minute particles; and loosens them from the fabric.

You soap the clothes with Fels-Naptha, roll them and soak for half an hour in cool or luke-warm water.

While you attend to other household duties, Fels-Naptha is doing the hard part of your washing. After rubbing lightly, rinse and the wash is done. Easy, isn't it?

Why not cut the "labor cost" in two? Try once, follow directions on the red and green wrapper, and you will know the difference.

The Kitchen Cupboard

PREPARING MUSHROOMS.

MUSHROOMS give a delicate flavor to the food with which they are cooked and are quite as acceptable in soups, stews or sauces as they are valuable as entrees.

Mushrooms can be purchased in the market so cheaply and in such abundance that they ought to appear on the table oftener than they do.

If you buy your mushrooms from the dealers there is no danger of eating poisonous fungi, as nearly all those sold have been especially grown for the trade.

Dried Mushrooms.

Mushrooms may be dried and kept in the house ready for use.

Select sound mushrooms, wipe and peel them, lay them on a sheet of paper in pans in a cool oven or in the sun till they are much shriveled, which shows that all the moisture has evaporated.

Then either hang in paper bags in a dry, cool place or put them away in jars with tight fitting lids.

When they are required for use put them into the sauce or gravy. When it is cold bring them slowly to the boil and they will swell to nearly their original size.

With Steak.

Mushroom Sauce.—Mushroom sauce is delicious with a chop or steak if prepared as follows: Slice an onion and fry in an ounce of drippings till it is a golden color.

Peel and wash eight nice mushrooms. Chop them small and place in a saucepan with half a pint of water and simmer till cooked.

Work one ounce of flour into the sauce and boil all together for five minutes.

Color with a few drops of browning, season highly and if the sauce be too thick add a little more water.

As a Salad.

Mushroom Salad.—Remove the skin and nearly all the stalk from some button mushrooms. Drop them into boiling salt water and cook for three minutes.

Lay them on a napkin and when quite cold sprinkle them with pepper and salt and finely chopped parsley.

Place on a dish and pour over two tablespoonfuls of oil to one of tarragon vinegar.

For Breakfast.

Mushrooms on Toast.—A tasty dish is mushroom toast. It is fine for breakfast. Peel mushrooms of equal size and fry in butter till cooked. Have ready strips of buttered toast, arrange a few mushrooms on each piece and season with salt and cayenne. Sprinkle with a little grated cheese, pass a salamander over and serve very hot.

Joy of Shopping.

Hub (shopping with his wife)—If the goods you were just looking at suit you, why try other places? Why didn't you buy them and let us go home? Wife—How foolish you talk! Why, I'm not half tired out yet.—Boston Transcript.

FRECKLES

By Gene Stratton-Porter

COPYRIGHT, 1904, BY DOUBLEDAY, PAGE & CO.

SYNOPSIS.

Freckles, a homeless boy, is hired by Boss McLean to guard the expensive timber in the Limberlost from timber thieves.

Freckles does his work faithfully, makes friends with the birds and yearns to know more about nature. He lives with Mr. and Mrs. Duncan.

He resolves to get books and educate himself. He becomes interested in a huge pair of vultures and calls his bird friends his "chickens."

Some of the trees he is guarding are worth $1,000 each. Freckles' books arrive. He receives a call from Wessner.

Wessner attempts to bribe Freckles to betray his trust, and Freckles whips him. McLean overhears them and witnesses the fight.

Freckles' honesty saves a precious tree. He finds the nest of the vultures and is visited by a beautiful young girl.

She calls Freckles McLean's son. Freckles calls her "the angel" and helps the Bird Woman in taking photographs. McLean promises to adopt Freckles.

Freckles and the angel become very friendly. Assisted by the Bird Woman, they drive Wessner and Black Jack, timber thieves, from the Limberlost.

McLean fears more trouble, but Freckles insists upon being the sole guard of the timber. Freckles calls upon the angel's father.

The angel receives him as her equal, and her father is kind. Mrs. Duncan has exciting adventures in the Limberlost.

The Bird Woman and the angel again visit Freckles, and Freckles falls in love with the angel. The angel kisses him.

Freckles is bound and gagged by Black Jack's gang, and the timber thieves start felling a very valuable tree.

Wessner is to kill Freckles after the tree is stolen. The angel makes a daring effort to save Freckles and the tree.

McLean's men, notified by the angel, rush to save Freckles. All the timber thieves except Black Jack are captured.

Freckles guards the angel against Black Jack's vengeance. He tells McLean of his hopeless love for the angel.

Black Jack is killed by a rattlesnake. The Bird Woman gets a photograph of the baby vulture. Freckles and the angel find a valuable tree.

The tree falls, and in an effort to save the angel from death Freckles is struck and very badly injured. He appears to be dying.

The angel sped laughingly down the hall, and into the street, just as she was.

"I have come," she said to the matron of the home, "to ask if you will allow me to examine, or, better still, to take with me, the little clothes that a boy you called Freckles, discharged last fall, wore the night you took him in."

The woman eyed her in greater astonishment than the case called for.

"Well, I'd be glad to let you see them,' she said, "but the fact is we haven't them. I do hope we haven't made some mistake. I was thoroughly convinced, and so was the superintendent. We let his people take those things away yesterday. Who are you, and what do you want with them?"

The angel looked at the matron dazed and speechless.

"There couldn't have been a mistake," she continued, seeing the girl's distress. "Freckles was here when I took charge, ten years ago. These people had it all proved plain as day that he belonged to them. They had him traced to where he ran away down in Illinois last fall, and there they completely lost track of him. I'm sorry you seem so terribly disappointed, but it was all right. The man was his uncle, and as like the boy as he could possibly be. He was almost killed to go back without him. If you know where Freckles is, they'd give big money to find out."

"Who are they?" stammered the angel. "Where are they going back to?"

"They are Irish folks, Miss," said the matron. "They have been in Chicago and over the country for the last three months, hunting him everywhere. They have given up and are starting home today. They"— "Did they leave an address? Where could I find them?" burst in the angel.

"They left a card, and I notice the morning paper has the man's picture and is full of them. They've advertised a great deal in the city papers. It's a wonder you haven't seen something."

"Trains don't run right. We never get Chicago papers," snapped the angel. "Please give me that card quickly. They may get away from me. I simply have to catch them!"

The matron came back with a card.

"Their addresses are on there," she said. "Both here in Chicago and at their home. They made them full and plain, and I was to cable at once if I got the least clew of him at any time. If they've left the city, you can stop them in New York. You're sure to catch them before they sail—if you hurry."

The matron caught up a paper and thrust it into the angel's hand as she rushed for the street.

CHAPTER XXII.

THE ANGEL'S GLAD STORY.

THE angel glanced at the card. The Chicago address was suit 11, Auditorium. She laid her hand on her driver's sleeve.

"There's a fast driving limit?" she asked.

"Yes, miss."

"Will you crowd it all you can without danger of arrest? I will pay well. I must catch some people!"

Then she smiled at him. The hospital, an orphans' home, and the Auditorium seemed a queer combination to that driver, but the angel was always and everywhere the angel, and her ways were strictly her own.

"WHO ARE YOU AND WHAT DO YOU WANT WITH THEM?"

"I will get you there just as quickly as any man could with a team," he said promptly.

She clung to the card and paper, and, as best she could in the lurching, swaying cab, read the addresses over.

"O'More, suite eleven, Auditorium."

"'O'More,'" she repeated. "Seems to fit Freckles to a dot. Wonder if that could be his name? 'Suite eleven,' means that you are pretty well fixed. Suites in the Auditorium come high."

Then she turned the card and read on its reverse, Lord Maxwell O'More, M. P., Killvany place, County Clare, Ireland.

"A lord man!" she groaned despairingly. "A lord man! Bet my hoe cake's scorched!"

She blinked back the tears and, spreading the paper on her knee, read: "After three months' fruitless search, Lord O'More gives up the quest for his lost nephew, and leaves Chicago today for his home in Ireland."

She read on, and realized every word of it. The likeness settled it. It was Freckles over again, only older and elegantly dressed. There was not a chance to doubt.

"Thank you; and wait, no matter how long," she said to her driver.

Catching up the paper, she hurried to the desk and laid down Lord O'More's card.

"Has my uncle started yet?" she asked, sweetly.

The surprised clerk stepped back on a bellboy, and covertly kicked him for being in the way.

"His lordship is in his room," he said, with a low bow.

The clerk shoved the bellboy toward the angel.

"Show her ladyship to the elevator and Lord O'More's suit," he said, bowing double.

At the bellboy's tap the door swung open and the liveried servant thrust a card tray before the angel. The opening of the door created a current that swayed a curtain aside, and in an adjoining room, lounging in a great chair, with a paper in his hand, sat the man who was, beyond question, of Freckles' blood and race.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

Hoosac Tunnel is Blocked After Four Trainmen Are Killed

North Adams, Mass., Feb. 21.—With twenty freight cars burning fiercely, huge rocks loosened by the heat and raining down upon the tracks, Hoosac tunnel is so effectively blocked that it will be days, in the opinion of railroad men, before trains can again operate through the shaft.

Four men were killed in the wreck, a rear end collision between a freight train and a passenger express, which was responsible for the tieup.

The list of dead as made public by railroad officials follows: Archer L. Simonds, 50, engineer of electric locomotive on passenger train; Henry Gregg, 42, assistant engineer; Luther Davis, 22, "learner" on electric engine; Reuben Kemp, 31, flagman attached to freight train.

Although the passenger train itself was not badly damaged, the steam engine, breaking away from the electric locomotive ahead when the crash came, and being able to back away, shook up many of the occupants of the coaches.

Defense Rests at Hearing In Lawrence Police Court

KILLING OF ANNIE LOPIZZO

It Is Declared to Have Been Done by Officer Who Was Stabbed During Riot of Jan. 29—New Man Takes Place of City Marshal Who Was Removed From Office—Many Operatives Returning to Work

Lawrence, Mass., Feb. 21.—Strikers affiliated with the Industrial Workers of the World hope to know by tonight whether Joseph J. Ettor, their original leader, will be free to continue his direction of the Lawrence textile strike.

Upon the decision of Judge Mahoney of the local police court depends the restoration to power of the organizer who for two weeks has been on trial, with his lieutenant, Arturo Giovannitti, both charged with being accessories before the fact to the murder of Annie Lopizzo, killed Jan. 29 in a clash between strikers and police.

The defense rested late yesterday afternoon and closing arguments in the hearing were begun immediately upon the opening of court this morning.

A number of witnesses for the defense testified that they witnessed the riot Jan. 29, and saw policemen discharge their revolvers. Louise Zurwell said that she saw Annie Lopizzo fall, but was unable to say who fired the shot.

Charles Smith testified that he saw a policeman fire into the crowd. He said that it as Policeman Benoit, who had been stabbed in the back, who killed Annie Lopizzo. Alexander Dolenzo stated that he saw a policeman take his revolver from his pocket, saw the shot fired and saw the woman fall.

Brainislaw Woodyka testified that he heard eight shots fired, and saw flashes from the revolvers in the hands of two policemen. He swore that Benoit killed Annie Lopizzo. He said that he picked her up after she fell in the gutter and carried her into a store near by.

The next witness, Boeleslei Gradzewicz, stated that he helped to carry the woman into the store. He testified that the policeman who stood nearest the Everett mills was the man who fired the fatal shot. Thomas Zurajil, the last witness for the defense, also said that he saw Benoit kill the woman.

Interest has been divided between the trial and the upheaval in the local police department which resulted in the ousting by Commissioner of Public Safety Lynch of Marshal O'Sullivan, who has been replaced by Captain Sullivan.

Various theories have been advanced as to the cause of the discharge of O'Sullivan. It has been said that one reason is his antagonism to the militia, but this is denied by both Lynch and Colonel Sweetser.

There were no disturbances yesterday. A few pickets were out, but they made no attempts to restrain by force operatives who desired to go to work.

No answer yet has been made by the mills to the proposals submitted last week by committees of skilled operatives who had prepared bills of demands under the auspices of the Central Labor union. An announcement was made yesterday afternoon that the mill owners would make no concessions at present.

Further gains in the number of operatives at work in the mills are reported.

London, Feb. 21.—The government last night intervened in the coal dispute which threatens to cause a stoppage of work in the mines throughout the United Kingdom, involving not less than 800,000 miners.

After the subject had been discussed at a cabinet meeting Premier Asquith addressed a letter to the representatives of the coal owners and miners requesting them to meet him and some of his colleagues at the foreign office on Thursday next in order to endeavor to arrange a basis of settlement. He added that the industrial council had advised the convening of such a meeting.

THREATS TO KIDNAP

Gang Tries to Extort Money From Father of Dorothy Arnold

New York, Feb. 21.—Bessie Green, a mulatto, 23 years old, was arrested here, charged with attempting to blackmail Francis R. Arnold, father of Dorothy Arnold, the girl who mysteriously disappeared from her home more than a year ago.

According to the detectives who made the arrest, a band of six persons, of which it is charged the Green woman is one, since last June have been sending letters to Arnold demanding a large sum of money and threatening that he would be shot if it was not paid. In one letter $10,000 was demanded and a threat to kidnap his other children made.

Fifteen letters of a threatening nature were received, Arnold's attorney, said, all of which were turned over to the police.

PARENTS AND TEACHERS MEET.

A meeting of the parents and teachers of pupils in the Quincy school, was called for Tuesday evening, in the school building, and exactly one hundred and thirty people responded to the call. The meeting was held for the purpose of formulating plans and devising means for formation of an association to be known as the Parents and Teachers Association of the Quincy School There was enthusiasm throughout the evening and a large number bids fair to be enrolled in the membership at the next meeting, to be held in March.

The principal of the school, Charles Sampson, presided, and a committee was appointed to draw up a constitution and bring in the nominations for officers of the association at the next meeting. The gathering was addressed by superintendent of schools, Albert L. Barbour, who talked on the benefits derived from a Parents and Teachers Association. Mr. Barbour gave a very instructive address on "Proposed System of Vocational Training in Our Public Schools." Refreshments were served at the conclusion of a most interesting meeting.

PARK AND DOWNS UNION CLUB

At the meeting of the Park and Downs Union club Tuesday evening the club declared itself heartily in favor of the proposed new playground for Wollaston Park.

Upon motion of Rev. William B. Ayers, it was voted to be the sense of the club that should the should the city deem it inadvisable, on account of its finances, to purchase the land at present an option be secured; this option to be perpetuated until such time as the city could purchase the land.

A committee consisting of Fred R. MacMulkin, Frank Burgess, Charles L. Gilliatt and Frank C. Blake was appointed to keep in touch with the situation and report to the club.

W. E. Hingston, chairman of the playground committee of the Parents' and Teachers' Association spoke at length. He stated that the majority of the city officials were in favor of the playground, the only rub being the financial condition of the city.

He claimed a solution of the difficulty by the revaluation of the land in Quincy now taxed as farm land but which if it is desired to purchase, the owner holds for a high price. This done and we could have playgrounds galore.

Councilman Gilliatt told of the introduction of the playground matter in the City Council and its reference to the proper committee. He promised to keep the club informed regarding it.

It was "stunt night" at the club and each member was called upon to tell a story, crack a joke, or do a stunt.

The result proved highly amusing and the club adjourned for refreshments. It was voted that the March meeting should take the form of a debate between the club and Women's Guild upon the subject "Which has the greater curiosity man or women?"

ENJOYABLE ORGAN RECITAL

The organ recital and musicale at Memorial church, Atlantic, Tuesday night was one of the most successful entertainments that has been held in Atlantic for years. The talent was of the highest order, and was well received by the largest audience that has been in the church since it was dedicated,

Miss Maud E. Read of Atlantic read the ninety-first Psalm, and the Three Fishers, by Kingsley. In the second part of the program she read Guinevere, by Tennyson. This was Miss Read's first appearance as a professional reader, and the people of Atlantic were much pleased at her excellent renderings.

Claude E. Sannier organist showed remarkable ability and it pleased the people to hear all the possibilities of the new organ. The Marche Militaire by Gounod; The Andantino, by Chauvet;; Sorte, by Guilmant; The Offertory in F., by Clarke, and the Pilgrim Chorus, by Wagner were finely rendered.

Prof. Leon Van Vliet, was marvellous in his execution on the violon cello. He seemed to touch every cord of music in the human soul. His selections were Reverie, by Dunkler; Menuet, by Beethoven; Traumeri, by Schumann and En Sourdine, by Tellam.

Ludwig Carl Fichtner the baritone singer held the large audience in awe by his wonderful interpretations of The Ninety and Nine, by Edward Champion; The Brighter Day, by Angelo Maschesoni and The Holy City, by Stephen Adams. This was Mr. Fichtner's first appearance in Atlantic, but by the many expressions of appreciation all of these artists will be invited to come again.

The new pipe organ was at its best having been thoroughly inspected by Frederick Goodman who is one of the foremost organ voicers and tuners in the country. Mr. Goodman voiced the great organ in the Cathedral of John the Divine of New York, and it was only through personal friendship to the builder that he was secured for the Atlantic organ.

The ushers were Mrs. Davison, Mrs. Geo. Hight, Jr., and Mrs. A. N. Hall.

The church was artistically decorated with palms, ferns and potted plants by Derringer.

At Last.

The London Gazette, after an existence of nearly two and a half centuries, has adopted the plan of printing a table of contents. This should dispose of the libel that we Britishers are slow to adopt new ideas.—London Punch.

QUINCYS SHOW GREAT SKILL

Home Team Finds Little Trouble in Downing Visitors

BOTH TEAMS WIN

Full of confidence and desirous of lowering the colors of the Quincy High basketball team members of Oliver Ames high formidable quintet came onto the court in the local gymnasium Tuesday afternoon, with the hope of returning home with spoils, but their ambitions were punctured, for when the contest ended they were found to be the victims for the second time this season, the score being 39 to 20. To add to this signal triumph, members of the Quincy High second team took the measure of the visitor's second team to the score of 16 to 12.

The principal game was not as stubbornly contested as was anticipated for by displaying greater skill and knowledge of the game, the local boys were enabled to maintain a substantial lead at all stages. Quincy High was superior in all departments of play and the only time the losers appeared dangerous was in the first few minutes of the opening period when they succeeded in making the score stand 7 to 6, with the local boys in possession of the long end. This was due mainly to the fact that Goward and Nelson, who did the bulk of the work for Oliver Ames High, were left uncovered as they tried for baskets from time to time. Goward especially made things take a lively turn, by breaking away from Finlay as a backfield player and keeping near his own basket, as if assuming a forward position. In this way he was allowed to try for several baskets, almost without opposition. He caged the ball, by adopting this method of play on four different occasions.

But the local boys soon awakened to his tactics and Goward was unable to show up to advantage, when once they began to cover him. A large crowd had turned out, for it had been expected, since the last game was won by a small margin, that this struggle would be a warm one and the best ever witnessed in the local gymnasium. But such was not the case, for Quincy High was at its best and made the North Easton boys appear as novices.

The pass work of the local team was of a most commendable order and the team work as a whole was the best displayed thus far this season. Holmes demonstrated great efficiency in every department, for besides preventing his opponent from registering a basket, he secured two goals from the floor in a most sensational manner. In connection with his work, it might be pertinent to state that "Charlie" has played the most consistent game of any player on the local team. In no game has his opponent placed the ball through the net more than three times, while he himself has frequently caged baskets at most critical stages.

Trask, however, proved to be the star of the game, in getting the greatest number of baskets. Not only had he a total of seven baskets from the floor to his credit, but he obtained the only goal from free tried made during the game. Three of his shots were made in a spectacular manner. His feature shot was made while he was standing on the boundary line. With his opponent struggling to prevent him from shooting, Trask threw the ball back over his head with one hand and landed it in the basket in pretty style.

Captain Chapman exhibited his best form of the season. Heretofore it had been his custom to do but little showing, his efficiency being greatly attested in blocking his opponent. But in this game he tried for goals and his efforts were productive of much good, as he showed a keen eye for the baskets and got five goals from the floor in splendid order. Finlay also showed up well, especially in the second half, where his endurance became manifested, and also secured five baskets from the floor. The forwards and centre of the local team worked in perfect harmony, and this, combined with the splendid form exhibited by the backs, proved a source of gratification to the spectators, as well as to Coach Staff, who was exceedingly desirous of having Quincy High come up to as high a standard as possible in basketball.

All eyes were turned on Nelson during the game, for it was at first thought that he would be a potent factor for the visitors in their endeavors to turn the tables. But, while he played well at times, he failed to live up to all that had been predicted of him and as a consequence was compelled to rest satisfied with three baskets. Goward was the conspicuous player for the losers and performed in brilliant style throughout the game. The remaining players on the visiting aggregation seemed to be at a loss to cope with the playing of the local boys and thus were unable to change the score when once the game had started.

To omit speaking of the second team's game would indeed be ungrateful for, while it was not so important, was no less interesting than the game between the first team. It was closely contested throughout and was replete with many star players. The local boys managed to keep ahead at all times, and to prevent the visitors from causing damage, even though they did show great strides in the later part of the second half.

Jenkins and Prout played exceptionally well for the winners, while Malloy and Clonan excelled for the losers. The summaries:

FOUGHT BEFORE SAILING

Captain and Mate of the Erne Were Not on Friendly Terms

Boston, Feb. 21.—The fact that serious trouble between Captain Temple A. Fickett and First Mate James L. Elliott was brewing before the ship left Boston and the utter disbelief of the agents of the story told by the survivors, deepens the air of mystery, mutiny and even murder which surrounds the wreck of the ship Erne.

Captain Fickett and Elliott came to blows before the ship left port and the skipper administered a severe beating. The mate had been detected smuggling liquor aboard to the crew.

SPORTING "DOPE"

By B. A.

Don't Knock, Just Boost.—B. A.

Plenty of attraction is offered local sporting bloods tomorrow. In the first place, a monster indoor meet will beh eld in the Coliseum and is scheduled to take place at 2 o'clock. The list of entries includes a number of well-known performers and with such runners as William Hackett, Joseph F. Phelen, John J. O'Hara, William Meanix, Frank Canavan, Thomas Lilley, Albert Upton, and Terence McGovern, contesting, it is safe to say that a large crowd will be on hand for the occasion.

Practically all the runners who competed in the recent Boston College games have entered and every one who attends is promised some gruelling races.

At three o'clock in the afternoon, Quincy High will clash with Newton High in a basketball game, the result of which will unquestionably settle the right of the winner to championship interscholastic honors. Both teams are of an even calibre and the best game of the season is promised to those who attend.

In the evening, St. Joseph's A. A. will try conclusions with the Quincy A. A. in one of the series of games, now being played for the championship of the Greater Boston Basketball league. As the performances of these teams in the past are to well-known to require any further announcement, suffice it to say that a rare treat is in store for those who attend.

BOXING.

The Quincy A. A. held a boxing tournament in St. Mary's hall, Tuesday evening, which was attended by a large number of members. The various exhibitions of amateur boxing were of a high order and the gathering was treated to a series of fine bouts.

In the 105-pound class Eddie Glover of South Boston defeated J. McAuliffe of Boston in three rounds in the semifinals, and was in turn defeated by Eddie Sullivan, also of South Boston in three rounds in the finals.

J. W. McDonald of Atlantic was the winner in the 125-pound class, beating Harry Marshall of the Terminal A. A. in one round in the semifinals and Walter Butler of Beachmont in three rounds in the finals.

The 135-pound class went to Mike Sullivan of East Boston, who in the semifinals beat W. L. Peterson of Dorchester in two rounds and in the finals beat Joe White of Chelsea in three.

In a special 115-pound bout Tommy Reagan of East Boston, National and International amateur champion of that class, beat Henry Morley of Roxbury in three rounds.

In a four-round special 105-pound bout, Barney Schneider of Roxbury won over Willie Lewis of Dorchester a fourth round being fought because the judges could not decide on the first three.

STANDARD OIL WINS AGAINST THE PIERCE

Commissioner Rules Against the Conspiracy Contention

St. Louis, Feb. 21.—Commissioner McDonald has ruled against the conspiracy contention of the Pierce interests in the fight between Pierce and the Standard Oil interests for control of the Waters-Pierce Oil company, and the case will go to Judge Kinsey for a determination of the legal questions involved before further hearings.

The hearing was held for the taking of testimony in the case brought by the Standard Oil interests to compel the inspectors of elections at the recent annual meeting of the Waters-Pierce stockholders to count the ballots offered by proxies for J. D. and William Rockefeller, J. D. Archbold and others in favor of R. W. Stewart, G. N. Mayer and C. H. Adams as directors.

Some Interesting Things About Fore River Bridge

RECENT REPAIRS

The opening of the Fore River bridge to public travel after having been closed since last fall, owing to the widening of the draw in the bridge, brings to mind some interesting history. The issue of the Quincy Patriot, under date of June 2, 1866, speaks of an accident on the bridge to a stone team of Messrs Francis & Charles Wilson. "The wagon was loaded with four tons of hammered granite and was going to Weymouth and was drawn by two yoke of oxen. When near the centre of the bridge the middle row of piles, having become rotten, gave way, letting the team and one yoke of oxen into fifteen feet of water. Two of the oxen were drowned and an attempt was made to raise the team. As they commenced to hoist, the chain parted and the stone slipped into the water," where it has since remained undisturbed until work was commenced last October on the present rebuilding.

Hiram W. Phillips while excavating for the foundation for the present structure recovered from the bed of the river the load of stone lost 46 years ago. These stones are about ten feet long and finely hammered.

In the same article the Patriot says "The bridge from what we can learn is in a rotten condition, and was purchased from the Hingham and Quincy Turnpike Corporation a few years since by the County Commissioners who paid for it an enor-

THE WRITINGS OF GALSWORTHY

No Writer Has Aroused Greater Interest Than He

MRS. GURNEY'S LECTURE

At the home of Mrs. Maurice P. Spillane, Elm street, club women met Wednesday afternoon for the eighth lesson in modern literature by Mrs. Herbert J. Gurney under the auspices of the Literature committee of the Quincy Women's club, Mrs. Gurney said:—"Of all the men now writing in England, there is none who has aroused greater interest and admiration than John Galsworthy. Still a young man, born in 1867 he has to his credit a long list of novels and dramas, "Jocelyn" published in 1899, "Villa Rubein," "A man of dream," "Island Pharisees," "Man of property," "The country house," "Fraternity," and "The Patrician," in 1911—he has also written a number of plays "Justice." "The silver box," "Joy," and "Strife," being the most important.

It is too soon to speak with assurance of the place that the world will finally give to them, we are too near him, to justily appreciate their permanent value, but many of the most exacting critics are inclined to give Galsworthy, a front place, both among the novelists and dramatists of the new generation, and there are many excellent reasons for this, first he is a literary artist,—he creates and interprets life with power and tenderness, he has a message original and sincere, the presentation of the important social questions hat are being constantly forced upon us in our highly wrought--tense modern life His work is as some one has said, real

MUCH DAMAGE DONE BY STORM

Windows Blown in and Many Cellars Flooded by Water

UNUSUAL HIGH WIND

The storm of Wednesday night was the worst that many parts of Quincy have experienced the present winter. It began to rain in the early evening increasing in violence as the evening wore on. Accompanying the rain was a high wind and at midnight a howling blizzard was in progress. The wind was from the northwest and was fresh. During the night it blew a gale. While those living on comparatively low ground felt the effects of the storm, it was not an instance to the effect by those who live on high ground, such as Presidents hill. Here the storm was felt in all its fury. The rain beat against the windows, sounding like pistol shots and it is said that few families were able to get much sleep during the night. Late at night there was a slight thunder storm. The morning of the holiday saw a snow storm in progress with a very high wind. The snow ceased however at 10 o'clock and the sun came out bright and clear. The high wind however continued making it disagreeable to be out.

The wind did not go down with sundown Thursday night as was expected but continued to blow hard all that night and this morning the wind still prevailed.

The wind and rain Wednesday night did considerable damage. One of the large show windows in the Foslom Tea store on Granite street was smashed by the high wind and the rain flooded cellars in several places. On Newport avenue and some of the low places in Wollaston the water was three or four feet deep in the cellar. The same condition prevailed on Bigelow street. This was due to the hard rain and the frozen ground which prevented the large volume of water from soaking into the ground.

All day long, Thursday, people were telephoning to the Commissioner of Public Works about the surface water but he could do but little to remedy the situation.

In addition to this, windows were blown in at several houses and in some cases chimneys lost some of their bricks. Taking all in all it was typical March weather.

ONE-CENT TAX FOR EACH INCH

A "foot social" proved a most novel affair in the vestry of the Park and Downs Union church, Wednesday evening. Each person desiring admittance was taxed the number of pennies of the combined length of his two feet in inches.

The decorations were in keeping with the idea and at the booths articles pertaining to Washington's birthday were on sale.

A program, consisting of music and readings was in charge of Mrs. George H. Stebbins. Part two consisted of drills by the young ladies of the church under the direction of Miss Fannie Fraser.

JAMES L. RAND.

The funeral of James L. Rand, New England manager of the Associated Press, was held at his late home in Wollaston, Thursday afternoon. The services were private and were attended by the immediate family only. Rev. Joseph Walther, pastor of the Wollaston Baptist church read the scriptures, Rev. Alexander Blackburn of the South Boston Baptist church, with which Mr. Rand was connected for many years, offered the prayer, and Rev. Dr. D. B. Jutten, a former postor of the South Boston church and a long family friend, spoke feelingly of his associations with the deceased. There was a profusion of beautiful flowers.

CHINESE AND THEIR CUSTOMS

Mrs. William E. Alden Reads Paper on Chinese Missions

WOMEN'S MISSIONARY

The women's missionary society connected with Bethany church, held its regular meeting, Wednesday afternoon. The president, Mrs. C. W. Miller, presided. After the devotional exercises, Miss Gertrude Allen rendered two songs in her usual sweet voice and with great expression, Miss Olive Allen accompanying her at the piano.

Mrs. W. E. Alden gave the paper of the afternoon, subject: Chinese Missions in the United States. Mrs. Allen said in part:

There are in the United States about 85,000 Chinese. Many people have an idea that they are of the Coolie inferior class, but the majority are of the middle class and can read and write. They furnish by far the smallest per cent of any class of foreigners of the inmates of our penal and eleemosynary institutions. They are also the least given to the many vices, nevertheless they come burdened with pagan thoughts and superstitions. For this reason they fall easy victims to fortune tellers and characters of that sort. They also relegate women to a very inferior position. The task rests upon us to change all this and set them free from this bondage. Fifty years ago the Congregational church began work for them.

The Chinese came here for material gain, but it has been the desire of the various mission schools to show them that spiritual riches in this country are of more value than money.

On visiting the Chinese mission, located at 16 Oxford street, Boston, the

DANCE FOLLOWS MINSTREL SHOW

Annual Events Granite Lodge Sons of St. George

MANY PRESENT

The twenty-sixth annual minstrel show and dance of Granite lodge, No. 193, O. S. S. G., was ushered in with great success, Wednesday evening, in Music hall. Every available seat was taken, and it was pronounced by all the best in the history of the order.

Jokes of all sorts were handed out, and many a prominent local citizen was made the target for a hearty laugh. The interlocutor was Matthew Fay, who added to the entertainment by giving a couple of whistling solos.

All of the performers came in for their full share of praise and great credit must be given John J. Phelan, the director, for the efficient manner in which everything was carried out.

The ends performed to complete satisfaction, as did all who contributed to the program. The affair started with an overture by Provost's orchestra, followed by the opening chorus by the entire company.

The ends songs included "Alexander's Rag Time Band," by H. Collins, "By," by Charles Vanner, "If I'm going to Die," by Ppillip Savard, "The Pullman Porter," by Roy Prout, "Baboon's Baby Dance," by W. Collins and "Woodman, Spare That Tree," by George Davey. Adolph Restelli was forced to respond to repeated encores for tenor solos, while Charles Moyle made a decided hit with his Italian character sketch.

The St. George quartet gave a number of selections which evoked prolonged applause.

The members of the quartet included W. Warmington, first tenor, F. Warmington, second tenor, A. Parsons, baritone and G. Davey, bass.

A specialty, "The Three Jolly Sailors," provided by W. Rendle, Calvin Moyle, and A. Rendle was also greatly appreciated by the 600 present, while George Davey merited well earned applause with a baritone solo. The grand finale, arranged by the director, was a splendid close to the show.

Those in the chorus were: Ed. Richards, Thomas Newcomb, Richard Reed, John Grant, H. Watters, Fred Warmington, E. Nankivel, William Eva, Ernest Collins, A. Newcomb, H. Williams, A. Williams, William Walker, Henry Rendle. W. Cooper, H. Opie, George Runnels, D. Mellow, William Cain, Charles Parsons, Albert Vanner, A. Martell, John Harling, W. Smith, B. O. Williams.

After the minstrels, the floor was cleared for dancing, which was enjoyed from eleven o'clock, until three in the morning.

Stanley Collins was floor director and his assistant was John Andrew. The chief of aids was George Rowe, assisted by Edward Jenkins, Ernest Collins and Albert Andrew, as aids.

The reception committee composed of Edward Warmington, Fred Beer and Francis Hodge.

The following constituted the committee on arrangements:—Edward Warmington, chairman, Arthur Tremayne, secretary, Stanley Collins, treasurer, Edwin Tregaskis, John Andrew, Fred Beer, John Moyle, Ernest Collins, Charles Best, John Rowe, Nicholas Williams, Thomas Newcomb, George Rowe, John Pascoe.

SEVEN AGES OF WOMEN

Patriotic Entertainment by Missionary Society

TABLEAUX

An entertainment of a patriotic nature, consisting of music and tableaux, was held at the Wollaston Methodist church on the evening of Washington's birthday under the auspices of the Ladies' Missionary society.

The evening opened with a vocal solo by Mrs. Samuel Scholes, "An Irish Lullaby" and a violin solo by Arthur Dewsnap accompanied by Miss Marion Nevers.

The first series of tableaux portrayed the poem "Seven times seven" and showed the seven ages of woman. The reading was by Mrs. C. H. Durgin and the calcium light effects made each tableau attractive. In the series were:

Exultation—Esther Campbell.
Romance—Lucy Palmer.
Love—Beulah Collett.
Maternity—Mrs. Clyde Morgan and Baby Norma.
Widowhood—Mrs. Eric H. Ewertz and Francena Crothers.
Giving in Marriage—Rev. Wesley Wiggin, Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Moodie.
Longing for Home——Mrs. M. H. Bidwell.

During the intermission a piano solo by Miss Bessie Wilbur was enjoyed. The second group of tableaux depicted Washington at various stages of his career. J. A. Sedgwick made an heroic George and before each scene Miss Rena Chamberlain read a selection descriptive of the event portrayed. The scenes were as follows:

George Washington—J. A. Sedgwick
At Boston—J. A. Sedgwick and Esther Campbell.
At Mount Vernon—Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Sedgwick, Miss Florence Bennett, Frank Dunham and Storer Wiggin.
Notification of Election—J. A. Sedgwick and Arthur Dewsnap.
Farewell to Mother—J. A. Sedgwick, Mrs. W. C. Saunders.
His Inauguration—J. A. Sedgwick, W. C. Saunders, Arthur Dewsnap.
At the Ball—J. A. Sedgwick, Mrs. W. C. Saunders, Miss Nettie Crittenden, Miss Florence Bennett.
In Memoriam—Miss Mary Cleveland. America—Miss Mary Cleveland, Lucy Palmer, Florence Palmer, Alfreda Dewsnap, Ethel Brown, Jeanie Keith, Eulalia Holmes, Marion Clifford.

The evening closed with the playing of America and a solo by Mrs. Scholes.

Arizona has now become the 48th sister, and we are anxious to learn how she survives the change from cow-boy leggins to the hobble skirt.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Senator Heyburn denounces "railroading" bills through the Senate. The ordinary speed might be described as "snailing" them through.

It now remains to be seen whether Mr. Taft's Neurotic Club will attain the long and exclusive membership list gained by Mr. Roosevelt's Ananias Club.

The commerce commission is investigating the express companies. There is a general feeling that they could cut rates and still have plum pudding for Sunday dinner.

Wall street note: A bill having been introduced into the Montana legislature forbidding feeble minded persons from trading in stocks, a panic seized the market, and prices were utterly demoralized.

Gov. Colquitt of Texas is going to stop the Mexicans from shooting over the border, but sportsmanlike Mexicans will not be satisfied with gunning for their own countrymen when they can bag gamy Americans.

Presidential candidates that want a bomb proof record should never dwell on themes that irritate the public mind. There are plenty of subjects like the French and Indian war and the Shakespeare-Bacon controversy that can be treated without arouisng all these hard feelings.

BASKET PARTY ELECTA HALL

The parishioners of the Swedish Lutheran church held a basket-party in Electa hall, Thursday evening which met with great favor among the many who were in attendance.

During the early part of the evening a concert was given, including a trio by Misses Hilmar Viden, Sadie Nelson, and Ida Halquist; a duet by Sigrid Lundquist and Esther Thorne. Esther Viden was the pianist.

The auction of baskets, each containing a variety of things, unknown to the buyer, was then in order with the pastor, A. S. Larson officiating as auctioneer. A large number of baskets was disposed of and the affair proved most successful.

NEW HOME OF W. C. T. U.

Structure at Boston Is Dedicated In Presence of Large Crowd

Boston, Feb. 23.—National and state officers of the Woman's Christian Temperance union were present yesterday afternoon at the dedication of the Massachusetts headquarters of the organization at 541 Massachusetts avenue. Fully 500 members and guests of the union attended and inspected the magnificent new state home of the union.

The exercises were held in the assembly hall, on the first floor, and this room and the front parlor, on the same floor, were prettily decorated with flags, bunting and flowers. A large silk American flag was stretched across the front of the building.

The new home of the union comprises four floors and a basement. Thus far only the basement and the first and second floors have been furnished. The members and guests inspected the various rooms and expressed their admiration of the new home.

WILL VISIT HOUGHS NECK

Legislative Committee on Towns Coming Next Week

LEGISLATIVE MATTERS

The legislative committee on Towns has given the bill which seeks to establish the town of Seagirt, now a part of Quincy known as Houghs Neck, a great deal of consideration. Before reporting on it, however, the committee will look over the ground and on Tuesday will journey to Houghs Neck and see for themselves the site for the proposed town. Sometime during next week a report will be made to the legislature, and on that report hangs the fate of the bill.

The committee on Harbors and Public Lands also contemplates a visit to Quincy shores. This committee has in its possession the bill of Representative Leslie which provides for widening and deepening the channel which leads from Quincy Bay deep water to the Wollaston and Squantum Yacht Clubs. The committee, guided by Mr. Leslie, will view the situation of the channel, and the knowledge thus gained will help them decide the advisability of reporting favorably on it.

REDISTRICTING.

Whatever changes are made in the new plan of redistricting the State for congressional districts, it may now be definitely stated that Quincy will be taken out of its present district and placed in a more congenial one. The new plan puts Quincy in a district made up of only one other city (Brockton) and 19 towns of Plymouth and Norfolk counties. It will contain East Bridgewater, the home of Congressman Harris, who will become its representative until the election next November. Probably every voter in Quincy will welcome a change that puts the city in a district which can not be dominated by an overpowering voting influence as is the case at present, where the vote of Boston makes it imperative that the congressman who represents Quincy, be a resident of Boston. In the near future Quincy may be able to boast of a congressman who resides within its bounds.

FLOWERS MANY AND BEAUTIFUL

The funeral of Mrs. Ellen B. Edwards, wife of Stephen H. Edwards, was held Thursday from her late residence 53 Walker street, Atlantic.

Mrs. Edwards was born in West Quincy but has resided in Atlantic for the past 26 years and with her husband and family enjoyed a wide acquaintance throughout the entire city. Mr. Edwards is a well-known citizen of Quincy, having served as a councilman from Ward 6, and also having served two years as District Chief of the Fire Department for the Atlantic district. He is a member of the Knights of Columbus, Quincy Council; United Order of Workmen, and many other fraternal orders, and has always been prominently connected with political affairs of both this city and the state.

Shortly after nine o'clock the large funeral cortege, a splendid tribute of the loyalty of the many friends of the family, left the home on Walker street for the Sacred Heart church where a solemn high mass of requiem was celebrated by the pastor Rev. Fr. Cuff. The interment was in the cemetery at West Quincy.

Among the many beautiful floral offerings were the following:

CHINESE AND THEIR CUSTOMS

writer found a daily school was held in three good sized rooms, from 2 to 4 P. M. and 7 to 9 P. M. The pupils ranged from seventeen to thirty years of age and included a few girls. English is taught by Bible verses in both languages and a Chinese English primer. Religious instruction is given, for part of which a question book in both languages is used. Charts of music containing our familiar hymns, are in use and a Bible class is conducted.

The Chinese come to learn English and many of them also learn to be Christians. They attend Sunday school at Tremont temple, others, Mount Vernon church where special interest has been taken in them. The mission helps them in many ways. There are fifteen of the Chinese families who send their children to the public schools, but the population of Chinatown is decreasing owing to the stringent exclusion laws.

The greatest number of Chinese are found on the Pacific coast where there is so much dislike to them that it often results in violence. The objection to him is that it costs him so little to live that he can work cheaper than other laborers. He comes to make money and return to China. They also herd together in unsanitary and congested quarters

During a visit to San Francisco the writer was guided through Chinatown since destroyed by the earthquake. The first visit was paid to the Presbyterian Home for orphan girls. Many girls in it were bought while in China for slaves, and brought to this country where they served that purpose. They showed the result of the training in the Mission school.

In a joss house were pictures of joss hung behind an altar, before which sticks of sandalwood were burning. Burning a stick was equivalent to saying a prayer; each worshipper was required to pay a fee. The whole was in strong contrast to the scene just witnessed in the mission school.

In a walk through a street was seen the Chinese engaged in various trades and industries. A stop was made at a drug store conducted by a Chinaman. Nothing but roots and herbs are used in filling prescriptions. On one side of an opium joint stretched a long bench covered with straw matting on which lay the smokers. Some had fallen into a stupor; others were filling and enjoying their pipes It takes ten times as long to prepare the opium paste for smoking, as to smoke it, and the look of anticipation on the face of the victim is very unpleasant to see.

In a tea room the party was served tea, without milk or sugar, and sweetmeats of different kinds. A gambling resort was visited; the gambling dens and the worst ones are underground, and the police find it almost impossible to invade them for sentinels are posted who give the alarm, and sliding partitions change quickly the whole arrangement of the building.

A new Chinese building has been opened, five stories in height, which combines the church, mission school, gymnasium, rooms for the pastor and other apartments, that may be let to Christian Chinese. The object is to make possible a Christian Chinese community, which shall in neatness, manner of living and character set an example to the rest of Chinatown. The school here numbers seventy-five in attendance and is in charge of a Christian Chinaman and his wife. Here any Chinaman can find a refuge and home.

The mission work is done under the auspices of the California Oriental Mission of which Rev. W. C. Pond is the head. $15,000 are expended annually, $5,000 of which is furnished by the American Missionary association, and the rest raised by Dr. Pond. Of this $10,000 one half is given by California churches and the other half by Orientals.

A woman physician who administered to the Chinese women and children, who are virtually prisoners in their own homes, was so warmly welcomed and so earnestly begged to stay longer on each visit, that she urged upon tdhe Mission the advisability of procuring a woman missionary, who should by her visits teach these Chinese women and children. Such a one is now at work and results are seen in the loosening of the bonds of superstition, and the springing up of the seeds of truth and love in the heart. There are four Chinese churches and six Japanese churches on the Western coast, the average contributions being $20.00 a year for each member.

Several other cities have missions; in Santa Barbara at a recent semi-annual gathering, a Chinaman gave an address in which he paid highest tribute to the mission work and its influence for good. Because of it there are better Chinese in your homes and in far away China there are those converted in your mission, teaching the light and love of Jesus to their countrymen.

Rev. Jee Gam, for many years a splendid worker on the Pacific coast and who recently died, said, "God saw you were not sending missionaries fast enough to China, so he sent the Chinese here for you to teach them that they might return with the good news."

Not only in the sense of duty done would the reward return to you, but can you imagine the great commercial advantage to be derived from the trade with China, when that vast people adopts civilization and seeks its equipment at the door of its nearest neighbor, United States? At the close of Mrs Alden's address, a social and informal hour was enjoyed, during which light refreshments were served.

DOINGS ON THE STAGE OF

LOCAL AND BOSTON THEATRES

"THE DEEP PURPLE."

The Deep Purple," Paul Armstrong's powerful play of the Great White Way, which begins a limited engagement at the Plymouth Theatre on Monday, presents a graphic picture of New York city life as it really exists today. The play is an example of the new school of dramatic endeavor that is fast making its way in this country. It hinges on the attempt of a group of New York thieves to play the "badger game" on a young mining engineer from the West, using as a decoy, a confiding and trusting girl who has fallen into their hands.

How the plot is balked by the courage and resourcefulness of the engineer and the wit of Kate Fallon, a former thief, gives occasion for a series of strong scenes and life-like character delineations in the hands of an unusually capable company. The play is a bit of real life transplanted to the stage, that should interest the average theatre-goer who is unfamiliar with how the underworld exists. One of the primary reasons for the remarkable success of the piece is the air of verity given its proceedings.

B. F. KEITH'S.

Adele Ritchie, the late star of "Fascinating Flora," "The Social Whirl," "Fantana," "Glittering Gloria," and a score of other musical comedy successes, will make her first vaudeville appearance in Boston at B. F. Keith's Theatre next week. Miss Ritchie is known on the legitimate stage as "The Dresden China Prima Donna," on account of her unusual and dainty type of blond beauty. She will sing a number of new and catchy songs in that fascinating style that has made her famous, besides wearing some remarkable gowns. Another legitimate star who will make his first appearance in vaudeville on the same bill will be George W. Wilson, the old Boston Museum stock company favorite. Mr. Wilson will present a comedy entitled "Back Pension," written especially for him by Robert H. Davis, author of "The Welcher," and editor of Munsey's Magazine. In this piece Mr. Wilson has the part of an old Civil War veteran, and it is safe to predict that he will give one of those finished and realistic character creations that made his "King Louis of France," the hit of E. H. Sothern's production of "If I Were King." The Vassar Girls is a musical act of unusual novelty and merit composed of ten crack musicians from the Fadettes orchestra. Other big features will be John and Mae Burke, captains in the army of fun; George Spink and Pauline Welch novelty singers and dancers; Ward Brothers, the boys with the monocle; Martine Brothers on the bounding table, and others.

"THE LITTLEST REBEL."

The following letter and poem were received by dainty Mary Miles Minter, the diminutive actress who plays the title part with Dustin and William Farnum in "The Littlest Rebel" at the Boston Theatre. "Dear Miss Minter:—I am fifty-five years of age, almost an old man, but you have touched my heart with your art—an art benign, superfine and beautiful. Your acting rings true—so true that it would move a heart of stone. Ah, my child, who could see you play Virgie in "The Littlest Rebel and not love you? I know one who couldn't and he is, Your Aged Admirer, Shelton Thomason."

Oh, I've seen "The Littlest Rebel:"
Yes, I've paid to see her twice:
And it pays to pay to see her—
Nay, she's worth ten times the price,
And I'm going to see her thrice.

Oh, I've witnessed many "battles,"
But I'll ne'er forget the day
When I saw "The Littlest Rebel"
Hold the enemy at bay
In her rare, compelling way.

Oh, I've loved a lot of dramas,
And my love I have confessed,
But I love "The Littlest Rebel"
Rather more than all the rest;
Yes, I'm sure I love "her" best.

Oh, I love her for her sweetness
For her human little heart,
For her morning-glory beauty,
For the soul that lights her art
And illumes her charming part.

And I love her for the tear-drops
That her sorrows bid me shed
As she lisps the sweet, sad story
Of her "daddy" who had fled
And returned—to hide their dead.

Y s, I love my "Littlest Rebel",
For the lovely part she plays
In a great and grand "Rebellion"
Which I wish could last always,
Or, at least, throughout my days.

And I pray that He will bless her—
Her and "Daddy," too—and when
They depart to fight more "battles,"
May He bring them back again
Crowned with victory. Amen.

HOLLIS STREET THEATRE.

Among the season's productions of special merit a prominent place must be given to "The Grain of Dust" by the late David G. Phillips whose wanton assassination just a year ago at the hands of a lunatic stirred the literary world. The stage version of this admirable book is by Louis Evan Shipman and James K. Hackett is using it as his vehicle of expression this season and its production by him also marked his return to actor management. Mr. Hackett goes to the Hollis Street Theatre, Boston, for the 205th to the 220th performances, two weeks commencing, Feb. 26th, with a company of exceptional merit. Almost every one has read this fine book but for the benefit of the few who have not a slight sketch of the story may serve. "Frederick Norman" is a brilliant young corporation lawyer who has practically put himself at the head of his profession despite his youth. Equally successful in a social way, he is engaged to pre-eminently the "catch of the season," Josephine Burroughs, the beautiful daughter of a fabulously wealthy "captain of finance." Everything is running smoothly until Norman suddenly discovers hidden and unsuspected charms in a quiet little blonde typewriter, Dorothy Hallowell, who works in his office. From this point on the story is simple enough and its strength and interest depend rather on the way in which the plot is unfolded than in the plot itself. Suffice it to say in the end Norman marries the typewriter, having broken off his fashionable engagement. As a character study the figure of Norman is simply enormous and equal force and art are displayed by the author in the portrayal of the girl. It is beyond cavil a great book and Mr. Shipman has successfully transformed it into a great play, whereas a glance above certainly indicates that it will be presented by a great company.

JOHN MASON.

John Mason aided by his Thirty-ninth Street Theatre Players in the Messrs. Shubert's elaborate production of the new Augustus Thomas four act drama, "As a Man Thinks," will begin his Boston season at the Shubert Theatre next week.

The new work is evidently Mr. Thomas' dramatic masterpiece. It goes to Boston direct from a year reviewers credit it with being the and a half in New York where the greatest American play ever written. It is generally conceded to be even a greater dramatic work than "The Witching Hour," Mr. Thomas' first John Mason play. Mr. Mason will be seen as the gentle Dr. Selig, a stage type radically opposed to the actor's part of Brookfield in "The Witching Hour," and in Dr. Selig, according to the New York critics, Mr. Mason has a character that fits his magnetic acting quality and odd personal traits better than anything he has previously interpreted. Chrystal Herne, the lovely daughter of the great actor-author. James A. Herne of "Hearts of Oak" and "Shore Acres" fame, is Mr. Mason's leading woman player and every member of the original New York company is with Mr. Mason en tour. Also the immense scenic and costume detail used in the big New York production.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE

The last week of "The Product of the Mill" at the Castle Square will have the assurance of such large performances that it is almost unnecessary to urge the many who have delayed seeing this Harvard-Radcliffe Prize Play to secure seats at once. For a play to run five weeks in Boston indicates an exceptional popularity, and the warm reception given to Miss McFadden's drama is well deserved. The audiences have been large and continuously appreciative, and they have divided their enthusiasm between the absorbing plot and the realistic scenes in a Southern cotton manufacturing town.

It is a performance of exceptional excellence that is given "The Product of the Mill" on the Castle Square stage. Mary Young does fine emotional work as Ruth Carman, the children are acted with no little sincerity by Henrietta McDannel and Madeline Moore,, while George Hassell, Donald Meek, Walter Walker, Robert Middlemas, Mabel Colcord and Mabel Montgomery add to the completeness of the performance.

"WAY DOWN EAST."

That perennial success "Way Down East" will be at the Majestic Theatre for the second and last week of the 17th Boston Season. The visits of this delightful play of New England life are hailed with unusual delight and interest, and the concern already manifested indicates that local playgoers will accord it its usual enthusiastic reception. There is no play on the American stage today that has a firmer hold on the affections of amusement seekers in general than this offering from the pen of Lottie Blair Parker. The oft-told story which is the theme of the play tells of the love of David Bartlett, the son of stern old Squire Bartlett, for Anna Moore, and the audience follows with breathless interest the wooing of the girl whom a scandalmonger has denounced. The casting of her out into a raging snow-storm by the obstinate father, furnishes one of the greatest dramatic climaxes ever devised, and the subsequent ending of the play where the girl and her lover are reunited and the blessing of the father, are episodes that never fail to interest and entertain.

Explosion Starts Bad Fire

Cambridge, Mass., Feb. 23.—Flames, started by a gasolene explosion in the barber shop of Dean Falcony at 2599 Massachusetts avenue, riding at the top of a sixty-mile wind, totally destroyed three buildings, gutted another, drove three families from their homes, and terrorized North Cambridge, causing a loss of $25,000, last night.

AN INCENDIARY AT MONTCLAIR

Discovery of Attempt to Burn the New School Building

DAMAGE BY SMOKE

It has been reported to the police that an attempt was made one morning early in the week to set fire to the new Montclair school building. It was found that someone had gone into the basement and piled a lot of lumber and pieces of wood in the centre of the cement floor and set fire to it. Whether the fire burned itself out of its own accord or the parties who started it became frightened and extinguished the blaze is not known but the fact remains that the fire was put out before much damage was done. The damage is largely confined to smoke, from the burning wood which went all over the building.

and serious and inspired with high intentions the work of a man who can see both sides of the question and present them with charity, tenderness and unbiased judgment. He has a marvellous gift for producing real human creatures, his characters are so alive but great as is his artistry in drawing the individual characters—his great power is in painting social groups. I think every reader of his, will at once make this discovery.

He has been called the poet of democracy and he has a wonderful sympathy for the poor, the ignorant, and oppressed. In his earlier writings, he was very bitter towards self-satisfied people of wealth—the upper class, but he is too keen an observer and too great an artist not to see that rich and poor,—high and low—educated and ignorant are after all but parts of the one great fabric of life—that they must rise and fall—rejoice and suffer together that they will always act and react upon each other. Galsworthy made his first great impression upon the public , particularly on this side, by the influence created by his play "Justice" on prison reform in England, he has a passion of hatred for the caging of any creature, be it bird, animal, or man. Mrs. Gurney sketched the play "Justice" which has so great an effect on Winston Churchill, that he started his great prison reforms in England and the country stirred by the same cause supported him.

In the "Silver box" are two classes true to life—the wealthy and poor man, it made a wonderful impression when played by Ethel Barrymore and is a lesson that is needed. Mrs. Gurney sketched and read from the play as well. "Strife" was also sketched and the conclusion was read which proved that nature is stronger than capital or labor.

Galsworthy says his object is to make those who sit in the boxes get a bad taste in the mouth.

"The country house," a story of the upper middle class is extremely interesting and in sketching it, Mrs. Gurney brought out an essential characteristic lesson to take home,—true womanly power. "Patricians" which she slightly sketched is a story of the highest class in England, he has great power of description, loves beauty, and his descriptions of skies, stars, sunsets, these all come in little bits of pictures, his books are interesting and entertaining. All are looking forward to see what he will do in the future.

Mrs. Short announced that the next lesson, March 3 at 3 o'clock will be on James Lane Allen at the home of Mrs. Albert E. Avery 265 Commercial street, East Braintree, a train leaves Quincy at 2.02 for East Braintree. Electric cars via Weymouth Landing leave 2.25, change at Norfolk square and get off at Allen street. WASHINGTON SCHOOL.

The meeting of parents and teachers held at the Washington school on Wednesday evening was an entirely successful one in spite of the heavy downpour of rain. About 40 men and women, residents of the district were present in addition to the teachers. The new electric lights had been installed ready for the evening and the assembly room and corridor were very light and cheerful. Committees were appointed to arrange for a permanent organization and Mr. A. L. Barbour, Superintendent of Schools spoke on the advantages of co-operation with the school and also gave an account of what the school department hopes to do in the way of industrial education. A later meeting will be held at the call of the committee on organization.

WILLARD SCHOOL.

A parents meeting is to be held at the Willard school next Monday which will be in the nature of an acquaintance meeting The parents visit the school very little at this building and it is hoped that this meeting may bring good results in the way of a closer acquaintance ship between teachers and parents, with consequent benefits to the pupils. At the same time, the plans which the School Committee has, developing the system along industrial lines will be explained.

THE LATEST FROM MARS

Scientists Tell About Its Birds, Vegetation and Inhabitants

Paris, Feb. 23.—The Paris Matin publishes a drawing of a curiously misshapen person, given as an approximate representation of an inhabitant of Mars. The drawing is given on scientific observations by Edmond Perrier of the natural history museum and Camille Flammarion, the astronomer.

Perrier declares the temperature averages 42 degrees. The year is twice as long as ours, birds have luxuriant plumage and there are huge plants and ideal flowers. The picture shows a blue-eyed, long-nosed, heavy-eared being, with a huge head, bulky chest and spindly legs.

DRINKING PLACES RAIDED

About $200,000 Worth of Wet Goods Seized In New York

New York, Feb. 23.—Close to 100,000 gallons of various kinds of liquors are locked up in storage warehouses or sealed in cellars as the result of fifty raids in the city by W. W. Farley, the state commissioner of excise, on places where there was no state license. The raids, the most extensive in the history of the city, reached from the East Side up through the Tenderloin and Broadway to Harlem.

Altogether about $200,000 worth of liquor was seized, and warrants served for its erstwhile owners to appear before Justice Davis on March 8.

The raiding party, which consisted of 125 excise agents and forty policemen, was divided up among ten automobiles and the raids began at once, with thirty moving vans trailing behind, the parties to hold the confiscated liquor.

SEVEN BABIES DIE WITHIN FIVE DAYS

Police Probe Demise of Little Ones In Brooklyn Hospital

New York, Feb. 23.—Stirred to activity by the sudden death within five days of seven infants and the serious illness of five others in the hospital section of the Brooklyn nursery and infants' hospital, the police and Coroner Glinnen of that borough have begun a thorough investigation.

An autopsy performed by Coroner's Physician Wuest disclosed traces of an irritant poison in the stomachs of two children who died Tuesday. Wuest said that he would seek immediately to have his discovery confirmed by chemical analysis of the contents of the infants' stomachs.

The theory on which the investigators are working is that the poison was administered in milk given the infants, and their attention has been directed to a woman employed in the kitchen who, according to fellow employes, recently has shown signs of insanity. It is said that she harbored a real or fancied grievance over the amount of her pay as a kitchen helper.

Hat and Head Both In Ring

Kansas City, Feb. 23.—"My hat has been in the ring a long time and my head has been in it," said Governor Wilson of New Jersey here when his attention was called to Mr. Roosevelt's statement made to W. F. Eirick at Cleveland.

Prisoners and Soldiers Fight

Lisbon, Feb. 23.—Five men were killed and fifteen wounded in a battle between political prisoners and soldiers in the yard of Alemquer penitentiary following an attempted jail delivery.

Q.—What is signified by the Scriptural expression, "The Sun of Righteousness shall arise with healing in its beams?"—Malachi iv, 2. (X.X.X.)

Answer—In the prophetic language of the Scriptures the condition of the race of mankind throughout its entire history, is sin and ignorance, suffering and death, is likened to a dark night time. "Darkness covers the earth and gross darkness the people" is the Prophet's declaration. Truly it has been a fearful time of darkness in which mankind has been groping for the better things, which, instinctively, all realize do not exist at this time but must come somehow, somewhere. And in this dreadful night time how many have dreamed fearful dreams, having the awful night-mare of eternal torment before their minds! But, thank God, the scriptures represent that a day is approaching—"The Day of the Lord"—in the dawning of which all the shadows of ignorance and prejudice shall roll away. The Psalmist, in poetic expresions, portrays the transition from the darkness of the night to the glorious radiance of the day. "Weeping may endure for a night; but joy cometh in the morning." Yes; it is to be a joyous time for the world, when all shall be enlightened concerning the goodness of the Creator, and when sorrow and sighing, suffering and death, shall be no more. The "Sun of Righteousness" will be formed of the members of the Church of Christ, as the Lord Jesus declared—"The righteous shall shine as the sun in the Kingdom of their Father." (Matthew xii, 43.) It shall arise with "healing in its beams" in the sense that the Church together with her Lord will be manifested in power and great glory to all the world and will illuminate the whole earth with the knowledge of the glory of the Father, which will result in the healing and blessing of all the families, kindred and nations of the earth. It is no wonder that the "whole creation groans and travails in pain together until now, waiting for the manifestation of the Sons of God"—this glorious Sun of Righteousness.—Romans vii, 22, 19.

REVOLUTION IS NEAR AT HAND

All It Lacks in Mexico Is a Competent Leader

ANARCHY IN MANY STATES

Situation Said to Be More Desperate Than That Existing Previous to Overthrow of Diaz—Bandits Raiding at Will and Railroad Tracks and Bridges Blown Up—Americans Appeal For Protection

Washington, Feb. 23.—Virtual anarchy is reported in many Mexican states, in telegrams and letters received by the state and war departments. As soon as a leader arises who can hold together the scattered bands now in revolt, a civil war greater than the one which resulted in the overturn of President Diaz is expected. From information received here it would appear that the unrest is greater than that which preceded the Madero revolt, but so far it lacks direction and cohesion.

Bandits are raiding at will in the remoter and rural districts. American owned mines and haciendas have been sufferers for some time, the bands carrying off rifles, ammunition and provisions.

Insurrectos have made raids in the last few days from Guerrero into Mexico state. Colonel Salgado led one band into the state of Mexico at Tlataya. He was repulsed by a force of rurales, losing thirty-seven killed and six prisoners. The rurales had eleven killed and nine wounded.

In the north the state of Chihuahua is demoralized, raids by independent bands being made in all directions. The rebels are in control of all the country about Cases Grandes and they hold the Northwestern railroad. Railroad tracks and bridges have been blown up about Acapulco. Americans in the Culiacan valley, in the central west, have appealed to the United States consul at Mazatlan for protection.

Further south, at Guadalajara, much railroad property has been destroyed.

Federal and rebel troops clashed on La Gloria hill, forty miles south of Douglas, Ariz. Five federals and one rebel were killed and eight federals wounded. The federals were repulsed.

Mexican customs officials at Agua Prieta and most of the merchants there have moved all of their valuables to Douglas. Many American refugees from Nacozari and Gananoa have arrived there.

President Taft is not ready to send more troops to the border, although he is not satisfied with conditions in Mexico. He believes the preparedness of the mobile army is such that in the case of more troops being needed that it could be mobilized at once and that there is no need of moving the troops from their present posts at this time. It is predicted here that the next time the troops move they will not stop on the northern side of the Rio Grande.

GAVE SAVINGS TO HAWLEY

Servants Who Were In His Employ Now Wonder Where Funds Are

New York, Feb. 23.—With the affairs of the late Edwin Hawley still in an unsettled condition, servants in the household are considerably perturbed. This is due to the fact that they have received no information as to the whereabouts of their lifelong savings intrusted to the millionaire's railroad.

Each month when they were paid off the servants, it is said, handed over to Hawley that portion of their wages which they did not require for their wants. This money Hawley told them he would invest in good railroad securities.

From time to time during his lifetime Hawley reported to his servants on their investments and they were always elated over the prospect of becoming wealthy. Since their employer's death, however, the servants have not had a word with regard to their investments.

Governor Foss Keeps Busy at Washington's Birthday Reception

Boston, Feb. 23.—Governor Foss shook hands with 4484 men, women and children at the recepuon given by Governor and Mrs. Foss to the public in the beautiful Hall of Flags in the state house yesterday.

Parents took their children, and, in many cases, children went alone. The presence of the little ones was just what Governor and Mrs. Foss wished. The governor mentioned it himself last Saturday, saying: "Make it a baby's day at the state house. I wish the mothers would bring their babies."

REVIVES EARLY HISTORY

mous price, it is thought." This company was incorporated in 1808 and began operations in 1812. It was probably after this date that the first bridge was built.

Work on the present widening of the draw was commenced last October and was completed and used by pedestrians about Dec. 27, 1911. Owing to the unusual cold weather in January the plank required for the top was delayed in transit four weeks. This material arrived Feb. 15 and Tuesday, Feb. 20, the bridge was again used by the street railway. If the weather continues favorable the bridge will be in readiness for general travel before the 27th.

The designs for the new draw were made by Whitman & Howard who have been in charge of the work which was done by the Boston Bridge Co. The bridge is 660 feet in length, and one of the longest in the state while the opening of the draw, 125 feet, is only equalled by the bridge at New London, Conn. The draw span is 258 feet long and 40 feet high, and when swung at right angles has two openings of 125 feet each.

E. W. Hunt, of Weymouth, one of the trustees of the bridge, writing to the Weymouth Weekly Times last November gives some interesting facts about the work that has just been completed.

He says that as it was desirable to keep the bridge open during the summer months it was not closed until Oct. 16. In the meantime however a large amount of preparatory work was done. "First it was necessary to repair and lengthen out the centre fender pier. The total length of the pier is about 400 feet and the average width 45 feet. The foundation piles are of oak, few if any, of the new pipe piles being less than 16 inches in diameter. The deck and floor timber is of hard pine. The pier is well braced and thoroughly built, the workmanship and material used being the best the market affords."

Continuing he says:

"It was also necessary to repair and reinforce the foundations supporting the draw bridge. Comparatively few people were aware of the large amount of work done beneath the floor of the bridge while the bridge was in use. Dredging, driving piles to support concrete foundations, submarine drivers at work, etc.

"The diameter of centre foundation has been increased from 30 to 36 feet. As the water is about 27 feet deep, the contractors had to contend with the usual difficulties appurtenant to work of this nature, and in addition were cramped for space because of the bridge overhead.

"The 'coffer dam' which is constructed of medium steel plates was contracted to the Fore River Shipbuilding Co. The pile foundations, dredging and deep water work to Hiram W. Phillips, of Quincy, Mass., one of the best-known experts on deep water foundations. Mr. John P. McKnight is employed as inspector of work. Mr. McKnight's experience has been large. He was employed five years as inspector by the Boston Water Board, and five years as inspector on the Charles River dam.

On October 16th the bridge was closed to travel; immediately large gangs of workmen commenced removing the rails of the street railway, the over-head wires and the larger cables that were laid below the channel of the river. In the meantime, other workmen had been busily employed in running new cables and wires over the temporary foot bridge. This work was accomplished without causing any delays in the operation of the street railway. The Bay State Street Railway Co., is entitled to credit for promptness in doing this work. The steep grade on the approach to the bridge on the Quincy side of the river is being improved, and will be completed in a few days. Perhaps the most important and most interesting part of the work is the remodeling of the steel draw spans or increasing the length of the same 25 feet on each side. The designs for this alteration were from the office of J. H. Worcester & Co., consulting engineers. After swinging off the draw to a point at right angles with the bridge over the new fender piers, the entire structure, weighing about 300 tons, was blocked and wedged up on strong timbers, the timbers resting on numerous rollers.

About this time there appeared on the scene a large gang of skilled mechanics employed by the Boston Bridge Works. This company has the contract for completing the remaining work. The workmen were set at work cutting rivets and otherwise employed in doing the work necessary in order to cut into two parts the two large steel trusses, the plan being to insert 50 feet in length of new work in the centre of the present bridge. This work was soon accomplished, and within the last few days the draw spans have been pulled or rolled out 25 feet each way on the new fender pier. The work of putting the additional steel, lengthening the draw, will commence in a few days. All of the above work has been accomplished without accident and without interrupting the travel over the foot bridge.

Incidental to this work is the removal of 4 of the old piers supporting the present bridge and constructing and putting in place new piers. These piers are 7 feet in diameter and 40 feet long, constructed of steel, and filled with cement concrete. The piers weigh upwards of 100 tons each, and require powerful machinery to remove them. Two of the old piers have been removed. Workmen will commence this week to put in the new piers.

Men are at work scraping and brushing all steel and iron work preparatory to painting.

All of the old floor of the bridge is to be taken up and a new floor laid diagonally. That feature and the fact that the draw is to be operated by electricity will no doubt be appreciated by the travelling public."

ATTELL IS OUTFOUGHT

Kilbane Wins Featherweight Championship In Easy Fashion

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 23.—A new pugilistic champion was made in the Vernon arena when Johnny Kilbane of Cleveland decisively defeated Abe Attell in a twenty-round contest, and at the close was awarded the decision and the featherweight title by Referee Eyton.

Nearly 10,000 persons saw the fight. Fully 5000 others were turned away at the gates. It was the greatest crowd that ever viewed a prize fight in Los Angeles. The receipts amounted to approximately $25,000.

The men fought for a purse of $10,000, of which Attell was to receive $6500, win, lose or draw, and Kilbane $3500. Besides they agreed to divide evenly 50 percent of the moving picture privilege.

Attell was clearly outfought. His boasted speed and wonderful cleverness were not in evidence. Kilbane made him look like a novice in nearly every round.

MUCH DAMAGE BY GALE

Boston and Vicinity Treated to Great Variety of Weather

Boston, Feb. 23.—Uprooted trees and telegraph poles, with broken window panes and signs and chimneys lying about the ground, bore mute witness to the fury of the wind storm with which Boston and vicinity was visited yesterday.

The beautiful New England weather, of which the late lamented Mark Twain spoke so feelingly, was in evidence also, changing from the sultry heat of a late spring day, early yesterday morning, to a howling, raging snowstorm in the afternoon, with thunder and lightning mixed in.

The wind attained a velocity of forty-six miles over Boston, although it increased to almost twice this off the coast, ninety-six miles being reported at New York, eighty at New London and over eighty at Gloucester.

Many of the suburban towns were littered with debris of all kinds.

MRS. WENTZELL SAYS SHE LOVED NEPHEW

Police Refuse to Allow Her to Attend His Funeral

Lynn, Mass., Feb. 23.—The police authorities here refused to permit Mrs. Jennie Wentzell to attend the funeral of Charles J. Beaupre, her 4-year-old nephew, whose death she is alleged to have caused by beating and burning his body with a hot poker.

"I loved him so, and this is the last request I shall make of you," sobbed Mrs. Wentzell when making her plea to Chief of Police Burckes. She is held in $5000 bail on a charge of manslaughter.

Following the refusal of the police authorities to permit her to leave the jail for that purpose, the funeral of the boy was held from her home at 615 Chestnut street, while she continued to sob protestingly at the jail, her hysterical declarations of innocence continuing through the entire day.

TO STOP EXILE OF CHILDREN

Lawrence Marshal Will Use All Resources of Law

SIX RESCUED AT STATION

Return Home With Parents When Situation Is Explained—Little Ones Said to Have Been Sent Away Under Misrepresentation — Strikers' Committee May Try Crusade Despite Police Order

Lawrence, Mass., Feb. 23.—A clash between the children's relief committee and police and military authorities is feared Saturday, when the committee will endeavor to send out 200 children from the city to New York and Philadelphia, in spite of the orders of Colonel Sweetser and Acting City Marshal Sullivan to the contrary.

Marshal Sullivan declared last evening that there will be no more children allowed to leave Lawrence until the police are satisfied they cannot prevent them from going.

"I will use all the resources of the law," he said, "to prevent making a show of children on streets, collecting money for anybody or any purposes, and I will not hesitate to use all the force, power or authority that I possess or may summon to my aid."

Colonel Sweeteser, earlier in the week, expressed himself similarly.

Six children, four of Armenian parentage and two of a Portuguese family residing in Pleasant valley, Methuen, were brought to the North station, Lawrence, yesterday afternoon, tagged and in readiness to be shipped to Bridgeport, Conn. Before they could board a train, however, a squad of officers interfered, and took them and three women to the police station in the patrol wagon.

Parents and relatives of the children, who ranged in age from 6 to 12 years, hurried to police headquarters and demanded to know what right the police had to interfere. After a brief conference with Marshal Sullivan the parents decided that they would not send their children away, and returned with them to Methuen.

According to the police, the fathers and mothers of the children, including those who were to have been sent to Connecticut yesterday afternoon, did not understand the situation, and in some cases have been prevailed upon to allow their children to be sent under misrepresentation.

All the mills in this city were closed yesterday on account of the holiday. The I. W. W. members conducted a secret house to house canvass during the day, and talked with those who already have returned to work, begging them again to join the ranks of the strikers.

The Central Labor Union strike committee held several conferences during the day with the various skilled crafts which come under the jurisdiction of the union. A campaign for augmenting the ranks of the union was inaugurated and severan hundred received membership cards.

The I. W. W. leaders declare that the free speech fight in Manchester has been won and that the authorities will allow speeches on the common in that city.

"We have frightened the authorities into giving us the right of free speech in Manchester," declared Organizer Thompson last night. "Why, they have not only given us the use of the common, but have erected a platform for us and shovelled the snow off. We would have flooded their jails with Industrial Workers if they had not seen fit to give in. We had 5000 volunteers ready to pour into Manchester at the word and could have obtained 5000 more if the first number failed to persuade them."

The military patrols were withdrawn from the residential districts last night for the first time in several weeks. The guard was still maintained about the mills, however, and the soldiers resumed their street patrol today.

The police patrol of the city has been doubled, a special officer accompanying every regular patrolman.

POLITICIANS SURE OF HIS CANDIDACY

They Are Awaiting Formal Declaration by Roosevelt

New York, Feb. 23.—Theodore Roosevelt returned to New York after his invasion of President Taft's home state—Ohio—apparently very much pleased with the reception he had received from party leaders as well as rank and file.

While the former president refused to make any comment upon his statement to W. F. Elrick in Cleveland that his "hat is in the ring," nevertheless the assurance was interpreted by politicians in New York to mean that he is out in the open for his fight for President Taft's seat.

It is now expected that Roosevelt's answer to the request of eight governors to know where he stands upon the question of accepting the presidential nomination, which is to be made Monday, will be a formal declaration of his candidacy.

General Miles Finds That Man Dead on Street Is His Brother

Washington, Feb. 23.—Lieutenant General Nelson A. Miles, U. S. A., retired, was motoring along Pennsylvania avenue last night, when a man walking briskly through the twilight in Lafayette park, opposite the White House, crumpled down in a heap, then sprawled on the pathway.

General Miles left his car to peer over the heads of the crowd which gathered.

"It's my brother," said the general, when he saw the upturned face. Then he took the body up in his arms and carried it to his automobile.

Daniel C. Miles was the man's name. The coroner said his heart had failed.

FRECKLES

By Gene Stratton-Porter

COPYRIGHT, 1904, BY DOUBLEDAY, PAGE & CO.

SYNOPSIS.

Freckles, a homeless boy, is hired by Boss McLean to guard the expensive timber in the Limberlost from timber thieves.

Freckles does his work faithfully, makes friends with the birds and yearns to know more about nature. He lives with Mr. and Mrs. Duncan.

He resolves to get books and educate himself. He becomes interested in a huge pair of vultures and calls his bird friends his "chickens."

Some of the trees he is guarding are worth $1,000 each. Freckles' books arrive. He receives a call from Wessner.

Wessner attempts to bribe Freckles to betray his trust, and Freckles whips him. McLean overhears them and witnesses the fight.

Freckles' honesty saves a precious tree. He finds the nest of the vultures and is visited by a beautiful young girl.

She calls Freckles McLean's son. Freckles calls her "the angel" and helps the Bird Woman in taking photographs. McLean promises to adopt Freckles.

Freckles and the angel become very friendly. Assisted by the Bird Woman, they drive Wessner and Black Jack, timber thieves, from the Limberlost.

McLean fears more trouble, but Freckles insists upon being the sole guard of the timber. Freckles calls upon the angel's father.

The angel receives him as her equal, and her father is kind. Mrs. Duncan has exciting adventures in the Limberlost.

The Bird Woman and the angel again visit Freckles, and Freckles falls in love with the angel. The angel kisses him.

Freckles is bound and gagged by Black Jack's gang, and the timber thieves start felling a very valuable tree.

Wessner is to kill Freckles after the tree is stolen. The angel makes a daring effort to save Freckles and the tree.

McLean's men, notified by the angel, rush to save Freckles. All the timber thieves except Black Jack are captured.

Freckles guards the angel against Black Jack's vengeance. He tells McLean of his hopeless love for the angel.

Black Jack is killed by a rattlesnake. The Bird Woman gets a photograph of the baby vulture. Freckles and the angel find a valuable tree.

The tree falls, and in an effort to save the angel from death Freckles is struck and very badly injured. He appears to be dying.

The angel learns that her love alone will save him. She stifles her pride and practically proposes marriage to him.

Freckles refuses to accept her sacrifice, because he is homeless and nameless. The angel learns that Lord O'More of Ireland is seeking his lost nephew.

With perfect control the angel dropped Lord O'More's card on the tray, whipped past his servant and stood before his lordship.

"Good morning," she said with tense politeness.

Lord O'More glanced her over with amused curiosity until her color began to deepen and her blood to run hotly.

"Well, my dear," he said at last, "how can I serve you?"

Instantly the angel bristled. She had been so shielded in the midst of almost entire freedom, owing to the circumstances of her life, that the words and the look appealed to her as almost insulting. She lifted her head with a proud gesture.

"I am not your 'dear,'" she said, with slow distinctness. "There isn't a thing in the world you can do for me. I came here to see if I could do something—a very great something—for you; but if I don't like you I won't do it!"

There was a silken rustle and a beautiful woman with cheeks of cherry bloom, hair of jet and eyes of pure Irish blue, moved to Lord O'More's side and, catching his arm, shook him impatiently.

"Terence! Have you lost your senses?" she cried. "Didn't you understand what the child said? Look at her face! See what she has!"

"I beg your pardon," he said. "The fact is, I am leaving Chicago sorely disappointed. It makes me bitter and reckless. I thought it was some more of those queer, useless people that have thrust themselves on me constantly, and I was careless. Forgive me and tell me why you came."

"I will if I like you," said the angel stoutly, "and if I don't I won't!"

"But I began all wrong, and now I don't know how to make you like me," said his lordship, with sincere penitence in his tone.

The angel looked into the beautiful woman's face.

"Are you his wife?" she asked.

"Yes," said the woman, "I am his wife."

"Well," said the angel judicially, "the Bird Woman says no one in the whole world knows all a man's bignesses and all his littlenesses as his wife does. What you think of him ought to do for me. Do you like him?"

"Better than any one in the whole world," said Lady O'More promptly.

The angel mused a second, and then her legal tinge came to the fore again.

"Yes, but have you any one you could like better if he wasn't all right?" she persisted.

"I have three of his sons, two little daughters, a father, mother and several brothers and sisters," came the quick reply.

"And you like him best?" persisted the angel with finality.

"I love him so much that I would give up every one of them with dry eyes, if by so doing I could save him," said Lord O'More's wife.

"Oh!" cried the angel. "Oh, my!"

She lifted her clear eyes to Lord O'More's and shook her head.

"She never, never could do that!" she said. "But it's a mighty big thing to your credit that she thinks she could. I guess I'll tell you why I came."

She laid down the paper and touched the portrait.

"When you were just a boy, did people call you Freckles?" she asked.

"Dozens of good fellows all over Ireland and the continent are doing it today," answered Lord O'More.

The angel's face lighted with her most beautiful smile.

"I was sure of it," she said winningly. "That's what we call him, and he is so like you. I doubt if any one of those three boys of yours are more so. But it's been twenty years. Seems to me you've been a long time coming!"

Lord O'More caught the angel's wrists and his wife slipped her arms about her.

"Steady, my girl!" said the man's voice hoarsely. "Don't make me think you've brought word of the boy at this last hour unless you know surely."

"It's all right," said the angel. "We have him, and there's no chance of a mistake. If I hadn't gone to that home for his little clothes and heard of you and been hunting you and had met you on the street, or anywhere, I should have stopped you and asked you who you were just because you are so like him. It's all right. I can tell you where Freckles is; but whether you deserve to know—that's another matter!"

Lord O'More did not hear her. He dropped back in his chair and, covering his face, burst into those terrible sobs that shake and rend a strong man. Lady O'More hovered over him, weeping.

"Umph! Looks pretty fair for Freckles," muttered the angel. "Lots of things can be explained. Now perhaps they can explain this."

They did explain so fully that in a few minutes the angel was on her feet, hurrying Lord and Lady O'More to reach the hospital.

"You said Freckles' old nurse knew his mother's picture instantly," said the angel. "I want that picture and the bundle of little clothes."

Lady O'More gave them into her hands.

The likeness was a large miniature painted on ivory, with a frame of beaten gold, and the face that looked out of it was of extreme beauty and surpassing sweetness. Surrounded by masses of dark hair was a delicately cut face, with big eyes. In the upper part of it there was no trace of Freckles, but the lips curving in a smile were his very own. The angel gazed as if she could never leave off. Then with a quivering breath she laid the portrait aside and reached both arms for Lord O'More's neck.

"That will save Freckles' life and insure his happiness," she said positively. "Thank you, oh, thank you for coming!"

She kissed and hugged him and then the wife who had come with him. She opened the bundle of yellow and brown linen and gave just a glance at the texture and work. Then she gathered the little clothes and the picture to her heart and led the way to the cab.

Ushering Lord and Lady O'More into the reception room, she said to McLean, "Please go call up my father and ask him to come on the first train."

She swung the door after him.

"These are Freckles' people," she said to the Bird Woman. "You can find out about each other. I'm going to him."

And she was gone.

The nurse left the room quietly as the angel entered, still carrying the bundle and the picture. When they were alone the angel turned to Freckles and saw that the crisis was, indeed, at hand.

"Angel," he panted. "Oh, angel! Did you get them? Are they white? Are the little stitches there? Oh, angel! Did me mother love me?"

The words seemed to leap from his burning lips. The angel dropped the bundle on the bed and laid the picture, face down, across his knees. She gently pushed his head to the pillow and caught his arms in a firm grasp.

"Yes, dear heart," she said with fullest assurance. "No little clothes were ever whiter. I never in all my life saw such dainty, fine little stitches, and, as for loving you, no boy's mother ever loved him more!"

A great trembling seized Freckles.

"Sure? Are you sure?" he urged, with clicking teeth.

"I know," said the angel firmly. "And, Freckles, while you rest and be glad I want to tell you a little story. When you feel stronger we will look at the clothes together. They are here. They are all right. But when I was at the home getting them I heard of some people that were hunting a lost boy. I went to see them, and what they told me was all so exactly like what might have happened to you that I must tell you. Then you'll see that things could be very different from what you have always tortured yourself with thinking."

Freckles lay quiet under her touch, but he did not hear a word that she was saying until his roving eyes rested on her face; and he immediately noticed a remarkable thing. For the first time she was talking to him and doing everything but meet his eyes. That was not like the angel at all. It was the delight of hearing her speak that she always looked one squarely in the face and with perfect frankness.

"—and he was a sour, grumpy old man," she was saying. "He always had been spoiled, because he was an only son and had a title and a big estate. He would have just his way, no matter about his sweet little wife, or his boys, or any one. So when his eldest son fell in love with a beautiful girl with a title, the very girl of all the world his father wanted him to, and added a big adjoining estate to his, why, that pleased him mightily.

"Then he went and ordered his other son to marry a poky kind of a girl that nobody liked to get another big estate on the other side, and that was different. That was all the world different, because the eldest son had been in love all his life with the girl he married, and, oh, Freckles, it's no wonder, for I saw her! She's a royal beauty and she has the sweetest way.

"But that poor younger son, he had been in love with the village vicar's daughter all his life. That's no wonder either, for she was more beautiful yet. She could sing like the angels, but she hadn't a cent. She loved him to death, too, if he was bony and freckled and red haired—I don't mean that! They didn't say what color his hair was, but his father's must have been the reddest ever, for when he found out about them, and it wasn't anything so terrible, he just caved!

"The old man went to see the girl—the pretty one with no money, of course—and he hurt her feelings until she ran away. She went over to London and began studying music. Soon she grew to be a lovely singer, and then she joined a company and came to this country.

NO BENEFIT TO PUBLIC

Government Ownership of Telegraph Lines Disapproved by President

Washington, Feb. 23.—President Taft informed congress that he did not approve of Postmaster General Hitchcock's suggestion that the government buy and operate all telegraph lines as an adjunct of the postal system. Mr. Taft said that if it could be shown that the public would benefit by receiving service at a less price than is now paid he might think differently of the plan, but that he was not convinced such would be the effect.

The president offered the following recommendations: Parcels post; increase of 1 cent a pound in second class postage rate; placing all postmasters in the classified service; postal savings system in 40,000 fourth class offices.

OLD POSTAL CLERK QUITS

Never Absent or Reprimanded In Sixty-Two Years' Service

Chicago, Feb. 23.—James G. Kerr, 84 years old, for sixty-two years a postoffice clerk, handed in his resignation to Postmaster Campbell.

Besides being the oldest man both both in years and length of service in the postoffice service, the pioneer is known as the "model clerk." He has never been absent a single day in the sixty-two years of his service and has never been reprimanded by his superiors.

OSPINA IS RECALLED

Colombian Government Recognizes Fact That Envoy Made a Mistake

Washington, Feb. 23.—The Colombian government has recalled Pedro Nel Ospina, Colombian minister to the United States. This action was a result of Ospina's note to the American state department, stating that a visit by Secretary Knox to his country would be "inopportune" at the present time.

Though the state department had decided not to ask for the recall of Ospina, the action of the government of Colombia in recalling its minister is regarded here as having relieved a very tense situation. It would hardly have been possible for state department officials, despite the obligations imposed upon them by diplomatic usage, to regard him as being in the same position as envoys who have not merited recall.

PART OF ONE BODY FOUND

One Track In Hoosac Tunnel May Be Cleared of Debris Today

North Adams, Mass., Feb. 23.—Daring miners and wrecking crews braved the hot, suffocating interior of Hoosac tunnel and succeeded in finding a portion of the body of one of the four victims of the collision of last Tuesday between a freight and passenger train. From a watch found on the body it is believed that the victim was Archer L. Simonds, engineer of the electric engine of the passenger train. The lower part of his body and his head were burned off.

From the way the work of clearing away the debris is now progressing, it is believed that it will be possible to run a train through the tunnel on the westbound track today.

IN THE RAY CASE

Army Generals Who Will Be Asked to Tell About Secrets

PAPERS LOST BY MESSENGER

Some of Those Relating to Ray Case Turn Up

Washington, Feb. 23.—New light has been thrown on the Major Beecher B. Ray case by the finding of the "missing papers" relating to charges against him. Secretary of War Stimson has sent some of the missing documents to the Helm committee on expenditures in the war department that is investigating the political activity of Ray.

The papers, it was explained, were lost through the mistake of a messenger. Several papers of greater importance than those that have been presented are believed to have been lost.

The "missing papers" consist chiefly of cablegrams that passed between Major General Bell when he was chief of staff of the army and the superior officer of Ray in the Philippines in 1908. The replies indicate the influences that prevented a court martial to investigate charges against Ray. It is disclosed in the correspondence that Ray was ordered to the United States, where he became politically active, notwithstanding the recommendations of his superiors that he be retained in the Philippines for courtmartial growing out of a charge that he had signed a false certificate for $40.

While Ray was testifying before Colonel French, inspector general of the islands, in relation to the charge, he said:

"I know I am honored and respected by the public men of the country, and I have a letter in my possession now from the next President of the United States, in which he says: 'The highest compliment I can pay you is for your honesty and efficiency.'"

General Bliss is one of the officers whom the Helm committee intends interrogating before placing Major General Ainsworth, retired adjutant general of the army, on the stand. The object of the committee is to ascertain whatever Bliss can tell as to what became of the missing documents and papers in the Ray case.

Undoubtedly General Edwards will be called to explain why the papers found in his office were not in the files of the war department. In all probability Brigadier General Mills, now commanding the department of the gulf at Atlanta, will be invited before the Helm committee to testify. He twice wrote letters of reprimand to Ray.

QUINCY TIES NEWTON HIGH

Two Overtime Periods Fail to Change Result

OTHER GAMES

Had it not been for the agility and wonderful all round work displayed by Harry Trask, the clever and plucky centre on the Quincy High basketball team, the members of that aggregation would have gone down to defeat at the hands of the formidable Newton High contingency in the gymnasium of the local school yesterday afternoon. As it was the game lasted through two twenty minute halves and two overtime periods of five minutes each and at the end of this fifty minutes of play the score stood 16 to 16.

Opportunities were afforded both sides to annex a victory during the game, and while advantage was taken of them on a number of occasions, ill fortune seemed to be a contending factor and as a result baskets were missed by exceptionally small margins, so small that for a time the 500 spectators in attendance seemed breathless through either fear or gladness—fear lest the local boys might be made to taste the spoils of defeat—and gladness that Captain Chapman and his warriors might prove their superiority over their opponents and thus advance themselves one pinnacle more in their onward struggle for the championship honors of Eastern Massachusetts.

At the end of the time usually determined as the finish of the game, the score was tie, each team having 14 points to its credit. A conference was held between the coaches and captains of both teams, together with the referee and it was decided to play five minutes in an endeavor to settle the question. These five minutes brought forth playing of a most gruelling nature. The struggle for triumph during this first overtime period was indeed a warm and excited one, yet at the same time the greatest kind of sportsmanship was displayed throughout. But neither team was able to exhibit its superior prowess and the score was still 14 to 14 at the termination of the five minutes.

Still another conference was held and this time it was decided to call the game off, on the expiration of five more minutes, irrespective of whether either team was in the lead. This period was the scene of the same sort of playing at had characterized the first overtime period and while the enthusiasm of the fans present was intensified to its greatest degree, all were compelled to rest satisfied with the ag reement that had been made and to feel contented at seeing same, pronounced to have been the best and most exciting ever played in local circles, come to an end without either team being adjudged the victor.

The local players lost no time, right at the outset, in getting down to action. Trask secured a basket on a free try and when he caged the first one from the floor a few seconds afterwards, the applause that greeted his performance was thunderous and the Quincy rooters immediately began to entertain high hopes that the Granite City lads would easily carry off the honors of the day. But such was not the case, for the visitors were no less quick to get into action, and when the game was in progress for five minutes, both teams were playing pretty evenly.

Towards the middle of the first half, the local boys assumed equal footing with their opponents and the score was 7 to 7. But it was here the real turning point of the game was established, for by great team work, Quincy emerged to the front a moments later with a 9 to 7 lead. A basket by Newton High made the score tie and another basket by the same combination placed Newton ahead by a score of 11 to 9 just as the referee sounded the whistle for the end of the first period.

Th crowd almost became frantic, as the members of both teams strutted into the court to commence the second half.

Hardly had the whistle been blown when the pass work of the local players was greatly in evidence and Finlay was soon seen to place the ball through the net in a most spectacular manner, thereby making the score again stand tie, this time to the tune of 11 to 11. Nash, the formidable right forward for the Newton quintet, was called upon for a free try and responded by getting a basket incidently putting his taeam ahead to the key note of 12 to 11. Once more the local boys took possession of the long end of the score, when Finlay duplicated his previous performance, and obtained a basket from the floor in splendid style, amid the widely evidenced hilarity of the over enthusiastic rooters. Nash again came to the rescue and lowered the local players, lead by one point, by showing his unfailing ability to get baskets from fouls. Trask likewise was called upon to officiate in the same capacity as foul shooter and proved himself equal to the occasion by placing the ball cleanly through the loop hole, giving his team a lead, which was overcome two minutes later, when Nash was credited with another goal from free try. The second half ended at this juncture and the score was 14 to 14.

As has been stated above, neither team was able to score in the first overtime period. - Twice did Finlay hit the basket with the ball in a manner that seemed to indicate that Quincy High would do some more scoring and twice did the awe stricken fans see the ball roll around the rim and drop onto the floor. But Newton also was unable to take advantage of a chance to win the game, when Nash, for the second time, during the thirteen chances allotted him, failed to get a goal from free try. The game, at this stage, resolved into a most crucial struggle and the gymnasium of Quincy High never before presented a spectacle of more lively animated onlookers. Nor has any athletic combination of Quincy High ever contested more vigorously in conflict.

To endeavor to depict or describe the scene that one could behold during the deciding period, is beyond the ability of the writer to describe, and it is dubious if any pen could require justice to the same, for it is sure to be treasured up in the minds of those present, in such a way that all writings of the game will be put in the shade on the resurrection of its memory.

In the second overtime period, the same even calibre of the teams was demonstrated. There were three minutes to play, and Nash was called upon to try for a goal from foul. For the third time during the entire game, he failed to covet the point that would put his team in the lead, but the failure in this respect was productive of much good, for Chivers, who had been guarded closely by Johnson throughout, recovered the ball and registered a basket from the floor, thereby making Newton High a 16 to 14 leader. The outcome now appeared dubious, but all dubiousness was dispelled in the last minute of play when Trask proved himself the hero of the game, by caging the last basket of the game on a pretty pass from Finlay, making the score stand 16 to 16. There was nothing further doing in the line of scoring and the game ended with this score.

The two teams will play off the tie next Friday afternoon at Newton, and it is needless to say that a second warm contest is sure to be in order.

The conspicuous stars of the game were Trask and Nash. The former obtained 12 of the 16 points made by his team, getting 4 baskets from the floor and an equal number from free tries. Nash saved his team from defeat by securing 10 goals from free tries out of 13 chances.

Holmes played a stellar game in the backfield, preventing his opponent, the star Nash, from getting a basket from the floor. Hyatt also must be commended for his work as he allowed the great Finlay to get but two baskets from the floor.

A noticeable incident of the game happened about the middle of the second half when Lyons, the elongated centre of the Newton team, collided with referee Woodlock. The latter was forced to retire with a nose bleed. But previously he had dropped his whistle on the floor. Lyons picked it up, however, as Woodlock made his exit to the dressing rom, and blew it for time out. In so doing the displayed great nerve, for had he desired he could have allowed the game to continue. Besids, he himself was in a fine position to try for a goal.

Between the halves, the Quincy High second team experienced little difficulty in taking the measure of the Newton High second, the score being 19 to 4. All the players on the local team showed up exceptionally well, and the losers failed to register a basket from the floor.

WHIST TOURNAMENT.

There was a good attendance Wednesday evening at the regular whist tournament of the Granite City club. Eight tables were in play and after the usual twenty-five hands, chicken pies, etc., were served. The best scores were made by George P. Meade and Ernest L. Saunders.

THE PIXIES.

February twenty-second was certainly a gala day for the children at the Cochato club, Braintree. The entertainment, which was under the direction of Mrs. George Williams, Mrs. F. Eugene Dyer, and Mrs. John A. Barbour, was certainly novel and greatly enjoyed by all. Robert P. McLauchlan of Arlington was the entertainer and he did so in every sense of the word. It was called the Pixies, which is but another word for fairy. These Pixies perform on a portable stage which had entire electrical attachments. This is anew entertainment and has been in vogue a few years.

The entertainment was discovered by accident. Mr. McLauchlan first performing for the benefit of his friends. They were so mystified by his clever performance that he decided it would be a good thing for the Lyceum stage. By his secret invention only perfected after years of tedious toil the puppets assume apparently at will the mast lifelike positions that it is hard to feel they are not alive. The entertainment was announced by the great polyanthus parrot, who holds the position of master of ceremonies among the Pixies. He introduced a performing bear which greatly interested the children, a "duckdonk" captured by Roosevelt. There were exhibitions of dancing, graceful fancy and groles which delighted all.

After the delightful entertainment, dancing was enjoyed by the children, followed by delicious ice cream and cake, afgter which dancing was resumed by the children and grownups as well, it was considered a very pleasant and profitable entertainment and long to be remembered. There were many people present from Quincy.

GLAD TO GET HOME

Arrival of Shuster, Whose Activities Nearly Precipitated War

New York, Feb. 23.—W. M. Shuster, erstwhile treasurer general of Persia, who was the storm centre of the controversy between Persia and Russia, arrived here on the steamship George Washington. He said he was delighted to get back to the United States.

H. P. Topakyan, consul general of Persia in New York, went down the bay on a revenue cutter to greet Shuster, not as an American, but as a Persian official. After the consul general had welcomed Shuster back to American soil, the responsibility of Persia for his safety ceased. Topakyan will now cable to his government news of the safe arrival of the former treasurer general, and the relations of Shuster and Persia will have ceased entirely.

James S. Whiting, Looking Backward to Days of Town Government Recalls Hand Tubs

Recalls Town Meeting Days and the Famous Wisdom Corner

Editor Quincy Ledger:

Advocating town government for Wollaston reminds me of the golden era of Quincy's town government when at the adjourned annual town meetings the "Wisdom Corner" blossomed forth with all that was best in the town's citizenship—brilliant speakers and keen, level headed business men who took intense delight in appearing before the voters at these annual roundups, each espousing his pet article in the warrant. And best of all there stood the sturdy figure of John Quincy Adams, the moderator of the meetings. Short thick set, brief of speech and as impartial as a Justice of the Supreme Court in his rulings, he governed the meetings with a mild sort of despotism.

And the "Wisdom Corner"! With what awe we children gazed upon the town patriarchs who were seated in what, to our childish minds, was a veritable Holy of Holies. Each section of the town was represented by its best speakers, Wollaston's advocates usually being its founder Geo. F. Pinkham and H. T. Whitman, F. L. Hayes, J. P. Quincy, Jason G. Whiting, Q. A. Faunce, William L. Faxon and Charles R. Sherman; the "Centre" held its own with the big guns like Charles Francis Adams, Jr., Charles H. Porter, William B. Rice, Peter and Sigourney Butler, Henry H. Faxon of whom it was said that he spoke 72 times at one town meeting, and the writer having been present at that meeting has never doubted those figures. But Mr. Faxon was always brim full of statistics and when he drew the familiar bunch of papers from his inner coat pocket, we boys knew that somebody was going to be cornered. And then there were Theophilus King, William N. Eaton, William A. Hodges, Charles Marsh, Benjamin F. Curtis, Elias A. Perkins, "Joe" Robertson, Lewis Bass and Charles H. Foster.

The South and West sections of the town had as their chief spokesmen, Edwin W. Marsh, John Q. A. and George Harvey Field, George Cahill, Jonas Shackley, Seth Dewing, Jr., Ensign S. Fellows, William G. A. Pattee and Joseph H. Vobel and the Point Joseph L. Whiton, Herbert M. Federhen and James H. Slade. The venerable Dr. William B. Duggan and John A. Duggan usually spoke for North Quincy.

When the article in the warrant was reached "to see if the town would apropriate one thousand dollars for the enforcement of the laws relating to the sale of intoxicating liquors" the heavy artillery opened fire and the battle would rage fiercely.

In 1875 and thereabouts the town government was in a way a social affair, everybody knew everyone else and the town's business was carried on with but little friction. The care of the highways was divided into districts, each being in charge of a surveyor, the West and South Districts usually being under the surveyorship of John Q. A. Field; the Centre and Point under Ensign S. Fellows and the Wollaston and North (Atlantic) under Edmund B. Taylor. These surveyors were also Selectmen and Overseers of the Poor.

Who can ever forget the Fire department in its halcyon days with "Wash" French (to speak of him as Washington was insurbordinate) as Chief Engineer and incidentally "Engineer" of the "W. M. French Hose, No. 1." And the reel had a good likeness of its Chief and engineer painted upon it. What a fine man he was,—kind and genial, and withal an excellent fire fighter. Then there was the hand tub "Niagara No. 1" with Michael Welch as engineer and forty-seven husky men at the brakes, each drawing the munificent salary of ten dollars per year. But the greatest one of them all and the forty-eighth member was the Steward and he drew fifty dollars. The poor old Niagara came to an untimely end by being destroyed by fire in 1875. The "Tiger No. 2" was located on School street about opposite the McDonald residence. At this period Amos M. Litchfield was the engineer. At West Quincy James H. Elcock was the engineer of the "Granite No. 3" and at Quincy Point there was located the "Vulture No. 4" with Geo. B. Pray as engineer. The "Fireman's Aid" Hook and Ladder No. 1's house was on Canal street near Hancock. Capt. E. A. Spear was the engineer.

It was a great day for any of us boys when we could hold an engineer's coat at a town muster. And if Chief French turned his coat over to a boy he felt as much elated as though a degree of knighthood had been conferred upon him. The Nia-

BODY OF MARGARET BALL FOUND ON HANCOCK STREET

Boys Find Badly Decomposed Body of Woman Behind Stone Wall on Forrest Estate

Missing From Home of Daughter Since Jan. 4

While wandering about in quest of old copper, in the vicinity of the barn situated about one hundred feet to the right of the home of Mrs. Honora Forrest, 809 Hancock street, directly opposite Merry Mount Park, about 10 o'clock this morning, Arnold Cook, age 6, of 33 Newton street, his brother Leon Cook, age 12, and Spencer Gray, age 10 of 18 Newton street came across the body of Mrs. Margaret Ball, who disappeared suddenly from the home of her daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth Brooks, of 436 Hancock street, Wednesday, January 4. Ever since that time diligent searches have been made to locate the missing woman, but up to this morning all efforts to locate her have proven fruitless.

It was Arnold Cook who first espied the body and thinking that it was the form of a "drunken man," so informed his companions. A look at the decomposed form revealed that it was a woman and the youths lost no time in notifying the residents in the immediate vicinity, who in turn informed the police. The police were quick in getting to the scene of the dead body and it was identified, from the descriptions that had been given as that of Mrs. Ball. This identification was later verified by relatives.

About four feet away from the barn, on the Hancock street side, is a brick wall, which stands about four feet high, and it was between this wall and the side of the barn that the body was found. Evidently the missing woman had been strolling about in this section and had fallen over the wall. On the top of the wall were a number of branches of a tree and in these branches were discerned some of the hair of the dead woman. The remains were view by Medical Examiner Frederick E. Jones, who concluded that the woman evidently had fallen over the branches down between the corner of the barn and wall where her body was found.

After the body had been viewed by the medical examiner, it was removed to Hall's undertaking rooms. The dead woman was clad in black garments, and besides the body was found a black hat and black cape, all which answered the description of the missing woman. The body had been covered up with snow ever since last January and the melting of the same disclosed the dead body this morning. Every conceiveable spot was searched in the vicinity of Merry Mount Park, where it had been said the woman was last seen, but none of the seekers ever dreamed that the body would be found in the vicinity of the Forrest barn.

When Mrs. Ball disappeared on January 4, her relatives say that she left home with the intention of going to a drug store. Great anxiety was felt by her daughter and relatives when she failed to re-appear and searches were immediately made in the vicinity of the Montclair Golf links and Wollaston Beach. The weather at the time was exceedingly cold and it was feared that the woman had frozen to death. Only recently her son-in-law seemed to be possessed with the idea that the dead woman's body would be found in Black Creek and had made arrangements to conduct a search as soon as the ice melted.

Mrs. Ball came to America several years ago and always made her home with her daughter. She was in her 66th year, was light complexioned, weighed 144 pounds and was 5 feet 6 inches tall. Her bady was badly putrescent. Both her eyes were completely gone and she was entirely black with decomposition. At the time of her disappearance she was apparently in the best of health and seemed to be in a happy mode. The place where her body was found was situated about one mile from her residence.

CAMPAIGN TO RAISE $5,000

A campaign to raise $5,000 for current expenses for the Y. M. C. A., starts Sunday when appeals for funds will be made in all the evangelical churches of the city, by out of town speakers. E. W. Pierce of the Boston Y. M. C. A., will speak at the Atlantic Memorial church, E. G. Gay, of Lawrence, formerly of Quincy, at the Wollaston M. E. Dr. L. L. Doggett of Springfield at the Wollaston Congregational, and Hon. George L. Richards of Malden at the Wollaston Baptist.

Other speakers are: Bethany church Andrew Chase of the State Committee Y. M. C. A.; Washington Street Congregational, R. W. Barry of Gloucester; United Presbyterian, A. C. Estes of Charlestown; First Presbyterian, Theophilus King, of Quincy; Hall Place M. E., Guy Mitchell and at the Calvary Baptist, S. A. Davidson of Brockton.

Most of the speakers come from out of town and volunteer their services to help along the good work. The Y. M. C. A., is doing a grand work among the young men of the city and no difficulty should be experienced in raising the sum required.

HOLBROOK—SPOONER.

Miss Harriet Louise Spooner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George F. Spooner and Mr. Frederick A. Holbrook, were united in marriage Wednesday evening, at the home of the bride, 64 Revere road, in the presence of a large party of relatives and friends. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Charles P. Marshall, of the Point church, the double ring service being used. Mrs. G. R. White, presided at the piano and as the bridal party entered, she played Mendelssohn's march. The bride was attended by Miss Pearl Hayden, and the groom by E. Bartlett Spooner, brother of the bride, who was given in marriage by her father.

The bride was becomingly gowned in white satin, with pearl trimmings, and she carried a bouquet of white sweet peas.

A reception followed the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Holbrook being assisted in receiving by the bride's parents. The ushers were Miss Flora Park of Middleboro, and Miss Flossie Pratt of Quincy.

RECEPTION AT THE WOODWARD

Juniors Guests of Seniors at Masquerade and Play

"MAID TO ORDER"

A pretty masquerade party given by the members of the graduating class of the Woodward Institute to the juniors, was held in the school assembly hall, Friday evening, and largely attended by students of both classes. The affair took the form of a masquerade dancing party and play entitled "Maid to Order," both of which furnished great enjoyment and charm throughout the entire evening.

The grand march took place at eight o'clock followed by dancing, at the conclusion of which the dancers unmasked. Miss Amy Fallon and Miss Alice Lakin rendered music for the dancing. Those in the receiving line included Mr. and Mrs. Horace W. Rice and Miss Mary Dinegan.

The cast of the play was as follows:—

Miss Belmont, principal of the young girls' boarding school—Miss Ethel Kolstad.

Two teachers, Miss Poor and Miss Atkinson—Miss Helen Croucher and Miss Marion Whitmarsh.

Two pupils, Jennie Bangs and Bettie Gray—Miss Esther Dasha and Miss Mary LeCount.

Miss Oglethorpe, guest—Miss Esther Beckford.

Scene — Miss Belmont's private room.

Miss Belmont was to entertain Miss Oglethorpe and as her maid was called away unexpectedly one of the pupils acted as maid in her place, causing much fun and merriment but all terminated happily.

All took their parts very effectively and elicited much applause.

In the masquerade the costumes were very unique, striking and picturesque. The young ladies are to be congratulated upon a very fine entertainment.

Among the masquerade costumes were Greek, Spanish, clown, college girls, Chinamen, Circus girls, gypsy women, Indians, and Buster Browns. Five of the girls were attired as men and they were devoted in their attentions to the fair sex.

During the intermission refreshments were served. The affair was in charge of the entire senior class, assisted by the teachers of the school.

CHILDREN IN SONG AND STORY

The Junior Christian Endeavor society connected with Bethany church gave an entertainment in the chapel, Friday afternoon from four to six o'clock. The piece, entitled "Children in Song and Story," was represented by the following children: Beatrice Sherman, Rhoda Johnson, Theo Rice, Esther Boyson, Hazel Sabean, Sarah McPherson, Carl Sidelinger, Phillips Innes, Allen Gragg, Isabel Olsen, Ebba Loddengard, Vera Bergfors, Annie Holmes, Selma Keiswetter and Flora McPherson, who was the leader.

The different parts were carried out very prettily and all did exceedingly well. Miss Florence Sabean, presided at the piano, and sang very sweetly, "Our little Girl, Don't you cry." Miss Esther Beckford read a story, "A Day in Vacation," which was very amusing.

At the close of the entertainment, the "Sunshine Committee," of boys, who had solicited candy, had a home-made candy sale, which netted $2.08 for the treasury.

There are sixty-five members connected with the Junior Christian Endeavor Society with Miss Augusta Crane as their very efficient leader. Miss Crane was ably assisted in arranging this entertainment by Mrs. Charles Gragg.

Before leaving for home all united in singing the following patriotic songs; Star Spangled Banner; Battle Hymn of the Republic and My Country 'tis of Thee; Miss Sabean at the piano.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

If the bath tub trust men try for an immunity bath much longer, they will get into hot water.

We suspect that Aunt Delia had not been in the White house more than a day before discovering that the kitchen stove needed blacking.

After careful reading of the Congressional proceedings, we fail to see anything about the advocates of a subsidy. Have they subsided?

King George has made his speech from the throne, but he will have to make less stereotyped remarks if he expects the boys in the gallery to stop eating peanuts and listen.

James J. Hill thinks competition will endure indefinitely. He seems to forget how much easier it is to make profits out of the consumer than out of an alert business rival.

Washington's birthday may be a perfectly safe subject for congressmen, but they must discuss some more recent matters if they hope to quiet old Pro Bono Publico in the country papers.

In view of the outcome of the Los Angeles cases, most people will feel that some more evidence than the headlines in the newspapers is necessary, to form an opinion on the 54 arrests on conspiracy charges.

There is no doubt but Lawyer Mackay in his letter in today's Ledger voices the sentiment of many of our residents. He is more honest in his mode of expression however, for he makes it public, coming out in print over his own signature while others grumble but do nothing to better conditions. It is often said that a grumbler gets nowhere, whereas the kicker gets results.

The advertisement of the Quincy Electric Light and Power Company in today's Ledger will be good reading to our residents, those using electricity and those hoping to in the future, for it means a 10 per cent reduction from the present price. While this is good for the consumer it means a big cut in the income of the Company but the difference will probably be more than made up in a few months as users will feel they can use the lights more freely and it will tend to bring the company many new customers..

Those building houses will be more apt to wire for electricity if the rate is reasonable. All in all it seems a wise move on the part of the Company and one that will work out to their advantage as well as to the consumer. It is said other reductions will follow if the present one works out as expected.

After the first of May, Quincy will only be paying a cent and a half more than Braintree which owns its own plant, and only three and a half cents more than the big Edison plant which sells at 10 cents per K. W.

THE SYMPATHY ARGUMENT.

"As Mr. Roosevelt can earn $1 a word by writing about Africa, the presidency ought to be passed on to some one more in need of it."

If a paragraph appeared in a newspaper embodying that idea in regard to Mr. Taft, Mr. Roosevelt, Mr. Bryan or Mr. Wilson, we take it that 90 per cent of the people would correctly regard it as intended in an ironical sense.

And yet substantially the same argument is very frequently heard in regard to many of our minor offices. A great many voters determine their support by the question as to which candidate needs the office the most to repair his fallen fortunes. They will take an office away from an efficient man, in order to give it to some one "who needs it."

Under such circumstances, is it any wonder that government costs us high through inefficiency and waste? Can a man who cannot succeed in his own business, do the public business in a way profitable to the public?

It is a pretty shallow kind of generosity that increases the cost of government to an entire community of hard working people, in order that one or two of these needy people may acquire an office for which they are not fitted, at the expense of others who equally need the public help.

Q.—Will you please explain the 16th verse of the 45th Psalm, "Instead of thy fathers shall be thy children, whom thou mayest make princes in all the earth." (J. W. A.)

Answer.—Considering the connecting verses, it becomes evident that this is one of the Messianic Psalms and is, in the main, a prophecy relating to the Church of Christ—the Bride class. The King's Daughter, the Bride of the King's Son, was to be formed of an elect class made up of Israelites, both those who were so by birth, and those (Gentiles) who by faith and adoption, should become the Seed of Abraham—Israelites indeed. (Romans ix, 6.) The "fathers" of this class (Romans xi, 28) were the patriarchs of old—Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Moses, etc. These are referred to by the Apostle Paul in Hebrews xi, 39, 40—"These all having obtained a good report through faith received not the promise, God having provided some better thing for us, that these without us should not be made perfect." The "better things" for the "us" class are the Heavenly honors and the Kingly powers and authority to be conferred upon the Bride, the "joint-heir' of the Son of God. These who now are "children," in the day of resurrection, will "make perfect" and give life to the "fathers." The relationship will then be reversed: the Father (Life-giver) will be the Christ, the Messiah, Jesus the Head and the Church, His Body; and the patriarchs, the fathers of Israel, will be the children.

TRAIN ACCOMMODATIONS.

Editor Daily Ledger:

The indifference of the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. Company to the rights of the people of Quincy had a fresh illustration Thursday afternoon. The day being a holiday, the officials had reason to expect increased travel to Boston, but instead of furnishing enough cars they pursued the Commodore Vanderbilt policy, as usual.

I was a passenger on the 1.22 train. Every seat in my car was taken and the aisle was literally crowded. Within ten feet of the rear door I counted three ladies and two children standing. When we left Wollaston a conductor elbowed and squeezed his way through, collecting tickets. I heard him remark that there were "plenty of cars in the rear," and as I had resolved to report conditions I decided to investigate fully and ascertain whether "plenty of cars" meant plenty of seats. I found it did not.

The first three cars that I passed through were in practically the same condition as the one I had left,—every seat being occupied and men, women and children standing in the aisles. It was not easy to work my way through the crowds, but I was determined to get all the facts. The fourth car I entered was the smoker. Every seat was filled except one and I concluded that this seat belonged to a man who was sitting on the arm of the seat in front, conversing with its occupants. There were no passengers in the aisle of this car, but quite a number were standing in the baggage compartment.

In the rear of the smoker was another car occupied by male passengers and one lady. Two or three of the men were smoking. This was the fifth car that I visited and the only one that had vacant seats. Seven seats were empty and there were six containing only one passenger each. I had no opportunity to investigate conditions in the cars ahead of the one I first boarded, but I was informed that they were crowded.

I am well aware, Mr. Editor, that it is considered a vain thing to agitate for better service from company whose policy is apparently to "get by" rather than give satisfaction, but if our citizens adopted the plan of calling attention through the press to every flagrant instance of injustice, the railroad commissioners might eventually take notice and do something for us. The same observations would apply to our efforts to get decent railway stations..

John D. Mackay.

The Why and Wherefore of it all

¶ A store's standing in its community is eventually fixed by the value of the service it renders to the people of that community.

¶ A store whose owner has spent 25 years in the study of Furniture and Home Furnishings ought to reflect the result of that knowledge.

¶ A store that day after day and week after week combines honesty of purpose and practice is not unworthy of your confidence.

¶ A store whose owner insists that every single customer—large or small—shall have the very best possible service.

¶ Whose every employee is heartily in sympathy with that policy and strong in support of it.

¶ Whose store is clean and up-to-date; whose stock is complete and carefully selected; whose prices are as low as the quality is high; whose terms are as easy as you wish—That's Kincaide's.

¶ That's why this Great Store has grown and grown and grown for over 18 years----and is still growing. We want your trade.

PROPOSED PLAN FOR ADDITION

One of the improtant matters called to the attention of the City Council by the Mayor at the last meeting was the need of enlarging City Hall, and recommending an appropriation of $3,500 for enlargement, according to a plan by the City Engineer. This plan calls for an addition 35 by 20 feet to be built on the rear of the building.

Starting from the northwest corner of the present main building the addition extends twenty feet toward the railroad tracks. Then commencing at the present toilet room addition, the new addition is to extend 35 feet toward Depot street. This addition will be used for the office of the City Engineer.

It is proposed to cut a door through the large window on the westerly side of the present office of the Engineer. This will lead into a small inclosed corridor from whic hentrance is had to the new office of the Engineer.

The plan also calls for the cutting of a door through the partition between the Mayor's office into the Engineer's office, which will be the office of the Mayor while the present office of the Mayor will be used as an office for the City Solicitor.

Both the Mayor and City Engineer have long been cramped for room and the proposed addition will provide ample accommodations for several years to come at a small outlay.

PENSION TOO LATE.

A dispatch from Washington says: Last May, Representative Curley introduced a bill to increase the pension of John N. Fox of 126 Franklin street, Quincy, to $50 a month. Fox was a member of Co. D, 1st Vt. Reg't., and in 1863 was captured and sent to Libby Prison. Yesterday in looking through a file of the Globe, Mr. Curley saw a notice of Mr. Fox' death.

Thursday morning Mr. Curley received a letter from the Committee on Invalid Pensions notifying him that the committee had favorably reported the bill to increase Mr. Fox' pension.

MABEL RICH WATTS.

Thursday morning at seven o'clock occurred the death of Mabel Rich Watts, wife of Harry M. Watts, of Phillips street, Wollaston.

Mrs. Watts was born in Boston in 1878, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sears Rich. In 1906 she was married to Harry M. Watts and together they took up their residence in Wollaston where they have recently erected a beautiful home. Her death comes as a shock to the community. She had a wide circle of friends in Wollaston and Boston and was loved and admired by those who knew her.

Hers was a sweet and gracious character, full of a wide and genuine sympathy for others; anxious to respond to every call of need. Of generous and unselfish nature her personality will not soon be forgotten nor her influence for good die with her. Her life possessed the quiet charm of simple unassuming goodness; loyal and devoted as a wife, loving and tender as a daughter, as a friend generous and true.

Mrs. Watts is survived by her husband Harry M. Watts, and her father and mother Mr. and Mrs. Sears Rich of Somerville.

The funeral will be held on Sunday at two o'clock at the home, Rev. William B. Ayers, minister of the Park and Downs church officiating.

NEW MUSIC.

Mrs. Exzilda M. Mathieson, a pretty Brockton woman of 28, has branched out in the musical world as a composer. She has just written a ballad, which her friends say is full of harmony and sure to make a hit. It is called "Where the Honeysuckles Bloom Around the Homestead." It deals with the tale of two parted sweethearts. The words are very affecting.

Until recently Mrs. Mathieson lived in Boston and vicinity. She has lived in both Dorchester and Somerville and was born in Cambridge. She is one of the famous Ratelle children.

Mrs. Mathieson's friends predict a great future for her. They believe that in a few years her compositions will be among the best sellers.

ACCORDED UNUSUAL HONOR

Key West, Fla., Feb. 24.—Secretary of State Knox sailed from Key West on board the cruiser Washington on a political mission that will take him, according to present arrangements, to the capitals of Central America, to Caracas, Venezuela, and possibly to Cartagena, Colombia, and also to various points in the West Indies.

When the secretary went on board he was accorded the unusual honor of a salute of nineteen guns. This is significant of the importance attached to Knox's mission by President Taft and the state department. Ordinarily this salute is given to cabinet officers only when they leave ship, but, acting upon special orders, it will be accorded Knox whenever he embarks or disembarks in a foreign port, and also upon his departure from the ship in American ports.

Mr. Knox is making this trip at the direction of the president, and European diplomats look upon it with more than passive interest. The secretary is going to the Carribbean for the purpose of solving diplomatic problems and acquiring more accurate information as to conditions in Central and northern South America.

It would be a bold prophet who pretended to forecast the far-reaching consequences of diplomacy initiated by the administration and undertaken by the state department. Apparently there is no cut and dried program of accomplishment, but it is no secret that both President Taft and Knox feel that a hugh enginnering feat that separates North and South America physically should and will, in its results, bind more closely the natural ties of the neighboring republics of the western hemisphere.

The Washington goes from here to Port Antonio, Jamaica, and the present itinerary will keep Knox away until some time in April. Most of this time his official home will be on board the Washington. The cruiser is prepared in every way for a trip in tropical waters.

The secretary of state has no flag of his own, consequently the national ensign was broken out at the fore when he went on board. At the same time the saluting guns were fired nineteen times. All the officers of the cruiser, the entire marine detachment and the band were paraded in Knox's honor. As the marines presented arms four ruffles and four flourishes were sounded by the drummers and buglers.

These ceremonies over, Knox's party was escorted below and the voyage to Port Antonio was begun. The secretary will occupy the admiral's quarters on board the Washington, which have been fitted up especially for his use.

DELEGATES IMPRISONED

A convention of delegates from a number of lodges formerly affiliated with the Order of Owls, which have recently seceded, was held in John Winthrop hall, Boston, Thursday evening. The following lodges were represented, Suffolk, Quincy; Lynn, Pittsfield; Gloucester, Worcester, Greenfield, Taunton, Beverly, Westboro and Haverhill.

A discussion took place on the adoption of a name, and on the failure to determine one, the matter was deferred until a committee, which has been appointed to act, presents one at the next meeting At the present time, the newly proposed order of former Owls is the only one that complies with the laws of Masachusetts, and has been thoroughly sanctioned by the insurance commissioners. Charles H. Finn, president of the local lodge, is supreme secretary and Leon C. Claflin was elected supreme inner guard. Mayor Farrell of Malden is supreme medical examiner, and M. F. Cunningham, is supreme advocate, an office almost unknown among benefit organizations.

At the adjournment of the meeting, the members of the convention, were the victims of an unhappy coincidence, for the janitor had left the building shortly before, and there was no way of making an exit. A police officer released the imprisoned delegates and the Quincy members had to return home in automobiles.

ASSOCIATES' ANNUAL SUPPER

Associates' hall, Houghs Neck, was fully taxed Thursday evening, the occasion being the annual ladies' supper, given under the auspices of the Houghs Neck associates. The affair is held annually on the evening of the anniversary of Washington's birthday and is looked forward to as one of the gala events of the year by the members of the association of that section of the city which some residents are trying to have established as the town of "Seagirt." A fine menu was served, comprising cold turkey, ham, lobster and chicken salads, mashed potato, banana fritters, ice-cream, frozen pudding, coffee and assorted cake.

After the banquet speaking was in order. Hon. William T. Shea was loudly applauded as he arose to speak and the ovation that greeted him as he drew his remarks to a close was simply overyhelming. Other speakers included Rev. W. G. Sayre, pastor of Union Chapel, Captain Oliver G. Fosdick, Michael G. Coughlan, David Fenner. Patrick F. O'Brien, James E. Wall, Daniel J. Mahoney and Henry W. French, who was the toastmaster of the exercises.

An entertainment was provided by Misses Fannie and Bessie Hagan and George O'Brien, all of whom were given hearty applause for their work.

BRIEFS

The Sunday school of Memorial church has been growing rapidly. The mark reached last Sunday was the highest ever attained. In the adult class, Sunday, Fred M. Benditt will explain Baptism from the standpoint of the immersionist; Lyndon Gurney, Baptism from the standpoint of effusion and H. A. Wells from the Quaker's standpoint.

The annual minstrel show of the Samoset club is to be held Monday evening, Feb. 26, in Alpha hall, Quincy.

The annual meeting of Whatsoever Circle, King's Daughters, will be held Monday evening, Feb. 26, at the home of Miss Foster, on Safford street.

The dramatic club of Memorial church are to give a drama entitled, "Our Church Fair," on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings.

Rev. Alfred Manchester of Salem, who preaches Sunday at First church, closes the long list of able preachers who have supplied the pulpit since last summer. The first Sunday in March, Dr. A. L. Hudson, recently called to the pastorate of the church will enter upon his duties as pastor.

Postmaster Charles L. Hammond is to speak upon the work of the post-office as a department of the U. S. Government at the meeting of the Junior Laymen in First church chapel Tuesday evening at 7.30. Young men from the Wollaston and Braintree parish have been invited to attend.

The Walther class will meet at 12.15 Sunday in the Wollaston Baptist Church. It is hoped that Hon. George L. Richards, Ex-Mayor of Malden will be present and give a short address. Let every member be present. There will also be a strong discussion on "Life's greatest Temptations." Men not in other similar classes invited.

A man of much prominence, Rev. George L. Perin, D. D., of Boston, is to come to Quincy, Sunday evening and speak at the Universalist church. Dr. Perin is known far and wide, not only by Universalists, but every creed because of his great work the Franklin Square house in which the young women of Boston have a good home and for which Dr. Perrin has raised several hundred thousand dollars by successful campaigns, so that now the Institution is free from debt.

At the Hall Place M. E. church, Sunday morning, Rev. W. O. Stuntz of the School of Theology will speak on Missions. The annual offering for the cause will be taken. In the evening the new singing books will be used for the first time. The address will be by the pastor Rev. T. C. Martin, subject "The Passing of an Empire."

HALCYON DAYS RECALLED

gara and Tiger each carried 300 feet of hose, the Granite and Vulture 600 feet and the Washington M. French 1400 feet and four Johnson pumps. The "Tiger," "Granite," and "Vulture" engine companies were each organized in 1844; the "Fireman's Aid Co." on Aug. 30, 1856; and the W. M. French Hose Co., on May 6, 1869. As the Hose Company veterans have a banquet at G. A. R. Hall this Saturday evening it may be interesting to recall that in 1878 James E. Maxim was the foreman; Richard Newcomb, Jr., 1st assistant foreman; Asa A. Pope 2d assistant foreman; Eben W. Underwood, clerk; and M. N. C. Chubbuck, Steward.

The L. W. Lovell Chemical Engine Co., of Wollaston was organized in 1876 and housed in a small building erected for the purpose on Warren avenue, on land leased of the Wollaston Baptist society. John M. Call was the foreman of the company in 1878, Charles T. Baker clerk and Albert G. Olney steward.

There was located at North Quincy (Atlantic was not quite on the map) in the same year in charge of Engineer John A. Duggan a 30-foot and a 25-foot ladder and two water casks.

At the annual March town meeting of 1878, $3800 was appropriated to more thoroughly protect the Centre. Under John Whitney Hall's administration as chief engineer this appropriation was used to purchase a powerful Blake pump, and house it in a brick building erected for that purpose in "the Hollow" at the corner of Hancock street and Cottage avenue. This pump was connected to 2500 feet of six-inch pipe which supplied six hydrants and was first operated Aug. 3, 1878, by Edgar Tirrell, who had been appointed engineer. This was the first step towards a modern fire department in our town and was the beginning of the end of the hand-tub era.

In those days (1875) there was no superintendent of schools, the school committee having sole charge. I well recollect how the venerable Dr. William B. Duggan would call at the Wollaston school and hold oral examinations. John Quincy Adams, Charles Francis Adams, Jr., Asa Wellington (the site of whose home is now occupied by the Thomas Crane Library) C. L. Badger, and James H. Slade were the other members of the committee. Col. Francis W. Parker became Superintendent in the following year, the Committee having recommended the adoption by the town of this vote in regard to the appointing of a superintendent. "The School Committee are hereby required to appoint a superintendent of schools, and a sum not exceeding $2000 or as much thereof as may be needed, is hereby appropriated for that purpose." That was the corner stone of the subsequently famous Quincy system and in Colonel Parker the committee found their ideal superintendent.

The High school was in charge of our good Mr. Keith with 53 pupils; Seth Dewing, Jr., was master of the Adams which was then the largest in the town with 362 pupils; Henry B. Brown was master of the old Coddington but was succeeded in the second term of that year by J. H. Wardwell with Miss Carrie P. Barnes as assistant. At the Washington school Isaac F. Hall was master, as was L. F. Hobbs at the Quincy. Wollaston had the only woman principal in the town Miss Harriet H. Morse, who is now Mrs. John H. Litchfield. She was the highest paid woman teacher in the town, receiving nearly double what any of the others were paid. And there were no more enthusiastic or loyal pupils in the whole town than were her's. The village deeply grieved when she finaly relinquished her position.

Before closing these incomplete and more or less erroneous annals of our charming old New England town, I wish to add that my good neighbor Mr. George F. Pinkham, who founded Wollaston, tells me that the original proposed setting off of Wollaston included all of that part of Quincy north of Black's creek and Furnace brook, and included Atlantic and Squantum as well as Wollaston.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

A BOSTON GIRL'S BUDGET,

Maiden Ladies Should Keep Parrots and Cats, Claims Hubbite Educator. Many a Suicide is Prevented by Having a Pet to Look After—Boston of the Many Charities, Starves Thousands of its Children, According to Medical Authorities—"All sorts of Anglo-Saxons" Come together at Art Museum—Would You Pay $11,000 Tax Without The Law's Requiring It? The Puritan Conscience in Action.

Moral integrity still flourishes in the Hub, sensational ministers to the contrary notwithstanding. A recent contributions to the city's coffers of about $11,180 which was not legally required to be paid proves that there are those in the old Puritan city who still believe in the moral obligation. The money in question was the amount of taxes on the estate left to a prominent Boston attorney as trustee by his sister, and which was not included in the inventory filed in 1910 by the attorney, and not noticed by the city's board of assessors. The matter came up at a later date and it was decided that there was no legal claim upon the gentleman in question. He, however, ascertained the amount to which the taxes would have amounted and turned the full sum over to the city. Such is the New England conscience in action.

"Because an unmarried woman can care for her parrot or her cat, she has something to live for, and it may keep her from taking her own life," is a statement credited to Professor Colin A. Scott of Boston, in a discourse before public school principals at Chicago on the subject of "Social Education and the Home." Mr. Scott, it is to be hoped merely spoke figuratively, as his statement implies that, minus a parrot and cat, the unmarried woman has nothing and nobody on earth to live for and lacks even that hope which is sometimes supposed to cling to the last. There must be at least a few spinsters whose very useful and helpful and apparently contented lives refute this contention. Mr. Scott pointed out that the reason why people commit suicide is that they feel their own uselessness, and that people who have something to care for are less likely to take their own life than those who in better circumstances have no one dependent upon them. Hence the life-saving qualifications of the parrot and cat. Hence, also, the life-saving qualifications of numerous activities and interests which occasionally take the place of the parrot and cat in the affections of the bachelor maid.

Al sorts of Anglo-Saxons, as Mr. Dooley might call them, gathered at the Boston Museum of Fine Arts on Washington's Birthday. Theirs was a unique assemblage, partaking of the nature of an international reunion. Invitations had been sent out to view the "native art from foreign populations" exhibition in the forecourt of the museum with the result the Irish, Russian, Italian, Lithuanian, German, Syrian, Greek, Chinese, Scotch and Scandinavian societies and associations promptly accepted and began preparations for making the occasion memorable. Many of the members of the various organizations were garbed in the native costume, and the enthusiasm aroused over the international patriotic celebration indicates that it is likely to become an annual affair.

The old time assertion that Harvard men are averse to "flocking together" after graduation gets another blow in the announcement of the plans for a handsome and substantial home for the Harvard Club to be located on Commonwealth Avenue in the near future. Easily accessible, yet in a quiet aristocratic neighborhood, the new clubhouse gives promise of being the finest in appointments and conveniences of any of the Harvard alumni rendezvous. With the great number of influential and wealthy graduates in and around Boston the club should prosper and increase in value to its membership. Incidentally it offers a place of entertainment to visiting alumni which has been lacking in the past. Next there should be a Radcliffe Club, with an attractive clubhouse of its own.

The Fenway lake, if the plans of the Park Commission appeal to his honor the Mayor, will be a still further step in the direction of making the ex-dump in the Fens a spot of beauty and culture equalled by none other in the country. The commissioners plan to change the direction of Fenway road which runs in the rear of the Museum of Fne Arts, and to construct a small basin or lake in close proximity to the handsome new structure, so that when the new wing for which Mrs. R. D. Evans provided $500,000 is completed its shadow will fall in the waters of the lake. There are parts of the Fenway that still remind one of the muddy muckheap of not so many years past, but hardly a month passes without some addition being made, either by the park commission or by the educational, art and scientific institutions which form the great nameless university of the Fenway.

That Boston, city of countless philanthropies, is today responsible for the gradual starvation of 5,000 school children whose parents are too poor to give them proper food is affirmed by Representative John J. Murphy who is endeavoring to obtain legislation providing for the feeding of school children under 16 years of age who are not properly or sufficiently nourished at home. This bill is a direct result of the findings of Dr. William F. Gallivan and the medical inspectors of Boston schools, who recently turned in a report that 53,500 of the 82,000 pupils inspected have fallen below normal in health. Mr. Murphy maintains that if the parents are too poor or if home conditions are such that the mother cannot prepare the foods necessary for a debilitated child, then it becomes the duty of the municipality to provide proper nourishment for its future citizens. Medicines and tonics and physicians' prescriptions are useless in many cases. Blood-enriching soups, stews, gruels and roasts are what the children need to sustain them in their studies. Mr. Murphy, it would appear, might have added that it is not always in the homes where poverty abides that there is need of nutritious food. A shocking number of homes where comfortable means are at hand for proper sustenance of the family disclose methods—or lack of methods—in the preparation of food stuffs which result in serious cases of malnutrition, with its resultant backwardness in intelligence, nervous disorders, and insidious diseases. Many children go to school daily with their stomachs comfortably, and sometimes uncomfortably, full of food, which is composed of a practically negligible quantity of nutrition and an alarmingly large proportion of indigestible, harmful elements. Mr. Murphy's bill certainly would seem worthy of serious consideration.

Anty Drudge Prevents Trouble.

Laura Lovely—"Boo hoo (tears, more tears). What shall I ever do if Jack sees that grease spot on our new rug? Oh, he will be so cross!"

Anty Drudge—"There, there, deary, dry your eyes. Run across to the grocer and get a cake of Fels-Naptha. Be sure it has a red and green wrapper. It will take that spot out in a jiffy. Just a light lather and a quick rinse will do it."

"Will that stain come out?"

How many times have you said this, when some strong stain of fruit or medicine has seemingly ruined a good piece of linen?

There is no "perhaps" when Fels-Naptha soap is used. A little Fels-Naptha soap, cool or lukewarm water, and the stain is gone! Then, too Fels-Naptha gives the whitest, cleanest floors, the brightest woodwork, the most shiny, brilliant glassware.

And just as it acts on stains, it acts on the dirt in the Monday's wash. You put the clothes in cool or lukewarm water, after soaping them well with Fels-Naptha. Soak for half an hour, rub lightly, rinse and they are clean, pure and ready to hang on the line.

The Fels-Naptha soap method has a four-fold advantage. Saves your hands; saves fuel; saves soap; saves labor. Any one of these is sufficient to make any soap famous. Combined they make Fels-Naptha the greatest drudgery-saving invention of the age.

Read carefully and follow directions on the red and green wrapper.

FRECKLES

By Gene Stratton-Porter

COPYRIGHT, 1904, BY DOUBLEDAY, PAGE & CO.

SYNOPSIS.

Freckles, a homeless boy, is hired by Boss McLean to guard the expensive timber in the Limberlost from timber thieves.

Freckles does his work faithfully, makes friends with the birds and yearns to know more about nature. He lives with Mr. and Mrs. Duncan.

He resolves to get books and educate himself. He becomes interested in a huge pair of vultures and calls his bird friends his "chickens."

Some of the trees he is guarding are worth $1,000 each. Freckles' books arrive. He receives a call from Wessner.

Wessner attempts to bribe Freckles to betray his trust, and Freckles whips him. McLean overhears them and witnesses the fight.

Freckles' honesty saves a precious tree. He finds the nest of the vultures and is visited by a beautiful young girl.

She calls Freckles McLean's son. Freckles calls her "the angel" and helps the Bird Woman in taking photographs. McLean promises to adopt Freckles.

Freckles and the angel become very friendly. Assisted by the Bird Woman, they drive Wessner and Black Jack, timber thieves, from the Limberlost.

McLean fears more trouble, but Freckles insists upon being the sole guard of the timber. Freckles calls upon the angel's father.

The angel receives him as her equal, and her father is kind. Mrs. Duncan has exciting adventures in the Limberlost.

The Bird Woman and the angel again visit Freckles, and Freckles falls in love with the angel. The angel kisses him.

Freckles is bound and gagged by Black Jack's gang, and the timber thieves start felling a very valuable tree.

Wessner is to kill Freckles after the tree is stolen. The angel makes a daring effort to save Freckles and the tree.

McLean's men, notified by the angel, rush to save Freckles. All the timber thieves except Black Jack are captured.

Freckles guards the angel against Black Jack's vengeance. He tells McLean of his hopeless love for the angel.

Black Jack is killed by a rattlesnake. The Bird Woman gets a photograph of the baby vulture. Freckles and the angel find a valuable tree.

The tree falls, and in an effort to save the angel from death Freckles is struck and very badly injured. He appears to be dying.

The angel learns that her love alone will save him. She stifles her pride and practically proposes marriage to him.

Freckles refuses to accept her sacrifice, because he is homeless and nameless. The angel learns that Lord O'More of Ireland is seeking his lost nephew.

CHAPTER XXIII.

THREE GUESSES.

"WHEN the younger son found that she had left London, he ran off and followed her," continued the angel. Freckles was listening most attentively now. "When she got here all alone and afraid," the angel went on, "and saw him coming to her, why, she was so glad she up and married him, just like anybody else would have done. He didn't want her to travel with the troupe, so when they got to Chicago they thought that would be a good place, and they stopped, and he hunted work. It was slow business, because he had never been taught to do a useful thing, and he didn't even know how to hunt work, least of all to do it when he found it; so pretty soon things were going wrong. But if he couldn't find work, she could always sing, so she rang at night, and made little things in the daytime. He didn't like her to sing in public, and he wouldn't let her when he could help himself; but winter came, it was very cold, and fire was expensive. Rents went up, and they had to move farther out to cheaper and cheaper places; and you were coming—I mean, the boy that is lost was coming—and they were almost distracted. Then the man wrote and told his father all about it, and his father sent the letter back unopened and wrote him to never write again.

"When the baby came, there was mighty little left to pawn for food and a doctor, and nothing at all for a nurse, so an old neighbor woman went in and took care of the young mother and the little baby, just because she was so sorry for them. By that time they were away out in the suburbs on the top floor of a little wooden house, among a lot of factories, and it kept getting colder, with less to eat. Then the man got desperate, and he went out to just find something to eat; and the woman was desperate, too. She got up, left the old woman to take care of her baby and went into the city to sing for some money. The woman got so cold she put the baby in bed and went home. Then a boiler blew up in a factory beside the little house and set it on fire. A piece of iron was pitched across the little house and broke through the roof. It came down smash, and cut just one little hand off the poor baby. It screamed and screamed, and the fire kept coming closer and closer.

"The old woman ran out with the rest of the people and saw what had happened. She knew there wasn't going to be time to wait for the firemen or anything, and she ran into the building. She could hear the poor little baby screaming, and she couldn't stand that, so she worked her way up to it. There it was, all hurt and bleeding. Then she was scared almost to death over thinking what its mother would do to her for going off and leaving it, so she ran to a home for little friendless babies that was near and banged on the door. Then she hid across the street until the baby was taken in, and then she ran back to see if her own house was burning up. The factory and the little house and a lot of others were all gone. The people there told her that the beautiful lady came back and ran into the house to find her baby. She had just gone in when her husband came, and he went in after her, and the house went down over both of them."

Freckles lay rigid, with his eyes on the angel's face, and she talked rapidly to the ceiling.

"Then the old woman was just sick about that poor little baby. She was afraid to tell them at the home, because she knew she never should have left it, but she wrote a letter and sent it to where the beautiful woman, when she was ill, had said her husband's people lived. She told all about the little baby that she could remember; when it was born, how it was named for the man's elder brother, that its hand had been cut off in the fire, and where she had put it to be doctored and taken care of. She told them that its mother and father were both burned, and she begged and implored them to come and get it.

"You think it would have melted a heart of ice, but that old man hadn't any heart to melt, for he got that letter and read it. He hid it away among his papers and never told a soul. A few months ago he died. When his elder son went to settle up his business he found that letter almost the first thing. He dropped everything, and came, with his wife, to hunt that baby, because he had always loved his brother dearly, and wanted him back. He had hunted for him all he dared all these years, and when he got here you were gone—I mean the baby was gone—and I had to tell you, Freckles, for you see it might have happened to you like that just as easy as to that other lost boy."

Freckles reached up and turned the angel's face until he compelled her eyes to meet his.

"Angel," said Freckles at last, catching her wrist, "are you trying to tell me that there is somebody hunting a boy that you're thinking might be me? Are you belavin' you've found me relations?"

Then the angel's eyes came home. The time had come. She pinioned Freckles' arms to his sides and bent above him.

"How strong are you, dear heart?" she breathed. "How brave are you? Can you bear it? Dare I tell you that?"

"No!" gasped Freckles. "Not if you're sure! I can't bear it! I'll die if you do!"

The day had been one unremitting strain with the angel! Nerve tension was drawn to the finest thread. It snapped suddenly.

"Die?" she flamed. "Die, if I tell you that! You said this morning that you would die if you didn't know your name, and if your people were honorable. Now I've gone and found you a name that stands for ages of honor, a mother that loved you enough to go into the fire and die for you, and the nicest kind of relatives, and you turn round and say you'll die over that! You just try dying and you'll get a good slap!"

The angel stood glaring at him. One second Freckles lay paralyzed and dumb with astonishment. The next the Irish in his soul rose above everything. A roar of laughter burst from him. The terrified angel caught him in her arms and tried to stifle the sound. She implored and commanded. The tears rolled from Freckles' eyes and he wheezed on. When he was too worn out to utter another sound, his eyes laughed silently.

WORKERS HEMMED IN BY SHEETS OF FIRE

One Woman Killed and Two Probably Fatally Hurt

Leominster, Mas., Feb. 24.—Miss Flora Curtis was burned to death and seven other persons were seriously injured, two perhaps fatally, when fire broke out in a three-story wooden factory building occupied by the Puritan Comb company and the Bay State Comb company.

Forty other persons in the factory when the fire started escaped uninjured to the street. The monetary loss is about $2000.

With the exception of Mrs. Joseph Carpenter, all of the persons who were seriously hurt suffered from terrible burns. Mrs. Carpenter jumped from a third-story window and it is feared that she is fatally injured. Ira F. Holman, 60 years old, was one of those who was most seriously burned. It is thought he will die.

The fire started in a blower on the third floor of the building where the persons who were injured were at work. This floor was occupied by the Puritan Comb company. Almost instantly the celluloid scraps on the benches around the sides of the room were ignited and the few persons in the room found themselves hemmed in by sheets of fire on all sides.

TAFT'S CABINET STICKS TO HIM

Will Be No Desertions to the Cause of Roosevelt

MEYER MAKES DECLARATION

Removes Last Doubt as to Complete Loyalty of Advisers to the President—Close Friends of Former President Placed In Bad Position by Recent Developments—Lodge Likely to Go Into Progressive Camp

Washington, Feb. 24.—"I shall do my duty and that duty is to my chief. I have been associated with President Taft for three years and I shall support him for re-election."

With these words Secretary of the Navy Meyer disposed of the story current in Washington and elsewhere that in the event of Theodore Roosevelt's candidacy for the presidency he would leave the Taft cabinet and support Roosevelt.

This final statement, which was made after the cabinet meeting yesterday, came in explanation of an utterance earlier in the day in which the secretary had said: "I will do my duty," but in response to a further question as to what he would regard as his duty should Roosevelt be a candidate, had returned a non-committal answer.

This declaration of Meyer removes the last doubt as to the complete loyalty of the Taft cabinet in the face of the Roosevelt candidacy. Secretary of War Stimson, who personally is as close to Roosevelt as Meyer, announced some days ago that he would soon begin upon a round of speeches in the interest of Taft's re-election.

Frank Hitchcock not only stands with Taft, but he is known to have done certain things recently in the interests of his chief which have been of the greatest possible political use. Practically all the other cabinet officers have been on the warpath for Taft since the campaign opened.

The fact that practically all the close friends of Roosevelt, including men like Nicholas Longworth, Gifford Pinchot, Meyer and many others, either allowed themselves to be quoted in favor of Taft or came out for La Follette, may be cited as evidence that they did not believe that Roosevelt ever would allow the campaign in his favor to get very far. Anything like the positive developments of the Roosevelt candidacy as they have taken place within the last few weeks was unexpected by many of Roosevelt's closest friends.

Now that the situation has been cleared and Roosevelt is known to be on the edge of making an announcement which, the country believes, will put him definitely into the field, some of these friends have found themselves in the most embarrassing position in the course of their political careers.

Secretary Meyer and Senator Lodge belong to that smaller but influential group of Roosevelt's friends who are bound to him by personal ties which they have been loth to let any consideration break. Roosevelt made Meyer postmaster general and ambassador to St. Petersburg, and Lodge, through Taft, made him secretary of the navy. Both men are under obligations to Taft, but have strong sense of personal loyalty to Roosevelt. It already has been intimated that Lodge will favor Roosevelt if he is a candidate. Lodge will not attempt, however, to work for Roosevelt in Massachusetts.

NUN STOLE GEMS

Fined In Police Court For Swindling Dealers In Precious Gems

Paris, Feb. 24.—Sister Candide, a nun who swindled dealers in precious stones out of millions, was found guilty of fraud and sentenced to eighteen months' imprisonment. The sentence was suspended, however, in view of the fact that this was her first offense, and she was fined $200.

In her anxiety to obtain funds for the different charities which she inaugurated Sister Candide procured an immense amount of jewels, telling the owners she intended to sell them on commission. She did not return the purchase price. When arrested it was said that her liabilities were $800,000.

DIX THINKING IT OVER

Failure to Pardon Brandt Means His Freedom Next Week

New York, Feb. 24.—After a long conference with District Attorney Whitman, Supreme Court Justice Gerard decided to give Governor Dix another chance to pardon Foulke E. Brandt before he signs an order which makes final his sustaining of the habeas corpus writ, granting liberty to the Schiff valet.

Justice Gerard will not sign the order until Monday, it is learned, so the governor will have until that time to give the matter further thought.

Mgr. Magennis was 68 years old, and for more than forty-four years was in charge of St. Thomas Aquinas parish in Jamaica Plain. He was born in Lowell, Mass.

PLANS TO WIND UP ITS AFFAIRS

The Citizens' association, which flourished in Quincy for a time, but which has not held any meetings for some months is to wind up its affairs and go out of existence. When the association was formed some years ago, it was in a nature a rival of the Board of Trade. It started out with a good membership and bid fair to become a power for good in the city. Lack of interest on the part of the members, who could not be prevailed upon to attend the meetings, coupled with the divided sentiment over proposed amendments to the City charter, had its effect however and the association has been practically dead for some time.

There are some assets however of the association, in the way of cash on hand, and a meeting has been called for March 8, to wind up the affairs.

The business stated in the call for the meeting is to see if the association will disband and to authorize the president and treasurer, or such other officers or members as may be deemed advisable to distribute and pay over the funds of the association to such charitable organizations or other societies, and for such purposes as may be decided upon by members of the association.

ANOTHER WIN FOR GYM GIRLS

The Quincy Gym Girls added another victory to their list of basketball triumphs defeating the Needham Girls' in a close and interesting game last evening in St. Mary's hall, to the score of 12 to 9. The game was witnessed by a large crowd and was pronounced the best of the season.

The star of the contest was Miss Smith of the winning team who secured ten of the twelve points acquired by the Quincy girls. She caged three baskets from the floor, and obtained four on free tries. Miss laing, the centre of the winning team added two points to her opponents score, when she shot for the wrong basket and made a goal. The play was cleverly executed and elicited great laughter.

Miss Blades and Miss McCune were the conspicuous stars for the losers. The summary:—

LOCAL BOWLING TEAM WINS

Although the members of the Clan McGregor bowling team were only able to take one out of three at the Brunswick alleys last evening, in the game played with the Clan McKintosh five, of the Scottish Clans' league, they made enough on this roll to place their grand total ahead by a substantial margin. The first string was rather close, the second went to the McKintosh Clan in easy style, while the third string was won 460 to 287.

Morton of the local team had the highest mark for a single string, attaining the 104 pinfall. Beattier of the opposing team, with a marke of 283, was high man for the sum total of the three strings.

Miss Jennie Grassick and Miss Georgie Michael of South Quincy, are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Alden A. Sherwin, nee Troupe, of West Townsend.

CONTINUES TO BE INVINCIBLE

Quincy A. A. Continues to Increase its Good Lead

GOOD ALL-ROUND WORK

A strenuous experience with the strong St. Joseph A. A. team on the previous night was no deterrent to the Quincy A. A. senior five, for they faced St. Mary's A. C. five in Stillman hall last night with still greater determination to increase their lead in the greater Boston Basket-ball league, and were successful over their opponents 39 to 15. The same thing could not be said of the second team of the local association, which was forced to bow to a 25 to 15 defeat, administered by the second team of the home association.

The result of the latter game was a surprise to those who have been following the local boys this season, but St. Mary's second turned the tables and showed at the same time that many a warm struggle is bound to ensue before the leadership is firmly established.

The all-round team work of the senior fire of the local association ws conspicious throughout the game and was the one factor that enabled Captain Duggan's team to carry off the honors of the evening.

Every man on the local first team was in splendid form and there was not a player who had less than two baskets from the floor to his credit. Boyle showed up exceptionally well, as did O'Rourke and the Duggan brothers. The best work for the losers was contributed by Grant.

As to the game between the second teams, McLaughlin and Slager seemed towers of strength for team mates. former got three baskets from the floor and five from fouls, while the latter, playing a backfield position placed the ball four times through the net on four different occasions. H. Chapman played well for the local team.

The affair was in charge of Arthur Hamilton, assisted by Carl Parker and Russell Dexhimer. Hunt's orchestra furnished the music. ANNUAL BOYS' MEET.

Entry blanks for the sixth annual Boys' State Athletic meet have been sent out to 25 different Y. M. C. A. physical directors and a record crowd is expected to take part next Saturday afternoon. Last year 98 boys competed and after a hard contest Quincy came out in 2d place losing to Cambridge.

This year Quincy should carry away the trophy as there is great interest among the boys and most of the High school fellows will be able to compete. Last year the meet came on the same day as the B. A. A. High School meet and several of the best local athletes competed there, instead of here at Quincy.

The first event, will begin promptly at 2 with the following order of events:

Class A—Boys under 14 years of age. 15 yard dash; 6 potato race; standing broad jump; potato relay race. (6 boys.)

Class B—Boys 14 and 15 years: 15 yard dash; 6 potato race; running broad jump; potato relay race (6 boys.)

Class C—Boys 16 and 17 years. 15 yard dash; running high jump; 3 standing broad jumps; 6 potato race.

Relay races on track will be arranged. 6 men, 2 from each grade, each man to run 2 laps or 104 yards.

Entries close Feb. 27, with L. F. LaRose, Quincy Y. M. C. A. No spikes will be allowed.

Fobs will be given to the winner of each event. Ribbons to 2d and 3d, in each event. Ribbons to each man on the winning relay teams. A cup will be given to the winner of the most points in each class.

A suitable trophy will be given to the Association winning the largest number of points.

Points will be scored as folows: 5-3-2-1 for 1st, 2d, 3d, and 4th places in each event. Relay races not to count.

BASKETBALL TONIGHT.

Four good games in the Y. M. C. A. league are scheduled to be played tonight. The first game, between Yale and Brown ought to be one of the best of the series, as these teams are about evenly matched. Yale, however, stands better in the league, as Brown has won but one game so far.

The second game will be the "star" attraction, for Navy and Carlisle will meet. Carlisle has won but one game but that was from the Army and the "Indians" have been feeling pretty chesty ever since their victory. Capt. "Jack" Melville of the Navy says that his team intends to break into the "games won" column tonight, so there ought to be something doing in this game.

Michigan and Dartmouth will meet in the 3d game and Dartmouth should get away with a win. Michigan has been strengthened by the addition of Smith who has been playing in the Braintree Civic Club and they ought to put up a good game against the Green and White.

Cornell and Tech meet in the final game of the evening and Cornell expects an easy win. Capt. Rich's team has been going at a pretty good pace and should run up a large score.

BOWLING CHAMPIONSHIP.

The preliminary matches in the Y. M. C. A. single championships are nearly all completed and the final roll off should commence late next week. In Group A the following men appear to have a shade on the rest of the fellows—Beane, Brooks, Littlefield, LaRose, Fitzgerald and Smith.

Group B—Burns, Clapp, Blanchard, Eaton, Morris and Wilson.

Brooks is at present the "high" pinfall roller. His single string record is 136, with 329 for a total of three strings.

CHOWDER PARTY AND SMOKE TALK

Old Fire Vets Recall Days of Good Old Hand Tubs

ANNUAL REUNION

Reminiscences of the old fire fighting days and friendly discussions on the relative merits of those highly prized tubs, the Granite, Tiger and Vulture, held sway at the clam chowder party, which took the form of a reunion, held Saturday evening in Grand Army hall, under the auspices of the Washington M. French. Hose Association. Old acquaintances were renewed and the affair which was attended by over one hundred and fifty, was pronounced the best since the association was formed on May 6, 1889.

WASHINGTON M. FRENCH.

William Bird and Asa Pope had charge of the serving of the clam chowder, and are to be commended for the efficient manner in which all were given their share of the appetizing repast. The chawder was pronounced the best ever prepared and the way in which it was partaken of, seemed to prove this contention beyond a doubt. All the fixings went with it and those present were loud in their praises of the chefs.

Songs and jokes were indulged in, and the evening was spent in a most enjoyable maner. Several prominent citizens and city officials were in attendance and addressed the gathering.

Fred H. French, president of the association, was chairman.

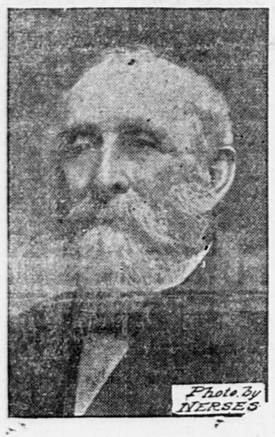

It will be remembered that the outing scheduled for last summer was called off, because the president had his leg amutated and was unable to attend. The members made up for this disappointment Saturday evening and President French was kept busy shaking hands and talking about the scenes of the "good old days."

Mayor Engene R. Stone was the first speaker and was given an enthusiastic ovation. His Honor said that while he regretted that he could not say he ever participated in fighting conflagrations in company with the old fire fighters, still he had heard so much about them, and had familiarized himself with the old ensigns to such an extent that he felt he was one of the "old boys." The mayor dwelt at length on a comparison of the ancient and modern methods of fire fighting. He told of the importance and necessity of having the fire department properly equipped in order to meet impending conditions. He spoke of the various improvements that had been made over the old apparatus, but in so doing took occasion to congratulate the members of the French Association for their splendid work at all times and for their unswerving loyalty in hurrying to the scene of a fire He was loudly applauded at the conclusion of his remarks.

Hon. William T. Shea was next introduced and was greeted with thunderous applause. The ex-mayor talked in a jocosing strain throughout and related many experiences he himself had undergone in fighting flames with the crew of the Granite. He said the Granite had been the best of the old times fire apparatus and said it was able to do more rid letter work at a fire than either the Tiger or the Vulture.

The ex-mayor paid a high tribute to the old fire fighters but took special care to laud the members of the Granite. The applause that he had was almost deafening. He also called attention to the letter of Mr. Whiting in Saturday's Ledger.

James H. Elcock, Overseer of the Poor, was next introduced. He also related many interesting experiences and dwelt at length upon comparisons of the three tubs. He told

JAMES T. PENNIMAN,
The Oldest Veteran.

of the annual tryouts at Quincy square and added that the prize on this occasion always went to the members of the "Tiger."

He pronounced on encomium upon the first president of the association, Washington M. French. Mr. Elcock told of his living with the gentleman in question for over a year and a half and in this way had entered

UNIVERSALIST WEEK SERVICES

Sunday Opening Uplift Service Largely Attended

DR. PERIN SPEAKS

The first of the series of uplift meetings to be held during the coming week at the First Universalist church was held Sunday evening and was well attended. The speaker of the opening meeting was Rev. Rr. George L. Perin of Boston, one of the most eminent divines of this faith. The service was well attended and the able discourse was closely followed. The service was preceded by a short praise service conducted by Rev. Fannie Austin, pastor of the church, and was followed by the reading of the scripture lesson by the pastor from the fifth chapter of the gospel of Matthew "And seeing the multitude, he went up into the mountain," and prayer by Dr. Perin.

In introducing the speaker of the evening Rev. Miss Austin said "we are all apt to forget certain vital things of our lives. It was well therefore to set apart a time for religious renewal. To invoke the spirit of God and to realize that we have a great future beyond, and if we all realize something of our great heritage we must give ourselves time to think of these things. Much has been said about the forward movement of the Universalist church. A church that should render more efficient service to God and man. We here in Quincy feel the need of a quickening of the spirit. A larger, deeper and quickened life. It is for this purpose these meetings are planned." The pastor hoped that they would be largely attended throughout the week. Rev. Dr. Pering was then introduced.

Dr. Perin in opening his address told two short stories by way of illustration and said he should speak on the church, its future and what it should be. His text was taken from the third chapter of 1st Timothy.

"The church," said the speaker, "is so familiar, many often stop and ask what it is for. It has become to us commonplace, just as the sun has become a common thing as we see it every day. Just so with the home, it is so familiar with us we often forget its fundamental meaning. When the church is turned into a social club it has missed its aim. It is true that we as brothers and sisters and individuals of the church may be engaged in social service, but when we ask that the church turn from its fundamental principle to an organized social service we deprive it of its individuality. Fundamentally it is not the business of the church but incidentally it is. Scarcely one per cent of the $200,000 raised for the Franklin Square Home but came from people that were interested in the church. Eight or nine per cent of all associate charity workers are church people, so that incidentally the church is doing much along the line of education and the promotion of social life, but fundamentally it is not its purpose, nor its business. So it is with trade unionism. Incidentally it is doing much for it, but fundamentally it is not its business to allie itself with it.

The creation of the church is due to heart hunger and nothing else. Men are hungry and must be fed. The problems of life are many. The natural instinct of everyone is to be honest, but sometimes difficult to be so. It is here that the church should step in and give the help that the man needs who is trying to be honest, but is sorely tempted, and help him to face the problem and solve it. So it was with all the great moral and social problems. The church has been the inspiring mover to all good works, but its primary purpose is not to build benevolent institutions but to help men and women solve the problems of the common everyday life. To give cheer, hope, courage, strength and victory by showing them how to connect their lives with the great source of all help, God. The office of the church is to bring men into the consciousness of God and make him a reality in their lives, knowing his care and feeling his love. In this way they are prepared for sorrow and made strong to meet temptations and trials. He who really believes in the Fatherhood of God cannot be cast down or overcome. He is an optimist. To him life spells victory, joy and blessing.

The services will be continued every evening this week with the exception of Saturday evening at 7.45 o'clock. The speaker for tonight's service is Rev. Dr. Charles Conklin, superintendent of Universalist churches in Massachusetts.

YOUNG MEN WERE MATRONS

One of the prettiest germans of the season took place at Colonial hall, Saturday evening when fifty of Quincy's well known society folk enjoyed a leap year dance. It was a leap year dance throughout, the ladies doing the honors in every line. The hall was very daintily decorated, the color scheme being red and green. Frank Baker, Delcevare King and Arthur Tylee were "the matrons" while the young ladies of the club acted as ushers. Many new and effective germans were introduced, every one joining. A tempting supper was served at 10.30, the decorations of the red candle shades making a very pretty sight.

Those in charge of the German were Mrs. Charles L. Homer, Mrs. Frederick H. Breslyn, Mrs. Myron T. Ryder, Miss Maude Macfarlane, Mrs. Arthur P. Homer and Miss Avah Gilson.

The gentlemen of the party are to return the compliment and give the ladies a dance the last of March, when the same happy crowd hope to meet again.

TAKES LIFE BY SHOOTING

Despondent over the loss of her husband, who died a year and a half ago, Mrs. Mae Hicks, widow of Ernest A. Hicks and daughter of Mrs. A. A. Lincoln took her own life Saturday at her mothers home, 109 Lincoln avenue, by shooting herself. Shortly after noon Mrs. Hicks went to her room and a few minutes later a shot rang out. Her mother rushed upstairs and found her daughter on the bed with a bullet hole in her right temple.

A physician was summoned and everything possible done to save her life but she was beyond human skill. Mrs. Hicks was in her 40th year and was quite prominent in church and social affairs at Wollaston. She was apparently in the best of health and no reason can be assigned for her act, other than that she has brooded over the death of her husband.

DAVID H. NORRIE.

David H. Norrie, aged 30 years, son of Alexander Norrie died suddenly, Saturday noon at the dinner table at his home 49 Newcomb place. Mr. Norrie was seated at the dinner table when he suddenly fell over. A physician was summoned but when he arrived he said that the young man had probably died instantly. The young man was unmarried and was employed as a driver by the Johnson Lumber Co.

Creamed toast tonight of PRATT'S BREAD will bring him home early tomorrow.

JOHN DONOVAN.

John Donovan of Houghs Neck, a former resident of Charlestown died suddenly Saturday afternoon, aged 76 years. Mr. Donovan has been in poor health for some time but his death was unexpected and he had not consulted a physician. Medical Examiner Jones who viewed the body gave the cause of death to natural causes. The body will be taken to Charlestown.

A. O. H. CONFERENCE.

A conference of members of the local division of the Ancient Order of Hibernans was held in St. Mary's Church, West Quincy, Sunday vening. The speaker for the occasion was Rev. Henry T. Grady, who discoursed on "The Infallibility of the Pope."

The services, which were largely attended were brought to a close with Benediction.

MICHAEL HAYES.

The funeral of Michael A. Hayes, of 71 Walnut street, took place from his late home this morning. A high mass of requem was celebrated in the Church of the Sacred Heart, Atlantic, at 10 o'clock by Rev. James F. McNiff.

The musical portion of the mass was the Gregorian chant, furnished under direction of Miss May Costello, organist. Burial was at St. Mary's Cemetery, West Quincy.

—Another bit of religion the present revival in Indianapolis would do well to emphasize is that whenever anyone buys a bargain at a store that pays starvation wages to its clerks that person lends active support to the white slave traffic.—Indianapolis Sun.

SAND SUCKER STARTS SOUTH

The sand-sucker built for the government by the Fore River Co., for use on the Mississippi river will leave today for her station, in command of Capt. Joe Kemp who had charge during her recent trials. The dredge is capable of sucking 3000 tons of mud and sand in 35 minutes and can dump it in three minutes, Forty per cent of the material taken aboard by the pumps is water which is automatically discharged. She is propelled by twin screws with two engines to each propellor shaft, the forward engines being also used to operate the dredging machinery.

—Only two Januarys in the last 42 years have been colder than last month, when the average temperature in Boston was 21 degrees, or one degree above the lowest average. In January 1875 and 1888 the average temperature was 20 degrees. Contrast that with January 1906 when it was 36 degrees.—Medford Mercury.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

It sems very strange that Prof. Parker should take so much bother to climb Mt. McKinley, when he can get up so high in a New York skyscraper.

The Colonel says the women should have the ballot when they want it. As they are bound to get it sooner or later, we men must look good natured if we expect to get any offices.

Representative Slayden of Texas favors a constitional amendment forbidding the re-election of a president. Something should be done so as to so as to give more people a turn at this job.

Why spend time discussing how to keep the central bank out of Wall street control? If the whole thing is given into the charge of Mr. Debs, he will see that that little matter is attended to.

Secretary Nagel says big business should be encouraged. As some of our churches maintain "Cheerful letter exchanges," why not send a few to our trust presidents, along with the other shut-ins?

A $30,000 dinner was given to the Russian ambassador and wife, and if this scale of living is to prevail in Washington, the government clerks must work more than seven hours a day.

My! Life is getting to be a burden for the newspaper man. The latest blow is the signing by President Taft of the bill making the newspaper postage two cents a pound instead of one. It will have a tendency to put some of them out of business.

Wonder what would happen to Young America about now if he were in Paris. Since January it is a misdemeanor to throw a piece of waste paper upon a Paris street. If a policeman sees you drop a piece of paper he walks up to you, pats you on the shoulder, begs your pardon, says the Taunton Herald, for addressing you, and tells you, you have violated the law and asks you to pick up what you have thrown down. The new law went into effect on January 16, and on that day there were five prosecutions for wilful violations.

CHURCH UNITY.

One of February's events of larger importance has been the addressing of a circular letter by the Episcopal church's commission on church unity, to similar commissions representing eighteen other religious bodies. The circular urged that in all these denominations there be sermons and prayers on the subject of unity.

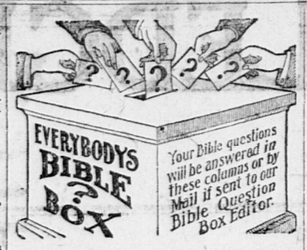

When we reach the other side of Jordan's stormy flood, it will not be estimated a sufficient cause for division that some people prefer their clergymen to wear black gowns, and others prefer them to wear black frock coats.

If the soldiers of an army got to quarrelling because the different regiments had different styles of banners, they would not do a great many things to the enemy. Many of the differences that separate the Protestant religious world are of equally small importance.

Today Episcopalians, Presbyterians Baptists, and Congregationalists eat at each other's church suppers in peace and harmony, and patronize each other's fancy tables. This is a great change for the better. But habits are strong and heart strings quiver, and little progress has been made toward the organic unity of the more than one hundred sects that divide the Protestant church world and reduce its efficiency far below what might be possible.

To the business man, the divisions in the Christian world appear terribly illogical. They divert resources of time, strength, and money, from the real work of preaching the gospel and feeding the hungry and clothing the naked, into maintenance of plants that to a considerable extent duplicate each other.

The circular referred to above, recommended, among other things, that each denomination study the creeds and practices of the others, not for criticism, but to learn their valuable features. May its recommendations be cordially followed, and may it bring nearer the day of a reunited church!

Q.—Please give the Scripture evidence for the statement that the seventh creative "day" is a period of 7,000 years (Questioner.) Harmonize with the fourth commandment. (R. M.)

Answer.—The Scriptural evidence that this is a period of 7,000 years is clear. "God rested (from His work of creation) on the seventh day," When Psalm xcv was written God was still resting; nor any change taken place when the Epistle to the Hebrews was written, for there (ch. iy.) is held out to the Church the offer of sharing in God's rest. Even when the Kingdom of Heaven is established God's rest continues, for the work of the Kingdom is committed into the hands of the Son. At the close of that reign of 1,000 years (Rev. xx) the Son will deliver up the kingdom to the Father, "that God may be all in all." Since there are about 6,000 years from the creation to the second coming of Christ, and 1,000 years of Christ's Presence, it follows that God's day of rest is about 7,000 years long. During this long "day" God has not been entirely idle, but has done such Sabbath-day works as have in His wisdom been deemed works of necessity. The work of restoring the human race from its degradation—during the last part of that day will also be Sabbath work. Like the ox or ass, it has fallen into a pit, and God has made provision for its restoration.

The fourth commandment does not say that God worked six days of twenty-four hours and then rested other twenty-four. The Jewish Sabbath and its system of Sabbaths are types of the greater Sabbath—the heavenly.

PEOPLE'S FORUM.

One oft he finest lectures ever heard in Braintree was that given before the Braintree People's Forum, Sunday afternoon by Rabbi Maurice Harris of New York, the subject being "The Jews' Contribution to Civilization." The address was scholarly, very well delivered and the speaker evidenced such a broad minded and altruistic spirit as to charm his hearers. Rabbi Harris described the contribution of the Jewish race to the world's religion saying that both Christian and Moslem faith traced many of their tenets to the old Hebrew belief.

On the subject of literature, he referred to the bible, the great literary standard, as the work of Jewish writers and cited its sublime passages as masterpieces to be imitated by all lesser writers. He mentioned the bible as being translated into 200 tongues and told how the translation of it into German by Martin Luther was the starting point of the Reformation. In the realm of philosophy, the Rabbi mentioned many Jews who have achieved distinction among them being Benedict Spinoza.

The speaker said that artists among the Jews were few, up to the present time owing to their faith forbidding any reproduction of figures or images which might tend to worship or idolatry. This idea, especially among the reformed Jews is giving way to more advanced thought and there are now several Jewish artists of prominence.

The Hebrew race shines particularly bright in scientific research and discovery. In astronomy, navigation and in many other branches the Jew has been peculiarly proficient and has contributed very materially along these lines to the progress of the world.

In music, Rabbi Harris mentioned such shining lights as Rubenstein, Offenbach, Strauss, etc. These and many other musicians of their race have given some immortal compositions to the world of melody. Perhaps in no other walk of life is the Jew so well known and successful as in commerce or trade. This is largely due to the fact that Jews in many countries have been so persecuted and shut out from other pursuits as to leave no other line of activity open to them. In this connection the speaker referred to the Rothschilds as being the kings of bankers and bankers of kings.

Rabbi Harris described the Jews as preserving their characteristic and religion to such an extent as to be likened to the Gulf Stream among the nations, intermingling with all and yet preserving their entity. At the close, the speaker answered all questions clearly and impartially and expressed himself as being deeply grateful for the opportunity afforded him to address a Christian audience.

The very fact that such an audience should honor him by giving him an opportunity to speak before it, was he said, a sign of liberal spirit of the age. Rabbi Harris said that the Jew could be killed only by kindness and that the era of kindness was beginning to dawn. The speaker considered both the old Hebrews and the Puritans as being great factors toward establishing a high standard of morality and right living.

The meeting was ably presided over by Horace R. Drinkwater, who introduced Rabbi Harris in a few brief but happy remarks. Next Sunday, J. Randolph Coolidge, Jr., will speak on "The Metropolitan Plan."

Roosevelt an Avowed Candidate For the Nomination

MAKES REPLY TO GOVERNORS

New York, Feb. 26.—"I will accept the nomination for president if it tendered me and I will adhere to this decision until the convention has expressed its preference, is Theodore Roosevelt's reply to the letter of seven Republican governors, asking him to stand for nomination.

The eagerly awaited reply was given out last night at Roosevelt's offices here during his absence on a trip to Boston. It was unexpectedly brief, but very definite. It follows:

"New York, Feb. 24, 1912.

"Gentlemen—I deeply appreciate your letter, and I realize to the full the heavy responsibility it puts upon me, expressing as it does the carefully considered convictions of the men elected by popular vote to stand at the head of government in tneir several states. I absolutely agree with you that this matter is not one to be decided with any reference to the personal preferences or interests of any man, but purely from the standpoint of the interests of the people as a whole.

"I will accept the nomination for president if it is tendered to me, and I will adhere to this decision until the convention has expressed its preference.

"One of the chief principles for which I have stood, and for which I now stand, and which I have always endeavored and always shall endeavor to reduce to action, is the genuine rule of the people, and therefore I hope that so far as possible the people may be given the chance through direct primaries to express their preferences as to who shall be the nominee of the Republican presidential convention.

"Very truly yours,
"Theodore Roosevelt.

"The Hon. William E. Glasscock, governor of the state of West Virginia, Charleston, W. Va.

"The Hon. Chester H. Aldrich, governor of the state of Nebraska, Lincoln, Neb.

"The Hon. Robert P. Bass, governor of the state of New Hampshire, Concord, N. H.

"The Hon. Joseph M. Carey, governor of the state of Wyoming, Cheyenne, Wyo.

"The Hon. Chase Osborn, governor of the state of Michigan, Lansing, Mich.

"The Hon. W. R. Stubbs, governor of the state of Kansas, Topeka, Kan.

"The Hon. Herbert S. Hadley, governor of the state of Missouri, Jefferson, Mo.

Governors' Letter to Roosevelt

The above-named governors assembled at Chicago two weeks ago and drafted a letter to Roosevelt, asserting that there was a popular demand that he be president again and urging him to declare himself as to whether he would accept the Republican nomination "if it came unsolicited and unsought."

For two weeks Roosevelt considered the letter, indicating that he had no intention of making a hasty reply. The governors' letter follows:

"Chicago, Feb. 10, 1912.

"We, the undersigned Republican governors, assembled for the purpose of considering what will best insure the continuation of the Republican party as a useful agency of good government, declare it our belief, after a careful investigation of the facts, that a large majority of the Republican voters of the country favor your nomination, and a large majority of the people favor your election, as the next President of the United States.

"We believe that your candidacy will insure success in the next campaign. We believe that you represent, as no other man represents, those principles and policies upon which we must appeal for a majority of the votes of the American people, and which, in our opinion, are necessary for the happiness and prosperity of the country.

"We believe that in view of this public demand you should soon declare whether, if the nomination for the presidency comes to you unsolicited and unsought, you will accept it.

"In submitting this request we are not considering your personal interests. We do not regard it as proper to consider either the interests or the preference of any man as regards the nomination for the presidency. We are expressing our sincere belief and best judgment as to what is demanded of you in the interests of the people as a whole. And we feel that you would be unresponsive to a plain public duty if you should decline to accept the nomination, coming as the voluntary expression of the wishes of a majority of the Republican voters of the United States, through the action of their delegates in the next national convention."

Nothing to Add to Statement

Boston, Feb. 26.—Theodore Roosevelt gave out his first public interview during his present visit to Boston last evening. He received a delegation of newspaper men at Judge Grant's home and talked with them for a few moments.

He announced that he will confer today with a number of friends at Grant's house, and that he hopes to meet Governor Bass of New Hampshire.

A request for a further statement in regard to his possible candidacy was refused absolutely by Roosevelt. "Everything that I have to say is said in the statement which was given out in New York," he declared.

What Bay State Leaders Think

Boston, Feb. 26.—Following is the comment of prominent men when the candidacy of Mr. Roosevelt was announced:

Governor Foss—"It doesn't make the slightest difference who is nominated, Mr. Roosevelt or Mr. Taft. A Democratic president will be elected. The fight between Roosevelt and Taft will tear the party to shreds. It is refreshing to see the Republicans fighting over principles which the Democratic party has stood for for years. We can sit back and enjoy the fight."

Former Governor John L. Bates—"I believe that Mr. Taft ought to be renominated. He has made a splendid president. Mr. Roosevelt has received all the honors that the American people can give him, and I am of the opinion that he can be as much of a power as a private citizen as a candidate for the presidency. I say this with a world of good feeling for Roosevelt. I have great admiration for him."

Former Governor John D. Long—"I regret to hear that Mr. Roosevelt is a candidate. As for myself I am with President Taft."

Congressman Powers, Taft's manager in Massachusetts—"Colonel Roosevelt's statement indicates that he is a candidate for the nomination. I do not expect that he can win. If Roosevelt wins he will change the entire policy of the Republican party. it means that there will be a fight in this state, and the Taft men have been preparing for this for some time."

SUNDAY IN OUR CHURCHES

Topics and Announcements For Coming Week

SUNDAY SCHOOLS

WOLLASTON M. E.

At the Wollaston Methodist Church, Sunday evening, Rev. Wesley Wiggin, pastor, preached the third in the series of sermons to men from the text, found in 1 Chron. 26:8 "They and their sons and their brethren, able men for strength for the service."

This is an age when there is a great demand for men of efficiency; men of large vision who can forecast the situation, and men of ability who can bring things to pass so that good profits may be realized from the capital invested, the time spent and the efforts put forth. If this is true of the business world it is no less true of the religious activities of the church. The great need is men of ability to help in the evangelization of the world in this generation.

It is said that the average man of today is only 50 per cent efficient. Proofs of this are seen on every hand. In all the professions, in the business life and in all the vocations of life, the average man is only 50 per cent efficient. Why this decadence of effectiveness? This is a startling problem and should engage the serious attention of all thoughtful people. It strikes at the very root of the physical, social, moral and spiritual welfare of the community, yea, of the whole world.

Grant that men, therefore, are only 50 per cent efficient, there is cause for serious thought in order that the remedy might be discovered and rightly applied.

A machine that gets a little dirt in it if not attended too begins to depreciate until finally it is incapable of effective service. Thus it is with men with reference to their relation to the activities of the Church. Just as soon as the dust of indifference or lack of interest, or self-indulgence begins to creep into the heart and life, man begins to lose his grip upon things religious and ere he stops to think he becomes inefficient religiously.

By efficiency we understand the power to produce results; to bring things to pass.

That Wollaston men are not religiously efficient is evident from the

I.—Spirit of Indifference Manifested. Men may not be directly opposed to the Church. They believe in it. They are willing to help support it financially. They would not want to see it taken from the community. They believe it is good for the moral uplift of the people. And yet they are not willing to put forth any effort to help in the good work. Men are at ease in Zion. They do not feel interested. They lack religious ambition. They are indifferent to any or all of the activities of the Church. They are full of business. Pleasures and amusements have their attractions. Their time is crowded with cares and active duties, but no place is found for the work of the Master, no room for service for the Church, no time for religious duties.

And yet but for the Church, many of the blessings in the every day life such as the influence of the christian home, christian citizenship, enlightenment and achievements of the highest order would be lacking. But for the Church, our Sabbath, public morals, and righteous laws would be wanting.

II. Lack of Interest. That Wollaston men are not religiously efficient is evident from the lack of interest taken in church activities. The thing that one is interested in he delights to work for.

The athlete does not find it hard or irksome to throw himself into the games day after day, and season after season, because he is interested.

The soldier who is interested in his country and believes in its principles and institutions does not hesitate to give his services in its behalf even to the sacrifice of his own life if need be to preserve it from dismemberment.

The musician, the artist, the sculptor, the physician, the lawyer, the banker, the business man, all must show a love for the work in which they are engaged, that shall find expression in active service, that results may be realized.

So long as there is no interest in things material, there can be no visible results to any marked degree. And if results are not forthcoming then men are not efficient in the place or position they occupy. If this be true in regard to the activities of the world it is no less true with reference to things religious. If there is lack of interest on the part of Wollaston men there cannot be satisfactory results proportionate to the dignity and worth of the Church. And if men are not bringing forth results as they should then they cannot be said to be religiously efficient.

III—That Wollaston men are not religiously efficient is evident from the small proportion of men that regularly attend church. Out of a population of nearly 35,000 but a small percentage is found in the Churches on Sunday or are actively interested in church work, and if we consider the percentage of men in attendance the estimate will be surprisingly small. If Wollaston men were religiously efficient then there would be a larger number who would encourage the workers by their presence and their hearty co-operation.

Halls of amusements and places of pleasure are crowded night after night and very often tarrying until late at night and often to the small hours of the morning. The minstrel show will draw full houses, and the cheaper the entertainment the larger the crowd, but a literary or popular lecture will fail to get a creditable hearing.

In the replies received from the letters sent to the business men many said that the great need of the Church was to have the business of the Church conducted on sound business principles, and we agree with them, and that is the reason we make a plea for the business man in the Church. But if men in business manifested the same spirit of indifference or lack of interest or co-operation as they generally do towards the Church 99 out of every 100 business establishments would close their doors inside of six months. If the Churches of Wollaston are to do their best work then they need the co-operation of men religiously efficient, full of love for the work and intensely interested in its progress. Let the Golden Rule be applied "Do unto others as ye would that they should do unto you" and the problem will be solved.

IV—How Shall We make the Church More Efficient?—"To make the Church more efficient in reaching men I would suggest occasionally having Rally Sunday with a social speaker." "Personal persuasive appeal and strong, magnetic preaching with enthusiastic explanation of the Word of God." A presentation of the religion of actual daily living that will actually make people feel the need of it," "Freedom of thought statement and great recognition of individuality." "Devoted personal work. First men must be interested and believe they have something the other fellow must have, then he will see that he will get it. Let even five men make up their minds that something must be done, and they are fully agreed, that thing will come to pass. In too many cases religion is served out as if it were only food for women and children. See what the Wesleys and Spurgeons and many others have accomplished."

"Establish and magnify the dignity of the Church. Elevate it above clubs and make it the best thing in the world, inasmuch as Christ established, and loved it, and gave His life for it.

"Make the Church a power in man's life entirely aside from the sermon that he may hear on Sunday, by means of social clubs and entertainments not too entirely drawn along the lines of any particular faith."

"Surely the great handicap in Quincy to our men is lack of the right kind of pleasures to get their minds out of the narrow grooves of their work, in which they become very set. The church hour on Sunday is considered by many of our best and middle class citizens as chosen particularly to display their latest gowns and hats which the poorer class do not have, and the latter naturally hesitate to mingle with the former, and in many cases the former do not really care to rub elbows with the latter. This is very frank comment but I believe it is true, and it does not apply in the Catholic church.

Sermons, I believe have changed somewhat in later years to advantage in drawing comparisons more from the trials and situations of every day life, and are made more interesting and less Biblical, at the same time forcing home the arguments to better advantage. Of course I believe in the conduct of religion, as in the conduct of any business that the closest possible touch between the head and the lowest in a church or the community is the best way to help them, and that, you in order to get results should go to the man, and not ask him to come to you.

"I believe it would help if the pastor could get in close touch with the men. Where they work, if possible as well as where they sleep and where they play. Of course, the Men's Clubs are helping in this. As to the part the church has I should say by the presentation of the life of the Master from the pulpit; get the members to see and feel their own need and get them to see the relation His life bears to present day problems.

When we get in this condition we will have interesting services both morning and evening to which we can invite men. When there, give them truths from the desk that they cannot help thinking about. Every man doesn't agree with all he hears from the pulpit, but most men, I think, who follow the pastor closely, find places in the sermon where they instinctively say "that's the truth" then you have given them something to think about."

BETHANY CHURCH.

At Bethany church, Sunday morning, Mr. Andrew Case, a man of much prominence, being engaged in the work twenty years gave an address under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A.

Mr. Case said in part:

The work of the Y. M. C. A. is rapidly increasing. God's best and noblest men are devoted to its interest, and in all parts of the country its influence for good only, is felt and its success is assured. The average boy is alert to the joy of life and accepts every pleasure and advantage that befalls him as a matter of course. Then is it not essential to surround the boy with moral and intellectual environments? These attainments are the most important features of the work: We have men in the field eminently qualified to elucidate the teaching along these lines and the public recognizes the fact.

The honest service of the directors, and these men are tremendously in earnest, is to inspire and uplift these boys, whereby they may grow in breadth and wisdom, awake to the principle of life, the element of religion and develop into noble manhood. Instances have been cited of young men who have gone astray being brought under the influence of the Y. M. C. A. and induced to lead a christian life. These statements may be amplified by the testimony of many noble men who have received the incentive to eminent and christian prosperity by and through the efforts of the Y. M. C. A. Should not this sentiment be encouraged?

The work of the Y. M. C. A. is flourishing in Candada, Montreal, Toronto and other cities and towns are achieving gratifying results.

In Chicago, Ill., the Y. M. C. A. was commenced in a small, dilapidated building: today they have a million dollar structure with fourteen branches. So let us improve our opportunities, for kindness, for generosity and consider no sacrifice too great to win our boys to live good lives and to Christian manhood.

Dr Anderson read the scripture lesson, the responsive reading and led in prayer. The choir rendered appropriate music.

In the evening Dr. Anderson preached a very eloquent sermon in the vestry. A good audience was present.

WOLLASTON BAPTIST.

Hon. George L. Richards of Malden was the speaker at the morning service. A large chorus choir under the leadership of musical director A. Dalbee sang, "Send out Thy Light." A large audience was present. The Sunday school met at 12.15 with 314 in attendance in all its departments. Mr. Richards gave a stirring talk to the men in the men's department. James P. Roberts of Quincy taught the Rand class.

The Junior Endeavor meeting was held at 3.30 with Miss Ethel M. Campbell in charge, subject: "The Miracles of Jesus."

The Y. P. S. C. E. met at 6, subject, "The Home Missionary whose life has most influenced me." The meeting was in charge of the Missionary committee.

At 7 o'clock the pastor, Rev. Joseph Walther preached on the words. "Lift up your heads, oh ye gates and be ye lift up ye evelasting doors and the King of glory shall came in," and the large chorus choir sang "Unfold ye Portals." The attendance at the evening service was very good.

The Junior Endeavor society held a social in the chapel this afternoon. at 4. Games were played; refreshments served and a general good time provided.

It is expected that some of our people will attend the Junior Endeavor conference which will be held in Bethany church this evening at 7.45. Mrs. Carrie Wentworth Kincaid, State Superintendent of Junior C. E. work will make the address.

Tuesday evening at 7.45 a cottage prayer meeting will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Roberts 202 Fayette street, Selden H. Nickerson, leader. It is expected that some of our ladies will attend the annual service of prayer for Home Missions under the auspices of the Council of Women for Home Missions (Interdenominational) in Park street church, Boston. Brief addresses will be given by Miss Olive Gibson of New Mexico, Mrs. A. B. Upham of Malden and Rev. Edgar J. Helm of the Morgan Memorial.

Friday evening at 7.45 the regular meeting for praise, prayer and testimony will be held in the chapel;; subject: "The Generosity of Jesus." This subject will continue our meditation on the life and character of Jesus.

FIRST U. P. CHURCH.

Mr. A. C. Estes naval secretary of the Y. M. C. A. of Charlestown was the speaker at the morning service. He related some very touching experiences that came under his own observation of the good work that the Y. M. C. A. has done and is doing for the young men of the navy. He made a good impression upon the congregation and we have reason to believe that addresses of this kind will increase the interest of our churches in the work that is being done in our cities by the Y. M. C. A. organization.

There was a very good representation at the Sabbath school.

The Young People's society was also well attended.

There was a larger number at the regular evening service than usual. The pastor's topic was: "The Temptation of Jesus in the Wilderness." He discussed the question as to whether it was possible for a Holy Being to yield to the power of temptation. The choir sang an anthem which was well received. The meetings of the week are:—prayer meeting on Thursday evening and meeting of Board of Trustees in the church on Friday evening at 7.30 o'clock.

WOLLASTON UNITARIAN.

A large congregation heard Rev. Carl G. Horst's inspiring sermon from the text "None of us liveth to himself." He said what the world needs is christian men and women who will show how much dignity and goodness and sweetness may characterize the life of every day. We ought, therefore to cultivate a cheerful temper. What a difference it makes whether we are cheerful or morose. If a cheerful temper does not come by nature, it should come by culture. We owe it to society.

We are to bear our troubles bravely. Every one has his peculiar burden. The burdens, we are so anxious to remove, generally have their providential value in the formation of the best type of human character. Character is not a hot house plant. but an outdoor perennial. Whatever our trouble may be, God sends with it strength to bear it. We ought to cultivate that largeness of temper and soul, which is expressed in the word magnanimity. It is needed in a world where there are altogether too many small, touchy people, full of jealousy and suspicion.

We ought to cultivate the habit of expressing appreciation. Unexpressed appreciation is of little help Men are in need of encouragement. "A word spoken in due season, how good it is." It keeps the wrinkles out of the face and the light sparkling in the eye. It is a thousand times better to say the kind appreciative word to a man, while he is laboring and struggling, than to say it of a man when he is beyond our reach. Do not keep your words of commendation in cold storage till the day of death and then bring them forth in finely written eulogistic obituaries."

This church extends a hearty welcome to the public without respect to creed, color or nationality. Its one supreme task is to help and encourage all comers by its services, ministry and friendly atmosphere. It is the Church of Good Cheer.

Quite a number of the members and friends of the Y. P. R. U. attended the mid-year sessions of the Boston Federation of Y. P. R. U. in Channing church, Dorchester, yesterday. In the evening Rev. James L. Tryon spoke on the "International Peace Movement."

Rev. Carl G. Horst attended two sessions of the Boston Ministerial Union today at which George W. Anderson, Esq., of Boston spoke on "The Minimum Wage." and Robert A. Woods of the South End House, Boston, on "The Lawrence Strike."

The auction party under the auspices of the Unitarian church Helpers in the vestry tomorrow evening, promises to be something out of the ordinary form of entertainment. Eugene F. DeNormandie will appear in the role of auctioneer.

The regular meeting of the Ladies' Aid Alliance will be held in the vestry at 2.20 P. M., Wednesday, Rev. Frederic Gill of Arlington will give the address. "Two Friends, the Body and Soul." Tea will be served after the meeting.

The public is cordially invited to attend the series of special services of worship on Wednesday evenings at 7.45 during Lent. This week the Rev. Sheed Anderson of Roxbury will be the preacher.

The annual contribution for the American Unitarian Association will be received Sunday morning, March 3. The A. U. A. is our national missionary body. It supports missions, holds conventions, aids in establishing new churches and publishes books, reports and tracts. This year, in devout gratitude for twenty-five years of Pure Christianity in Wollaston, let us give to it the largest contribution we have ever given.

The sixth annual Imperial Vaudeville is to be given in the vestry next week, Thursday and Friday.

What a pity that that excellent institution, the Young Men's Christian Association, still remains in these enlightened days a sectarian organization, which excludes liberal christians from full membership and does not permit them to hold office. Is it not high time that the Y. M. C. A. should free itself from its so-called evangelical test for membership?

MEMORIAL ATLANTIC.

Memorial church of Atlantic was supplied yesterday by Mr. E. W. Peirce of Boston in the interest of the Y. M. C. A. Mr. Peirce said in part that the association was the church at work for men and boys. He gave an illustration from literature of three brothers who attained skill, education, and efficiency, and said that the association was developing the young men in all these lines. And while the classes were attending to the mental and material welfare of the young men, he said there was a criticism of association work in regard to its spiritual work. That some supposed the strictly religious work had been neglected. But he gave figures to show that there had been more conversions in the last few years than any time in the history of the association. He said that perhaps the Boston association, and even the local association would not show that the religious work was at its best, but he quoted the country as a whole and not any section.

Mr. Peirce ended his address by saying that if such men as President Taft and the leading statesmen of the country called the secretaries to a conference to see what more could be done to further the work that the men in our churches should give their hearty support to their local association.

Rev. G. H. Gutterson, D. D., of the American Missionary association gave an illustrated lecture on the work of the Association among the colored people. He first showed the productiveness of the south in its trees, cotton and fruit. Then showed the homes of the colored people and their development from the days of slavery. His slides of the southern schools were colored and his description very interesting.

Dr. Gutterson's ideas seemed to be that the school with its mental and industrial training, and the spiritual influence of the church were leading the negro to solve his own problem. He showed slides of the prosperous homes and families of the educated colored people that would compare favorably with the average home of the working men of Massachusetts. The slides showing the shacks gave a fair idea of what has yet to be done for many who have not had the industrial training of the school. His closing slides were Abraham Lincoln, the log cabin of his birth, and the American flag.

The Sunday school is rapidly growing. It has been eight years since the Roll of Honor plan has been in working order but Mr. Blake has decided to try the plan again. William Northrop has been chosen secretary of the Roll of Honor department.

Henry Hallet, George Deans and William Buckley are the committee to arrange the program for the next meeting of the Get-Together club.

BRITISH COAL STRIKE

Project Considered Political Movement of Radical Significance

London, Feb. 26.—The coal strike, which Sir Edward Gray recently called "the greatest national disaster in our history," is now only a few days off. Nothing has been done to prevent it and nothing can be done until tomorrow, when the miners' leaders and the cabinet ministers meet again. The great mass of the miners cease work at midnight Thursday next.

Very little hope is left that the government will be able to accomplish anything.

That the movement is more than a strike for a minimum scale of wages; that it is, in fact, a political movement of the deepest and most radical significance is the declared opinion not only of the mine owners but of the leaders of the miners.

ANOTHER CRISIS AT HAND

Cuban Veteran Association Aroused by a Court Decision

Washington, Feb. 26.—Another crisis in Cuban affairs apparently is at hand. Reports from the island indicate that the unrest, temporarily quieted by Secretary Knox's recent note of warning, is about to break out anew, as a result of the Cuban supreme court's decision invalidating the law ousting office holders who were Spanish sympathizers during the revolution.

Literal execution of the court's decision would involve the reinstatement of a large number of displaced office holders and dismissal of the so-called "Veterans" who were put in their places. The leaders of the Veteran association are said to be in an ugly humor and if they should attempt to resist the decree, serious trouble would ensue.

Sudden Death of Editor

Pittsburgh, Feb. 26.—Albert J. Barr, editor of the Pittsburgh Post, the organ of the western Pennsylvania Democracy, for a generation, dropped dead of apoplexy. He had been in the best of health, seemingly, although weighed down by the heartbreak of losing the property through a receivership after a lifetime of labor as an editor.

MRS. MARY T. MILNE.

The funeral services of the late Mrs. Mary T. Milne, wife of Andrew Milne, took place at her late residence, 38 Independence avenue on Saturday at 2 o'clock. The wealth of beautiful floral offerings, and the large attendance indicated in no uncertain manner the love and esteem in which she was held. Mrs. Milne exemplified the best type of the faithful wife, the loving mother and the true friend. The loss to the home is of course the greatest but her friends and neighbors will miss her cheerful smile and ever-ready aid, in time of trouble.

"The Lord giveth his beloved sleep."

The services were conducted by the Rev. James Matheson assisted by the Rev. James Todd, D. D. The interment was in the family lot in Mt. Wollaston Cemetery.

SIXTY ARE KILLED IN BOMBARDMENT

Italian Warships Shell Syrian City and Sail Away

Beirut, Syria, Feb. 26.—Three Italian warships bombarded this city, the chief port of Syria, doing much damage to property and causing a panic among the residents, many of whom are Christians. The American Protestant college was not touched, although shells fell in the vicinity.

Sixty persons were killed in the bombardment and fifty were wounded, according to official figures. It is believed the death roll was much heavier than this.

None of the American institutions was damaged, and as far as could be determined all foreign residents, including the missionaries, are safe.

The unexpected bombardment of Bierut by the Italians is the first sign of Italian naval activity in the Mediterranean for a long period. The warships sailed away after shelling the city.

BULLET IN HIS HEAD

Boy Shot Two Years Ago Has Just Revealed the Truth

Carmel, N. J., Feb. 26.—Afraid his father would be angry, 15-year-old Ernest Moore carried a bullet embedded in the bone between his eyebrows for two years without revealing the truth. He admitted it yesterday after an attack of insomnia made it necessary to consult a physician. He had been shot by accident by a boy companion. The bullet will be extracted, probably without serious danger to the lad.

At the time he was injured the boy told his parents he had fallen on a spike. There was nothing to indicate, on a superficial examination, that there was a bullet embedded there.

Circulars Call For General Labor Strike at Lawrence

CHILDREN ARE KEPT IN CITY

Fifty Strikers Placed Under Arrest When Attempt Is Made to Ship Little Ones to Philadelphia—Police Clash With Rioting Mobs, Resulting In Disgraceful Mixup—Militia Ready to Act If Called Upon

Lawrence, Mass., Feb. 26.—Strikers in the textile mills have plastered all over town an aappeal to all of the working people of Lawrence to lay down their tools and quit toda in sympathy with the operatives who are fighting for a better wage.

The circulars declare that this is the critical moment to strike a blow in the interests of living wages. The placards had been stuck on walls and handed about generally before the police awoke to what was going on. The police then issued an order directing the arrest of any person pasting up any of the circulars

In another smaller circular an appeal is made to the militia to stop interfering with the strike pickets in their attempt to induce operatives from going to work.

More than fifty strikers, mostly women, were arrested in one of the most violent, although not the most serious, clashes that have taken place since the textile strike began six weeks ago.

The most pitiful feature was the outbreak when the police stopped the shipment of 100 children from this city, intended to be taken to Philadelphia. An attempt will be made again today to take the children away.

The police, in a squad of fifty, with soldiers near by in reserve if they were wanted, prevented the shipment of the children. A special had been obtained. Tickets had been bought. The children were labelled.

Then acting Chief Marshal Sullivan came on the scene. This was just before the train was due. The station was filled with the children and their mothers who had orought them to the station. A committee from Philadelphia was on hand to take the little ones in hand.

Sullivan strode into the station and taking in the situation, addressing the crowd, said:

"I want to give you all a chance to go home if you want to go. If you do not go home, I'll have to lock you up."

As the ringing of the train bell indicated that the train was getting ready to start, there was a rush of the mothers, augmented by the strikers in the crowd, to get the children aboard.

For a time there was a mixup that was disgraceful in its character. The women fought the policemen with tigerish ferocity. In the excitement some of the children were knocked down and trampled on. The shouts of the women in protest and the cries of the children in fear, mingled with the jangle of the train bell and the hissing steam, made a hideous bedlam. But the policemen were able to keep every child from the train.

All of the strike leaders were at the train, but they took no hand in the clash. William D. Haywood got on the train and watched from a window what took place.

Earlier in the day there had been a number of clashes between the striking women and the soldiers, and twenty-eight women were arrested. The strikers conceived the idea that they could make better headway if they would use women as pickets than if they used men. This decision was reached on the general ground that a policeman or soldier would not molest a woman as readily as a man.

The women pickets have been particularly troublesome. They have attacked the soldiers, smashed them in the face and knocked their guns from their shoulders. It has all been very trying for the young members of the militia.

Scores of men and women were felled by policemen's clubs during a fierce riot in front of Paul Chabis hall Sunday afternoon, when a squad of Metropolitan police officers attempted to disperse an infuriated mob of thousands of foreign textile workers.

Rocks and clubs were thrown at the police from windows and for a few minutes it looked as though the few policemen would be mowed down by the shower of missiles. Fifty local policemen, who were rushed to the scene, were on the verge of being driven back by the angry strikers when two companies of the militia and a troop of cavalry arrived, and within an hour the strikers were driven into their homes.

Several of the police were injured by flying rocks and wood and, while only two of the strikers were found with broken heads, scores who were struck with the hickory sticks of the police were carried into the houses by their companions.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

USING TAPIOCA.

TAPIOCA ought to be more popular, for it is a nourishing food and if cooked right is quite as palatable as gelatin.

Like gelatin, tapioca may be acceptably combined with fruits and other foods.

Tapioca is largely composed of starch, and in cooking it see that the starch is thoroughly swollen.

There are three kinds of tapioca—flake, pearl and granule. The flake and pearl should be soaked before cooking, while the granule may be used directly with boiling water.

One-fourth of a cup of tapioca to a pint of water is the usual proportion.

Tapioca is an excellent food for invalids or those who suffer from indigestion.

With Cream and Coffee.

Creamed Tapioca.—Soak three tablespoonfuls of pearl tapioca in cold water over night.

In the morning add to one quart of scalding milk and cook until the tapioca is clear.

Stir in the yolks of three eggs beaten light with three-quarters of a cupful of sugar.

Cook two or three minutes, remove from the fire, add a bit of salt and flavor to taste.

Pour into a deep dish and cover with a meringue made from whites of eggs and three tablespoonfuls of sugar.

Brown in a slow oven and serve cold.

Tapioca With Coffee.—Take strong cold coffee. Put one pint of coffee in the upper part of a double boiler on the stove.

When hot add one-fourth of a cupful of tapioca and cook for a few moments.

Then place over the hot water and cook gently, stirring occasionally until transparent.

Add one-fourth of a cupful of sugar and a pinch of salt.

Turn into small molds and serve cold with cream and sugar.

Apple Tapioca.—Take two tablespoonfuls of granulated tapioca, a quart of water, a quarter teaspoonful of salt, four tablespoonfuls of sugar, a teaspoonful of butter and four apples. Core the apples and in the centers put two tablespoonfuls of sugar and a small piece of butter. Bake in moderate oven until tender.

Put the tapioca on in the water, add the salt and the remainder of the sugar and boil fifteen minutes. Pour over the baked apples and bake in moderate oven ten minutes.

The tapioca can be flavored with vanilla, lemon peel or with ground cinnamon.

COLD MASHED POTATOES.

DON'T throw out cold mashed potatoes. Just put them away, the more the better, to use in making some of the many tasty dishes in which mashed potatoes are a prime ingredient.

The following recipes will give an idea of what may be accomplished with cold potatoes:

Potato Souffle.—Take some mashed potatoes and rub through a sieve; weigh and to each pound of potatoes add four ounces of sifted sugar, four ounces of butter, a pint of hot milk and the grated rind of a lemon.

Beat till quite smooth. Add the yolks of six eggs and the whites beaten to a stiff froth.

Have a cake tin well buttered; tie buttered paper round it outside to prevent the souffle from overflowing.

Bake in a quick oven for twenty minutes.

Delicious Cakes.

Fried Potato Cakes.—Season one pint of mashed potatoes with one tablespoonful of melted butter and one-half teaspoonful of salt and pepper to taste. Add one egg, mix until light; run through a strainer, return to the fire and stir a few minutes.

Allow to cool, form into small flat cakes or patties, roll in egg and breadcrumbs and drop into hot fat to fry a golden brown. Garnish with minced parsley.

Plain Potato Cakes.—When a bowl of mashed potatoes is left over try making scones of them for supper or breakfast.

Add a little hot milk and remash the potato; add a little more salt, then flour enough to mold the mixture into flat cakes. Toast them slowly so that they will not burn. Eat hot with butter.

Potato Cutlets.—Take mashed potatoes, add seasoning and enough hot milk to slightly moisten.

Chop fine one onion and fry golden brown in a tablespoonful of butter. Boil and chop fine carrots and white turnips to make one heaping cupful of each. Add these and the onion to the potato, season with salt and pepper, add a tablespoonful of chopped parsley and mold into small cutlets.

Dip each in slightly beaten egg, roll in fine breadcrumbs and fry golden brown in smoking hot fat.

Blizzard Claims 168 Lives

St. Petersburg, Feb. 26.—One hundred and sixty-eight peasants lost their lives in a terrible blizzard which is raging over the province of Akmolisk, Asiatic Russia. All were frozen to death.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

FRECKLES

By
Gene Stratton-Porter

COPYRIGHT, 1904, BY DOUBLEDAY, PAGE & CO.

SYNOPSIS.

Freckles, a homeless boy, is hired by Boss McLean to guard the expensive timber in the Limberlost from timber thieves.

Freckles does his work faithfully, makes friends with the birds and yearns to know more about nature. He lives with Mr. and Mrs. Duncan.

He resolves to get books and educate himself. He becomes interested in a huge pair of vultures and calls his bird friends his "chickens."

Some of the trees he is guarding are worth $1,000 each. Freckles' books arrive. He receives a call from Wessner.

Wessner attempts to bribe Freckles to betray his trust, and Freckles whips him. McLean overhears them and witnesses the fight.

Freckles' honesty saves a precious tree. He finds the nest of the vultures and is visited by a beautiful young girl.

She calls Freckles McLean's son. Freckles calls her "the angel" and helps the Bird Woman in taking photographs. McLean promises to adopt Freckles.

Freckles and the angel become very friendly. Assisted by The Bird Woman, they drive Wessner and Black Jack, timber thieves, from the Limberlost.

McLean fears more trouble, but Freckles insists upon being the sole guard of the timber. Freckles calls upon the angel's father.

The angel receives him as her equal, and her father is kind. Mrs. Duncan has exciting adventures in the Limberlost.

The Bird Woman and the angel again visit Freckles, and Freckles falls in love with the angel. The angel kisses him.

Freckles is bound and gagged by Black Jack's gang, and the timber thieves start felling a very valuable tree.

Wessner is to kill Freckles after the tree is stolen. The angel makes a daring effort to save Freckles and the tree.

McLean's men, notified by the angel, rush to save Freckles. All the timber thieves except Black Jack are captured.

Freckles guards the angel against Black Jack's vengeance. He tells McLean of his hopeless love for the angel.

Black Jack is killed by a rattlesnake. The Bird Woman gets a photograph of the baby vulture. Freckles and the angel find a valuable tree.

The tree falls, and in an effort to save the angel from death Freckles is struck and very badly injured. He appears to be dying.

The angel learns that her love alone will save him. She stifles her pride and practically proposes marriage to him.

Freckles refuses to accept her sacrifice, because he is homeless and nameless. The angel learns that Lord O'More of Ireland is seeking his lost nephew.

When he was quiet and rested the angel commenced talking to him softly.

"Dear Freckles," she was saying, "across your knees there is the face of the mother that went into the fire for you, and I know the name—old and full of honor—to which you were born. Dear heart, which will you have first?"

"Me mother!"

She lifted the lovely pictured face and set it in the nook of his arm. Freckles caught her hand and drew her down beside him, and together they gazed at the picture.

"Me mother! Oh, me mother! Can you ever be forgiving me? Oh, me beautiful little mother!" chanted Freckles over and over in exalted wonder.

"Wait!" cried the angel to the mute question she could no more answer than he could ask. "Wait, I will write it!"

She hurried to the table, caught up the nurse's pencil and on the back of a prescription tablet wrote, "Terence Maxwell O'More, Dunderry House, County Clare, Ireland."

"ME MOTHER! OH, ME MOTHER!"

Before she had finished came Freckles' voice, "Angel, are you hurrying?"

"Yes," said the angel, "I am. But there is a good deal of it. I have to put in your house and country, so that you will feel located."

"Me house?" marveled Freckles.

"Of course," said the angel. "Your uncle says your grandmother left your father her dower house and estate, because she knew his father would cut him off. You get that, and all your share of your grandfather's property besides. It is all set off for you and waiting. Lord O'More told me so. I suspect you are richer than McLean, Freckles."

She closed his fingers over the slip and straightened his hair.

"Now you are all right, dear Limberlost guard," she said. "You go to sleep and don't think of a thing but just pure joy, joy, joy! I'll keep your people until you wake up."

Freckles caught her skirt as she turned from him.

"I'll go to sleep in five minutes," he said, "if you will be doing just one thing more for me. Send for your father. Oh, angel, send for him quick!"

One instant the angel stood looking down on him. The next a crimson wave darkly stained her lovely face. Her chin began a spasmodic quivering and tears sprang into her eyes. Her hands caught at her chest as if she were stifling. Freckles' grasp on her tightened until he drew her up to and then down beside him. He slipped his arm about her and drew her face to his pillow.

"Don't angel; for the love of mercy don't be doing that," he implored. "I can't be bearing it. Tell me. You must tell me."

The angel shook her head.

"That ain't fair, angel," said Freckles. "You made me tell you when it was like tearing the heart raw from me breast. And you was for making everything heaven—just heaven and nothing else for me. If I'm so much more now than I was an hour ago, maybe I can be thinking of some way to fix things. You will be telling me?" he coaxed softly, moving his cheek against her hair.

The angel's head moved in negation. Freckles did a moment of intent thinking.

"Maybe I can be guessing," he whispered. "Will you be giving me three chances?"

There was just the faintest possible assent.

"You didn't want me to be knowing me name," guessed Freckles.

The angel's head sprang from the pillow and her tear stained face flamed with outraged indignation.

"Why, I did, too!" she burst out angrily.

"One gone," said Freckles calmly. "You didn't want me to have relatives, a home, and money."

"I did!" screamed the angel. "Didn't I go myself, all alone, into the city, and find them when I was afraid as death? I did too!"

"Two gone," said Freckles. "You didn't want the beautifulest girl in the world to be telling me"—

Down went the angel's face, and a heavy sob shook her. Freckles' clasp tightened about her shoulders, and his face, in its conflicting emotions, was a study. Despite all it meant to him to know at last his name and that he was of honorable birth—knowledge without which life was an eternal disgrace and burden—the one thing that was hammering in Freckles' heart and beating in his brain past any attempted expression was the fact that, while he might really have been nameless, the angel had told him that she loved him. He could find no word with which to begin to voice the rapture of his heart over that. But if she regretted it, if it had been a thing done out of her pity for his condition or her feeling of responsibility, if it killed him after all, there was only one thing left to do.

"Angel," whispered Freckles with his lips against her hair, "you haven't learned your history book very well, or you've forgotten."

"Forgotten what?" sobbed the angel.

"Forgotten about the real knight, ladybird," breathed Freckles softly. "Don't you know that if anything happened that made his lady sorry a real knight just simply couldn't be remembering it? Angel, darling little Swamp Angel, you be listening to me. There was one night on the trail, one solemn, grand, white night that there wasn't ever any other like before or since, when the dear boss put his arm about me and told me that he loved me, but if you care, angel, if you don't want it that way, why, I ain't remembering that anybody else ever did—not in me whole life."

The angel lifted her head and looked into the depths of Freckles' honest gray eyes, and they met hers unwaveringly, but the pain in them was pitiful.

"Do you mean," she demanded, "that you don't remember that a brazen, forward girl told you, when you hadn't asked her, that she"—the angel choked on it a second, but she gave a gulp and brought it out bravely—"that she loved you?"

"No!" thundered Freckles. "No! I don't remember anything of the kind." But all the song birds of his soul burst into melody over that one little clause. "When you hadn't asked her."

"But you will," said the angel. "You may live to be an old, old man, and then you will."

"I will not!" cried Freckles. "How can you think it, angel?"

"You won't even look as if you remember!"

"I will not!" persisted Freckles. "I'd rather give it all up now and go out into eternity alone, without ever seeing a soul of me same blood or me home or hearing another man call me by the name I was born to than to remember anything that would be hurting you, angel."

TERROR REIGNS ALONG BORDER

United States Troops Ready to Cross Into Mexico

AMERICANS' LIVES IN PERIL

Washington, Feb. 26.—Under instructions to prevent firing across the border even if they are obliged to invade Mexican territory, the Twenty-second regiment of infantry and Batteries A and B of the Third field artillery were hurried from San Antonio to reinforce the American garrison at El Paso.

With reinforcements, the United States force now at El Paso numbers 2500 troops under command of General Duncan.

Aroused by the complaints of the citizens' committee from El Paso, that a reign of terror exists all along the Rio Grande and that the lives of American citizens are in imminent peril, President Taft, acting Secretary of State Wilson and Secretary of War Stimson held a long conference.

Following this conference, orders were issued for the movement of troops. It also was decided by the president that the mobile army, numbering 34,000 men, shall be held in readiness to move on the border at a moment's notice.

Telegrams instructing commanders at every post in the United States to have supplies packed and transportation facilities at hand were sent out.

A complete plan of campaign that will be rigidly followed, should it become necessary for American troops to cross the border, is now in the possession of the military war college in this city.

After his conference with President Taft, Wilson called all chiefs of state department divisions that deal with Mexico into his office and remained closeted with them for many hours.

Information received at the state department indicates that the revolutionary movement is now general throughout Mexico. No additional news could be obtained, however, as to the present whereabouts or future intentions of General Orozco, who, it was stated, was moving upon Juarez.

So terror-stricken are American and other foreigners that they are hurrying to El Paso by the hundreds. All the hotels and many private houses are overcrowded by such guests.

HOUSE VOTES FOR MONEY TRUST PROBE

But Eight Votes Are Recorded Against the Proposition

Washington, Feb. 26.—An investigation to determine whether there is a "money trust" in the United States, operating through or in connection with the national banks, was ordered by the house by a vote of 270 to 8. While Republican regulars and insurgents protested that the inquiry as proposed was a "sham" and a "delusion," the Democratic forces united in support of a compromise money trust resolution, and succeeded in obtaining all but eight Republican votes in its support.

Another branch of the investigation, to cover any possible violation of the anti-trust law, was announced by Chairman Clayton of the judiciary committee.

A third resolution, for an investigation of railroad monopolies, was presented by Chairman Adamson of the interstate commerce committee. These are expected to form the basis of the second and third branches of the great investigation of financial, transportation and industrial affairs.

BRANDED AS FALSEHOOD

Washington, Feb. 26.—President Taft denied emphatically that in a speech in New York on Lincoln's birthday he said that "the people are not fitted for self-government."

In the first official statement of this kind that the White House has ever issued during the Taft administration, he calls the circulation of this story a "falsehood."

While it is not admitted by any one at the White House who has authority to speak for the president that his correction of the interpretation placed by some people upon his New York speech included Mr. Roosevelt, political leaders here believe such to be the case.

BISHOP HALL TO RETIRE

Vermont Prelate's Decision Due to Long-Continued Illness

Burlington, Vt., Feb. 26.—Bishop A. C. A. Hall of the Episcopal church of this state will retire from his official duties in May. His long-continued illness compels him to make this decision.

Bishop Hall is well known in Boston, where for many years he was "Father" Hall of the Cowley Brotherhood. After his election to the Episcopate he left that order.

FOR KILLING BROTHER

Connecticut Boy Held For Grand Jury on Charge of Murder

North Stonington, Conn., Feb. 26.—Dwight Miner, 17 years old, shot and killed his 20-year-old brother, Robert, with a revolver at Pendleton Hill. He was held for the New London county grand jury on a charge of murder at the conclusion of an inquest by Coroner Brown.

Dwight testified that he was playing "Wild West" with his brother and that the elder boy pointed his fingers at him and said: "bang! bang!" Dwight said that he then drew his own revolver and, pointing it at Robert, fired.

The boys' parents and other witnesses testified, after which Dwight was held for the grand jury which will meet in April. The boy was taken to the Norwich jail.

No Americans In Plot

Tokio, Feb. 26.—No arrests of American citizens have been made in connection with the alleged plot to kill the Japanese governor general of Korea, General Count Terauihi.

Farmer Held Up and Robbed

Fitchburg, Mass., Feb. 26.—Two young men held up Oliver N. Brooks, an Ashby farmer, robbed him of $15 at the point of a knife and escaped into the woods.

CAMPAIGN TO RAISE $5,000

The campaign for $5,000 for current expenses of our local Y. M. C. A., opened Sunday when the deeds and needs of this association were ably presented in ten of our city churches. The speakers pointed out the startling fact that only five young men in a hundred are church members, and only twenty-five in a hundred attend church. The Y. M. C. A. is without doubt reaching more men and doing more effective work than any force outside the church.

Some idea of the extent of this Association may be gained from the fact that there are 218,000 Y. M. C. A's. in the world today. In the United States there are 536,000 members and the property is valued at $67,000,000 and in addition there are twelve million dollars held in reserve for the Association use.

The committee in charge of this campaign are going at it in a business like manner, as is proven by their display in Saturday's and today's Ledger. Look it up and read it. It is well worth your while. They believe you should know just how the money is expended, and have issued an eight-page booklet giving that information and reasons why you should contribute to this campaign. You are welcome to one by applying at 61 Washington street.

At the recent meeting of the Granite Cutters, Polishers and Blacksmiths, John Tite, John Bryan, and Joseph Cavanaugh were elected to membership on the executive committee to serve for six months. Thomas Rogan was re-elected business agent without any opposition. Much routine business was also transacted.

PLANNING FOR CELEBRATIONS

An important meeting of the Quincy Fourth July Association will be held Wednesday evening at the rooms of the Board of Trade. The subjects to come up will be that of increasing the membership of the association, the incorporation of the association, holding a banquet and other matters. Invitations to be present have been sent to a large number of citizens.

SUNDAY IN OUR CHURCHES

WASHINGTON STREET CONG'L.

At the morning service the speaker was R. W. Berry of Gloucester, a foremost member of the Y. M. C. A. movement, who delivered a very interesting discourse on "Work of the Y. M. C. A."

At the evening service, the speaker was the pastor, Rev. Charles P. Marshall, who gave the first of his series of Lenten sermons on "Life." Next Friday the preparatory lecture will be given and the regular communion services will be observed on the following Sunday.

The Men's Club will hold its regular meeting next Wednesday. An interclub debate, with members of the Men's Club of Christ Church, on "Shall Women Receive the Franchise" will be in order.

The Ladies' Aid Society will observe an all day session at the home of Mrs. Sherwin next Wednesday, beginning at ten o'clock and terminating at four in the afternoon.

The Men's Class held an especially interesting meeting at 6.30 P. M., on Sunday. The subjects of "New Politics" and vocational training were considered at length and many interesting features developed.

Encouraging.

"Bliggins' friendship seems to flatter you."

"It doesn't flatter me," said the cynical statesman, "but it encourages me. He is one of those people who never trouble themselves to be affable except to those who are regarded as liable to have some pull."

upon a relationship with him that cannot be forgotten. He also spoke of the fine qualities of Mr. French and of his willingness at all times to do anything conducive to the best interests and general welfare of the citizens. He was loudly applauded.

Ex-councilman Joseph L. Whiton was the next speaker. He took exceptions to about everything that had been said and claimed that the Vulture was the best of the three tubs in every way. He added that the Vulture took the laurels that were always at stake and added that the members of this crew were the best fire fighters of the time. The ex-councilman was given a great ovation.

John Q. A. Field was called upon and responded in a most happy manner. He related many interesting scenes and experiences of olden days, and told of how the crew used to stay up nights to guard the Granite, on certain occasions. He also paid a tribute to Washington M. French, sheriff, constable and fireman. He was given loud applause when he had finished speaking.

A most enthusiastic ovation was accorded James T. Penniman, who has just rounded out 93 years of life and is thought to be the oldest fireman in existence, as he arose to speak. He confined his remarks solely to the different experiences encountered and was warmly applauded when he concluded.

Dr. Galen V. Bowditch needless to say, also made a decided hit, and took advantage of the situation by taking exceptions to a few remarks that had been made during the evening. His singing of the "Star Spangled Banner" took the house by storm and he was forced to respond to repeated encores.

All the members of the association were present and the gathering dispersed after participating in an event which greatly eclipsed any of the celebrations held in previous years.

The committee in charge comprised Frederick French, Frank C. Packard, Asa A. Pope, James E. Maxim and Jesse F. Curtis.

Among those present were:

Mayor Eugene R. Stone, Ex-Mayor Wm. T. Shea, Overseer of Poor Jas. Elcock, Inspector Buildings Warren S. Parker, City Engineer Ezekiel Sargent, Chief A. L. Litchfield, Civil Engineer Walter McKenzie, Board of Health Dr. F. E. Jones, City Messenger Harry W. Tirrell, Cemetery Department James F. Nicols, Commissary Department A. L. Marjory's Little Effort

"Do you honestly and truly think it's good, girls? Are you positive you are not flattering me?" asked Marjory of her literary society, known as "The Eight."

"It's splendid," answered Nan, decidedly.

"Just dear," added Ted.

"It's too cute for anything," said Evaritus.

"I consider it a strong story, even if I say so myself," said Mrs. Morse, Mildred's sister, while the other four girls added evidence of their appreciation of Marjory's literary ability.

"I've read it and reread it so many times myself that I can't judge, but I am glad you girls like it. Mother said: 'By all means send it to the paper, my child,' but mother has known me so many years that she is inclined to be partial to anything I do, from Irish crochet lace to writing stories.

"Brother Bob says that he has read many poor stories in his day, but 'this is the worst.' He advises me to save the money I spend in paper, envelopes, stamps and typewriting and send it to some poor, worthy family. He says Uncle Sam's mail department should not be compelled to carry such literature. But Bob is no critic. He was cross, anyway, when I read it to him, because the laundry failed to return his pet white vest in time for Violet's dinner dance. I don't care what he says, if you girls really like it."

"I love it," said Ted. "If you don't send that story to a magazine, Marjory Morton, I'll never speak to you again. Any editor with good judgment will eagerly grasp it."

"Well, you girls know what you know. If you insist, it goes. All hold your breath, and, if it is accepted, I'll treat you girls to a fine luncheon."

Ten days later Marjory burst into Mildred's house with: "Mildred! Mildred Morton Morse! Come! Oh, the grandest thing! Gorgeous!"

"What is the matter? Are you engaged? Who is the man? Tell me quickly, and stop screaming."

"My story has been accepted. I just received a check for ten dollars. I'm an authoress. Behold me, your sister, Marjory Morton! My name in print! Wonderful! I could just hug that beautiful editor! I'll 'phone the girls and tell the news."

"Don't forget the promised luncheon," said Mrs. Morse.

"That's so," answered Marjory. "Why did I make such a rash promise? 'Ah, pity 'tis 'tis true.'"

"We've made arrangements for me to give my luncheon—to meet at 12 o'clock next Saturday," said Marjory a short while later. "So be on deck with your white beaver hat, black velvet suit and violets. The girls were just wild with delight. Nan said she was going to fast until then."

"I think I will do likewise," said Mrs. Morse with a laugh.

"Oh, dear, now I'm a literary woman, I suppose I'll have to muss my hair, and let my skirts sag in the back. No more tube skirts and fancy bags for me!"

"Marjory, your success has surely gone to your head. Be calm and placid," said her sister.

Saturday came, as Saturdays will, but this particular Saturday "The rain was raining all around." It poured and poured and poured.

"Since the time of Noah there has never been such a deluge," wailed Marjory.

"Can't you postpone your luncheon until the sun rises?" questioned Mildred.

"Decidedly not. It's all ordered. Can't possibly countermand it at this late hour. What shall I do? No one but a duck could go on foot in this storm," questioned the hostess.

"I'm afraid, sis, it will have to be taxis," weakly suggested Mildred.

"Eight girls mean two taxis. It's dreadful! But I suppose I'll have to submit to the inevitable," said Marjory, as she left the room to call up the garage.

"As Marjory bade goodby to her friends after the affair was over, Edith said:

"It was a perfectly lovely luncheon, dear."

"Never had a better time," added Dorothy.

"You were a dear to invite us," exclaimed Violet.

"Hope you write some more stories," said Eva.

While all the rest were adding profuse thanks, Marjory was mentally figuring accounts. She discovered that the luncheon bill, taxi fares, tips to chauffeur, maids, and small corsage bouquets, amounted to exactly $19.25, while at home rested a paltry ten dollar check.

"Serves me right," she said to Mildred that night. "I'm always so impulsive with issuing my invitations.

"But we did have a jolly lark. Guess I'll run upstairs and write another story. No matinee for me this week."

She Was All Right, But—

They met for the first time since their meeting in Europe the previous summer.

"And did you have a pleasant voyage home?" asked the hostess.

"We did—very," was the answer.

"You were not ill, I hope?" asked the hostess, turning to the wife.

"No-o," said the young wife, "I was not, but I couldn't have yawned often."

FORE RIVERS MEET DEFEAT

The members of the Fore River soccer football team suffered their first defeat of the season last Saturday afternoon at Pawtucket, R. I, where they were conquered in a close and most interesting game by the Howard and Bullough team, the score being 2 to 1. By this victory the home team entered the semifinal round of the American Association.

The field was in anything but the best of condition for the game. It was covered with water several inches deep and all the players were badly fatigued and used up at the end of the struggle. Harrison, as usual, was the point winner for the losers.

Woman Formally Charged With Killing Eight Little Ones

New York, Feb. 26.—Winifred Ankers was held without bail by a magistrate in Brooklyn on a charge of having caused the death of eight babies at the Brooklyn nursery and infants' hospital, where she was employed, by placing oxalic acid in their milk.

Without counsel, the young woman faced the magistrate and, disregarding the charge, pleaded only to have her baby restored to her.

The woman had confessed, according to detectives, that she had put oxalic acid in the babies' milk, not for the purpose of killing them, but to make them ill so that it would appear the nurses, against whom she had a grudge, were not taking proper care of the infants.

LARGEST GUARANTEED CIRCULATION IN THE CITY

Vol. 27 No. 49 QUINCY, MASS, TUESDAY EVENING, FEBRUARY 27, 1912 PRICE TWO CENTS

EARLY MORNING FIRE AT WOLLASTON FOUNDRY

Two Alarms Summons Large Fighting Force to Scene and Prevents a Conflagration

Loss Estimated to Be From $12,000 to $15,000. Insured

For the second time in its history, the plant of the Wollaston Foundry Co., situated on the west side of the railroad tracks near Norfolk Downs depot was destroyed by fire shortly before 4 o'clock this morning. The fire is believed to have started from an overheated furnace in the northerly side of the main building, or foundry room.

The fire had made considerable headway before it was discovered by the watchman. The watchman at the Pneumatic Scale Co. plant discovered the fire at about the same time. He started for the box to give the alarm but finding that the foundry watchman had also started for the box turned back.

The Atlantic apparatus was the first on the scene and by that time the fire had made considerable progress and it looked like a conflagration. District Engineer Nyan who lives near by arrived as soon as did the apparatus and realizing the dangerous locality immediately ordered a second alarm sounded.

It was 3.48 when the first alarm sounded and the ten blows of the second alarm followed almost as soon as the box had done striking. The ten blows however were misinterpreted, as the rounds of the box followed so quickly after the blows. This led to some confusion and was taken at the Central and West Quincy stations to be due to trouble on the wires.

For this reason the steamer, hose and ladder of the central station or the ladder and hose from the West Quincy station did not start. District Chief Badger of West Quincy responded however and on arriving at the fire and finding that his aparatus had not started, both that and the central station were reached by telephone.

The steamer was stationed at a dead end hydrant and played two streams. Lines of hose were also laid from the hydrant on Farrington street, some distance away. There seemed to be a lack of water pressure from the hydrant stream but the steamer did good work.

The two alarms brought a large fire fighting force and Chief Litchfield, seeing that the buildings of the

LEGISLATORS VISIT SEAGIRT

MAKE NO COMMENTS

Five large touring care were required to convey the members of the Joint Committee on Towns and others in charge of the separation of Houghs Neck, this morning on an investigation through the different sections of that part of the city, which a number of residents have already petitioned the legislature to have established as the Town of "Seagirt." The members of the legislative committee arrived at City Hall, in automobiles, shortly after ten o'clock. ,

After all the members of the party had been introduced to His Honor Mayor Eugene R. Stone, City Solicitor John W. McAnarney then led the way to the Council Chamber, where he explained to all in the party the different locations, etc., of Houghs Neck, by means of a large map. He outlined the different streets, the area which the section covered, and in short, gave the members a complete idea of the place they were going to investigate.

All then got in the automobiles and proceeded to Houghs Neck The members from the legislature included the entire membership of the Joint Committee on Towns. They were Hon. Arthur S. Adams, of Marblehead, chairman on the part of the Senate, Hon. William H. Wheeler, of Lexing-

RELIEVED FROM ACTIVE DUTY

Leave of Absence Granted Fireman Capt. C. P. Costa

TO BE RETIRED LATER

At a recent meeting of the City Council a petition was received from Capt. Charles P. Costa asking that he be retired, under the firemen's pension ordinance owing to physical disabilities. Unfortunately the ordinance does not allow a fireman to be retired on half pay until he has served for twenty years. Capt. Costa has been a member of the department but nineteen years. The Committee on Fire Department however did the next best thing, that was to offer a resolution recommending that His Honor grant Capt. Costa a leave of absence, with such compensation as he deemed best until such time as he shall have become eligible to retirement.

CAPT. CHARLES P. COSTA.

This resolution Mayor Stone has approved and Capt. Costa is now on a leave of absence, and it is probable that at the expiration of his twenty years of service he will be retired.

Capt. Costa was born in the Azores islands, March 19, 1847 and came to this country a few years later where he learned the trade of an engineer.

January 25, 1864 he enlisted in Co. D. 59th regiment and was mustered out of service at the close of the war July 30, 1865.

When T. H. J. Thayer resigned as engineer of the steamer Capt. Costa was appointed to that position, which he assumed in March 1893 and has since held. In 1906, under Chief Litchfield, when the City Council amended the Fire Department ordinance creating the offices of Captain and Lieutenant. Capt. Costa was appointed under the veteran civil service clause as Captain which position he has since held.

The life of a fireman is not always a bed of roses and frequent exposure in all kinds of weather have had their effect on Capt. Costa, who as stated above is incapacitated from active duty owing to exposure and advancing years.

Capt. Costa is a member of Paul Revere Post 88 G. A. R. and of the W. M. French Hose Association.

HUNT FOR FUNDS STARTS TODAY

Two Large Contributions for Campaign Fund Announced

$500 AND $100

Half a hundred men in love with the work of the Young Men's Christian Association start this morning on the search for funds to meet the expenses of the current year. Monday evening they met in the association hall and after doing full justice to the splendid supper furnished by the Ladies Auxiliary, they at once got right down to business. Chairman Henry L. Kincaide of the campaign committee told the men in detail of the preliminary work which has been done. He called attention to the large six-foot sign on the balcony "WORK WINS" and then, lest any man should harbor a doubt as to the exact meaning of the word "Work," he quoted the many definitions given by Webster and very neatly applied them to this particular problem. He then called attention to the great twelve foot sign on the platform "WORK WINS this WEEK" which he said spoke for itself.

The chairman then introduced Mr. E. W. Hearne, State Secretary of Y. M. C. A., who called forth great applause from every man present by congratulating them upon their able and efficient chairman. He spoke words of encouragement to the workers and answered several questions the men asked in regard to various details connected with the campaign.

Four teams were then organized and the chairman started them out to work encouraged by the announcement of the generous gift of $500 from one prominent citizen, and $100 from another.

The workers will meet every evening this week at the Association building at 6 P. M. to report on the progress of the campaign.

HEARING TO BE HELD FRIDAY

There have been several incidents of late tending to show that the Board of Trade is taking on a new lease of life, and of the advantages that come from having a secretary who is on duty all of the time. The latest in this line is the notice sent out by the secretary this morning of the hearing to be held before the legislative committee on Metropolitan Affairs, on the bill which calls for the completing of the boulevard from Quincy Shore Reservation to Hancock street. The hearing is to be held in Room 240 at the State House, Friday at 10.30 and it is hoped that there will be a large attendance of citizens present to speak for the bill, or to show that they are in favor of it by their presence.

After refusing many offers, Mr. Nikisch comes on this tour because his manager, Warren R. VOCATIONAL EDUCATION

Supt. Barbour Explains System to Willard Parents

LARGE ATTENDANCE

A largely attended meeting of the teaching force of the Willard school and the parents of the pupils of the school was held in the Willard school building Monday evening. While definite steps were not taken at this meeting to form a parents' and Teachers' association, considerable enthusiasm in this line was evoked and it will only be a matter of a short time before this school will be enrolled among those of the city which have formed these organizations.

Henry L. Upton, master of the school presided and after a few words of welcome to the parents and teachers, introduced Superintendent Barbour. Supt. Barbour spoke at length on the system of vocational training, explaining in detail what the school committee hope to accomplish by the establishment of the system in the Quincy schools. He also told how it would help those boys who are somewhat backward in their studies and who have no definite ideas for their future after leaving school.

He said in part:

The school system should meet the needs of the boys who are mechani-

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

The president of China will have a sweet old time trying to shake hands with 434,000,000 people.

Lake Superior is frozen over, but if the Duluth youngsters try to skate around the pond they'll be late to school.

It is claimed that statistics prove that Yale athletes are long lived. One thing is sure, that hard study never hurt them.

Mr. Taft favors a world-wide inquiry on the cost of living. Let's all stop work a year, and find out what in thunder is the matter anyway.

The Order of the Garter has been conferred on Sir Edward Grey, but so far as we can see he will have to hold his other stocking up with a safety pin.

Ella Wheeler Wilcox is named to be the first woman to go on the Supreme bench, but as Ella is a poet, we do not feel sure that she would have her hat on straight.

The number of newspapers has fallen off slightly the past year. Had the subscribers even been willing to pay in cord wood, it would have helped these defunct publications.

It is said that Anita Stewart, who married Don Miguel, may be the queen of Portugal. From the present rickety condition of the throne, we should rather sit down in a well built Grand Rapids chair.

QUINCY Y. M. C. A. APPEAL.

Most of our citizens have received the following letter which speaks for itself. But in case it was thoughtlessly read or not read at all but consigned to the waste paper basket as circulars are sometimes apt to be, we reprint it in full that it may have greater publicity and supplement other advertising.

Headquarters of the $5,000 Current Expense Campaign, Quincy Young Men's Christian Association, Henry L. Kincaide, chairman, J. A. Sedgwick, Delcevare King and Fred Barnicoat, Executive Committee.

Dear Friend and Neighbor:

Would you give five, ten, twenty, fifty or a hundred dollars to help build a fence at the top of a cliff over which your boy or mine might some day go?

Would you not like to know of the deeds and needs of the live local "light-house" that's keeping many a man, young man and boy from the rocks of ruin?

I believe you would. Just listen.

It will cost $9000 to run the Quincy Young Mens Christian Association this year, and our income from all visible sources is $4000. That leaves us, you see, $5000 in debt. That, in turn, leaves us no alternative but a man-to-man appeal for your assistance.

You'll get some idea of the great work we are really doing—of what we plan to do—of what it costs—just how the money is expended—and many other items of interest, from the inclosed booklet. And if you wish, we'll be very glad to show you through the Association building and personally tell you more of its work.

Now listen. Early this week one of our workers will call at your home for whatever amount you may care to give. We plan to have the $5000 by next Saturday night,—with YOUR help we will.

The more you give, the stronger will be the fence—the brighter the light. HELP! Help us help the boys.

Very sincerely yours,
HENRY L. KINCAIDE
Chairman Executive Committee.

In response to the query: "Why should I help the Quincy Young Men's Association?" the committee answers as follows: "It is a great civic enterprise; to make the world better, beginning with the boys."

Because the Quincy Young Men's Christian Association:

Is a high-grade, low-cost Young Men's Club—Christian, but non-sectarian.

Is an athletic organization that does not use men to promote athletics, but uses athletics to develop men;—a night school for young men that work by day;—a home for young men away from home—a place for a young man to find friends and to make himself a friend to the man that needs friends.

It helps young men not only to help themselves, but to help the other fellow.

It is controlled by representatives of churches. This keeps it a Christian organization, but prevents it from becoming another church.

Its fellowship, club-rooms, gymnasium, baths, classes and all other practical advantages are open to all young men, of all faiths or of no faith.

MEN'S FASHIONS.

The Custom Cutters' Association of America in session at Buffalo, has given out the fateful decree that for 1912 the well dressed man must give an impression of slenderness. No padded shoulders are allowed, and tighter fits are the order of the day. If a man is not slender, his tailor must make him look so.

Now we are willing to admit that there is a certain percentage of men who know what the styles for men's clothing are. The newspapers usually publish a column every spring and fall, descriptive of men's fashions. When we were very young we used to read and ponder those articles. We assume that other persons do so now, dreary though they may be.

At the same time, if you ask the average business man about men's fashions, can he give you more than the most hazy idea? If he sees a new hat or new coat on the street, and the characteristics of its newness form any distinct impression on his mind, he probably thinks the wearer was dragging away behind the style because it looks so odd.

In spite of the efforts of the tailors to promote the sale of their wares through frequent fashion changes, which would make clothes out of style before they are worn out, the style of loose clothes for men has had a general ascendency for quite a number of years. It appeals to men as comfortable.

Futhermore, active men cannot forever remain in those statuesque poses in which only tight garments look well. The moment they get active at their desk or out of doors, their tight clothes begin to wrinkle and look as if they did not fit. Men never looked so well in the actual stress of business, as they have since loose clothes were good form. They should stand up like adamant against efforts of the tailors to break up their exterior into awkward and ungraceful wrinkles.

Back in the days of tight clothes, we can recall trousers, which according to reputation, could be donned only by use of a shoe horn. May the saints deliver us from anything so ill-suited to man's daily tasks!

FEDERATION AND ANNEXATION.

Early next month the hearing will be held before the legislative committee on metropolitan affairs on the various bills before the legislature looking to metropolitan federation or annexation to Boston. The more radical annexation bills will probably not be pressed, as it is generally recognized that public sentiment in the cities and towns about Boston is firmly opposed to merging with Boston.

Of the federation plans the hardest fight will doubtless come on the metropolitan plan commission. When this commission was first broached it appeared popular, but now most of the cities and towns about Boston are in opposition. The increase in metropolitan expenses without adequate return is one great objection. It is proposed to pay the chairman of the plan commission $10,000 per year. Local rights and privileges are to be taken away to a degree, and results are certain to be unsatisfactory, as the plan is visionary.

The legislation proposed is compulsory. There is no option left to the cities and towns if the bill passes, so it is doubly necessary for the opposition to put in its case at the legislative hearing. This will be held on March 6, and will probably be one of the liveliest hearings of the year.—Somerville Journal.

RECOMMEND THE APPEAL OF LAW

Legislative Committee Report on Gunning Law

PLEASING TO GUNNERS

Those men in Quincy, and there are many of them, who enjoy shooting wild fowl either from the shore or inland will be gladdened at the decision of the legislative committee on Fisheries and Game whereby they recommend the repeal of the existing law relative to the hours in which it is lawful to shoot duck, geese and coot. At present the hunters who maintain camps and shooting stands, are in danger of fine and imprisonment if they are seen or detected shooting the birds during the time between two hours after sunset and two hours before sunrise. Hereafter, unless the legislature refuse to stand by the committee (an improbability almost beyond possibility) the sportsmen may shoot at any hour of night without fear of the law's clutches.

All along our shores, except that portion owned by the State for reservation purposes, there are gunning stands where in the open season from October 25 to January 1, the gunners congregate to amuse themselves shooting the game birds. Many of Quincy's sportsmen also maintain camps at the lakes and ponds in Randolph, Whitman and the Bridgewaters and the repeal of the law will cause them joy.

The present law was passed at the earnest request of the Audubon society who claimed that our wild fowl were becoming extinct. The immense numbers of the birds, most of whom are not migratory, shows the protective policy not necessary. Another strong argument against the law as it exists is the fact many poor families are partially deprived of a source of food supply and the present agitation concerning the high cost of living is entered into. Another change that is more than probable along these lines is that of extending the open season until May 1. This, however, is still pending.

STRIKE IN BLANKET MILL AFFECTS 500

New Bedford Weavers, Denied an Advance, Walk Out

New Bedford, Mass., Feb. 27.—A strike of the weavers in the Beacon mill resulted in the shutting down of the plant. The weavers, numbering about 100, had previously demanded a 10 percent increase in wages and the mill officials had refused to grant the demand. The average wage at present is a little less than $12 a week. The weavers work on blankets exclusively.

The mill has been running overtime for some time past, being operated for three hours on three nights a week. When the weavers walked out the management decided it would be useless to attempt to continue operations in the other departments.

William Yates, the Lawrence strike leader, has telegraphed the striking weavers he will either come in person or send a representative to take charge. About 500 employes are affected by the strike.

Stranger Who Calls Himself "Messiah" Lets Go With Revolver

London, Feb. 27.—A sensation was caused among the members of the house of commons last evening by an individual dressed in clerical garb who called himself the "Messiah" discharging several shots from a revolver toward the ceiling in the lobby.

The stranger was sitting in the outer lobby when he suddenly opened fire, causing a stampede among the members. The man was arrested and removed, shouting "Hands off the Messiah."

ATTACKS COUNTY COMMISSIONERS

The building of the new court house and charges of graft against the Norfolk County Commissioners were revived Saturday in a hearing before the State committee on Counties. Frederick T. Fuller, of Walpole, is the petitioner of a bill whereby all the counties of the State would become governed as the cities and State are now, that is by a representative form of government instead of three commissioners. Mr. Fuller made serious charges against the method employed by the Norfolk County men in the construction of the bridge at North Cohasset and the new court house in Quincy. He also attacked the Middlesex County Commissioners in some construction work in that county. The Middlesex chairman was present, however, and able to defend his board but nobody represented Norfolk County and the charges went unrefuted.

Mr. Fuller said a more economic and public administration of county affairs was the desire of the majority of voters now, and the present method afforded neither. He saw no reason why counties should have an entirely different government than the muncipal and State forms.

Hiss bill was taken under advisement by the committee, who will undoubtedly investigate his charges and report to the General Court.

DOINGS OF FORMER RESIDENTS.

Older Quincy residents will be interested in some things of note which have been done recently by persons who formerly lived here. In Portland, Oregon, last January, ground was broken for the first Reed college buildings. This institution was founded by Mrs. Amanda Wood Reed, who was a Quincy girl. Her father was Henry Wood, known to some who are still living. Mrs. Reed left three million dollars for the establishment of Reed college in memory of her husband. The college hopes to begin its work in at least three buildings by next September, and the promise is that it will be one of the finest educational institutions on the Pacific coast. Curiously enough the President of the Board of Trustees is also connected with Quincy, although in a remote way. He is the Rev. Dr. Thomas B. Eliot who is a Cranch on his mother's side, she being a grand-daughter of Richard Cranch our first postmaster. The mother of Dr. Eliot was Nancy Greenleaf, sister of John Greenleaf who lives in the ancient Quincy mansion now owned by the Colonial Dames.

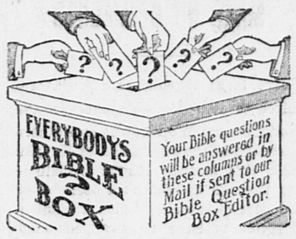

The name of John Adams Thayer is one easily and pleasantly recalled by the people of Quincy. He was for a number of years a resident of the city, living with his sister, Mrs. James H. Slade. While here he was immersed in printing offices and type foundries,—a natural step to the publication business. As manager of the advertising department of The Ladies' Home Journal he began what has turned out to be a remarkably successful career. A month and a day on Munsey's magazine, a most interesting episode; a year on the Boston Journal; four years on The Delineator, where he won out in a brave fight for clean advertising, landed him as chief purchaser of Everybody's magazine. His enterprise and high principles put new life into that magazine and drew on the culminating success to which Lawson and his "Frenzied Finance" contributed so effectively. Lately Mr. Thayer sold his iterest in Everybody's and bought The Smart Set. It is a pleasant thing to see at the bottom of the title page of that magazine the words John Adams Thayer Corporation. Doubtless he will make the publication as notable a success as he did Everybody's. He is making even more emphatic the high literary quality of this "magazine of cleverness" while at the same time he is broadening its scope. Dickens said of the United States that this is the land of the smart set. "Oh, he's smart!" was the verdict he heard utterd about everyone who was good for anything. So Mr. Thayer is to be congratulated upon the bigness of his constituency.

An interesting and an instructive life Mr. Thayer has led up to the present time. The details of it, he has written and had printed. The book, which he entitles "Astir, A Publisher's Life Story," is unique in American literature. Over twenty-five thousand copies have been sold. Far more interesting than most novels, it has what W. D. Howells calls "breath-stopping, hair-raising frankness." He certainly takes the American people into his confidence, and without a reservation tells them through many an absorbing incident the way he won success in the business of a publisher. Recently he has issued a popular edition of Astir. He calls it by the new name, Out of the Rut. It is beautifully printed in magazine form and at magazine price. In this autobiography of his he has something to say about Quincy, but its chief interest is in the years after he left our city.

Mr. Charles Francis Adams, our former fellow-citizen, has added another book to the many that he has written. Its title is Studies, Military and Diplomatic. The military studies are most numerous and have to do with the battles of the Revolution as well as with the events of the Civil War. Very interesting is his showing that the Americans at the battle of Bunker Hill were saved from utter defeat and capture only by the gross blundering of the British. The diplomatic studies and one or two of the military studies concerned with the civil war admit us behind the scenes, and reveal more than any other writings the controlling forces of that great conflict. Familiarity with his father's diary and related papers affords Mr. Adams this advantage. Perhaps we have here an intimation that the world is soon to see that important diary in published form. If so, it will be an event in the history of our times.

In Studies Military and Diplomatic the vigor, thoroughness and passion for the truth, so characteristic of all Mr. Adams' writings, are undiminished. As one is carried along in a direct and forceful stream of argument and exposition he feels that the concluding word is said, that nothing more will need to be added. He gave us in his Three Episodes of Massachusetts History such a town history as no other community in New England is fortunate enough to possess. In his later writings the Nation is receiving light upon the good and the evil tendencies of the times which should prove highly beneficial. His frankness and courage in dealing with the unpopular side of great questions distinguishes him among present writers. These qualities exercised in absolute devotion to truth, constitute a family trait. We should be proud that here in Quincy was the chief scene of its growth and of its transmission through so many generations.

Q.—Does the Bible teach a return of the Jews to Palestine and is that country large enough for all of Abraham's descendants? (F. W.)

Answer.—The Bible answer is Yes to both questions: (a) "I will open your graves, and cause you to come up out of your graves and will bring you again into the land of Israel." "Ye shall dwell in the land that I gave to your fathers; and ye shall be My people, and I will be your God." "And they shall say, this land that was desolate is become like the Garden of Eden." (Ezekiel xxxvii, 12; xxxvi, 27-35). (b) What is known as the land of Palestine is but a very small part of the promised land, which is to stretch from the Nile to the Euphrates (Genesis xv, 18), and appears to include Arabia as well as parts of Egypt and the Soudan, an era equal to the half of Europe. Much of this is now desert land, but "the desert shall rejoice and blossom as the rose" (Isaiah xxxv 1). Thus there will be ample space and abundant provision made for the Israelites in the promised land—promised for an everlasting possession to Abraham and his descendants—when God's favor will have returned to them as foretold by the Prophets.—Romans xi, 25-27.

CAKES, CANDY AND FROSTING

Last of Demonstrative Lectures in Cooking by Mrs. Hill

THE MENU

The last in the series of five demonstration lectures, under the auspices of and for the benefit of Wollaston Kindergarten, Mrs. Carroll E. Bates, chairman, was given Monday afternoon in Brasee hall, Wollaston. Mrs. Janet McKenzie Hill's subject was cakes, frostings, and candy. First on the menu was yellow cake with a caramel nut frosting—which was simply delicious.

During the process of making Mrs. Hill gave not only every detail concerning the cake she was making but also general directions for cakes, not made with butter, etc., how to measure; sifting of flour which should always be pastry; the creaming of butter; buttering and flouring as well as papering a pan; the beating of eggs for different kinds of cake mixtures; temperature of oven, etc.

Whichever kind you are baking, divide the time required into quarters, during the first quarter, the heating is not manifested in appearance, except by the rising; during the second the cake should continue to rise and begin to brown; then should become all over a rich golden brown and in the last quarter settle a little and shrink from the pan. An oven door may be opened a reasonable number of times provided it be done without jarring the cake. When a cake has reached its full height and the cells have not become fixed by the heat, the slight jar of moving breaks down the cells and no carbon dioxide remains by which other cells may be evolved and the cake is heavy. Several valuable hints were given in regard to making the frosting; temperature of cooking; covering the sauce pan, etc.

Mrs. Hill is generous with her wealth of information and right here many points in regard to the making of omelettes were given. Butterine, Crisco and peanut oil were also discussed.

A jelly roll was very quickly and easily made. It baked in fifteen minutes, was spread with currant jelly, rolled in paper and when sampled pronounced excellent.

Swedish sponge cake was a fine cake and light as a feather. German crisps, one half cup of butter, one cup of sugar, one-half a lemon, grated rind and juice, one egg and one yolk, flour for dough. White of one egg and granulated sugar for glazing, nuts, fruit, etc for decoration. They were cut in different shapes; were very pretty to look at, delicious to eat, and something novel for special occasions.

Candied grape fruit peel was something out of the ordinary and a most delicious confection. Sweets eaten in moderation are not injurious especially when eaten directly after meals.

Fruit fudge was simply delicious, a flavor entirely new and during the making numerous valuable hints in regard to candy making were given.

Last but not least on the menu were chocolate caramels and when sampled they were pronounced "the best ever,

The lectures have been especially instructive and Mrs Hill's pleasing personality and kindness in answering questions has been much appreciated. At the close Mrs. Hill was given hearty applause to which she replied expressing her thanks for the interest and attention shown her.

After the lecture there was homemade cake for sale. The National Biscuit Company's contribution of goods was also sold for the benefit of the committee.

FOR SELF-PROTECTION

Uncle Sam Investigating Conditions Along Mexican Border

Washington, Feb. 27.—General turbulence in northern Mexico, menacing the lives and interests of Americans along the border, moved the Washington government to definite plans for self-protection.

Captain Mahlin Craig of the general staff was ordered from San Francisco to investigate conditions in the Imperial valley and along the California border. Two companies of the Fourth cavalry were dispatched to Douglas, and one company to Nogales, two points in Arizona which suffered during the last revolution.

SAMOSET CLUB MINSTREL SHOW

Jokes of the End Men Convulse Audience with Laughter

DANCE FOLLOWS

Fully 350 people were treated to an entertainment of high class, Monday evening in Alpha hall, where the members of the Samoset club, one of the foremost organizations of the city, held forth in their annual minstrels. Everything was carried out to complete satisfaction and the affair proved to be the most successful ever held by the organization.

The curtain arose promptly at 8 o'clock and from that time, until the conclusion of the show, a little more than two hours later, the audience seemed to be in a continual state of mirth and laughter as a result of jokes and jocosing expressions that were handed out from time to time.

The ushers for the occasion comprised a number of young ladies, all of whom are prominently known in local circles. In addition to securing seats for those in attendance, they distributed programs. They were the Misses Lucy Chase, Helen Seavey, Dorothy Sayward, Helen Jones, Frances Jones and Persis Thompson.

The latest songs of the day were sung during the evening, and so splendidly did each participator accredit himself that it would be difficult to name any particular one to whom the laurels should go. The director was Frederick Munroe, who was assisted at the piano by his wife. Much of the success attained must be attributed to the director.

William W. Nichols ably performed the work of interlocutor, while the end men included James E. Claflin, Harry G. Campbell, Dr. Ernest Merrill and Charles Thompson.

Those in the circle were Ralph Simmons, Max Pinkham, William Murphy, Charles Sayward, Eugene Sanders, Albert Healey, George Pinkham, J. E. Lewis, Brandt Lupton, Carleton Lewis, Harold Nash, Sidney Claflin.

The opening chorus consisted of the "Samoset Medley," arranged by the director. "Gee But I Like Music With My Meals," sung by Harry G. Campbell, made a great hit

Dr. Ernest Merrill was forced to respond a second time for his rendition of "That Mysterious Rag," while William Murphy was accorded an equal ovation with his solo "Under the Southern Moonlight." "That Mexican Twist." proved a favorite among those present and Charles Thompson was called upon to repeat a couple of times.

"Ragtime Violin" by James E. Claflin was a great drawing card and was greatly appreciated.

Ryder Gay sang a solo in his usual style, while Harry Campbell and Dr. Merrill again came into the limelight with "Woodman, Woodman, Spare That Tree" and "He's Coming Back" respectively, "Band, Band, Band" was the grand finale which brought a most enjoyable event to a close.

During the show James E. Claflin furnished an original sketch which elicited great enthusiasm. William Murphy, impersonating a musical man, also took the house by storm, while Wallace Bennett, with "Every Move a Picture" lived up to all that had been predicted about him. The club quartette comprised of the end men, rendered a number of selections which were most favorably received.

At the conclusion of the minstrels the floor was cleared for dancing, which was enjoyed till midnight. Munroe's orchestra provided music and the entire affair was acclaimed as the best in the history of the club.

The committee in charge was composed of Charles Sayward, William B. Nichols, Harry G. Campbell, Dr. Ernest Merrill and Charles Thompson.

UNIVERSALIST WEEK SERVICES

Able Address by Dr. Conklin on "Help From the Heights"

TONIGHT'S MEETING

Monday night, the second night of "Universalist Week," found a large company at the Universalist church to listen to Rev. Charles Conklin, D. D., of Boston. Dr. Conklin is a speaker of great force and impressiveness and he held the closest attention of his hearers during the entire sermon. His subject was "Help from the Heights" and his text that prayer of King David, uttered in a time of great crisis and need, "Lead me to the Rock that is higher than I." Such times of stress and need come to all. They cry out for help, often instinctively and blindly. They call upon the name of God, though they have not known him, though they have been neglectful of the opportunities and claims of religion. And here it is that the religious man has the advantage. He knows the source of help; he is acquainted with his God. He has faith, an assured trust that his prayer is heard and answered. His need is met.

The speaker went on to show in detail how necessary it is at the present time, in matters of business, amusement, in politics and all the varied field of human interests that men look up to the heights and that they key their lives to high ideals and great principles, to the standards that are set by religion.

The evening Rev. Harry Adams Hersey of West Somerville will preach upon the subject, "The Substance of Life." He should have a large hearing.

EARLY MORNING FIRE

Pneumatic Scale Co., and the Robbins Iron Foundry were being constantly threatened, stationed men with hose at these plants and prevented the fire from spreading. In the meantime other firemen were giving their attention to the main fire. This was kept confined to the foundry building in which it started, although this building was practically destroyed.

In this building were a large number of patterns from which castings were being made and these were destroyed. Most of the valuable patterns however were in the pattern house which was saved. The office building near by was also saved as were some of the other buildings.

The loss is one hard to estimate, but Chief Litchfield believes that it will be from $12,000 to $15,000 which is fully covered by insurance.

The Wollaston Foundry Co. is one of the oldest plants in the city, having been established in 1873 at which time it was incorporated for $30,000. At its start a specialty was made of piano plate but of late years general foundry castings were made such as shoe machinery and light machinery castings.

The original plant was destroyed by fire in 1892 but the work of rebuilding was immediately commenced and in six weeks, work was resumed and the plant running as usual. Since that time the plant has been enlarged several times by the addition of new buildings. The ownership of the company still remains in the Lincoln family, its founders.

CONGRESS TO PROBE STRIKE

Meanwhile No More Children Will Be Shipped Away

RIOTOUS DAY AT LAWRENCE

Many Arrests After Armed Strikers Make Attack Upon Police—Women and Girls Pushed Into Foreground of Mobs by Less Heroic Men—No Indication of Settlement of Trouble—Gains Reported In Two Mills

Lawrence, Mass., Feb. 27.—Pending a congressional investigation, which is expected to start some day this week in Washington and at which a committee of the strikers and of the children will be present, no attempt was made to send children to Philadelphia, as had been planned, this morning.

Until the announcement made by the strike leaders last night a clash had been feared this morning, for City Marshal Sullivan had announced that until some higher authority instructed him that he was not acting within the law, he would do all in his power to prevent the exportation of children, which, it is claimed by the authorities, is done for exploitation purposes and not because of lack of ability of the city to feed them.

As an aftermath of one of the most riotous days since the inception of the strike, seven weeks ago, the district court was in session far into last evening and Judge Mahoney heard sixty-eight cases, the majority of which had a direct bearing on the strike situation.

But one jail sentence was meted out. This was imposed upon Julia Yulka, who was charged with assault on an officer, it being alleged that she threw pepper in the face of Patrolman O'Brien when he sought to prevent her from intimidating those who wished to go to work. She was sent away for thirty days.

The others, most of whom were charged with intimidation, disturbances, drunkenness, assault and the like, were fined from $3 to $10 each.

Judge Mahoney, while disposing of the cases, made a statement in which he declared that the police had not yet been able to get at those who are really responsible for the trouble in the city, and in which he severely criticised those who push the women and children forward to do their work. His comment followed the hearing of the case of a woman who was alleged to have interfered with an officer by grabbing at his coat.

A cowardly attack by armed strikers upon a few metropolitan and state police officers, which resulted in one of the strikers being shot by the return fire of the policemen, and numerous riots which led to the arrest of nearly fifty men and women, has caused the citizens of Lawrence to believe that the real violence of the strike has only begun.

Rumors of violence are in the air. There is no sign of peace in sight; not the slightest indication of a settlement of the great textile strike.

Locked in the county jail are Savatore Bruno, charged with attempt to murder, on two counts, and Santo Rico, alleged to have stabbed State Officer Thompson. Placito Rabino is at the general hospital with a serious bullet wound in his back. A dozen others, who fired at the police from windows, roofs and alleyways are still at large.

The local police, augmented by eighteen members of the state police, quickly dispersed the rioters. There was no promiscuous clubbing, and although the officers charged the crowds with night sticks drawn, the memory of the thud of hickory clubs on heads Sunday night caused the crowds to break.

It was the women again that gave the police the most trouble. Ignorant mothers and girl strikers, pushed into the foreground by less heroic men, were encouraged to fight the officers by the defiant howls of their husbands and brothers in the rear.

Gains in the number of operatives were made at the Arlington and Atlantic mills yesterday. Agent Curtis of the Atlantic mills stated that 100 more looms were started. It is claimed that nearly 70 percent of the regular force of the Arlington mills has returned to work.

The mills of the American Woolen company remain about the same as last week. Slight gains were made in some departments, but on the whole the situation is unchanged.

The city council put a ban on all dances and public entertainments of the soldiers in the mills, and there will be no more informal hops in the weave sheds.

SHAW STOCK SEIZED

Embezzler Came Near Taking $50,000 In Cash With Him

Boston, Feb. 27.—Securities totalling about $6500, and indorsed, it is said, by Mrs. Georgia M. Stuart, have been seized by the Los Angeles police as the property of A. W. Shaw, who is held there for the Boston police, as an embezzler from the Shaw Shoe company of Freeport, Me.

If Shaw had delayed his departure from Boston only four hours, he would probably have carried with him $50,000 in cash, according to a statement made by a person connected with the case.

Shaw had applied to a local trust company for a loan of that amount several days before he fled, and only his sudden determination to leave the city caused him to miss the prize, it is said. The officials of the bank in question were ready to act favorably on Shaw's application when he disappeared.

COMPLAINT IS UNIVERSAL

Express Companies Must Find Remedy For Annoying Practices

Washington, Feb. 27.—Demands for transportation charges on prepaid shipments must cease. The complaint of this practice of express companies is universal, and a remedy for it must be found."

This ultimatum was laid down by Commissioner Lane to the express companies after the resumption of the investigation of the interstate commerce commission into the rates, methods and practices of the companies.

"We must find some method of ascertaining the proper rate and how properly to collect it. It comes down to that," said Lane.

METHOD OF MONEY PROBE

Report Relating to It Is Presented to Full Committee

Washington, Feb. 27.—The first definite step relating to the investigation of the money trust was taken today when a sub-committee of the house committee on banking and currency reported on ways and means to the Democratic members of the full committee. Its purpose is to decide upon the method of making the inquiry, whether or not to employ counsel, what kind of counsel to employ, and so forth.

The real investigation will be deferred for several days. All hearings will be held in Washington unless some contingency arises which will call for the services of a sub-committee in some other part of the country.

SURPRISED ON HIS BIRTHDAY

A pleasant surprise was given Clarence Lundin at his home on Glendale road, Monday evening, by about twenty-five of his friends, in honor of his seventeenth birthday. Great merriment reigned throughout the evening, and numerous games were played. Piano selections were given during the evening by the host, who is a student at the New England Conservatory of Music, and a very fine player.

Dainty refreshments were served, and a large cake decorated with seventeen lighted candles, in the centre of the table, was very pretty. While seated at the table, Clarence was presented with a five-dollar gold piece in behalf of those present, and he responded with a speech which was loudly applauded. It was almost midnight before the party broke up, and all departed wishing Clarence many happy returns of the day.

BRIEFS

Boston harbor was recommended an appropriation of $165,000 by the Rivvers and Harbors committee at Washington, on Saturday.

The Quincy Yacht club does not favor the movement for one measurer having but one boat in the inter-club, therefore little interest in the matter.

The largest appropriation in the Milton town warrant was $175,000 to be used for purchasing 40 acres of land and a pond to be developed as a public park.

The Ledger got out two editions yesterday having so much local news and advertising that it could not all be got in type at the usual hour of going to press, necessitating another edition at four.

TWO BATTLESHIPS A YEAR

Meyer Also Asks For $1,000,000 to Establish Wireless System

Washington, Feb. 27.—Secretary of the Navy Meyer, before the house committee on naval affairs, urged the administration's two battleships a year program and asked for a $1,000,000 appropriation for establishing an around-the-world wireless telegraphy system to enable American battleships everywhere to be in constant intercommunication.

Secretary Meyer contended that even if congress provided an increase of two battleships each year, the United States in 1916 would only rank as the fourth naval power and that if only one battleship was annually added to the naval strength the United States in 1916 would drop to fifth, with Japan third.

The grand duke will be succeeded by his eldest daughter, Grand Duchess Marie, whose other names are Adelaide Theresa Hilda Antoinette Wilhelmine. She was born in June, 1894.

TALKS TO BAY STATE SOLONS

Roosevelt Emphasizes Duty of Political Leaders

CAUSE OF "COMMON PEOPLE"

Should Be Constant Disposition to Ameliorate Their Material Consideration—Social and Industrial Justice With Rule by and For the People—In Declining Renomination He Meant Third Consecutive Term

Boston, Feb. 27.—Theodore Roosevelt spoke before the legislature yesterday afternoon, having received an invitation while he was at luncheon at the Chilton club. He was introduced by Speaker Cushing, when he said: "We have with us a very distinguished American representative of a great deal that is best in our American national life. Further words would be unnecessary. I have the honor to introduce to you Hon. Theodore Roosevelt."

Mr. Roosevelt was received with applause. After expressing his pleasure at being permitted to address a legislative body such as the one before him, he said in part:

"We of today, if we are worthy of endeavoring to lead the people aright, must be doing our part to secure social and industrial justice through genuine popular vote, and our object should be that which was set forth by the great Italian Radical leader, Mazzini, when he wrote: 'No war of classes, no hostility to existing wealth, no wanton or unjust violation of the rights of property, but a constant disposition to ameliorate a material condition of the classes least favored by fortune.'"

Continuing, he said: "That should be our aim, gentlemen, to help better, not merely politically, but industrially, the condition of those least favored by fortune and to endeavor to make and to keep the government of this country genuinely a government of, by and for the people.

"And because I believe in genuine popular rule, I favor direct nominations, direct primaries, including direct preferential presidential primaries, not only for local but for state delegates.

"I believe in the adoption of wisely chosen devices under which the initiative and referendum can be used, not as a substitute for representative government, but to make representative government genuinely representative, and to correct it when it becomes misrepresentative.

"And I wish to say a few words to you specifically of the proposition of making the people in the last resort the interpreters of the constitution. My position in this is this: It is that if the people know enough to make the constitution, they know enough, in the last resort, to say what it was that they meant when they made it."

Mr. Roosevelt continued to talk along those lines, referring from time to time to notes which he held. He spoke distinctly and slowly, in his well-known staccato way.

Mr. Roosevelt made clear to his supporters the position he will take before the public on the third term, the recall of judges and of judicial decisions and his refusal to support President Taft for a second term.

He was told that those were things in which the people were especially interested and that he would have to explain them satisfactorily if he expected to make any headway in Massachusetts.

"My position on the third term," he told his callers, "is perfectly simple. I stated it as clearly as I could in 1904, and reiterated it in 1907. I said I would not accept a nomination for a third term under any circumstances, meaning, of course, a third consecutive term.

"Now, with reference to the recall of judges and judicial decisions. Why, out west they have said, because I expressed my belief in the judicial system of Massachusetts, that I was too conservative. It is a little surprising, isn't it, that here in Massachusetts they should think me too radical because I approve their system.

"As for the recall of judicial decisions, what I said relates, of course, to constitutional questions only. The idea that I had in mind the recall of all decisions is too absurd for serious consideration.

"My position is that the people, who made the constitution, have a right to review the decisions of any small body of men who say that constitution means something other than they think it does."

Asked why he refused to support President Taft for a second term, Roosevelt said he did not believe the president had the confidence of the people.

"A great many people believe," he said, "that they need a strong man at the helm—a man who grows progressive in office, or at least one who does not grow reactionary."

He believes that President Taft has grown reactionary in office and turned more and more away from the people.

ETHEL CROKER-BREEN.

Daughter of Richard Croker, Who Has Sued to Annul Her Marriage.

THE BREEN DIVORCE SUIT

Canadian Telephone Girl Is Named by Daughter of Croker

New York, Feb. 27.—Miss Maude Diehl, a Toronto telephone girl, whom Mrs. Ethel Crocker-Breen names as corespondent in her suit for divorce against John J. Breen, came from her Canadian home to tell, in the supreme court here, her version of an incident which former "Boss" Croker's daughter makes the basis of her principal charge against the riding master, to whom she was secretly married.

Mrs. Breen, a stauesque blonde, dressed in black velvet, came to court with her mother. She did not look at Miss Diehl, a tall brunette, when the telephone girl stood in the courtroom to be identified by a witness.

Four talesmen were challenged by Mrs. Breen's attorney. One of the jurors said he knew Breen. None of the jurors knew the Crokers.

GREAT COAL STRIKE BEGUN IN BRITAIN

Hundred Thousand Men May Desert Pits Tomorrow

London, Feb. 27.—Despite the efforts of Premier Asquith and cabinet ministers to effect a compromise, the big coal strike, which may involve 100,000 men, has broken out.

A few thousand miners employed in the Derbyshire district ceased work yesterday. Today several thousand more notices expire and it is not likely that the miners will consent to work until Thursday night, the date fixed for the general strike. Tomorrow 100,000 miners can desert the pits on notices already handed in.

One hopeful feature of the crisis is the absence of incitement to violence by the responsible leaders of the men. No objections have been raised to the employers obtaining the necessary labor to keep the pits open during the strike.

SHELLING OF BEIRUT

Complications Are Apprehended, Though Italy Acted Within Rights

Paris, Feb. 27.—Although opinion here is almost unanimous that Italy was absolutely within her rights in destroying the two Turkish warships lying in the roadstead of Beirut, when sixty people were killed and a large number wounded, the continuation of such a program by Italy is generally regarded with apprehension, as it is thought possible that it may lead to European complications.

In some quarters it is believed that the bombardment was really Italy's warning to the world that the war against Turkey should be brought to an end.

THE BRANDT MYSTERY

Alleged Victim of Great Conspiracy Is Released on Bail

New York, Feb. 27.—Foulke E. Brandt, the former valet of Mortimer L. Schiff, who has served five years of a thirty years' sentence for a crime not proven against him, was released on bail through the operation of the habeas corpus. He is therefore free for a time not yet definitely fixed.

Justice Gerard of the supreme court yesterday afternoon signed the final order admitting Brandt to bail. This was the final action in the habeas corpus case.

Fire In Mayflower Cabin

Washington, Feb. 27.—Fire in the cabin of the presidential yacht Mayflower caused great excitement at the Washington navy yard, but was extinguished before serious damage was done.

PRACTICAL MACARONI RECIPES.

INNUMERABLE tasty dishes that will add zest to Lenten fare can be evolved with the use of macaroni.

Macaroni is nice in soup. It may be served as a vegetable. It may be an adjunct to a stew when meat is in use. With cheese or eggs it makes a good substitute for meat.

When macaroni is cooked it must not be thrown into cold water or it will become soggy and unappetizing. The water must be boiling, and when the macaroni is put in it must be cooked as quickly as possible.

As Italians Like It.

Boiled Macaroni.—Use large macaroni and cook in boiling salted water for about fifteen minutes. The macaroni must not be cooked so long that its firmness is lost. When done drain in a colander or sieve. When the water has run off put the macaroni in an enameled saucepan, together with a little butter. Butter a shallow baking dish and sprinkle with Parmesan cheese, then lay in a layer of macaroni and so continue until the dish is filled, the cheese forming the last layer. Place in the oven and bake. Serve hot.

Baked Macaroni With Cream Sauce.—Leftover spaghetti or macaroni is nice for luncheon cooked in a baking dish with a cream sauce and with shredded green and red peppers cut over the top. Sometimes cheese is added to the mixture, sometimes breadcrumbs.

Macaroni and Eggs.—Boil three ounces of macaroni till tender, then put it in a saucepan with nearly half a pint of white sauce, some grated cheese, pepper and salt. When thoroughly hot arrange on a dish, lay four nicely poached eggs on it, sprinkle a little chopped parsley over and serve.

Macaroni With Vegetables.—Cut two onions into small pieces and put in a casserole dish. Over the onions put one large stalk of celery with its leaves cut into small pieces. Next add a half cupful of canned tomatoes, also a large carrot cut into dice.

Salt and pepper to taste and add three-fourths cupful of butter. Cover tightly and put over a very slow fire for an hour.

Have ready one-third of a small package of macaroni which has been washed, soaked, boiled and drained. Dress the macaroni with vegetable sauce and serve very hot.

OATMEAL FOR LENTEN SEASON.

OATMEAL is so nutritious that it can be commended for use when the regular meat diet is being curtailed or cut off, as it may be in Lent.

As a breakfast food it is superior to any form of wheat, which contains gluten, an element somewhat tough and sticky.

Oatmeal is rich in nitrogen and is ideal for children or for persons who exercise much. It is supposed to build up the muscles and the brain. Grits are oats from which the husk has been removed and is an especially digestible form of the food.

Ways of Serving.

Some unusual ways of cooking oatmeal are suggested here:

Oatmeal Mold.—Add a pinch of salt to one pint of boiling water and sprinkle in slowly one-half cupful of oatmeal.

Let it boil for three-quarters of an hour, stirring occasionally. When done add sugar to taste and the juice of half a lemon if it is liked.

Pour it, boiling hot, upon a well beaten egg, stirring with a fork until thoroughly mixed.

Return to the saucepan and let it come to a boil; then pour into individual molds wet with cold water.

When firm turn out on a glass dish and serve with whipped cream.

Oatmeal Flaked.—To a quart of very hot water add a pinch of salt. Sift into the water a cupful of finely ground oatmeal or rolled oats. Stir for a few minutes without its boiling hard that the flour of the oats may be soaked out into the water as much as possible. Let cook thoroughly, then stir through a wire strainer to remove the hulls.

Cereal and Fruit.

Bananas and Oatmeal.—Oatmeal may be served with fruit, and in this form its hygienic value is increased. Oatmeal and bananas are thus combined. Cook oatmeal in the usual way. After placing in the cereal dish slice bananas over the top, sprinkle with powdered sugar and serve with cream. If desired canned peaches may be added to the bananas.

Oatmeal Cakes.

Oatmeal Cookies.—For plain oatmeal cookies take two cupfuls of medium fine oatmeal, one and one-half cupfuls of flour, one-half cupful of butter, one-half cupful of sugar, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, milk or water enough to mix, roll out and cut with round cutter and bake in very hot oven twenty minutes.

FRECKLES

By Gene Stratton-Porter

COPYRIGHT, 1904, BY DOUBLEDAY, PAGE & CO.

SYNOPSIS.

Freckles, a homeless boy, is hired by Boss McLean to guard the expensive timber in the Limberlost from timber thieves.

Freckles does his work faithfully, makes friends with the birds and yearns to know more about nature. He lives with Mr. and Mrs. Duncan.

He resolves to get books and educate himself. He becomes interested in a huge pair of vultures and calls his bird friends his "chickens."

Some of the trees he is guarding are worth $1,000 each. Freckles' books arrive. He receives a call from Wessner.

Wessner attempts to bribe Freckles to betray his trust, and Freckles whips him. McLean overhears them and witnesses the fight.

Freckles' honesty saves a precious tree. He finds the nest of the vultures and is visited by a beautiful young girl.

She calls Freckles McLean's son. Freckles calls her "the angel" and helps the Bird Woman in taking photographs. McLean promises to adopt Freckles.

Freckles and the angel become very friendly. Assisted by the Bird Woman, they drive Wessner and Black Jack, timber thieves, from the Limberlost.

McLean fears more trouble, but Freckles insists upon being the sole guard of the timber. Freckles calls upon the angel's father.

The angel receives him as her equal, and her father is kind. Mrs. Duncan has exciting adventures in the Limberlost.

The Bird Woman and the angel again visit Freckles, and Freckles falls in love with the angel. The angel kisses him.

Freckles is bound and gagged by Black Jack's gang, and the timber thieves start felling a very valuable tree.

Wessner is to kill Freckles after the tree is stolen. The angel makes a daring effort to save Freckles and the tree.

McLean's men, notified by the angel, rush to save Freckles. All the timber thieves except Black Jack are captured.

Freckles guards the angel against Black Jack's vengeance. He tells McLean of his hopeless love for the angel.

Black Jack is killed by a rattlesnake. The Bird Woman gets a photograph of the baby vulture. Freckles and the angel find a valuable tree.

The tree falls, and in an effort to save the angel from death Freckles is struck and very badly injured. He appears to be dying.

The angel learns that her love alone will save him. She stifles her pride and practically proposes marriage to him.

Freckles refuses to accept her sacrifice, because he is homeless and nameless. The angel learns that Lord O'More of Ireland is seeking his lost nephew.

She finds Lord and Lady O'More, proves that Freckles is the lost boy and tells Freckles about his parents.

CHAPTER XXIV.

RINGS AND A FEATHER.

THE angel's tear stained face flashed into dazzling beauty.

"Oh, Freckles, forgive me!" she cried. "I've been through so much that I'm scarcely myself or I wouldn't be here bothering you when you should be sleeping. Of course you couldn't. You're too good a knight to remember a thing like that. Of course you are! And when you don't remember, why, then it's the same as if it never happened. Oh, Freckles, I'm so glad! I'm so happy! It's dear of you to not remember, Freckles; perfectly dear! It's no wonder I love you so. The wonder would be if I did not. I should like to know how I'm ever going to make you understand how much I love you!"

Pillow and all, she caught him to her breast, and then she was gone.

Freckles lay dazed with astonishment. At last his batting eyes rolled about the room, searching for something approaching the human to which he could appeal, and, falling on his mother's portrait, he set it up before him.

"For the love of life! Me little mother," he panted, "did you hear that? Did you hear it? Tell me, am I living or am I dead and all heaven come true this minute? Did you hear it? You are only a pictured face, and of course you can't talk, but the soul of you must be somewhere, and surely in this hour you are near enough to be hearing. Tell me, did you hear that? I can't ever be telling a living soul; but, darling little mother, that gave your life for mine, I can always be talking of it to you! Every day we'll talk it over and try to understand the miracle of it. Tell me, are all women like that? Were you like me Swamp Angel? If you were then I'm understanding why me father followed across the ocean and went into the fire after you."

Freckles' voice trailed off, his eyes dropped shut, and his head rolled back from sheer exhaustion. Later in the day he insisted on seeing Lord and Lady O'More, but he fainted before the look of his own face on that of another man.

The next morning the man of affairs, with a heart filled with misgivings, undertook the interview on which Freckles insisted. His fears were without cause. Freckles was the soul of honor and simplicity.

"Have they been telling you what's come to me?" he asked without even waiting for a greeting.

"Yes," said the angel's father.

"Do you think you have the very worst of it clear to your understanding?"

Under Freckles' earnest eyes the man of affairs answered soberly, "I think I have, Mr. O'More."

That was the first time Freckles heard his name from the lips of another man. One second he lay overcome, the next great tears filled his eyes, and he reached out his hand. Then the angel's father understood, and he clasped that hand and held it in a strong, firm grasp.

"Terence, my boy," he said, "let me do the talking. I came in here with the understanding that you wanted to ask me for my only child. I should like, at the proper time, to regard her marriage, if she has found the man she desires to marry, not as losing all I have, but as gaining a man I can depend on to love as a son and to take charge of my affairs for her when I retire from business. Bend all of your energies toward rapid recovery, and from this hour understand that my daughter and my home are yours."

"You're not forgetting this?"

Freckles lifted his right arm.

"Terence, I'm sorrier than I have words to express about that," said the man of affairs. "But if it's up to me to choose whether I give all I have left in this world to a man with a hand off his body or to one of these gambling, tippling, immoral spendthrifts of today, with both hands and feet off their souls and a rotten spot in the core, I choose you, and it seems that my daughter does the same. Put what is left you of that right arm to the best uses you can in this world, and never again mention or feel that it is defective as long as you live. Good day, sir!"

"One minute more," said Freckles. "Yesterday the angel was telling me that there was money coming to me from two sources. She said that me grandmother had left me father all of her fortune and her house because she knew that his father would be cutting him off, and that me uncle had also set aside for me what would be me father's interest in his father's estate.

"Whatever the sum is that me grandmother left me father, because she loved him and wanted him to be having it, that I'll be taking. 'Twas hers from her father, and she had the right to be giving it as she chose. Anything from the man that knowingly left me father and me mother to go cold and hungry and into the fire in misery when just a little would have made life so beautiful to them and saved me this crippled body—money that he willed from me when he knew I was living, of his blood and on charity among strangers, I don't touch, not if I freeze, starve and burn too! If there ain't enough besides that and I can't be earning enough to fix things for the angel"—

"We are not discussing money!" burst in the man of affairs. "We don't want any blood money! We have all we need without it. If you don't feel right and easy over it, don't you touch a cent of any of it."

"It's right I should have what me grandmother intinded for me father, and I want it," said Freckles, "but I'd die before I'd touch a cent of me grandfather's money!"

"Now," said the angel, "we are all going home. We have done all we can for Freckles. His people are here. He needs to know them. They are very anxious to get acquainted with him. We'll turn him over to them and go home. When he is well, why, then he will be perfectly free to go to Ireland or come to the Limberlost, just as he chooses. We will go right away."

McLean bore it for a week, and then he could stand it no longer. Communing with himself in the long, soundful nights of the swamp, he had learned to his astonishment that for the last year his heart had been circling the Limberlost with Freckles.

He started for Chicago, loaded with a big box of goldenrod, asters, fringed gentians and crimson leaves that the angel had carefully gathered for Freckles' room, and a little, long slender package. He would not admit it even to himself, but he was unable to remain longer away from Freckles and leave him to the care of Lord O'More.

In a few minutes' talk, while McLean waited admission to Freckles' room, his lordship had genially chatted of Freckles' rapid recovery, of his delight that he was unspotted by his early surroundings and his desire to visit the Limberlost with Freckles before they sailed. He said they were anxious to do all they could to help bind Freckles' arrangements with the angel, as both he and Lady O'More regarded her as the most promising girl they knew and one that could be fully fitted to fill the high position in which Freckles would place her.

Every word he uttered was pungent with bitterness to McLean. The swamp had lost its flavor without Freckles, and yet as Lord O'More talked McLean fervently wished that he was in the heart of it.

All the tan and sunburn had been washed from Freckles' face in sweats of agony. It was a smooth, even white, its brown rift showing but faintly. What the nurses and Lady O'More had done to Freckles' hair McLean could not guess, but it was the most beautiful that he had ever seen. Fine as floss, bright in color, waving and crisp, it fell about the white face.

They had got his arms into and his chest covered with a finely embroidered pale blue silk shirt, with soft white tie at the throat. Among the many changes that had taken place during his absence, the fact that Freckles was most attractive and barely escaped being handsome remained almost unnoticed by the boss, so great was his astonishment at seeing both cuffs turned back and the right arm in view. Freckles was using the maimed arm that heretofore he had always hidden.

"Oh, Lord, sir, but I'm glad to see you!" burst out Freckles, almost rolling from the bed as he reached for him. "I'm picking the angel's ring stone that me Aunt Alice ordered. It's an emerald—just me color, Lord O'More says. Every color of the old swamp is in it. I asked angel to have a little shamrock leaf cut on it, so every time I saw it I'd be thinking of the love, truth, and valor of that song she was teaching me. Ain't that a beautiful song?"

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

A WIDE SPLIT IS PREDICTED

Result of Roosevelt's Announcement of His Candidacy

TAFT HAS NO DIRECT REPLY

Washington, Feb. 27.—The one fact that stands out clearly above all others in the present political situation is that the La Follette, Roosevelt and Taft candidacies have hopelessly divided the Republican party. The belief of many politicians that the Roosevelt men, if defeated, will bolt the Chicago convention and demand that the colonel shall run as the candidate of the progressives of both parties persists, although many men of both camps say that Roosevelt is too loyal a party man to encourage any such idea.

The prophets of the bolt are pointing to the last lines of the colonel's announcement as constituting a challenge of the present system of electing delegates and are deducing from it an intimation that if the work of the "machine delegates" is not satisfactory to the progressives they will not hold themselves bound by either the platform or the nominees of the convention.

No bolt may develop, nevertheless both sides have abandoned the twaddle that the nomination of Taft or of Roosevelt would "unite the Republican party."

President Taft will have no direct answer to the announcement from Roosevelt prior to the Ohio speeches, according to statements from official sources.

The president's blood is up and the battle will be waged without quarter, except that Taft will permit no resort to personal attacks on Roosevelt. The contest for delegates will be waged with all the resources of the administration by the political managers, while the president himself will take the field in a series of speeches whose dates and places are yet to be announced.

Viewing the Republican national situation it is believed here that the issue will be drawn sharply and clearly between the defenders of the constitution and its assailants.

While an effort is made by the Roosevelt men to make it appear that the colonel's utterances on the judiciary are not essentially radical when closely analyzed, the lawyers are replying that his doctrine in its practical application would place it in the power of the voters of any state to nullify the federal constitution as far as that state is concerned; hence, they say, should his scheme be accepted it would ultimately array the states against each other.

In the opinion of many prominent men, event the third-term issue will cut little figure in the campaign compared with the distrust of the people over such an attack upon the integrity of constitutional government as is implied in the address of Roosevelt to the Ohio constitutional convention.

A hard platform fight is expected in the Chicago convention along this line, and it is understood to be the purpose of the Taft men to insist upon a declaration favoring constitutional integrity as unequivocal as that for the gold standard adopted by the Republican national convention at St. Louis in 1896.

Indeed, as one Republican senator put it, "the country had Bryan and free silver in 1896, and now it has Roosevelt and the breaking down of the constitution. The result will be the same in each case."

Mulliken Is Sentenced to Prison After Exonerating His Partner

Boston, Feb. 27.—Alfred A. Mulliken, when he and his former partner, Benjamin H. Cram, of the firm of Cram, Mulliken & Co., were called for sentence on the charge of stealing more than $60,000 from several customers, arose in the dock and declared that he alone was to blame for any irregularities in the conduct of the firm's business and that Cram knew nothing about them. He was then sentenced to a term in the state prison of not less than three nor more than five years.

Cram was given his liberty with the understanding that he shall not again engage in the stock brokerage business in Boston. The case against him was placed on file.

DEATH THREAT FOR PASTOR

Told to Leave Town or Lives of Family and Self Will Be Taken

Scituate, Mass., Feb. 27.—Rev. Frederick B. Noyes, pastor of the First Congregational church of Scituate, received a letter, which he gave to the police, reading as follows:

"Unless you leave town before the 1st of March, or if any of your motions prevail at the annual town meeting, your church will be burned, your wife and family will be poisoned, and you will be shot through the window with a gun equipped with a Maxim silencer." The letter was signed by a black hand.

Mr. Noyes has advocated many reforms in the political life of the town, being particularly active toward reforms in the school department.

PLEDGE SELF-DENIAL FOR OTHERS' BENEFIT

Chicago Woman's Trade League Raising Campaign Fund

Chicago, Feb. 27.—Ten thousand women and girls, members of the Women's Trade Union league, have designated this as self-denial week. Their purpose is to raise a campaign fund to assist other working girls to organize unions and enforce union conditions.

The girls have pledged themselves to remain away from theatres and dances and to deny themselves candy, ice cream and other delicacies.

More than 100 girls agreed they would walk to work during the week and give the money which otherwise would be spent on carfare to the campaign fund. An equal number declared they would give the amount they usually deposit in the savings bank each week to the same cause.

There are about 115,000 women in Chicago who are not members of the league.

MONDAY'S STORM.

The storm Monday night was one of the most disagreeable of the month. It began to rain during the early evening, the rain soon turning to snow and later to rain again. Late in the evening the temperature dropped considerable and the wind freshened so that at midnight it was very disagreeable. Considerable damage was done to wires, two of the police circuits being put out of commission. At the time of the fire this morning it was raining hard, the rain being accompanied by quite a high wind.

QUINCY HIGH SCHEDULE OUT

First Game on Home Diamond With Weymouth April 26

GOOD CARD ARRANGED

A call for battery candidates for the Quincy High baseball team for the coming season was issued last week and from the number that responded and the calibre that is on hand, it is highly probable that an exceptionally fast aggregation will be rounded out at the local school. The team is to be captained by Maurice Blackmur, who accredited himself in fine style last year in covering the second sack. The teacher-manager system is also to be tried out, and Frank Mansur is to act in this capacity.

Of last year's nine, but three players are available. They are Captain Blackmur, "Pete" Chapman, who did effective work on the firing line and "Ducky" Holmes, who proved to be the heavy hitter of the team. Unless Coach Staff decides to shift him to short stop, Captain Blackmur will no doubt be again seen at second base. Chapman will be kept as a pitcher, and probably will be first string man, unless McDonald, who is pressing him very closely, succeeds in showing up to better advantage.

"Ducky" Holmes is to try out for the backstop position. Last year he substituted a number of times on the receiving end, and on each occasion he proved himself an apt player. He can throw to bases with great accuracy, is cool headed at all times and can bat the ball in fine style. Possessed of these qualifications, it is likely that he will land the berth. Both Chapman and Holmes are foremost members of the basketball team, while Blackmur played well on the football eleven.

Others trying out for battery positions include Trask, Halvosa, Johnson, Larkin, Finay, Young, Bill, Hall, Prout, McAnarney, Ross, Coughlan, Green and Tobin.

Practice will be held in the gymnasium each day this week and as soon as the weather permits, a call will be issued for all candidates. Coach Arthur Staff will be in charge of the players. His work with the football and basket ball teams augurs sufficiently well for what may be expected from the baseball players. A fine schedule of games has been arranged by Teacher-Manager Mansur, who himself played second base on the Brown University team two years ago. Coach Staff was a member of the same nine.

The two important games, as usual, will be played with Brockton High. These dates have been set for May 17 and June 7, but owing to the fact that the Brockton boys play their home games on the New England League grounds, the place of the contests has not been definitely decided upon as yet. The schedule of games is as follows:

April 24—Needham at Needham.
April 26—Weymouth at Quincy.
April 30—Cambridge Latin at Quincy.
May 3—Abington at Quincy.
May 7—Newton at Newton.
May 10—Hingham at Quincy.
May 14—Boston Latin at Quincy.
May 17—Pending (Brockton)
May 21—South Boston at Quincy.
May 24—Brighton at Quincy.
May 27—Melrose at Quincy.
May 29—Thayer Academy at So. Braintree.
May 31—Open.
June 3—Hingham at Hingham.
June 5—S. S. of Commerce at Quincy.
June 7—Pending (Brockton.)

Jimmy Gets a Dog

In a heedless moment the Kingthornes yielded to Jimmy's ardent and vociferous pleas and admitted that it might be possible to permit him to have a dog to play with. Up to that time they had been able to match his teasing by a succinct and comprehensive "No!" But now life was vastly different.

Every homecoming of the elder members of the family, if not greeted by "Didyuh bring my dog?" was hailed with the wail, "When kin I have my dog?" or "Whut kind of a dog is it I'm going to get?" until the Kingthornes reached the stage where their opinion on dogs as a whole was so intense that it was wordless.

The situation led to dissensions also, for both Kingthorne and his wife accused the other of having been the one who said the fatal word of assent. The peace of the family was gone, and the more they argued the worse it grew. Of the lot Jimmy was the most injured, for with all the bickering because of a dog there wasn't any dog.

"You said I could have a dog!" he invariable ended in the plaintively accusing tone before which all well brought up parents shrink.

When the Kingthornes had time to look for a dog they never could find an attractive one, and if they did see a possibility they lacked the time.

Sitting in her living room one afternoon conversing with visitors about green tomato pickles. Mrs. Kingthorne after staring from the window, gave a little shriek.

"Just the thing!" she cried. "How did it get there?"

"What?" demanded her caller. "There aren't green tomatoes growing out there!"

"Pickles?" repeated Mrs. Kingthorne, dreamily. "No, it's a dog. It doesn't seem to belong to any one, either!"

Everybody looked. The dog was most apparently youthful, because it still wabbled slightly when it walked, or, rather, rolled. For it was fat and globular, made still more so by a thick coat of woolly brown fur. From one end of the brown mass a pink nose stuck out and from the other end protruded a tiny plumed tail. He really was too much like an ideal puppy to be quite true.

"There isn't a soul in sight," asserted Mrs. Kingthorne. "And nobody would let a puppy like that go for a walk alone, so it must be lost. It'll get stepped on or stolen or something, and to own it would send Jimmy into hysterics of joy, so, really, I think it is my duty to rescue the puppy, don't you?"

Everybody wanted to see the puppy at close range, so everybody said "Yes." Mrs. Kingthorne went out and brought the animal in.

"Don't dogs have germs and things?" demanded one of the visitors. "It is likely to give Jimmy something, isn't it?"

That was why everybody followed Mrs. Kingthorne down into the laundry to see her give the waif a bath. He was very little and the tub was very big and the soap was exceedingly fluffy, so it took four of them to wash and dry him. Afterward he frisked in front of a grate fire and Mrs. Kingthorne admired herself extremely for finding him.

Jimmy, for some reason, was late, but presently Kingthorne arrived. He seemed a little dazed at the chorus of joyful shrieks and the bundle of brown wool that was thrust at him.

"Well!" he murmured in a puzzled tone. "That doesn't look a bit like the one——"

"The one!" cried Mrs. Kingthorne. "What one, and what is it?"

The bell rang just then and Kingthorne went to the door. When he rejoined them he was leading by a leash an Airedale pup. A grown-up Airedale is without doubt the ugliest dog yet invented, but an Airedale pup transcends by a hundred degrees the ugliness of the grown-up Airedale. There is no use in trying to tell what Kingthorne's pup looked like, because if adequate words could be found nobody would believe the description anyhow.

Kingthorne spoke into the immense silence almost defiantly. "He's a bench dog," he said. "All my life I've wanted an Airedale—and I am sure Jimmy will be crazy about this one. So will you when you get used to his looks and appreciate his noble nature. That brown, woolly thing hasn't any class, my dear."

"Well, I like him!" cried Mrs. Kingthorne, indignantly.

Jimmy slammed into the house just then. Something slammed in with him. It was an overgrown, catlike creature, all legs and tail and tongue, with a great ugly head, and its style of architecture was a combination of everything from early Greek down.

"He's mine!" Jimmy cried, proudly. "An ashcart man gave him to me, an' he's goin' to sleep in my room an' everythin'! An' you said I could have a dog!" He gave a passing glance of disinterested scorn at the blooded Airedale and the toy woolly pup.

"I suppose," said Kingthorne, with a resigned sigh to his wife, "that we can chloroform our dogs!"

It is always difficult to argue with one who refuses to talk back.

cally inclined and also provide training for the girls, who like to do things with their hands. This can be done by establishing special classes to have book-work in the forenoon and handwork in the afternoon throughout the city. By providing a part time industrial school to work in conjunction with the industries and by extending and broadening the work of the evening schools. He stated this would not be an expensive proposition because the state bears one-half of the expense.

At the conclusion of his talk, which was closely followed the teachers served ices and cake.

The remainder of the evening was spent in a social way. While the refreshments were being served the parents were given an opportunity to meet the teachers and the way it was improved was most gratifying.

The parents lingered, talking with the teachers and one another until a late hour.

ORGAN RECITALS.

Weston Spies Gales, organist and choirmaster at Emmanuel church, Newbury street, Boston has arranged a series of free Lenten organ recitals for Thursday afternoons, beginning Feb. 29, and continuing on March 7, 14, 21 and 28, each day at four o'clock. There will be assisting vocal and instrumental soloists.

On Feb. 29 the programme will be from Wagner, with selections from "Lohengrin," "Tannhauser" and "Tristan and Isolde." On March 7 Debussy's compositions will form the programme, with selections from "L'Enfant Prodigue," "Damoiselle Elue" and "St. Sebastien." That for March 14 will be chosen from Wagner's "Siegfried" and "Gotterdammerung," while for March 21 Humperdinck's works will be played, including scenes from "Hansel and Gretel" and "Konigskinder." On March 28 Wagner's works will again form the programme, with excerpts from "Die Meistersinger" and "Parsifal."

No tickets are required for these recitals, which are open to all music lovers.

When Walls Are Damp.

The walls of cupboards and pantries are often damp on wet or sultry days without apparent reason when other sections of the kitchen wall will be comparatively dry. The best device for any wall that is inclined to "damp" is to make it impervious to moisture by applying a varnish of one part shellac and two parts naphtha.

LEGISLATORS VISIT SEAGIRT

ton, and Hon. George A. Schofield, of the Senate, and the following representatives, Henry M. Storm, of Braintree, (chairman,) Willie W. Baker, of Westwood, Otis L. Wright, of Tyngsboro, William F. Emerson, of Springfield, Arthur H. Bicknell, of Dalton, John R. Wallace, of Lynn, Edward J. McDermott, of Worcester, and Morton H. Burdick, of Adams.

The committee was acompanied on its investigation by Mayor Eugene R. Stone, City Solicitor, John W. McAnarney, Representatives Walter E. Piper, and William J. Leslie, City Messenger, Harry W. Tirrell, City Engineer, Ezekiel Sargent, Dock Commissioner, Frank Fessenden Crane, Councilman Harry T. Studley, and the following active workers in behalf of separation. Frederick Kilpatrick, attorney for those seeking to have Houghs Neck divorced from Quincy, Daniel J. Maloney, John P. Moses, Matthew J. Connors, James E. Wall, Neil J. Regan, and John T. Cavanaugh.

In the automobile which led the way for the party were both counsels McAnarney and Kilpatrick, Dock Commisisoner Crane, Engineer Sargent William Ash, and a Ledger reporter The party journeyed to Adams shore, thence to Germantown, back to Sea street, over Great Hill, back to Rock Island, thence along Manet avenue to Sea street, back again to City Hall, where the party dispersed, to be shown some of the historical places of interest.

Careful observations of Houghs Neck were made by the different members of the party and a thorough survey was made of the various places, conditions and improvements, all of which will undoubtedly come in for their full share of discussion when the hearing is called for before the legislative committee in charge of the matter. On the way to and from Houghs Neck many jocosities and expressions of a happy nature were exchanged between lawyers McAnarney and Kilpatrick, and on a number of occasions there developed features which created laughter.

At Germantown, men were filling the streets, thereby making the travelling appear much better than some of the separationists had contended. On the way along Sea street, police officer Corbett was seen patrolling his beat in an efficient manner, and this fact also had a tendency to puncture the objection raised by some of the separationists to the effect that they have not proper police protection. But attorney Kilpatrick seemed to be highly optimistic as the members of the committee were told of the different points and although no opinions were expressed by any in the party, the trip was enjoyed by all.

It was rather cold along certain sections of the sea shore, yet all in the party were convinced that a thorough investigation had been made and the members of the committee especially felt that they were in a suitable position to weigh all arguments, both pro and con, that might be advanced at the hearing relative to the proposed separation

On arrival at Quincy, Mayor Stone, in company with the above mentioned conducted the members of the committee through the First Unitarian church where the tombs of the ex-presidents were viewed, and other historic observations made The visit to the church was of special interest and importance to Senator Adams of Marblehead, who is himself a lineal descendant of President Adams. A visit was also made to the Presidents Adams Houses, and the members of the committee then proceeded to investigate conditions in Fairmount, a place whose residents want to be annexed to Milton.

FOREIGN BUILT YACHTS.

The movement to repeal or mitigate that portion of the Payne tariff act heavily taxing foreign built yachts owned by Americans is likely to fail, much though the movement is justified. An appeal has been made to the ways and means committee to act, but since the tax was republican legislation directed against the rich, it is not expected that the democrats, who now control the committee and are in possession of the situation, will repeal or alter a provision in the law of concern to men rich enough to own foreign built yachts. A millionaire has no rights, anybody need respect in a presidential year.

The tax imposed in the Payne bill was $7 a ton, and is an annual one It was hoped to derive not a little revenue therefrom, but a more important fact was that here was an item in the bill which could be pointed to with pride. The rich were substantially taxed in the bill.

What has been the result? At the time the tax was first imposed there were 44 such foreign built yachts owned by Americans. This was three years ago. Today there are only 10 or 11 such owned yachts. The tax has been found so burdensome that many owners of the yachts have either sold them, sent them to foreign waters or have broken them up. Among the few still paying the tax on his foreign built yacht is J. Pierpont Morgan.—John Lorance in Boston Record.

TAKE STEPS FOR PARISH HOUSE

Meeting of the Wollaston Congregational Club

INTERESTING ADDRESS

The Wollaston Congregational club had for its guest and speaker at its meeting, Tuesday evening, Edward H. Chandler, secretary of the Twentieth Century club of Boston, who gave a most interesting talk upon the "influence of the modern theatre."

At the business meeting, a movement was instituted to purchase a portion of the old Wollaston school building to be used by the church as a parish house. Wendell F. Hull, George W. Stone, Charles P. Hutchins and David H. Goodspeed were appointed a committee to look into the matter.

The speaker mentioned Boston's reputation in the past, among the theatrical profession as one of the best show towns for rotten shows and one of the poorest towns for good shows.

It is only within recent years that a large number of men and women have begun to appreciate the better class of shows.

The reason for this is that Boston still retains it Puritan antagonism to the theatre and people have not been trained to appreciate the drama as an art.

This is rapidly changing for two reasons. In the first place the so-called good drama is no longer stupid and may be enjoyed as well as the musical comedy that is expected to appeal to the tired business man.

And then we are beginning to see the possibilities in the drama as an art. The theatre was formerly denounced from the pulpit with the statement that nothing could ever be uplifting on the stage.

Mr. Chandler instanced some of the good, recent plays that did have a tendency to uplift. Among them were the "Bluebird." that symbolic study of pursuit of happiness that contains some of the fundamental principles of life and ethics: "Strife" a dramatic struggle between capital and labor; "The Product of the Mill," dealing with the problem of child labor; "The Faun," in which the English people are criticised and the truth brought home under the guise of a comedy in a manner impossible in plain talk.

Taking up the theatrical situation as a business in Boston, the speaker put

EXPRESS WAGON BADLY SMASHED

That the driver of the horse attached to one of Lilja's express teams and the animal itself were not killed this morning, was nothing short of miraculous. The horse was advanc- along Whitwell street towards Granite street at a fast rate of speed and when in close proximity to the junction of both streets, became unmanageable. The result of it was that the animal kept on its course unrestrained and did not stop until it had jumped over the fence on Granite street, in the vicinity of the frieght yards, and into a vacant lot, which resembles a ditch.

The driver managed to jump from the team in safety, while the horse showed no signs of injury. The team was badly damaged and the harness was torn from the frightened animal. After a short while, another team was secured, the slighter damages repaired, and the teamster and horse proceeded to perform their duties of the day as if nothing had happened.

ADDRESSES THE JUNIOR LAYMEN

Postmaster Charles L. Hammond gave a most interesting talk Tuesday evening in First Church chapel to the Junior Laymen of the church. Beside the Quincy boys there was a goodly attendance of young men from the Braintree Civic club and from Wollaston, all of whom showed considerable interest in the talk and asked many questions of Mr. Hammond at the close of his talk.

After the lecture there was an informal social hour, during which time the Junior Laymen regaled their guests with cake and candy.

Law of Averages

AS IT RELATES TO CLOTHES

While visiting a small hamlet on the Cape, a short time ago I met a judge who was then presiding at the local court.

The place was so peaceful and the citizens were so apparently law-abiding that I wondered why the necessity of Court to settle their difficulties.

Upon inquiring of the judge, I was informed that the Law of Averages was applicable in small places as well as large in proportion to the population.

And so it is with CLOTHES, we find that the average man pays fifteen dollars for his Suits, in a small town as well as in a large.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

The heat of the campaign is felt in the dead of winter this year.

New York City boasts a greater indebtedness than "Uncle Sam," but we haven't got through with this Congress yet.

It is a mystery to us how President Taft can find time to distribute the post offices when he is running back and forth to make speeches in New York.

The House proposes to tax cosmetics. While the women have never said much about taxes on necessities, we see some one's finish if they put a tax on beauty.

A reformed cannibal informs a New York ship news reporter that man tastes like pork. Must have stocked his larder with Chicago samples.

A Cincinnati man found nine pearls worth $100 each in a single oyster. But some folks will continue to kick about the high price of food.

A Paterson (N. J.) man is reported to be on his way to San Francisco, to wed a girl whose face he saw in a moving picture show. The press agent for the film factory is also with him.

With Quincy's largest and most successful merchant, Col. Henry L. Kincaide as chairman of the executive committee of the Current Expense Campaign of the Quincy Young Men's Christian Association the much wanted $5,000 should be quickly forth-coming. Business methods, a working committee, willing assistants and enthusiasm will accomplish anything. Back of the move to raise $5,000 this week for the local Y. M. C. A. will be found enthusiasm and no lack of workers.

THE EVERGLADES.

The Florida Everglades, which for centuries have echoed only the call of curlews and cranes, and the voice of the solitary Seminole Indians, now becomes a factor in national politics. Allegations that the department of agriculture suppressed reports on Everglade land development bring this last remnant of the wilderness into the spot light.

Although the Everglades were one of the first parts of the United States to be mapped in a general way, they are the last to be explored. For one century after another, this fastness of mystery has remained secure. The Seminole, with animal-like instinct for its hidden paths, slips unconeernedly in and out of the labyrinth, but it has presented almost impossible difficulties to exploration by white men.

And so for all these years, within sound of the luxurious railroad trains bearing their pleasure seekers to the sunny resorts of the South, the native Indian life has continued in this swamp stronghold, which Caucasian civilization has vainly sought to penetrate.

Government engineers, newspaper representatives, railroad officials, all have sought to locate and solve this one of Nature's greatest enigmas. Some have come near paying with their lives the penalty of trifling with the mysteries of Mother Nature.

As the tract is neither land or water an amphibious hydro-automobile, with scythes to level the high saw grass, would be needed for locomotion through this romantic waste. Lacking this, explorers have often had to roll over on their sides to prevent being engulfed in the bog. Following the paths that avoid the belts of sharp saw grass, the head and tail of the expedition would sometimes be a mile apart by distance travel, while only a few yards apart by air line.

The reclamation of the whole of this wonderful tract, the greatest waste land east of the Mississippi, is only a question of time. Already 15,000 acres are drained, of which 12,000 are yielding wonderful crops. The soil is so rich in nitrogen that it is worth $6 a ton. Walter Wadlin, an Iowa farmer, testified that he made $800 a year net on an acre of land.

As this vast bog is created only by the overflowing of the banks of Lake Okeechobee, all that is necessary is to make a sufficient opening in the barrier of rotten limestone that holds back these waters from the Gulf, and to dig the necessary drainage canals. One day it will be a great garden spot.

ELEVENTH ANNUAL BANQUET

of our city. To those who were not new members of the Board he said we need you. You can do us a lot of good. Come into the Board and give us the benefit of your counsel and ideas. To those who are members of the Board, and members of committees he said he hoped they would attend to their committee work and come to the meetings and give us the benefit of their ideas. He would have every member a live wire. Just put all of these live wires into a cable and see the power it would be possible to wield for the good of Quincy. We have the foundation for an energetic Board of Trade. A board that can do a vast amount of good for Quincy. Come and join with us.

MAYOR STONE.

He then introduced as the first speaker Mayor Eugene R. Stone who was received with a round of applause and spoke as follows:

Mr. President and Gentlemen:—

I suppose I may as well begin to congratulate you, Mr. President and the members of this splendid organization, for the way in which you are suceeding in handling the business connected with the Board, and the amount of good work you are sure to accomplish, with the good business methods you are using. But I assure you that it is with great pleasure that I see the signs of life and activity which at present prevail in this organization. There are many topics which could be discussed here this evening. Our train service, electric car service and our light service, the financial condition of our City and many other things.

As there are other speakers and my time is limited I shall touch only on one or two subjects. Our financial condition which from the figures printed in the City Report, looks not too good to our tax payers, but which when viewed from the standpoint of business men with the proper management, it seems to me, are not bad at all. Although we have a debt of a little over two million dollars ($2,000,000) we have thirteen (13) fine School Buildings, seven (7) Fire Houses, City Hall, Library and Hospital to say nothing of the sewer and water mains which cover many miles of our City. These, of course, have cost a great deal of money, but are permanent improvements and if used as an asset will over balance our indebtedness. One of our troubles comes from Temporary Loans, which for years have been piling up, and from the fact that we are unable to live within the twelve (12) dollar limit prescribed by law. The time has come when this City, I believe, must make some move to overcome this difficulty. The solution I believe, will be brought about by the Advisory Board which I mentioned in my Inaugural Address and which I hope will be brought about in the next meeting of the City Council.

For many years I have been interested in and working for the development of our Water Front. This will not only be a boom for the Granite Industry but will boom all other industries in our City. I must here stop to congratulate Admiral Bowles and the Fore River Shipbuilding company on their success of late in securing contracts. I must also congratulate the people of Quincy on having within their limits a live going concern of this kind, which not only gives employment to many of our citizens but keeps the name of our city before the world.

I will not take more of the time this evening but in conclusion, will say, that I shall during the coming year do my best to further the interest of this Board of Trade and work with them in any way to further the interests of the city and the board.

As Mayor Stone concluded President Hearn introduced Secretary John O. Hall who read an original poem written by Cornelius M. Duggan of Atlantic.

This poem was as follows:

We gather 'round this banquet board
To pledge our love anew,
To the town that gave John Adams birth,
John Hancock and Dorothy Q.
It is not of those patriots
In colonial garb arrayed,
I sing tonight, a verse I'll write
To the Quincy Board of Trade.

Chorus
United stand, join hand in hand,
To work be not afraid,
You'll bring renown to your Granite Town
Through the Quincy Board of Trade.

It is not by rare eloquence
And fervid, flowery speech,
The goal of your ambition
You will ultimately reach.
Let "ACTION" be your watchword,
And the progress long delayed
Will soon appear, if you volunteer
In the Quincy Board of Trade.

Some pessimistic doubtful mind
This question here may ask
"Wherein can I assist this Board?"
Well, that's an easy task.
Just patronize your local stores,
Thereby you give first aid,
Dispelling gloom, you advance the boom
For the Quincy Board of Trade.

To those who shun connubial joys
A word or two I'll say
Let Hymen soon materialize
Haste, Haste your wedding day.
The flowers that bloom in the month of June
In October are decayed,
When paying rent, you're an increment
To the Quincy Board of Trade.

True citizens and residents
We proudly, fondly claim
Our Granite Hills, the best on earth
They bring us wealth and fame.
The strength that's born of Unity
Full soon will be displayed
When all men learn that Charley Hearn
Leads on the Board of Trade.

EDWARD A. FILENE.

Was the next speaker introduced. He said he wanted to get hold of every City Father who had voted against what he was sure was right, and he wanted to briefly tell what that was. He spoke of the proposed Metropolitan Planning bill of which so much has been heard of late. We have got to meet competition by turning out a product that will compete with other centres. The Metropolitan plan is based on the knowledge that the metropolitan district will grow in industry, increase in population and wealth and develop as a great center of commerce; that by planning for such development the development will be assured; that industry will and must spread from Boston proper to the suburbs and that now is the time to foresee the greatest possible industrial and residential growth of the whole district, and to make preparation for it by adequate planning. In Europe, and now in practically all of the great centers of population in the United States, planning is being done to insure the maximum of growth, development and prosperity for the future; that the metropolitan district will have a greater industry and be a better place to live in if we have faith in the possibilities of the future and plan to realize them.

Wages alone never make for contentment and happiness of the laborer. We must have the contented worker. In order to get that contentment, which underlies the success of productive industries, we must plan ahead. Civic planning is just as much of a machine, as those used in manufacturing plants. We have got to have some system of planning. The question is whether we will take it ourselves or have it forced upon us later.

The City Fathers who voted against this did so not because they did not think the plan a good one, because it would cost something. I want you ladies to work with the City Fathers to get them to take this matter up again. We have no special plan we want to force through. If the plan is not what you want we will change it. We simply want to make a start for a central planning, to make living conditions and the city better. To make it a better place to live and work in.

A PRESENTATION.

President Hearn said that sometime ago a committee had been appointed to investigate the books of Arthur W. Stetson, who had been the secretary of the Board for many years.. That committee had made its report and it gave him great pleasure to present Mr. Stetson with a loving cup with the admonition that he might live long to enjoy it and then pass it along to his children.

In accepting the cup Mr. Stetson thanked the members for their gift. He said that what he had done had been without thought of reward and if what he had done had met the approval of the Board he was satisfied. As for carrying out the admonition he would think that over.

The cup which was a very handsome affair was inscribed as follows: "Presented to Arthur W. Stetson for faithful service to the Quincy Board of Trade, Feb. 27, 1912."

GEN. HUGH BANCROFT.

The next speaker Gen. Hugh Bancroft, chairman of the Port of Boston, said in part that this gathering of citizens typifies what we want to have in Boston. There was a long period in which we dwelt on our achievements of the past and paid too little attention to the future, so that other places began to look at us as being a little behind the procession. What you are doing in Quincy is an inspiration for other places. You are proud of the fact that you have one of the greatest industries of the country located here. You are alive to what a real Board of Trade means and any community that has such an energetic president of its Board of Trade as you have has just reason for being proud.

He wondered what would happen to Quincy if the Admiral gave anything like his whole time to that industry. Why he would simply swamp Quincy with contracts. Just think he has one of the largest battleships, a sulphur and molasses boat and a little oil to wash it down.

Last year the legislature appropriated $9,000,000 to develop the Port of Boston but they overlooked one important thing. That is they did not give us the harbor. There is some difference in improving a port when we have a harbor to improve. We have called the attention of the public to that important omission. The trouble is the public does not own the water front. It needs little explanation here in Quincy of what port development means.

We have today in the harbor the best piers and docks, not to mention the best grain elevator, in North America. The wharves are provided with excellent rail connections; but in the matter of equipment fall short of European standards. Obviously this Board cannot equip such piers unless they are under public control. Moreover, they furnish the logical starting point for building more piers as they are needed.

The development of coastwise trade is of no less importance to the Port of Boston than the development of foreign trade, and it is of greater importance to the manufacturing interests of the state and the industrial interests of Boston. Experts estimate the cost of transportation in large ocean going steamships to be as low as one-twelfth of the cost of transportation by land. Even if the ratio is only six to one in favor of water transportation, a good steamship connection from Boston to the important Gulf of Mexico ports would have the practical result of making the great gateways of the cotton fields, New Orleans and Galveston, the equivalent of 300 miles away instead of 1800 miles, or commercially as near to Boston as Rochester, N. Y.

With the right sort of steamship connection with the Pacific coast, San Francisco after the opening of the Canal would be commercially nearer Boston than is Toledo. The desirability of such connections is well recognized, and there is confident belief that under improved port conditions there will be ample traffic for their support.

In introducing the next and last speaker of the evening, President Hearn said we all know that we have the Fore River Shipbuilding plant here but it had been a revelation to him to learn just what they were doing. We all know that they build ships, for we have been at the launchings, but we do not realize what a large amount of work they have. At the present time they have contracts of a cash value of $13,250,000 of which $7,500,000 has been secured since Jan. 1. They have 12 vessels to build, battleship, torpedo boats, molasses, sulphur, oil boats and others. They will employ fully 4,000 men and their pay roll means $2,500,000 per year, seventy-five per cent of which will be expended by residents of Quincy. He then introduced

PRESIDENT FRANCIS T. BOWLES.

President Bowles said: "I congratulate you members of the Board of Trade on your President. He has done me a great kindness in giving me the remaining time for making my speech." He was glad to see the traders and trades, as he supposed the wives might be called. They are the real factors of domestic economy. They have a duty in the Board of Trade and can perform it better than the men. In order to make the valuation of this community, women must devote themselves to the study of economical simple living, that the workingmen shall have suitable and sanitary homes, and live as economically as possible.

You here in Quincy do not need anyone to tell you how to plan for Quincy. You do not need any organization other than the Board of Trade, with possibly the Mayor and myself who can suggest more matters for you to contend with than you have time to give to it. He had never been interested in but one piece of legislation. That was the widening of the draw in the bridge, and he was going to devote his legislative activity along those lines in the future. He urged the Board of Trade to back up the work of the Port of Boston. The subject is the most important in the whole continent. Just a word here of something President Hearn did not know. He was feeling good and cheerful over the outlook of the shipyard for some time. In the shipyard we feel that we wish to have the respect of the citizens of Quincy and the Board of Trade, and we want to win it by enterprise in our business. We want a good feeling, one of co-operation with the citizens. Come down and see me and I can suggest more things for you than you can assimilate for sometime.

At the close of President Bowles' remarks, President Hearn proposed the following toast to President Bowles and the Fore River Shipbuilding Co., "May they both live long and prosper." The toast was drank standing, and brought to a close the eleventh annual banquet.

UNIVERSALIST WEEK SERVICE

Man's Life Consisteth not of Things he Possesses

WELL ATTENDED

Another interesting service was held at the Universalist church, Tuesday night. Rev. Harry Adams Hersey took for his text the words, "A man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth." He said in part:—

"These are the words of Jesus Christ whom we call the Son of God and whom the greater part of the Christian world calls Deity, the second person in the Trinity, whose name is exalted above every name. His words then should be accepted as authoritative. We ought to believe him when he says that a man's life does not consist in his possessions. But Jesus is not believed. The great majority of men, even those who call themselves Christians are striving first for possessions rather than for life. We betray it in our common speech. We say we "can't live" if we don't have certain comforts and luxuries. The professions that do not give a return in money are looked upon with disfavor, even though they do bring spiritual benefits. Parents don't want their sons to be ministers or missionaries. The young minister in a country parish, living upon a four hundred dollar salary is not considered as being in a profitable calling, even though he is lifting the ideals of the town and bettering the men and women in it.

However, when we stop to look for it, there is abundant support of the statement of Jesus. We find it borne out in experience. Again and again we are impressed with the fact that our ability to enjoy doesn't depend so much upon what is outside us, as upon what is within us, the state of our own minds and hearts. Those who have made it their life aim to pile up riches, give their testimony that it has not increased their wealth of soul. Dissatisfied and weary they confess they have lost the way of enjoyment. The delights of mind and heart are not for them, because mind and heart are uncultivated; music is a bore, good literature is unappreciated. Jay Gould, multimillionaire as he was, declared upon his death-bed that he was only a poor devil whom men would be glad to have out of the way. The man who has given love and service to his fellows and won their love is a richer, a better and a happier man than any like Jay Gould, though he die without a penny.

"The desirable thing is inner life; the thing of supreme value is character, a mind rich in great thinking, a heart loving and loveable, susceptible to noble influences and keyed to a high purpose."

Thursday evening the speaker will be Rev. O. Howard Perkins of Brockton.

QUINCY ALLIANCE.

Quincy Alliance met in the parlor of First church, Monday afternoon, with a large attendance, Mrs. George G. Saville, president in the chair.

After the devotional exercises, Mrs. A. Isabelle Davis, secretary read the report of the last meeting. An invitation was received from the Dorchester Alliance to attend its all-day meeting, March 1st. Mrs. Caroline A. Spear read a letter from a friend, who wrote of a fair which was to be held in the Parish house of Trinity church, Boston, Thursday from ten to six, she hoped many of the ladies present would attend. Mrs. Spear also related how she sent packages of the Quincy papers, the Ledger and Patriot to friends in the far West, who were former residents of Quincy but who had married and moved, some to Wisconsin, and others to Michigan, and they wrote their thanks to her, saying, "how good it seems to see a Quincy paper." Mrs. Saville read a personal letter from Mrs. Bertha Josselyn Foss who wrote that the Unitarian society in Summit, New Jersey, where she resides, is holding meetings in a hall. The society contemplates building and the ladies are to have an Easter sale, to swell the building fund. Mrs. Foss ask the Alliance to contribute articles.

Mrs. Nichols reported on the "Cheerful Letter" work. She had recently received a letter of thanks from a shut-in who resided in Salem, Indiana. He has been confined to his bed eleven years and his wife, the breadwinner of the family is a dressmaker; it was voted to send the Delineator to them.

In response to a letter received by Mrs. Saville from Charleston, S. C., an order has been sent there requesting that a large loaf of Lady Baltimore cake be expressed to Quincy which will be on sale at the fair to be held in the chapel, March 6.

Mrs. Butler thanked the ladies of the Alliance for their helpfulness during the eighteen years of service they had enjoyed together. They had been very happy years, full of harmony and consecration to their church. She had ever found them devoted and faithful, some like sisters, all kind friends, and now that a new pastor and wife are coming she extended to them her sincere wishes for their future success and welfare in the church and its environments. Mrs. Butler spoke very feelingly.

Mrs. John D. Buckingham sang two old Scotch ballads, in a very sweet voice "O! where, O! where has your highland laddie gone?" "O! Charlie is my darling, the young chevalier." Miss Charlotte Burgess accompanied at the piano.

The speaker of the afternoon, Rev. Lewis G. Wilson of Cambridge, said he had travelled extensively throughout our country bearing the message of Unitarianism.

"Before I begin my address, I wish to congratulate you upon the very faithful and conscientious minister whose labor of service is about to close. Both Mr. and Mrs. Butler have been ardent co-workers, with a vital message, lasting and enduring. Mr. Hudson, his successor, has given years of thought and study to religious work which he has chosen for his life work."

Mr. Wilson's subject was, "The future of the Liberal Church." He said in part: "No one but a very audacious or a wise person would venture to prophesy the future of the liberal church. It is out of the question for any human being, but when we look back upon the past we stand amazed, and bewildered when we confront the future of social and religious conditions.

"There are some signs, which we cannot fail to read, even in our seeming indifference.

"We are constantly pursuing an ideal life, and it is because it is implanted in our souls, and that ideal life appeals to us with such persistence, we are not satisfied until we attain it, and we can only attain it by climbing upward and onward to follow in the teachings of the bible, to renew our strength and quicken our faith. Think of the vast number of people surging up and down without any religion, whose moral sense is so attenuated that we ask ourselves with dismay when will the soul awake? It is our hope and prayer and our confident expectation that as civilization broadens over the earth, the ideal will come to every soul: first a thought, a wish, a prayer, then religion.

"What is the difinition of religion? All great men have had this ideal of religion enshrined in their hearts. It is the peace which passeth understanding, love to God, the influence of God in our lives, a power working through human lives for good, a force within us to know good and to do good. In the middle west great revivals are being carried on; religion, is thus aroused through the emotions, and in many cases after the excitement has subsided the soul sinks back into lethargy.

"The trend of modern thought is liberal thought. The presence of God in our normal lives, goodness and purity in our hearts, the powerful element within us which impels us to do good rather than evil.

"Our fathers and mothers taught us the primal elements of religion and it is inherent in us. As little children become self-conscious, and grow and develop spiritually, so we grow in faith, in patience, in courage, in love and our lives will radiate peace and power. By our religion we add spiritual strength and beauty to our own character which makes us more patient in our homes, in our occupations and in our social relations. Let us live our religion. Enduring, practical religion, and through our constancy we may influence others. Whatever our trial, let us have courage to stand without compromise, for that which we believe to be true; let us rise superior to praise or blame, timidity or self-interest; to be loyal to the best in us and be ever ready to protest against wrong and injustice, to know that the essential principle within us is God and our thoughts will turn towards the opportunities, the privileges and victories the future holds for us."

At the close, Mr. Wilson was given a rising vote of thanks. Mrs. Saville spoke a few words of appreciation after which a social, informal hour was enjoyed, the following ladies served refreshments Mrs. Warren Anderson, Miss Lucy Spear, Miss Mary W. Holden, Mrs. John Christianson, Mrs. Thomas Fenno. Mrs. Granville Pratt and Mrs. Frank S. Davis were the hostesses and pourers.

QUINCY WOMEN'S CLUB.

A large number attended the open meeting of the Quincy Women's club Tuesday afternoon. The president, Mrs. Eben W. Sheppard, opened the business meeting promptly, making it as brief as possible.

The Arts and Crafts committee called attention to an exhibit of baskets and jewelry arranged in the tea room and announced that a fine display of work done in the classes would be arranged for Reciprocity day. The exchange of the arts and crafts of the Quincy Women's club will receive consignments March 12 and 26. Articles to be marked with price and name of consignee and sent before two o'clock. Names for classes in basketry, dressmaking, millinery and jewelry to be sent at once to Mrs. Jelinek.

The Legislative committee announced a class in Parliamentary Law, a course of six lessons beginning Tuesday morning, March 5, at 10.30 o'clock at the club house. The teacher is Mrs. Electa M. Sherman; the terms, $1 to members and $1.25 to non-members of the club.

The Education committee reported plans for the annual children's festival already under way and asked that contributions of May baskets be sent to Mrs. Seth M. Crocker. Mrs. Chandler W. Smith gave a very interesting report of the mid-winter meeting of the State Federation at Park street church, Boston on Feb. 8, and Mrs. Wilson Marsh gave a brief report of the work on the "Questionaire" by means of which the Federation hopes to establish valuable statistics for use in the child welfare work. The returns from the Quincy Women's club compared favorably with those from other clubs being 13 in number.

The proposed amendment to the by-laws which was referred to the executive board for reconsideration at the last club meeting was, upon recommendation of the board, voted to be postponed.

Mrs. Sheppard announced a series of free lectures on Sunday afternoons at three o'clock at the Boston Public library. The subject next Sunday will be "The servant in the house." Entrance is by the Boylston street door.

The program of the afternoon opened with a group of songs, delightfully sung by Miss Minnie Hardwick, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Charles Sampson.

Mrs. A. N. Murray, chairman of the Visiting Nurse Committee had the afternoon in charge her speakers being Dr. Richard C. Cabot of Boston, Dr. George M. Sheahan of this city and the district nurse Miss McCune.

Mrs. Murray firsti ntroduced Miss McCune who gave a very interesting description of one day's work. IIt covered all parts of the city and cases of many different kinds were treated, the patients ranging from the infant in arms to the aged and bedridden. There are many chronic cases that she visits at regular intervals and in all cases there is an effort to teach some one the right way to care for the patient. Thirteen visits in one day covering all parts of the city is not an unusual record for the nurse and her assistant.

Mrs. Murray then introduced Dr. Sheahan who paid a high tribute to the District Nurse work here, saying there was no better example anywhere than ours, and that the establishing of such a work meant a great increase in the safety and comfort of the people. The large area of our city makes it impossible for one nurse to do all the necessary work. He urged the need of a second nurse, preferably one trained in obstetrics.

In closing he introduced Dr. Cabot as one worthy of the highest regard as teacher, physician and friend, and as one who in his work was a pioneer, able to combine New England conservatism with the liberality which accepts the new and puts it into practice.

Dr. Cabot's address upon "The Work of the District Nurse" was very interesting and instructive. He dwelt at length upon the value of the nurse as an educational force; The force of example. The moral and physical uprightness of the nurse caries its weight into the heart of the family and her personal influence tends to make people do the right thing. It is a power for good in the community. The value of her work in the prevention of disease, nipping contagion in the bud and cleaning up sources of infection, are worth many times the amount of her salary to any city. Her opportunity for intimate relation in the home tends to establish better standards of living and is an entering wedge to a better civic life in all things.

The district nurse is an example of concentrated energy, following home the work, seeing that it is done, and carrying a flag of truce to all. Every nationality welcomes her, this working towards a unity of the people. She represents and tends to bring out that eternal motherly quality which is so close to the hearts of all and which must ever work for the uplifting and betterment of humanity. Do we not all of us remember in our first best nurse and teacher of all that is best in life—our own mother?

Mrs. Murray closed the afternoon with a brief account of the new methods of financing the work which she hopes to establish, believing that every one in the city should be sufficiently interested in this work to contribute something towards its support. So long as the work is supported by a few it cannot grow as necessity demands it shall. A broader understanding of the work among our people and the consequent wish to help support it will insure the installing of a second nurse in the near future.

Mrs. Sheppard added a word to the members, that they carry the message of the afternoon to their friends and acquaintances and help to create a better understanding of what this great work truly means to a community.

An informal reception gave many the privilege of personally meeting the speakers of the afternoon.

KING'S DAUGHTERS.

The Whatsoever Circle of King's Daughters held its annual meeting at the home of Miss Helen L. Foster, Safford street, Wollaston, Monday evening, and elected the following officers for 1912. Leader, Mrs. Edward Bowker; first vice, Mrs. Edmund S. Taylor; second vice, Mrs. Alice Prescott Saxe; secretary, Mrs. W. F. Whittam; and treasurer, Mrs. W. A. Mann

Reports were read by the secretary, Mrs. Horace Kirkwood, and the treasurer, Mrs. W. A. Mann. The financial report was especially pleasing.

Plans were made for the coming year in which great things are expected of the society. The organization has at present a membership of 30, and is on a definite basis. It is interested in local charitable work. Its favorite beneficiary is the Pond Home.

Folowing the business meeting a pleasant evening and refreshments were enjoyed. Miss Helen L. Foster is the retiring leader.

DRAMA REPLETE WITH JOKES

"Our Church Fair" Given by Ladies of Memorial Church

SCENE, A LADIES' PARLOR

The drama given Tuesday night in the vestry of Memorial church, was a great success. The stage was fixed to look like a lady's parlor, and furnished with a sewing machine, mirror, hat trees and easy chairs

The title of the drama was "Our Church Fair." It was a meeting of the ladies, who were getting ready for the fair The ladies talked about every one in Atlantic, and the audience was no sooner through laughing at one joke when another joke was sprung.

Mrs. J. Burke took the part of Mrs. Roberts, who had a strong desire to become president of the society, and in her own opinion would make a better president than the chosen one, because she always took things to heart and felt a keen responsibility.

Miss Annie Harding as Mrs. Henry, was young and giddy, and always reading novels. Mrs. Henry had a new pink dress to wear at the fair, and was so busy getting it ready that she forgot to solicit any candy for her table. In her opinion men were just like children, they liked to be praised.

Mrs. J. H. Holt was Mrs. Jackson, president of the society. Her two chief ambitions were eating and being stylish. She found great difficulty in keeping order because the ladies persisted in talking over local affairs.

Mrs. W. N. Ware took the part of Mrs. Brett. As this was to be an all day sewing meeting, Mrs. Brett was appointed to prepare the dinner

Miss Ada Harding was Mrs. Lewis, the minister's wife. All seemed friendly toward her while she was with them but many remarks were passed after her departure. The common feeling was that she was a very poor manager for a minister's wife.

Mrs. A. H. Hall as Mrs. Lawson, was getting too stout for this reason was going without breakfast .

Miss Maud Read as Mrs. Brown, had the interest of the church at heart, and her one ambition was to get new church attendants.

Mrs. Alva Beede took the part of Mrs. Addison, who was very inquisitive. She had a plan to find out everything and liked the kind of people who kept their curtains up to the top all the time.

Mrs. William Hartley as Mrs. Ridgely, was very sensitive and thought her efforts should be appreciated more.

Miss Florence Hill as Mrs. Otis, served on the dinner committee with Mrs. Brett. She also was to have charge of the ice cream.

Miss Hazel Davison was Mrs. Thompson, who was decidedly close. She did not believe in making unnecessary expenditures. She was to be the fortune teller at the fair.

Miss Eleanor Nelson took the part of Mrs. Drew, who was just married. She liked house-keeping all but the cooking. She said that she expected both she and her husband would have dyspepsia before she learned.

Between the acts selections were rendered by Miss Emma Walker, violinist, accompanied by Miss Margaret L. Read. Her selections were "Concert," by Leitz, and "Humoreske," by Anton Dvorak. Mrs. J. H. Holt sang as a solo, "Mattinata," by Tosti, and as an encore, "The Harbor of Love," by Charlotte Blake.

Miss Doris Storck gave a "Dutch Story," dressed in a Dutch costume, and in broken Dutch As an encore she gave "Waking Gramma."

The drama will be repeated this evening.

Anty Drudge sets Mrs. Boarder right as to the Modern Washday.

Mrs. Boarder—"Yes, my husband would rather be in his own home than boarding; but when I remember those dreadful wash-days and the sickening smell of boiling suds, I'd rather board."

Anty Drudge—"You wouldn't have had any sickening smell of boiling suds if you had used Fels-Naptha soap and cool or lukewarm water. Neither you nor any one else would have known washing was going on in the house."

Plenty of reasons why you should wash the Fels-Naptha way.

The least labor.

The least bodily distress.

The least wear and tear on hands and fabric.

And the result, the cleanest, whitest clothes you ever saw.

That's why you should use Fels-Naptha soap. Boiling and hard rubbing are done away. You soap the clothes, roll and place them in cool or lukewarm water. Then you rub lightly, rinse and hang out. Every fibre is clean and pure as it came from the loom.

One trial will convince you. You will no more return to the old way, than you would strap a pack on your back to carry throughout the day.

Follow carefully the directions on the red and green wrapper.

BOSTON AUTO SHOW.

But three more days and the Boston Automobile Show will throw open its doors for the tenth consecutive year to the thousands of enthusiasts of New England. Generally acknowledged as being the epitome of all Auto Trade Shows, the Boston Show, coming as it does as the very last of the exhibitions in the country, not only presents everything worth seeing in the autoing line, but really ushers in the beginning of the season of outdoor life. While many enthusiasts have had their cars out all during the severe winter, still those who seek merely recreation and pleasure are prone to wait until the spring months, and these few short intervening days will soon pass and the honk-honk of the horns will be heard on the highways and byways. The old cry of "All hail to King Horse!" has been changed to "All hail King Auto!" and this year will see thousands of new converts. And why not? A man's blood must indeed be stagnant who will not enthuse and enjoy the invigoration of a spin over roads and distances impossible in any other manner.

To show the growth of the automobile industry, ten years ago the first collective exhibit of motor-propelled vehicles was held in Symphony hall, Boston, under the management of Chester I. Campbell. At this show a total of thirty-two machines were shown of nine different makes, and this took in practically every make on the market. These, of course, were all pleasure cars, and not so much pleasure attached at that, as the motorists had their difficulty in the old days to "mote."

Under the same management the shows have increased year after year until last year, when the climax was reached. Mechanics building where the past six shows were held, and acknowledged the largest show building in the United States, became all too small for the many different lines, with the advent of the commercial truck, so it has been found necessary this year to make two distinct shows,—the pleasure cars and the commercial vehicles. It was then thought that the solution had been found; but Manager Campbell still has his troubles.

With double the facilities of last year, even that is practically all exhausted, and there are still many would-be exhibitors unable to obtain space. This is particularly so of the pleasure car section, which has long been over-subscribed for.

There is no doubt, as in the past, that Boston is going to carry off the laurel wreath from the entire country, both in number and completeness of exhibits.

The commercial vehicle section, which comes immediately after the pleasure car show— namely, from March 13 to 20—will prove a revelation, as well as a wonderful educational institution and business men should not neglect this opportunity of seeing the commercial vehicles made to meet every requirement and which have proven their superiority in every test over the horse drawn vehicle.

THREE HUNDRED IN ATTENDANCE

Despite the fact that a large number of devotees of the light fantastic refrain from indulging in the art during the Lenten season, fully three hundred were in attendance at the first annual dance, given Tuesday evening in Alpha hall, by members of the Quincy Young Men's Hebrew Association and the affair proved successful in every way.

A delegation of members from the Brockton Hebrew Association was present, as were friends from organizations of a similiar nature in Braintree, Weymouth, Roxbury, South Boston and Jamaica Plain.

Music for the occasion was furnished by Wilson's orchestra, which played a fine repertoire of selections from eight until nine o'clock after which dancing was enjoyed till midnight with an intermission intervening shortly after ten o'clock.

The floor was in charge of Julius Smith, Sydney Litchman was assistant floor director and was ably assisted by the following aids:—

William Wolf, Alexander Germer, Louis Sherad, Harry Tolpin, Israel Wolf, Max Cutler, Edward Berman, Percy Swartz, Jacob Silver, Abraham Silver, Myer Sockett and Samuel Gravowski.

Committee on arrangements comprised Edward Berman, Myer Sockett, Sydney Litchman and William Wolf.

VETERANS' PENSION BILLS.

The following letter, sent to Senator Brown, at Washington, is of interest to many civil war veterans in Quincy.

Hon. Norris Brown, U. S. Senate,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Sir:

I have been requested by many of my fellow comrades to communicate with you in reference to the pension bills under consideration by the pension committee of the House of Representatives.

Many objections have been urged to the passage of any bill which would give additional aid to the old soldiers, on the ground that it would increase by many millions the indebtedness of the country. To all who make that the basis of their objections I would suggest that they turn back to the early days of the civil war, when it became necessary to issue millions in bonds to continue that long, bloody and remorseless struggle. That was the time when the soldier was of more consequence than the bond, since it was he who endorsed it.

As a matter of fact, the bonds issued by the government for the purpose of carrying on the war were actually placed by the union volunteers at a sacrifice of thousands of lives, that the bonds might not be repudiated and the country thereby be thrown into bankruptcy. Defeat then meant the death of the nation, while victory assured the blossoming of a greater, happier and longer life. It is to the credit of the old soldiers and their hard-earned victories that the stars and stripes float proudly and peacefully over this, the greatest nation of the world.

All the bonds then issued by the government have been redeemed and the bondholders have received their share of the gain without any sacrifice whatever, while the indebtedness of the government to the old soldier, whose life was full of sacrifices, still remains unpaid. Compare, if you will, the condition of the country today, with victory perched upon its banner, with what it would have been with a divided north and south. The soldiers saved the country. Now let the country save them, for I personally know many who, under the present bill, are unable to procure the ordinary comforts of life. At the same time I know there are many for whom the present bill makes ample provision, due largely to their superior physical condition.

In conclusion: Should either of the bills before the pension committee come up for consideration before the honorable body of which you are a member, I ask you, in the name of Lincoln—the man who loved the old soldier as no other man could—to use all your influence to have the bill become a law. It is your privilege to make such use of this letter as you may see fit.

Du Pont Enters a Denial

Washington, Feb. 28.—Senator Du Pont, in the senate, denied the charges contained in Senator Reed's resolution respecting the alleged corrupt use of money in his election and invited an investigation.

Q.—In Jude, 9th verse, is described a contention and dispute between Michael, the Archangel, and the Devil over the body of Moses. Why this dispute? (C. W. W.)

Answer.—We quote from an eminent authority an explanation as to the reason for the contention between Michael and the Devil:—"The Lord Himself buried Moses, hiding the place of his sepulchre. The primary reason for this probably was to hinder the Israelites from carrying his corpse as a mummy, which in after time might have become a temptation to idolatry. The passage in Jude 9 which mentions Michael contending with Satan concerning the body of Moses, is a hint along this line, that Satan desired to have the corpse to use it for the further misleading of the people, but that the Lord through Michael the Archangel hindered prevented this, and kept the burial place a secret from the Israelites. But there is another view of this matter which is interesting because it relates to Spiritual Israelites. Jesus and the Church unitedly constitute the antitypical, or greater Moses—the Spiritual. Their inheritance is not to be earthly but heavenly, and a grave is a symbol of hope as respects an earthly resurrection. Hence it was appropriate that the type should not show an earthly grave since the antitype has no hope in that connection."

RAILROAD TICKETS.

Editor Ledger:

I would like to voice my sentiments in regard to the ticket question now in vogue on the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R., the Company having absolutely refused to accept a trip ticket if detached from the book. Why? This company as long as I can remember have always taken tickets and asked no questions. A few days ago I had occasion to ride on one of their passenger trains. I was accosted by one of their uniformed employees in a very sarcastic manner. He asked me for my ticket. At the time he asked me, he had in his possession this so-called detached ticket which he claimed as worthless. I was lucky at the time to have a cash fare in my possession. If I did not have it, I probably would have had to walk to my destination. As I understand from very good authority, they create their own laws, rules and regulations and not the state. If the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R. Co. would provide better train accommidations and waiting station priveleges, they would accomplish something. You never know when you are on a train or at one of their waiting stations, whether the train is bound for Portland, Me., or Salem. If this company would use more brain power they would fare better. A little oposition is what is needed with this company. I would gladly fight this matter through with the aid of the subscribers of this paper and committees of this road. Do not let a corporation control your sentiment. This is a free country.

From an abused passenger.

FRECKLES

By Gene Stratton-Porter

COPYRIGHT, 1904, BY DOUBLEDAY, PAGE & CO.

SYNOPSIS.

Freckles, a homeless boy, is hired by Boss McLean to guard the expensive timber in the Limberlost from timber thieves.

Freckles does his work faithfully, makes friends with the birds and yearns to know more about nature. He lives with Mr. and Mrs. Duncan.

He resolves to get books and educate himself. He becomes interested in a huge pair of vultures and calls his bird friends his "chickens."

Some of the trees he is guarding are worth $1,000 each. Freckles' books arrive. He receives a call from Wessner.

Wessner attempts to bribe Freckles to betray his trust, and Freckles whips him. McLean overhears them and witnesses the fight.

Freckles' honesty saves a precious tree. He finds the nest of the vultures and is visited by a beautiful young girl.

She calls Freckles McLean's son. Freckles calls her "the angel" and helps the Bird Woman in taking photographs. McLean promises to adopt Freckles.

Freckles and the angel become very friendly. Assisted by the Bird Woman, they drive Wessner and Black Jack, timber thieves, from the Limberlost.

McLean fears more trouble, but Freckles insists upon being the sole guard of the timber. Freckles calls upon the angel's father.

The angel receives him as her equal, and her father is kind. Mrs. Duncan has exciting adventures in the Limberlost.

The Bird Woman and the angel again visit Freckles, and Freckles falls in love with the angel. The angel kisses him.

Freckles is bound and gagged by Black Jack's gang, and the timber thieves start felling a very valuable tree.

Wessner is to kill Freckles after the tree is stolen. The angel makes a daring effort to save Freckles and the tree.

McLean's men, notified by the angel, rush to save Freckles. All the timber thieves except Black Jack are captured.

Freckles guards the angel against Black Jack's vengeance. He tells McLean of his hopeless love for the angel.

Black Jack is killed by a rattlesnake. The Bird Woman gets a photograph of the baby vulture. Freckles and the angel find a valuable tree.

The tree falls, and in an effort to save the angel from death Freckles is struck and very badly injured. He appears to be dying.

The angel learns that her love alone will save him. She stifles her pride and practically proposes marriage to him.

Freckles refuses to accept her sacrifice, because he is homeless and nameless. The angel learns that Lord O'More of Ireland is seeking his lost nephew.

She finds Lord and Lady O'More, proves that Freckles is the lost boy and tells Freckles about his parents.

(Concluded from last issue)

Freckles tilted about a tray of unset stones that would have ransomed several valuable kings.

"I tell you I'm glad to see you, sir," he said. "I tried to tell me uncle what I wanted, but this ain't for him to be mixed up in, anyway, and I don't think I made it clear to him. I can be telling you, sir. I told him that I would pay only $300 for the angel's stone. I'm thinking that with what he has laid up for me, and the bigness of things that the angel did for me, that seems like a stingy little sum to him. I know he thinks I ought to be giving a lot more, but I feel as if I just had to be buying that stone with money I earned meself, and that is all I have saved of me wages. I don't mind paying for the muff, or the dressing table, or Mrs. Duncan's things, from this other money, and later the angel can have every last cent of me grandmother's, if she'll take it, but just now—oh, sir, can't you see that I have to be buying this stone with what I have in the bank?"

"In other words, Freckles," said the boss, "you don't want to buy the angel's ring with money. You want to give for it your first awful fear of the swamp. You want to pay for it with the loneliness and heart hunger you have suffered there, with last winter's freezing on the line and this summer's burning in the sun. You want the price of that stone to be the fears that have chilled your heart—the sweat and blood of your body."

Freckles' face quivered with feeling. "Dear Mr. McLean," he said, reaching up with a caress over the boss' black hair and along his cheek. "Dear boss, that's why I've wanted you so. I knew you would know. Now you will be looking at these? I don't want emeralds, because that's what she gave me."

Freckles heaped the pearls with the emeralds. He studied the diamonds a long time. The diamonds joined the emeralds and pearls. There was left a little red heap, and Freckles' fingers touched it with a new tenderness.

"I'm thinking here's me angel's stone," he exulted. "The Limberlost, and me with it, grew in mine, but it's going to bloom, and her with it, in this! There's the red of the wild poppies, the cardinal flowers and the little bunch of crushed foxfire that we found where she put it to save me. There's the light of the camp fire and the sun setting over Sleepy Snake creek. There's the red of the blood we were willing to give for each other. It's like her lips and like the drops that dried on her beautiful arm that first day, and I'm thinking it must be like the brave, tender, clean, red heart of her."

Freckles lifted the ruby to his lips and handed it to McLean.

"Freckles, may I ask you something?" he said.

"Why, sure," said Freckles. "There's nothing you would be asking that it wouldn't be giving me joy to be telling you."

McLean's eyes traveled to Freckles' right arm, with which he was pushing the jewels about.

"Oh, that!" cried Freckles with a merry laugh. You're wanting to know where all the bitterness is gone? Well, sir, 'twas carried from me soul, heart and body on the lips of an angel. Seems that hurt was necessary in the beginning to make today come true. The wound had always been raw, but the angel was healing it. If she doesn't care, I don't. May I be asking you a question? Well, then, if this accident and all that's come to me since had never happened, what was it you meant to do with me?"

"Why, Freckles," answered McLean, "I figured on taking you to Grand Rapids and putting you in the care of my mother. I had an idea it would be best to get a private tutor to coach you for a year or two, until you were fit to enter Ann Arbor or the Chicago university in good shape. Then I thought we'd finish in this country at Yale or Harvard, and end with Oxford, to get a good all round flavor."

"Is that all?" asked Freckles.

"No; that's leaving the music out. I intended to have your voice tested, and

"DEAR BOSS, DEAR FATHER, DON'T BE DOING THAT" if you really were endowed for a career as a great musician, and had inclinations that way, I wished to have you drop some of the college work and make music your chief study. Finally, I wanted us to take a trip over Europe and clear around the circle together."

"And then what?" queried Freckles breathlessly.

"Why, then," said McLean, "you know that my heart is hopelessly in the woods. I will never quit the timber business while there is timber to handle and breath in my body. I thought if you didn't make a profession of music, and had any inclination my way, we would stretch the partnership one more and take you into the firm, placing your work with me."

Freckles lifted anxious and eager eyes to McLean.

"You told me once on the trail, and again when we thought I was dying, that you loved me. Do these things that have come to me make any difference in any way with your feeling toward me?"

"None," said McLean. "Nothing could make me love you more, and you will never do anything that will make me love you less."

"Glory be to God!" burst out Freckles. "When I'm educated enough, we'll all—the angel and her father, the Bird Woman, you, and me—will go together and see me house and me relations and be taking that trip. When we get back, we'll add O'More to the lumber company, and golly, sir, but we'll make things hum! Good land, sir! Don't do that! Why, Mr. McLean, dear boss, dear father, don't be doing that! What is it?"

"Nothing, nothing!" boomed McLean's deep bass: "nothing at all!"

He abruptly turned away and hurried to the window.

"This is a mighty fine view," he said.

"I'll be glad to see Ireland," said Freckles, "but I ain't ever staying long. All me heart is the angel's, and the Limberlost is calling every minute. Me heart's all me Swamp Angel's, and me love is all hers, and I have her and the swamp so confused in me mind I never can be separating them. When I look at her, I see blue sky, the sun lifting through the leaves and pink and red flowers, and when I look at the Limberlost I see a pink face with blue eyes, gold hair, and red lips, and, it's the truth, sir, they're mixed till they're one to me!

"I'm afraid it will be hurting some, but I have the feeling that I can be making my dear people understand, so that they will be willing to let me come back home. Send Lady O'More to put these flowers God made in the place of these glasshouse elegancies, and please be cutting the string of this little package the angel's sent me."

As Freckles held up the package, the lights of the Limberlost flashed in the emerald on his finger. On the cover was printed: "To the Limberlost Guard!" Under it was a big, crisp, iridescent black feather.

THE END.

FOR PARISH HOUSE

the total weekly seating capacity at 755,000.

Of this vaudeville and moving pictures take up 85 per cent and the legitimate performances 15 per cent. Of this 15 per cent, 10 per cent is taken up in comedy leaving but 5 per cent for the regular drama.

The speaker described vaudeville as anything under Heaven that could be lugged to the stage that the people will pay to see. This is not dramatic art.

The unlimited possibilities of moving pictures were dilated upon and praise given the Board of Censorship, a public spirited body of New York citizens who give gratuitous service in examining all the films, controlled by the two great moving picture trusts and passing judgment upon them.

The theatrical trust was mentioned and its close grip on the producing manager brought out.

The talk closed with a prediction of a wide range of usefulness for the motion picture along educational and religious lines.

The usual roast beef supper was served by the young men of the church Rev. Rufus B. Tobey, asking the blessing.

LENTEN SERVICE AT ATLANTIC

Rev. Thomas J. McCormick, C. S.S. R., a member of the Redemptorist Missionary Band of the Mission church Roxbury, delivered a very eloquent and highly instructive sermon on "Salvation" at the Lenten services held Tuesday evening in the Church of the Sacred Heart, Atlantic. The services consisted of the rosary, sermon and Benediction of the Most Blessed Sacrafully taxed with parishioners.

At the conclusion of the sermon, Benediction of the Most Blessed Sacrament was celebrated by Rev. John P. Cuffe, pastor of the church.

AUCTION PARTY.

An entertainment both novel and interesting in form was the auction party held under the auspices of the Church Helpers, in the vestry of the Wollaston Unitarian church, Tuesday evening.

With Councilman Charles E. Barker, as auctioneer, a large number of articles of varied degrees of usefulness met with a ready sale. Each article was so wrapped as to make it nearly impossible to tell the contents of the package. Each bundle was accompanied by a legend supposed to give an inkling to its contents.

Within the package marked the "prettiest girl in town" was a bell, while "a hosiery display" contained a toy mouse. Others of like nature followed and when the evening closed quite a sum had been realized for the treasury of the society.

Refreshments of sandwiches and coffee concluded the entertainment. In charge of the affair were: Mrs. Raymond H. Stiles, Mrs. Leroy Holbrook and Mrs. Harold Green.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

$5,000 IN FIVE DAYS

That amount is being raised this week by business men interested in the work of our local Y. M. C. A., to meet this years's expenses. Work began Tuesday. A complete report of the day's work could not be obtained by the Chairman, Henry L. Kincaide, Tuesday night on acount of the Board of Trade banquet in which he and nearly every member of the committee was interested. However judging from what reports were made it seems certain the pledges for this first day will total over $1000.

Mr. Kincaide has built up his immense Home Furnishing business by taking the public into his confidence, telling them daily in the advertising column of the Ledger the real, honest, true facts about his store. He believed that the same thing should be done in this Y. M. C. A. Campaign for funds. That you ought to be told why the money was needed and for what it would be used. That's just why you have seen the display advertisements in the Ledger and that eight-page booklet entitled "Why" explaining in detail the deeds and needs of their worthy institution. If you have not received one the committee will be very glad tos upply you at 61 Washington street.

And if you believe the work, the Young Men's Christian Association is doing among the men and boys of Quincy is worthwhile, now is the time to show your appreciation in a substantial manner. Give all you can—that's all we ask.

Former Slave Who Dies at 101 Leaves a Handsome Fortune

Binghamton, N. Y., Feb. 28.—James Elliott, a negro who settled in Binghamton in 1860 and amassed a fortune by dealing in real estate during the reconstruction period, died at his home here, aged 101 years.

He was nearly 50 years old when he escaped from slavery by means of the underground railroad. Establishing himself on a small plot of ground here he learned to read and write and became a lover of good books. As wealth came to him he was able to purchase many notable volumes, and at the time of his death had gathered a valuable library.

MAY POSTPONE CONVENTION

Democrats Upset by Announcement of Roosevelt's Candidacy

Washington, Feb. 28.—Senator Bacon of Georgia has started a movement to postpone the Democratic national convention at Baltimore for three weeks or a month. This is the leading development in the political situation.

It is said the movement is due to the announcement of Roosevelt that he is a candidate and the belief of Democrats that he will be nominated by the Republicans.

Senator Bacon has conferred with leading Democrats, and finds them of the same opinion as he, that the the nomination of Roosevelt would make a change in the plans of the Democrats necessary.

Boston, Feb. 28.—Mrs. Georgia M. Stuart, the alleged friend of A. W. Shaw, now under arrest in Los Angeles, charged with the larceny of $10,000, had her continued case called in the lower court. At the request of her attorney, Judge Burke continued the case to March 12.

Mrs. Stuart, who was arrested a week ago on a complaint charging her with being an accessory, was in court yesterday, and her attorney was on hand to have the continuance granted without her doing so. Burke, however, insisted.

AN EASY GAME FOR QUINCYS

Substitute McDonald Plays Great Game for Home Team

SCORE 52 TO 19

The disparity between the game of basketball yesterday afternoon and the game played on the afternoon of Washington's Birthday was so great that the 52 to 19 defeat administered to the members of the Weymouth High combination by the local High contingency furnished nothing more than a practice contest. The only anxiety felt by the spectators was to be allowed the opportunity to witness Wall, the left back of the Weymouth team, in action. He is the record holder of the season for the greatest individual number of baskets for a single game, having secured no fewer than 37 for the floor in a recent game.

But he failed to display championship form and while he was credited with three goals from free tries, which by the way was the only scoring from fouls made the entire game, he obtained but one basket from the floor. Coach Staff allowed McDonald and Baird to play throughout the whole game and for that matter he might have gone a little farther and put the whole second team in, so vastly superior were the local boys to their opponents in all departments of play.

McDonald showed up in splendid form. He exhibited pass work of a high order, covered his opponent in grand style and shot for baskets with great accuracy. He also displayed remarkable endurance and demonstrated himself to a basketball player who can be called upon to take his position in the Quincy High lineup at any stage of the game. The clever and elongated forward had a total of twelve baskets from the floor to his credit, many of which were made in sensational form. Baird also showed up to great advantage, for besides doing some fine blocking and passing throughout the game, he contributed the feature shot by caging a basket when standing in the centre of the court in the latter part of the first period. The ball went through the net in a most pretty manner and the shot was without doubt the most spectacular that has been witnessed within the gymnasium of the local school for a long time. At the end of the first period Quincy High was in the lead by a score of 20 to 3.

Finlay played during the second half and seemed to be at his best, getting five baskets from the floor. Trask did not seem to be able to locate the baskets with his usual proficiency, but in the second period he seemed to exhibit his best work of the season. Coach Staff officiated in the capacity of referee and the players were forbidden to jump against the walls, as they have been allowed in previous games. This proved to be somewhat disadvantageous to Finlay and Trask, who have shown great skill in this method of shooting thus far this season. but it will undoubtedly be for their advantage since the same restriction will be put on them when they play Newton High at Newton next Friday afternoon for at Newton, no walls encompass the basketball court.

Little interest was manifested during the game, save when one of the players got a goal of the hair raising variety. It seemed almost a miracle for the Weymouth players to get baskets in the second half and whenever one of them succeeded in caging a basket, he was cheered to the echo. Fulton, who played the greater part of the game, proved to be the star for the losers, obtaining four baskets from the floor, all of which were made in the latter part of the last period. Humphrey, who played in one of the backfield positions for the visiting aggregation, also showed up to some advantage in the second half and contributed a shot which savored of the spectacular variety.

The Weymouth High lineup was changed considerably during the game but the all round work of the local players was too much for the visitors to overcome. It was the second time this season that Quincy High has taken the measure of the Weymouth team and undoubtedly put Captain Chapman and his teammates in fine trim for their greatest struggle of the season, which is scheduled for next Friday afternoon in the Newton Y. M. C. A. gymnasium with the High school quintet of that town.

The same two teams met in Quincy last Thursday afternoon and after battling in most gruelling style for fifty minutes ten of which constituted overtimes periods of five minute each, the result was a 16 to 16 tie. The local boys will be at a disadvantage in not playing on their home floor but Coach Staff is highly optimistic and thinks that if Quincy High can exhibit the form of the past few games, that the championship scholastic honors will be definitely settled next Friday afternoon when his proteges return to the "City of Presidents" in triumph.

A large number of the students are planning to accompany the team and greater enthusiasm was never in evidence among students at Quincy High with regard to the outcome which is at stake.

QUINCY COUNCIL LOST AT BOWLING

Even a change in the lineup failed to dispel the precedent which has long since been established by the members of the Quincy Council K of C. bowling team and as a result they dropped two straight, together with the grand total to the Mt. Pleasant council, in the game played last evening at the Columbus club alleys. Clark of the winning team carried off the honors for a single string, having a pinfall of 125.

He also was high man for the three strings, attaining the 318 mark. Keith and Whooley were conspicious for the losers. The former had 111 for a single string and 280 for the sum total. The latter reached 105 for the single string and 277 for the sum total.

PLEDGES NATION'S AMITY

Knox Tells Central Americans That We Are Their Friend

Panama, Feb. 28.—The Monroe doctrine, that great principle of United States protection over weaker sister republics in Latin America, took on new significance when Secretary of State Knox delivered his first address here upon the occasion of his trip through the capitals of the Caribbean littoral countries.

Secretary Knox sounded the keynote of his visit, pledging the friendship of his government to those of the republics on his calling list and predicting great things after the opening of the Panama canal.

In explaining that the trip was being made at the request of President Taft, Knox pictured Uncle Sam as a paternal guardian of peace and prosperity ever ready to lend a helping hand to an ailing republic through Central America or adjacent territory.

He declared that American policies toward Latin American states had often been misinterpreted, but denied there had ever been a trace of sinister motive or design.

Serious Rioting In Jamaica

Kingston, Jam, Feb. 28.—Kingston was given over to mob rule throughout a whole night and as a result of collisions between the police and the populace two men were killed and more than thirty injured, some of them severely.

QUINCY POINT MEN'S CLUB

The Point church Men's club meets tonight in the vestry of the church, corner of South and Washington streets to debate with Christ Church club, the question, "Should women receive the franchise." E. P. Barrows and A. Marshall will take the affirmative for the Point club, while Arthur Thomas and H. Marr will oppose for the visitors. As this question is rapidly assuming the proportions of a state and national issue and the leaders in the debate have given the subject considerable thought and study, a spirited discussion is expected and a large turnout of the members is promised.

The Wollaston M. E. Men's club will have a delegation on hand to arbitrate the matter should this become necessary.

The home club orchestra of ten pieces will be out in full force and under the baton of Jim Melville, harmony in that part of the evenings programme is assured. At the conclusion of the debate the refreshment committee will have something on hand to appeal to the inner man. A business ression will be held at 7.30 the debate commencing sharp at 8 o'clock.

VOTES TO BE INCORPORATED

Will be Known as July 4th Celebration Association

OTHER BUSINESS

There was a large attendance at the meeting of the Fourth of July Association Wednesday evening in the rooms of the Board of Trade, and judging from the steps already taken for the observance of Independence Day, the coming celebration gives every promise of being must successful. Mayor Eugene R. Stone presided and suggestions of a varied nature were advanced.

It was voted to have the association incorporated. The duty of bringing this about devolves upon the executive committee, comprised of Alfred N. LaBrecque, Edward P. Histen, Councilman John R. Richards, Councilman Robert B. Craig, James H. Elcock and Charles E. Cherrington.

The Matter of holding a banquet was discussed at length, but was finally voted to lay on the table indefinitely.

Galen V. Bowditch spoke in a forceful manner at the meeting and urged that appropriate exercises be held to commemorate Patriots' Day and incidentally arouse a keen spirit of enthusiasm for the Fourth of July celebration.

Captain George A. Wardwell advocated a patriotic entertainment, to be given either in April or May in order to stimulate an enthusiasm that would enable the coming celebration to measure up to any in the United States. The suggestion was favorably received and was referred to a committee, composed of one member from each ward. This committee will report at the next meeting.

Plans were discussed for increasing the membership of the association and it is expected that a large number will be enrolled before the next meeting. The gathering adjourned shortly before ten o'clock.

RAYMOND OGILVIE.

About midnight Wednesday night Mrs. (Rev.) A. M. Thompson received a telegram to the effect that her youngest brother Raymond Ogilvie had passed away. The late Mr. Ogilvie was traveller for the "Eastern Hat & Cap Factory" of Truro, N. S. He was at the time of his death in Moosejaw, Alberta. He was stricken down suddenly with pneumonia and only lived a few days. Everything was done for him that could be done but all to no avail. He was only 21 years of age and very popular in his native town. His remains will be brought to Truro, N. S. for interment. Mrs. Thompson will leave Friday for Truro to attend the funeral.

ASSOCIATION TO BE FORMED

Meeting of Parents and Teachers of Coddington School

ENTERTAINMENT, ETC.

More than 150 people attended the meeting, called to order in the assembly hall of the Coddington school, Wednesday evening, for the purpose of forming a permanent Parents' and Teachers' Association. The principal of the school, James S. Perkins, presided and the evening proved a source of pleasure to all present.

After a few introductory remarks by the chairman, appropriate to the occasion, Superintendent of Schools Albert L. Barbour was introduced. He gave an interesting talk on "The Proposed System of Vocational Training in our Public Schools."

In the course of his remarks the speaker dwelt on the advisability of forming an association such as was contemplated and brought out the many benefits that would accrue in the event of the same being established.

At the conclusion of the address, a vote of thanks was given to Mr. Barbour and it was unanimously voted to form a Parents' and Teachers' Association.

A committee was then appointed to draw up a constitution and bring in a list of nominations for offices of the association, at the next meeting, scheduled to be held in April.

An entertainment, was then furnished. Miss Bertha F. Estes, one of the teachers of the school, received great applause for her piano selection entitled "Military Polonaise," while Miss Gladys L. Fleiger, also a teacher at the school, was forced to respond to repeated encores for her two vocal solos, "Roses in June," and "The Cares of Yesterday."

Refreshments were served by a committee of mothers and teachers and a social hour was in order. During this period, three pupils of the school, Leon Biganess, Ethel Vaughn and Edith Bixby contributed to the program and were heartly applauded for their musical talent. The affair proved enjoyable in every way and was pronounced most successful.

GYM. GIRLS' GAME.

The Quincy Gym Girls' basketball team will play the much heralded Oliver Ames High Girls' team in St. Mary's Hall, West Quincy, next Friday evening and there is no doubt but what the best game of basketball ever played by girl performers in local circles will be in order. The North Easton Girls have already triumphed over the local team and the latter is especially desirous of turning the tables.

Men's Clubs Debate Women's Suffrage at Quincy Point

"Should Women Receive the Franchise" was the subject of an interesting debate between the members of the Men's Club of Christ Church and Men's Club of the Point Church held in the vestry of the Washington Congregational church, Wednesday evening. The debate was largely attended and a spirited discussion of the topic was in order throughout the evening.

A business meeting preceded the debate, at which time the presidentof the Point Church club, John Hendry, announced that the club banquet, which had been scheduled for March 28 had been postponed until April 10, owing to a conflict in dates with the annual parish meeting. It was also announced that all tickets for opening night of the annual entertainment, entitled "Our Folks" hadb en disposed of and that a large number had already been sold for the second performance, thus assuring great success on both occasions. The entertainments are to take place in the vestry on March 13 and 14.

The affirmative side of the debate was argued by Edward P. Barorws and Arthur Marshall, both members of the home club, while the negative side was upheld by Arthur Thomas and Harry Marr. The debate of Mr. Barrows was interspersed with many jocosing remarks, while Mr. Marshall displayed earnestness throughout his speech. All debaters accredited themselves in a splendid manner and many of those present participated in the general debate. The main speakers were allowed 20 minutes to speak and five minutes on the rebuttal. The two remaining speakers were allotted fifteen minutes in which to present their arguments.

The vote on the merits of the debate favored the affirmative side, but the vote on the merits of the question went to the negative side by a large majority.

At the conclusion of the debate an entertainment was provided by the Point Church orchestra, composed of James A. Melville, leader, R. McFarlane and W. F. Perry, violinists, D. Sharp and R. Murphy, cornetists, J. Horan, flutist and Irving Hayden, pianist. Solos were also contributed by Robert McFarlane and C. Miller. Refreshments brought a most enjoyable evening to a close.

The refreshments were served by a committee which included H. E. Bonney, E. P. Barrows, J. Peterson, R. H. Newcomb, and James McCullough.

LENTEN SERVICES.

"It is universally conceded that moral evil is rampant in the world, that today it is a question of strength against weakness, of rich against poor, of capital against labor, of one class trying to hold the other in continual subservience," declared Rev. Fr. John J. Casey, in a most forceful sermon on the "Influences of Christianity," preached Wednesday evening at the Lenten devotions held in the Church of St. John the Baptist. The services consisted of the rosary, sermon and Benediction of the Most Blessed Sacrament and the church was fully taxed with parishioners.

In the course of his remarks, Fr. Casey outlined the analogy between diseases of the body and diseases of the soul. He depicted the relationship of the one to the other and proceeded to show that although in existence for over two thousand years, Christianity was yet in its infancy.

In St. Mary's church, West Quincy, similiar services were conducted by the pastor, Rev. Fr. Henry T. Grady The subject of Fr. Grady's sermon was "Salvation."

—Figuratively speaking, the Massachusetts cities are tumbling over each other to get on the main line of the Grand Trunk railroad system. This entry of the great system into the New England fight is causing a veritable stampede, which outdoes a bargain-counter rush. Mr. Fitzhugh must smile as he notes the feverish anxiety.—Barre Vt., Times.

VOLUNTEERS ARE WANTED

Y. M. C. A. Campaign Committee Calls For Volunteers

PROGRESS OF WORK

At the meeting of the $5000 current expense campaign committee Wednesday evening the need for more workers was very evident. About thirty men were present and all were very enthusiastic when the reports showed receipts totalling $1,537.

It is simply impossible for these men to cover all the large territory embraced in this district. So it is hoped that every man who is willing to take hold and help the two remaining days will meet the Committee at the Association hall tonight at six o'clock.

Several letters of encouragement, have been received at the Campaign Headquarters. One that tells of the real live work this splendid institution is doing for the boys of Quincy is as follows:

Henry L. Kincaide.

Chairman, Y. M. C. A. Com.:

I wish you all good luck in your endeavor to raise $5000. for the current expenses of the Association and I desire to say just one word about the work it is doing in one particular direction. The Y. M. C. A. is the only organization, so far as I can see, that is taking any interest in juvenile offenders who are brought before the Court. It has obtained positions and extended favors to many young fellows. Mr. Sedgwick has shown a particular interest. I have personally sent to him three or four young men, and finding that they were industrious and deserving, he has put them to work.

WORK IS THE THING. There is nothing so helpful in changing the viewpoint of a youthful offender as employment and the man who employs the boy who has been before the Court for some little indiscretion and placed on probation, or secures employment for him is doing the thing that is needed most in getting the boy on the right track, and keeping him there. If you will impress this upon the minds of your co-workers, it will bear fruit later, for you and they are in a position sometimes to help out in this direction.

Yours very truly,
Arthur B. Hultman,
Probation Officer.

Tonight will be quite the happiest of many in the life of Rev. George L. Perin, D. D. of Boston, for after ten years of hard work on his part the mortgage on the Franklin Square house, Boston, will be burned. The exercises will take place in Haynes hall, and the match will be applied by Master George L. Perin, Jr., and Miss Evangeline C. Dine, a Boston University graduate. There will be addresses and music, a reception and dancing.

Dr. Perin spoke in Quincy, Sunday evening at the Universalist church to a large audience and gave a stirring talk.

QUINCY'S NEW SUMMER RESORT

Part of the Famous Mt. Wollaston Farm to be Developed

IDEAL LOCATION

A part of the well-known Mt. Wollaston farm has recently been surveyed and laid out into house lots and has now for the first time been placed on the market by the trustees Charles F. Adams 2d and Arthur Adams. Without question this property is destined to become one of the most exclusive summer resorts along theSo uth shorea ndw ill rival such well-known summer residential sections as Nahant.

The property has a large water frontage, on Quincy Bay and Sea street and all of the lots will be sold subject to reasonable restrictions, which will secure it as a residential property.

The development of this property is upon entirely different lines from those usually employed in opening up a new section. It will have streets forty feet wide and the sidewalks on the principal streets will be of concrete or granolithic. Beautiful shade trees willa lso be set out along the borders of these walks. It will also be piped for gas and the streets will be lighted by numerous electric lights.

Another innovation is the setting apart of a large tract for playground purposes. The property developed is that lying in the rear of the farm buildings and extending toward what s is known as Adam Shore. It might also be added that a hearing was held this morning before the Port of Boston commission on the petition of the trustees to build a pile wharf and pier leading from the property into Quincy Bay.

It is understood from reliable authority that several lots have already been taken by well known residents whose intention it is to build at once that their houses may be occupied the coming summer.

The prices of the lots are not high, considering the location and the exclusiveness which is proposed, varying from 10 to 15 cents per foot according to location.

For many years Houghs Neck was the popular summer resort of Quincy residents and none but the best class of houses were built. Of late years however there has been hundreds of small houses, little larger than shacks, erected and the place has lost the prestige it formerly had. It has long been a source of regret to Quincy residents, that with our unsurpassed water front, that there was not some desirable location opened up under proper restrictions, that should prevent the erection of such shacks that now dot many parts of Houghs Neck, especially along Manet avenue. To such the Mt. Wollaston farm will be welcome.

AUTOMOBILE IS DESTROYED

An automobile of A. P. Russell was practically ruined by fire this morning on Newport avenue, near Presidents bridge, and was the occasion for the still alarm which sent the auto chemical flying through City Square, 9.45. The automobile was ni charge of a young man who was taking it to Scammell's to be repaired. As he came along Newport avenue he felt his feet getting warm and taking up the floor boards, found the bottom of the car all ablaze.. Thinking that it was caused by leaking gasoline he turned the tank on. This only served to feed the flames and when the firemen arrived the front of the car was one mass of blaze. The fire was put out, but the car was so badly burned that it will hardly pay to have it repaired. It was valued from $400 to $500.

—There are some compensations even for prolonged winter weather. Prediction of a record peach crop this year comes from Georgia, and it is based on the period of steady cold weather, which has prevented premature budding for subsequent freezing. An abundant peach crop should mean reasonable prices—but when it comes to the question of price, you never can tell.—Taunton Herald.

ELOPERS AND PARENTS HAPPY

Announcement was made Wednesday evening of the elopement and marriage at Portland, Me., of Leland L. Wallace of Newton Centre, who was recently employed in Quincy for some months. Mr. Wallace, who was a printer by occupation left Quincy some weeks ago and has since been located at Newton Centre. His bride was Miss Priscilla A. Clapp of 9 Walcott street, Malden and the couple eloped to Portland last Monday and were married by a justice of the peace.

The young people had been keeping company with each other for the past two years and their marriage resulted from a pretty vacation romance started at Wiscasset, Me.

Miss Clapp is employed in the book department of a Boston department store and her wedding ring was the cause of her secret becoming known to her friends at the store. Wednesday night at her parents' home an informal family reception was held.

The ceremony was performed in Portland by Fred Matthews, a justice of the peace, and two of his stenographers, Miss Soule and Miss Webber, were the witnesses. Miss Clapp wanted a quiet marriage and the only possible way to obtain it, she said, was by the elopement, which the youn couple planned at Malden last Sunday evening.

Her father, Edward Clapp, said last night: "It was a surprise to us to hear of their marriage, but it was also a pleasure as we knew the young people would be married some day anyway. They are very happy and Mrs. Clapp and myself are more than happy to receive them."

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

The college seniors are urged to go back to the soil next June, but many of them think the soil is principally usefudl to run bases on.

Almost time for the faint, far smell of the returning moth ball to waft itself upon the olfactories as a harbinger of spring.

Depression prevails in the stock market. The brokers are getting a much needed opportunity this year to discover how the housewife feels on visiting the produce market and learning the price of everything to eat.

Never saw such an ice crop! Suppose about next July, though, the Trust will regret to report it's full of hook worm or boll weevil or something and tearfully proceed to boost the price.

The Scientist who claims that not one boy in a thousand is fundamentally bad probably would change his mind if he chanced to pass a crowd of healthy youngsters in good snowballing weather.

Fortunately for our happiness, the coming summer, the San Jose scale, the tussock moth, the cut worm, and the canker worm, furnish irrefutable reasons why we should not comply with the desires of our better half and plant a garden the coming spring.

House bill No. 727 relative to the appointment of school physicians comes up for a hearing on Tuesday morning, Mar. 5, and is exciting considerable interest. There is a strong belief that the present bill is sufficiently strong as it is. The proposed bill gives the school physician power to make arbitrary rules of which the school committee knows nothing, thereby, making it possible for assessment of a fine against the city or district in which the school is located, to which taxpayers would be justified in objecting.

COLLEGE ATHLETICS FOR ALL.

The attitude of college government toward athletics is much like that of the man who had a bull by the horns. He can't hold on, and he can't let go. The thing has become as essentially a part of college life as the class room work, and no power can change it. It is simply a question as to how the power can be made most useful and least harmful.

A recent report of Cornell university offers some suggestions. It tells how at that institution, great attention has been paid toward engaging all the men in athletic work. During the past year some two hundred contests were held outside the intercollegiate competitions. These were inter-class and inter-fraternity matches, and those between other societies.

The essential weakness of college athletics is that the vast majority of the boys get no physical training, other than that given by cheering and waving banners in the grand stand. The few who play on the teams are so over trained that they often suffer physical strain, and at best can give but secondary attention to study.

The college problem is how to get the sport, when his body is in his class room, to put his heart for a little time into the real work of life, for which he went to college to prepare, and how to get the bookworm away from his midnight lamp and out into the athletic field. Cornell seems to have done something positive toward the latter end at least.

Two suggestions might well be offered to our colleges. The first is to encourage a host of minor contests in which all might take creditable part, as Cornell has done. The second is to encourage games in which a few men can play in an impromptu manner.

In the latter way no sports are more valuable as a means of development to the average man than tennis and golf. Tennis is particularly valuable, because the equipment is relatively so inexpensive, and the play is so vigorous. The man who wants the fellows of his alma mater to become strong and healthy men could do more good by offering $100 a year in prizes for tennis, than by giving $1000 a year for coaches for foot ball.

OLEOMARGINE.

"The price of butter is high and there is every indication that it will go higher. The price of butter is now artificially held up by the existing tax on oleomargarine, a tax which helps to increase the cost of living." These statements appear in a circular which has been widely circulated among various organizations asking that they "pass resolutions requesting Congress to repeal this iniquitous tax."

Now, what are the facts? Oleomargarine is a mixture of beef and pork fats with cottonseed oil.. These are wholesome— singly and in combination they have a food value. This mixture—or oleomargarine as such—is practically untaxed—having only a nominal tax of one quarter of a cent per lb. This is so infinitesimal that it cannot add to the cost of butter or the expense of living. Hence the statement above quoted is misleading and erroneous.

When to natural oleomargarine, having a legitimate place in commerce, there is added coloring matter which makes it resemble ordinary table butter, it loses its distinctive character, and becomes an imitation or a counterfeit. The government which practically puts no tax on natural oleomargarine, steps in and taxes the imitation of common table butter ten cents per lb. Hence again the statement above quoted is misleading and erroneous. A tax on imitations and counterfeits has no legitimate connection with the price of genuine articles.

The reason for the ten-cent tax on imitation butter—not on genuine oleomargarine—is this: If there were no restrictive legislation, oleomargarine would be sold dishonestly in many, if not most, instances, to the injury of the consumer and the discouragement of honest business. This statement is proven by the history of oleomargarine. Honest oleomargarine can be bought at from 12 to 19 cents and retailed at 18 to 25 cents. Here then is an article which the economically inclined can use, if they wish, as a substitute for table butter with no injury to anyone, and at a saving of some 15 cents per pound. But, if there were no oleomargarine color laws, much of this substance would be colored so as to be undistinguishable by the ordinary consumer from butter and thus it would become an imitation as well as a substitute.

This 10-cent tax on an imitation product does not increase the cost of living to anyone, but it stands to check dishonesty. It is not an "iniquitous tax." Organizations and individuals should not thoughtlessly countenance a movement to repeal this tax unless there is in sight something which is equally or more effective in the interests of commercial honesty in an important food product. Take a serious second thought before you sign a petition or vote for a resolution asking for the removal of restrictions on the sale of an imitation product, restrictions which favor a "square deal."—George M. Whitaker, Secretary National Dairy Union, 1404 Harvard Street, N. W., Washington, D. C.

DISEASE OF HONEY BEES.

The United States Department of Agriculture calls atention to the fact that American foul brood has been found to exist in Norfolk County. The Department has no means of knowing how long the disease has existed in the region, but desires to notify bee keepers of the trouble and to suggest that, if not already informed concerning the disease, they inform themselves at once. Very frequently colonies of bees are destroyed by disease and the loss is attributed by the bee keeper to some other cause. Farmer's Bulletin No. 442, The Treatment of Bee Diseases, gives a description of the brood diseases and methods of treatment. It will be sent free on request to the Secretary of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Attention is also called to the fact that the brood diseases do not at all injure honey for human consumption, so that there need be no fear on the part of purchasers of honey.

SAVE THE BIRDS.

Through the efforts of the American Game Protective and Propagation Association, a hearing on the Weeks Bill for Federal protection of migratory birds has been secured for March 6 before the House Committee on Agriculture at Washington, D. C.

Although the matter of Federal protection of migrants has been agitated for years, it has never before been given a hearing, and it is extremely important that all those interested in the measure should take advantage of this opportunity and go to Washington to urge the passage of the Bill.

Since many states refuse, or are unable to protect the birds during the breeding season, the only way they can be saved from extermination is for the National Government to step in.

DYNAMITE TIED TO CAR

Train Mostly Loaded With Goods From Lawrence Woolen Mills

Philadelphia, Feb. 29.—Nineteen sticks of dynamite were discovered attached to the trucks of a Boston and Maine railroad freight car here by a car inspector who was examining the wheels.

The car, loaded with paper from Bellows Falls, Vt., passed through Lawrence, Mass., last Thursday, where it was made part of a train composed largely of cars loaded with woolen goods belonging to the American Woolen company, whose workers are on strike.

According to the report, the dynamite, when found was wrapped in heavy paper and tied to the trucks in such a way as to cause a wheel eventually to rub away the paper and cause a piece of wire wrapped in the paper with the dynamite to ignite from the friction of the wheel, but a miscalculation was evidently made by the would-be dynamiter.

The dyanmite has been turned over to the railroad special police and they with railroad detectives are endeavoring to trace its sources.

SHIPS OWNED BY RAILROADS

They Should Not Be Allowed Use of Panama Canal

SO SAY COMMERCE EXPERTS

President's Message to That Effect Is Indorsed—United Demand For Free or Preferential Tolls For Coastwise Shipping—No Violation of Hay-Pauncefote Treaty—Views Expressed at Important Conference

Washington, Feb. 29.—David O. Ives, transportation manager of the Boston chamber of commerce; Willis R. Wheeler, formerly assistant secretary of commerce and labor, now manager of the traffic bureau of the San Francisco chamber of commerce; Joseph N. Teal of Portland, Or., and N. B. Kelly, commissioner of transportation and secretary of the Philadelphia chamber of commerce, had an important conference with President Taft with reference to Panama canal questions.

Mr. Wheeler especially urged upon the president that the law should prohibit the use of the canal to ships owned or controlled by railroads which thus, he said, might set up the fiction that they were competing with themselves.

In this connection Wheeler presented a resolution of the San Francisco chamber of commerce approving the recommendation of President Taft to congress in his message of Dec. 6, 1910, in which the president suggested an amendment to the interstate commerce law prohibiting interstate railroads from owning or controlling ships engaged in the trade through the canal.

"I believe," said the president, "such a provision may be needed to save the people of the United States the benefits of the competition in trade between the eastern and western seaboards which this canal was constructed to secure."

Mr. Ives stated that the Boston chamber of commerce had not yet acted upon this phase of the situation. All the men united in a demand for free or preferential tolls for coastwise shipping, on the ground that a large trade might be built up between the eastern and western coasts in certain commodities, like coal, which trade would make unprofitable by the imposition of even so low a rate as 10 cents a ton.

It appears that all the organizations named have the unanimous opinion of local counsel that the provisions of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty would not be violated by granting free passage or preferential tolls to domestic vessels, they taking the ground that no discrimination could exist in a situation where none but vessels of the United States could participate in the trade whatever the tolls might be.

GATES' VAST FORTUNE

Almost All of It Is Found to Have Been Left to Widow

Chicago, Feb. 29.—Almost all of the $38,000,000 estate of John W. Gates goes to the widow, it became known when the will was filed for probate at Geneva, Ills. It had been announced heretofore that the fortune, except certain special bequests, was to be divided between the widow and Charles Gates, the only son.

The will had been misinterpreted by relatives. The mistake was due to the fact that the will proper left the entire estate to his son, in trust, if Mrs. Gates should die.

In a codicil, however, the testator revoked this clause and named the widow and the son executrix and executor. The will and the codicil were both signed on March, 11, 1911.

AMERICANS IN DANGER

Dangerous and Delicate Situation In Mexico Realized at Washington

Washington, Feb. 29.—That the Mexican situation is extremely delicate and dangerous was the statement made by President Taft to Senator Lodge, who called at the White to show letters he had received from representatives of copper interests in New York and Boston. These asserted that their property was in great danger and their lives in peril and asked if something could not be done.

Senator Lodge did not specify individuals or localities. It was in talking over the situation that the president emphasized its delicacy.

Q.—Where is hell, and who created it? (T. N. J.)

Answer.—The so-called "orthodox hell," of a vast furnace of fire and brimstone, manned by fire-proof devils with pitch forks in their hands, who are busily engaged in jabbing and tormenting the billions of poor unfortunates,all of the human race with the exception of the few saints, who with much difficulty manage to squeeze through the pearly gates into the heavenly city—exists only in the feeble minds and perverted imaginations of those who have given heed to the "doctrines of demons" (I Timothy iv, 1) and who have never thoughtfully studied the Scriptures. This "hell" was created in the Dark Ages of the past by corrupt and ignorant priests influenced by evil spirits who misrepresented and blasphemed the character of the Almighty God, who is wise and just, loving and merciful, as the Scriptures everywhere affirm. In the increasing light of our day, when the people are brushing the smoke and dust of the ages of gloom from their eyes, it is clearly seen that "hell," in the Scriptures, is nothing more than the condition of death—the tomb. The Hebrew word sheol and the Greek hades from which the word hell is used in the English translations have this significance. All go to hell—the grave—the death state, and will remain there until the resurrection. Adam created, or brought this "hell," or condiition of death by his disobedience of death, upon the race by his disobedience. See Romans v, 12.

He is now a student at Colgate College, and came here last week to represent the college students at the Colgate New England Alumni Association dinner, which was held at the Boston City Club, on Wednesday evening. At this dinner, Head Master James D. Howlett was elected president of the Colgate New England Alumni Association for the coming year.

On Thursday, February 22, the basketball teams of Quincy and Newton battled to a tie in the High School gymnasium. Two extra periods were played in an effort to break the tie, but the final score stood 16-16. Quincy's second team defeated Newton's second team by a score of 19-3.

The relay team sent by Quincy High School to the School Boys' Meet held by the B. A. A., was defeated by a very small margin. The time which the team made was better than the time made by very many of the large schools which had teams entered. Following are the members of the Quincy High team in the order in which they ran; C. Holmes, 1914, R. Prout, 1913, F. Kingsbury, 1913, H. Trask, 1913. Quincy's opponent at the meet was Natick High School.

ADAMS SCHOOL.

"Some School Problems of the Day" is the subject chosen by Mr. George P. Aldrich of Brookline for his address before the Adams and Cranch Parents' and Teachers' Association in the Coddington School Hall on Wednesday evening, March the thirteenth. Mr. Aldrich was formerly Master of the Adams School and later became Superintendent of schools in this city.

The Candy Sale yesterday netted $31.46.

CRANCH SCHOOL.

The pupils of the fourth grade, Miss Annie C. Healey, teacher, are proud of the fact that not a pupil has been tardy this school year.

Nearly thirty dollars was realized from the recent Candy Sale. The money will be used for school improvements.

JOHN HANCOCK—LINCOLN

The friends of the John Hancock and Lincoln schools are cordially invited to be present at the Coddington School Hall on Thursday evening, March 14th at 7.30 o'clock, to the stere opticon lecture "Historic Quincy, Past and Present" by Mr. Chas. H. Johnson for the benefit of the Athletic fund of the two schools.

Miss Gurdy's Lincoln first grade had the best attendance for that building last month.

Grade seven—Miss King's room had the best attendance for the Hancock school.

Grade eight of the Hancock School had perfect attendance last week.

Mr. H. F. Wilson, Master of the John Hancock-Lincoln School District, is enrolling members for a personally conducted tour to Norfolk, Washington, Annapolis, Philadelphia and New York during the spring vacation, March 29 to April 6.

MASS. FIELDS.

Remember the Art exhibition at the Mass. Field school, March 5 and 6. The pictures are selected to represent not only the well-krown galleries of Europe, but the less well-known. Landscape and architecture have a large place. American artists have been given especial attention. About 50 of the pictures are colored. Some beautiful examples of European lithographic are are included.

Admission 15 cents. Food and and candy sale Tuesday. Committee in charge, Mrs. Sidney Smith, Mrs. H. Atkins, Mrs. Ripley, Mrs. D. H. Goodspeed, Miss Gammons and Miss Taylor.

The following pupils have been chosen to solicit the food and candy: Grade IV—Ernestine Ralph, Mabel Kappler, Wendell Boydon; grade V—Jessie Larkin, Roland Forsyth, Ruth Coldwell; grade VI—George McTear, Jeanette Sheay, Charles Morris; grade VII—Beatrice Nickerson, Richard Howe, Eleanor Stuart, Lillian Jones, Russell Sears; grade VIII—Roy Brown, George Whitcher, Dorothy Wetmore, Joseph Barker, Sadie Wheeler, Mildred Hill; grade IV, V, VI—Lebaron Fahey, Waldo Fox, Mildred Tirrell. Proceeds for cshool decorations.

The next regular meeting of the Parents' and Teachers' Association will be held Thursday evening, Mar. 7, at 7.30 o'clock. Rev. C. P. Marshall city chaplain will address the meeting, subject: A needed addition to our educational system." Music will be furnished by the Fowler Quartet and Mrs. Rogers pianist.

WOLLASTON.

At the last meeting of the school commitee, the Parents' and Teachers' Association of Wollaston was authorized to apoint a committee, of which the master of the school and the supervisor of drawing shall be ex-officio members, to advise and regulate as to the purchase or receipt of any art gifts for the new building. The old building had many pictures and casts, some of which will be suitable for use in the new building. This committee will go over the old pictures ands electt hose that are in good condition and will besides advise persons who are intending to present pictures to the school, what subjects are most suitable for school room decorations in the various grades. It is the hope of the teachers that many such gifts will be received.

Regular work started Monday morning,i n the new school, with an enrolment of 435 pupils, 12 teachers.

On account of the large numbers in grades III, IV, VI, VII and VIII, it has been necessary to have two combination grades and two eight grades. Miss Ellen Shyne has been assigned to grades VI and VII, and Miss Charlotte Nash to grades III and IV.

A few transfers have been made from the Mass. Fields school, and others probably will be made next September when Hancock street is accepted as the dividing line.

It seems to be the general opinion that Hobart street should be the dividing line on the north.

Electric Fans Prevent Frost.

To the long list of the means heretofore proposed of protecting fields, orchards, and vineyards against frost a new one has recently been added by a French scientist. He points out the fact that frosts are not feared when the wind blows; he is thus led to suggest the creation of an artificial wind by the installation of electric fans among the plants to be protected. He considers this plan applicable chiefly to vineyards, but also possibly useful in orchards.

UNIVERSALIST WEEK SERVICES

Simple and Practical Talk Upon Religious Life

REV. O. H. PERKINS

So far in Universalist week, no meeting has been more helpful and uplifting than the one Wednesday night.

Rev. O. Howard Perkins of Brockton was the speaker of the evening. He gave a simple, practical talk upon the Religious Life and helps to it. He said that it has been taught that spiritual life, or religious life, is something that must be acquired through some special process. In order to have it we must "be born again" God will bestow it if we conform to certain conditions. In truth religious life is simply the natural life rightly lived. We are born the children of God and so our nature is divine nature. Men are religious instinctively. Not that they are perfect, not that there are not lower elements in them that need to be controlled, or even eliminated, but in the main the desires of men are naturally good.

Eternal life is the cultivatin of that divine nature which we have received from God. In order to grow into the fullness of this spiritual life that is ours, we must observe certain conditions, we must do certain things. We must be in right relations with our fellows. In our dealings with them we must observe the Golden Rule, and then we must be in right relations with God. We must know him and feel him as our Father. We must seek to draw close to his spirit. We must learn how to commune with him. We must have the habit of prayer.

This series of meetings will continue tonight. Rev. Elbert W. Whitney of Waltham will preach. Everyone will be welcome. The hour is 7.45.

MANILA'S OLD FORT

SANTIAGO WAS BUILT MORE THAN 300 YEARS AGO.

Key of City's Vast System of Defense Constructed by the Spaniards Is Now Used as Military Headquarters.

A score of miles down the bay from Manila, right at the very front door of the archipelago, lies hidden on Corregidor Island a veritable hornet's nest of masked batteries. According to the Overland Monthly, these batteries make the Port Arthur implacements of yesterday seem like mere old-fashioned toys, and paper ones at that.

The Gruson turrets, made of concrete and steel and sunk on rock foundations, natural or artificial, in the deep, resembling huge gray turtles sticking up out of the water with protruding gun barrels for necks, occupy El Fraile and other small islets in the vicinity, while old hump-backed Corregidor is covered from crest to shore line with guns, a honeycomb of underground cement tunnels, pits and runways, wireless equipment, electrical apparatus, searchlights and other contrivances to aid in repelling an enemy.

When it comes to age and romantic history, however, old Fort Santiago is far ahead of Corregidor. Manila's walled city, a town in itself, consisting of several city blocks with paved streets, business houses and large dwellings is surrounded by a stone wall about thirty feet high and from thirty to forty feet thick.

The walls once were skirted on the outside by a deep moat, filled with water having drawbridges at the various gates. Most if not all of the moat has now been filled in, but no doubt the walls will stand for years if for no other reason than for their historical interest.

Of this vast yet crude system of defense Fort Santiago stands as the key. What the Tower of London is to England, what the Vatican is to Rome, what the Bunker Hill monument is to the United States, Fort Santiago is to the Philippine Islands.

The Spanish invaders made Manila their headquarters in 1571 and began to fortify it about twenty years later. The first stone construction was the circular wall, which is still standing. Since the American occupation of the fort its armament has been taken away and the buildings within the parks have been converted into barracks and storerooms.

Commodious office buildings have been erected on top of the walls along and overlooking the Pasig, and here the commanding general of the Philippine division has his headquarters. In one of the beautiful parks within the fort is located the military arsenal, with its big steam and electric workshops.

Some of the maps and plans of the fort are now in the British museum in London, where they were carried after the British conquest of Manila. The fort, mostly in its present form, has stood for 300 years. There are all sorts of stories floating about concerning secret chambers in the walls and wings.

So far as the secret chambers are concerned, there is some truth in the rumors. The filling of the old moat closed many of the entrances to these chambers, probably forever. When the wall in Calle Aduana was removed, an inner chamber was found filled with human skeletons.

Natives have a wholesome terror of the old place, and absolutely no desire to see anything below the surface of the thick old walls. Americans who with electric lamps, have started explorations have given up, owing to the foul air, crumbling passages and other hindrances.

Only three flags have flown above Fort Santiago. For 328 years the Spanish ensign was unfurled to the tropic breeze, except for the brief time the British flag supplanted that of the rightful lords. The hoisting of the third flag is well known to all Americans.

SMARTNESS AT SMALL COST.

Expensive Get-ups That Help Clever Dressers—Fans, Fichus and Fancy Evening Caps—New Materials and Combinations.

Suits will always be worn but the one piece dress has gained a decided lead in the procession of the modes. There are many points in its favor for it is convenient to get into, and complete in itself so that there are no details in the way of belt adjustment, collar fixings, tie etc., while being made in one, it has a way of staying straight and trim under any amount of strain.

The above design is by The McCall Company, New York, Designers and Makers of McCall Patterns. C

FOR THE SLENDER.

For the slender there is no doubt that the one piece costume should find favor, but unless this is trimly yet loosely fitted it is more than a little trying to a full figure. Still the one piece effect is so modish that extra blouses for coat and skirt suits are most fashionable when they carry out the lines of the skirt and even have some of its material used for bib, cuffs or bretelles. The kimono cut is still correct, but the sleeves are seamed on without fullness, as if the kimona sleeve were cut across and stitched together again tailor fashion. This helps when goods is limited or width is narrow.

Veiled effects show no signs of diminished popularity, and veiling with Brussels net is newer than with chiffon. It also wears much better.

PARTY WRINKLES.

Big party bags are made up as muffs so do double duty. Large fans are back in fashion, and the handkerchief ring that older women will recall is used again. Collars of black velvet for the neck on which are mounted rhinestone buckles or other ornaments find favor with the girls here while the rose of satin ribbon tucked into the belt or nestled in the fur neckpiece is a prime favorite.

NEW COTTONS.

The cottons have all made their debut at the counters by now and lots of them are already seen in pretty frocks that will get no end of wear before Summer days arrive. Cotton voiles rival silks for many uses, and the embroidered lingerie type of gown, made up with a touch of black satin perhaps will be quite at home at any but the most formal and elaborate functions.

SMARTNESS AT SMALL COST.

Women who aim to be fashionably attired without using up all their money will be glad to know that fine ginghams promise to be very smartly worn this year. The famous Scotch zephyr with "Wm. Anderson" woven in every yeard of the selvage, so that no one can mistake them, are shown in a most attractive line of colorings in stripes, blocks, plaids and matching plain colors, and at any counter where these ginghams are sold one can get for the asking, a dainty little fashion magazine showing advance models especially adapted to zephyrs. The children's styles are especially pretty and practical and made up in imported material of this type are sure to look and wear well.

CROCHET SETS

The sets primarily intended for skating, of hat, muffler and muff, all crocheted out of very coarse wool have caught the fancy of the girls so greatly that they are quite putting their fur sets in the shade, or at any rate relegating the latter to wear that is less exacting than skating, tobogganing and skieing.

Waging a War.

Fourteen million dollars was spent in this country last year in the war against tuberculosis. In comparison with the small amounts expended for the same purpose only a few years ago this sum seems vast. In reality, it is not nearly so large as it should be. The organized effort now being made in every state of the Union to stamp out tuberculosis is commonly referred to as a war, and quite properly so. It is a war waged against an insidious enemy that takes greater toll of life than is taken in actual warfare. Yet in these days $14,000,000 would not go far in financing even the smallest of real wars that may come. Why should we not spend more in carrying on a great war which is already here and which has as its objective something more important than the acquisition of territory or the protection of the honor of a king?

To Measure Coal.

A porhydrometer, an English invention designed to accurately and practically weigh coal taken off or put on a collier, is to be installed on board the naval collier Neptune at Norfolk for test.

The device comprises a tube placed as near as possible to the center of gravity of the water lines of the ship, in which tube is a float designed in accordance with the lines of the ship. There is a connection by a system of levers with a beam arm, after the manner of a scale, showing by rise or fall of water in the tube the weight taken on or off the ship. The record made is sufficiently close to indicate the amount of cargo transferred.

Clearly Unfitted.

"Your son isn't with you in the real estate business any more, is he?"

"No, I advised him to get out of it. He never was intended by nature for the real estate business. I sent him out to show a place to a man the other day and he let the fellow get away without buying, merely because it wasn't the kind of place he wanted."

A Sure Thing.

"There is one great advantage in being a matinee idol."

"What is that?"

"If you hit a miss, you are sure of not missing a hit."

A DIFFERENCE.

LENTEN SERVICE.

Rev. Sheed Anderson of Roxbury occupied the pulpit at the first in the series of Lenten services in the Wollaston Unitarian church, Wednesday night. Rev. Carl G. Horst, conducted the devotional service and Miss Penley rendered the vocal solos.

The text was taken from the fourth chapter of Ephesians, sixteenth verse, and Rev. Mr. Anderson made the subject of his sermon: "The Harmony of the Inner Life." As in a musical composition time and minute detail must be considered, so in life, we must make each part perfect before the personal life may be in accord with the great laws of the life giver In the church we find the custodian of our highest aspirations, the preceptor of this harmony of the inner life. Four qualities were pointed out as guides to the goal of high and noble living; prudence, justice, devotion, charity; added to a profound and ever present thought of the eternal.

NARROW ESCAPE.

Ambrose the 9-year old son of Thomas Newcomb, of 302 Water street had a narrow escape from being killed Tuesday afternoon. The boy was playing on the street and evidently did not see a car approaching for he started to run across the street and ran directly into the car striking it near forward steps. The motorman made a very quick stop and thus saved the boy's life for the collision threw the boy onto the tracks, and had the car gone a few feet further he must have been killed. No blame is attached to the street car men.

THOMAS CRANE PUBLIC LIBRARY

The aim and scope of the Thomas Crane Public Library is so clearly set forth in the annual report of the librarian that it should have wide publicity, and be read by all our townspeople, therefore we are giving it in full below:

QUINCY, MASS., January 1, 1912.

To the Trustees of the Thomas Crane Public Library:—

Notwithstanding the fact that the work of the library has been carried on the past year under extreme disadvantages I have to report very gratifying results. Well aware that the usefulness of the library is not to be measured by the number of book issues, it affords pleasure to chronicle an increase of circulation of 12,651 over the year 1910, then the largest in the library's history. In the twelve months since I wrote my last report we have joined the ranks of the "libraries with a circulation of 100,000 to 200,000", the total figures being 107,882.

The largest contributor to this increase has been the West Quincy reading room which has carried over 17% of the whole circulation for the year, reporting at the close of this, its first complete year, a circulation of 18,938 volumes and attendance figures of 31,500. Does not this speak "volumes" for the extension of the library system to other outlying sections of the city? For what we have done in West Quincy may we not equally as well do in Atlantic, which for 30 years has been receiving a weekly delivery of books, as referred to in my last report. And again I express the hope that the City Council will see its way clear to granting us a sufficient increase of appropriation for the opening of a reading room in the ward most remote from the centre. Constant complaints come to me of the service of the delivery baskets in both Wollaston and Atlantic, and of the 12 books lost and not paid for in the charging trays of the Central library in 1911, 5, or nearly 50% disappeared from these baskets.

The cost of maintaining the reading room at West Quincy for the 12 months has been $1,055.38, an extremely reasonable figure considering the amount of work done, and by comparison with other libraries.

But this expense of maintenance must increase with the constantly increasing demands, as the branch seems a phenomenally alive and active and growing offshoot from the parent stalk. Moreover this simple Branch maintenance, above, means no cost of books, or but trifling, comparatively—4 replacements and 7 reference books added—only their housing and distribution and the advantages of the reading room; the extra binding bills, for instance,—a very heavy item from the wear and tear of the books here—being included in the Central library's expenses. Of the 50 books burned from contagious diseases, 24 were from this room, and 6 books have been lost from the open shelves during the year.

But look on the other side of the picture. The average daily circulation has increased from 53 in 1910 to 63; the average daily attendance, from 93 to 105. The total attendance for the year includes 10,753 adults and 20,747 children, and thus it may be inferred that 'the discipline of the room is an ever present factor and adds largely to the labor of the person in charge.' There are 640 books on deposit and the average monthly exchange of these deposits has been 97 in 1911 as against 53 in 1910; there are 195 books belonging to the Reading room, of which 40 are reference books, making a total of 836 books. West Quincy has a distinctly large foreign population and the demand for Italian books is something that we cannot supply with the present limited resources of the Central library.

The new borrowers registered during 1911 at the Reading room include 105 adult and 188 children, besides 26 adult and 2 juvenile registrations transferred from the Central library. The whole number of borrowers at the Branch is 995, divided into 506 adults and 489 children. This division is an arbitrary one based upon the separation of the Grammar and High schools, according to the adult and juvenile at the Central library. The Branch was closed 2 days in July on account of the excessive heat.

We began the year with the handicap of illness, and hardly at any time during it has the entire staff been on duty. Miss Cochrane, after a faithful service of nearly 16 years, on leave of absence following her illness in the spring, has been sorely missed. The cheerful response of Miss Alexander to take up the burden of the "arduous year in the cataloguer's room", in which she has been ably assisted by Miss Morrison, has enabled us to stem the tide of misfortunes and calls for most appreciative recognition. The department has been brought practically up to date in the work of the year, with 1,565 new books added and 387 replaced; the card catalogue of the children's room has been duplicated, except subject entries, in the card catalogue of the main hall. The graded lists of the Carnegie library of Pittsburgh were checked and the numbers of all the books contained in our library inserted in red ink to make the lists convenient for teachers' use.

Among the purchases of the year have been Nelson's Loose-Leaf Encyclopaedia, 12 volumes; the Photographic History of the Civil War, 10 volumes; the Cyclopedia of Commerce, Accountancy, Business Administration, 10 volumes; the Children's Library of Work and Play, 10 volumes; the Children's Book of Knowledge, 24 volumes; 2 sets of the Standard Library of Natural History, 5 volumes; Shackelton's Heart of the Antarctic, 2 volumes; and Lane's annotated Arabian Nights, 3 volumes.

A beginning has been made in the purchase of books of musical composition, and as these seem to be greatly appreciated we should build up this new department.

People are availing themselves more and more of the opportunity to suggest books, which we welcome as a sign of their active appreciation of the library, and it is a real satisfaction to be able to fulfill their desires. But the demand has been much in advance of the library's power to supply. More than ever before have there been calls for books relating to the trades, for works on practical and technical subjects, for textbooks of the sciences. We have tried to strengthen the library along the lines of the useful and applied arts and questions of the day. There is a lack of modern plays and works on the drama, and a constant demand for more works in the Italian language. I wish we might have ordered the new edition of the Encyclopaedia Britannica, and purchased the volumes of the International Library of Technology asked for. But having less money to spend the past year than the year before, with increased expenses, we have not been able to buy all the books which should have been bought.

We cannot have an increase of circulation for two years in succession, of an average of over 13,000 volumes, without an increasing outlay in nearly every direction, including assistance. Every year sees an increase in the cost of the magazines themselves, as well as that of the added subscriptions. More subscriptions and more duplicate copies mean the purchase of more magazine covers for circulation and of binders for the reading room. For the very books themselves libraries must pay high prices and get small discounts. Now that the net price system has been extended to fiction one librarian writes,—"I am convinced that it affects the purchasing power of our appropriation at least 20 per cent."

The circulation from the main hall, 65,264, is an increase of 939 over the year 1910, with a slight falling off in fiction loaned. There has been a gain of 2 per cent. in non-fiction circulated, periodicals losing correspondingly. From July to October, 185 "vacation" books were in circulation with no renewal figures recorded. From an inventory of books added to the main hall from January, 1908 to October, 1910, which had not hitherto been made, 22 books are reported missing, presumably while on the shelves of the outside bookcases.

The circulation from the children's room has been 1,382 less the past year than the preceding one. This is accounted for, in part, at least, by the transfer of the Houghs Neck children who formerly spent their noon hours here. This suggests the remark about Mahomet and the mountain, and another section where a reading room would undoubtedly be appreciated. In an output of 20,825 from the children's room the percentage of fiction is 58.6. The recorded use of books and periodicals in the room is somewhat larger than the previous year.

When this room opened, June 22, 1908, there were 2,136 volumes on the shelves. There are now 4,635 books here, and we are beginning to put them on the top shelf among the pictures. The best way I know to keep from an overcrowded condition on the shelves anywhere is to keep the books distributed in the homes, the schools, the agencies. But since in the summer the books which the schools now keep in circulation will be returned to the shelves, the need of more shelf space must soon be met.

The work of the sending of 2,855 books to the schools has been entirely done in this room. Hardly a book returned can be put into circulation without something in the line of mending being done to it, from a single torn leaf up to the mending kit by which it is replaced in its covers.

During the year Miss Barker reports from her department 2,813 adult books and 2,469 juvenile books mended, and 276 magazines mended. Besides this repair at the Central library there have been 382 adult books and 982 juvenile books and 88 periodicals mended at the West Quincy reading room. These figures, a total of 6,646 books and 364 periodicals, give some idea of the wear and tear, necessary and unnecessary, incident to our work. But it also means a big financial saving to the library, for, although the amount spent for binding in 1911 has been a considerable increase over that of 1910, this cost would have been far heavier if this repair work had not been done here.

The work with the mending kit has been satisfactory, a book sometimes circulating 20 times when otherwise it would have to be sent away for rebinding after only a few weeks' wear and just when it is most in demand.

The telephone has been made much use of in requests for all sorts of information. The winter schedule of hours was extended until July 1 instead of June 1, and the evening hours were appreciated.

Toward the close of the year we were able to put a selection of books at the Boston Gear Works for the use of their men, which is in the nature of a deposit station. It is too soon as yet to decide upon its appreciation from figures, although Mr. Colburn writes that the men are well pleased with the books.

The following stereographic travel tours have been added to our collection:—The United States, Colorado, Arizona, the Yosemite, the White Mts., Sweden, Belgium, Holland, Denmark, Ireland, and Japan; 514 views in all. In consideration of the fact that we have only 1,355 of these views in the library, a circulation of 13,218 from the main hall shows their popularity and the need for more. Not only have these stereographs been enjoyed in the homes, but the record of use in the children's room 25,604 suggests the pleasure which they have afforded here.

We have received 13 exhibits from the Library Art Club and 14 volumes have been borrowed from the Boston Public Library for our patrons through the system of Inter-library loan.

Among the gifts of the year have been 7 volumes of the works of George Eliot by Rev. Rufus B. Tobey, the Library of Home Economics, in 12 volumes, from the Home Economics Committee of the Quincy Women's Club, and the Index to the Probate Records of Suffolk county, 1636-1893, through the suggestion of Mr. Warren S. Parker. With the gift from Hon. J. F. Merrill of the 2 volumes of Probate index of Norfolk county, 1793-1900, we now have a complete index to the probate records of Quincy, as the town belonged to Suffolk county until 1793.

The library has received from the Civic Committee of the Quincy Women's Club a gift of $50 as the nucleus of a fund "to be called the Children's Fund, for the purpose of purchasing books for children." Also the Atlantic Shakespeare Society has pledged through Mrs. W. Ward Whitcher $100 to the Trustees for a Reading Room in Atlantic, available upon the opening of such a room there.

It is with an abiding sense of loss that with the changes of the year must be recorded the deaths of two members of the Trustees whose invaluable services to the library will never be forgotten. It is painful also to miss for half the year the wise counsel of the Chairman of the Board, debarred from service through illness.

In closing my report for the year I wish to thank your honorable Board for the eight weeks' additional vacation for a trip to Europe, commending Miss Baxter for the discharge of added responsibility.

Respectfully submitted,

ALICE G. WHITE, Librarian.

DECLARES HIS INNOCENCE

Life Prisoner Is Pardoned After Serving Thirty-One Years

Boston, Feb. 29.—David Mooney, aged 62, who was sentenced to life imprisonment thirty-one years ago this month for the murder of Edmund Lavoie in this city, was pardoned by Governor Foss. More than twenty years ago Mooney's wife died, the last of his family, and from that time on he never had any communication with the outside world.

The government proved that Mooney and Lavoie had quarrelled over the division of spoils of the burglary of several Back Bay houses. In addition, there was bad blood between them over a waitress in a Boston restaurant.

Mooney always declared his innocence, even yesterday stating that he was absolutely guiltless of the murder.

NEW UPRISING DUE TO BAKING POWDER

Wilson Denies Wiley's Request to Make Matter Public

Washington, Feb. 29.—Secretary of Agriculture Wilson denied a request of Dr. Wiley, head of the pure food board, that all the correspondence in a recent baking powder decision be made public.

The request was made by Wiley because of the charge made against him by the editor of a food publication, who declared that in the baking powder decision Wiley "acted at variance with his oft-repeated statement that in cases of doubt he always gave the doubt to the public."

The editor claimed that Wiley's baking powder decision "let the public take all the risk" because otherwise it might have "involved or embarrassed the baking powder trust."

TWO MORE ARRESTS

Saloon Proprietors Said to Be "Brains" of $25,000 Robbery

New York, Feb. 29.—Two more arrests were made last night for the $25,000 taxicab robbery of Feb. 15, and according to Deputy Police Commissioner Dougherty he believes he now has "the brains" of the holdup.

The latest arrests are those of James Pascalle, proprietor of a saloon, where it is alleged the $25,000 was divided after the robbery, and Robert Delio, partner of Pascalle and also proprietor of another saloon, where it is alleged the taxicab robbers conferred prior to and after the holdup. Both men were charged with assault and robbery.

Jesse Alburzzo, one of the prisoners previously taken, is said by the police to have made a complete confession of his part in the holdup.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. CONVEX LENS OF THE EYE.

A Burning Glass That Adjusts the Sight to Varying Distances.

One of the manifold wonders of the human eye is the convex lens with which the focal distances of sight are made instantly and without mental effort. This lens in the eye is a literal "burning glass," as the small boy styles the glass lens with which he focuses the sun's rays and sets fire to a piece of paper. Just in this sense, too, is the lens of the eye a literal burning glass, as may be shown by the simplest of experiments.

Let the person at midday hold a straw against the face of the sun and focus his eyes on the straw. He can look at the straw, with its background of a dazzling sun, and without discomfort. But the moment he looks at the fiery ball of the sun itself, subconsciously the lens of the eye comes to its proper focus, with the result that a "burning" sun spot appears on the retina of the eye, and it is said that a few seconds of such looking would burn out the retina as if by fire itself.

In the subconscious adaptability of the eye lens to adapt itself to different distances lies its value to the human sight. The man with a camera adjusts the focus of his lenses by sliding them forward and back. The lenses of the human eye, by changing their curvatures, allow of one looking at fine print six inches from his nose and in a fraction of a second to look up and away, probably fifty miles to a mountain peak that in an instant is in true camera focus.—Pittsburgh Press.

A BIT OF ADVICE

First—Don't Delay. Second—Don't Experiment.

If you suffer from backache; headaches or dizzy spells; if you rest poorly and are languid in the morning; if he kidney secretions are irregular and unnatural in appearance, do not delay. The kidneys are calling for help. Slight symptoms of kidney trouble are but fore-runners of more serious complaints. They should be given attention before it is too late.

Doan's Kidney Pills cure kidney trouble. They are recommended by thousands. Can Quincy residents desire more convincing proof than the statement of a Quincy citizen who says that the cure Doan's Kidney Pills effected years ago has proven permanent?

W. Charlesworth, 33 Cranch St., Quincy, Mass., says: "Doan's Kidney Pills are certainly an effective kidney medicine. They fixed me up in good shape some years ago, and since then I have had no kidney trouble."

MONEY SPENT IN DELAWARE

Reed Says Du Pont Paid Out Thousands of Dollars

HE WANTS AN INVESTIGATION

Should Include Senator's Recommendation of Swain For Office of United States Marshal, a Man Who Is Alleged to Have Engaged in Corrupt Practices—Lays Before Senate Statement of Testimony at Hearing

Washington, Feb. 29.—An array of evidence heard by the senate judiciary committee in its inquiry into the appointment of C. P. Swain as United States marshal for Delaware was laid before the senate by Senator Reed of Missouri, in urging the passage of his resolution providing for an investigation of the election of Senator Du Pont of Delaware.

Senator Reed insisted if this evidence were given credence, the senate not only should investigate the 1910 election, but should demand of the Delaware senator an explanation of his action in "recommending for appointment to the high office of United States marshal a man whom he knew to be engaged in corrupt practices."

"On Jan. 22, 1912," said Reed, "the president appointed Cornelius P. Swain United States marshal for the district of Delaware and sent that appointment to the senate for confirmation. With an alacrity which was astonishing, the appointment was reported to the senate by the committee and on the day it reached the senate confirmed. Such, at least, is the newspaper statement.

"In some way citizens of Delaware learned of the fact and protested, with the result that the action of approval was rescinded. Thereupon the matter was re-referred to the committee and an investigation, demanded by citizens of Delaware, was held.

"These citizens charged (1) that Swain bore the common and general reputation of a persistent vote buyer and election corruptionist in violation of the laws of the state of Delaware; (2) that on Nov. 4, 1910, a meeting was held in the office of Henry A. Du Pont and T. C. Du Pont at which between $50,000 and $69,000 was distributed for the purpose of corrupting the electorate of the state and that an additional $10,000 was to be given out on the Monday preceding the Tuesday on which the election was held; (3) that Swain took $3000 of this money in $20 gold pieces to Bridgeville; that it was then carried to Philadelphia and changed into bills of convenient form; that on election day an office was actually opened and a secretary appointed, who kept a set of books and the money was actually paid out in bribes to the corrupt vote of that precinct."

The senator said that the committee, by repeated rulings, limited the evidence of these acts of corruption with which Swain could be directly connected, and added:

"Swain was, according to the testimony, appointed at the request of Senator Du Pont, and if it be true that Du Pont recommended him for appointment to the important office of United States marshal for the state of Delaware, a man whom he knew to be engaged in corrupt practices relating to elections, then he gravely offended against this body by being instrumental in bringing such an appointee before the senate for its approval."

Senator Reed declared that as the record stood there was unimpeached evidence that thousands of dollars were distributed from the offices of Henry A. and T. C. Du Pont to be used for corrupting voters.

"I have thus commented upon the evidence, assuming it to be true," concluded the senator. "If an investigation is had and this evidence is dissipated or negatived, no man will be more pleased than myself. But the senate of the United States, in view of these startling and appalling disclosures, cannot afford to close its eyes to the plain course of duty."

WILL ASK FOR NEW TRIAL

Croker's Daughter Fails to Get Divorce From Riding Master

New York, Feb. 29.—Despite nine hours of deliberation, the jury which heard the suit of Ethel C. Breen, a daughter of the former Tammany hall chieftain, Richard Croker, for a divorce from John J. Breen, reported before Justice Goff it had been unable to reach an agreement.

Application for a new trial will be made at once, counsel for Mrs. Breen said.

Ethel Croker and Breen, who had charge of the horses at a riding academy, eloped on April 28, 1910, and went to Hoboken, where they were married by a justice of the peace.

STATE WIDE TAFT LEAGUE

Formation of One Is Begun by President's Friends In Boston

Boston, Feb. 29.—Massachusetts Republicans are organizing to the support of President Taft. The first definite move in this direction was made yesterday, when the Taft league, to be state wide, was born. Its head, temporarily, and until official organization shall have been effected, is Edgar R. Champlin, the veteran of many political campaigns, who returned from a winter in Egypt only last week.

In two or three days the league will have begun a more active existence and by that time its plans and hopes will be given out fully.

EMPLOYERS REJECT GOVERNMENT PLAN

Efforts to Settle Trouble In British Coal Fields Fail

London, Feb. 29.—The government acknowledges failure to settle the dispute between the coal owners and the miners. Breaking the rule of secrecy and silence which has heretofore been rigidly observed during the negotiations, an official statement was issued regarding the proposals submitted by the prime minister to the representatives of the owners and miners.

These proposals were considered by the representatives of the coal owners yesterday, with the result that those in the Federated area, which includes Yorkshire, Lancashire, the Midlands and North Wales, accepted them. The employers in Durham and Cumberland also accepted the proposals.

They were rejected, however, by the Northumberland, Scotland and South Wales coal owners and by the representatives of the smaller districts—Forest of Dean, in Gloucester, Somerset and Bristol.

More than 60 percent of the coal trade of the country accepted the proposals.

ROOSEVELT IN NEW YORK

Has Not Heard of Nine Governors Declaring Themselves For Taft

New York, Feb. 29.—Theodore Roosevelt returned to New York last night after an absence since Saturday in Boston.

"A very interesting trip," he told the reporters who met his train. When his attention was called to the announcements by nine governors declaring themselves as Taft supporters and he was asked what he thought of the situation in the west, he said:

"I haven't heard anything and I am not a prophet."

Neither on the trip from Boston nor in this city were crowds in evidence, and Roosevelt had no occasion to speak en route.

Judge's Estimate of $6000 Is Upheld by State Supreme Court

Boston, Feb. 29.—Rebecca Glass, who lost her hand in the revolving knives of a candy cutting machine when employed by the Hazen Candy company, was upheld by the full bench of the supreme court in exceptions filed by the defendants.

A jury awarded her $8000. Judge Dana cut that amount to $6000, which the court sustained.

MEANS CLOSING OF ALL MILLS

Central Labor Union May Order a General Strike

ULTIMATUM TO MILL OWNERS

Lawrence Branch of Federation of Labor Demands Immediate Reply—Mayor Submits New Proposition to Employers In Effort to Bring About Peace—Strikers Defy Police to Stop Child Exportation

Lawrence, Mass., Feb. 29.—A general strike that will effectually accomplish the aims of the I. W. W. leaders—the complete tying up of the Lawrence mills—will be debated and a definite decision reached this afternoon at a meeting of the general committee of the Central Labor union, the Lawrence branch of the American Federation of Labor. The call for the meeting was issued last night.

That a strike by the A. F. of L. workers will mean complete and immediate closing of the mills seems inevitable, as a strike order by this body will accomplish what the I. W. W. leaders, so far, have been unable to—the calling out of the affiliated unions in other crafts, the engineers, firemen, etc., whose continuance at work is vital to the operation of the mills even on a reduced basis.

After waiting patiently for more than two weeks for a reply from the mill men to the demands formulated and presented by the skilled workers, who are members of the A. F. of L., the general committee of the Central Labor union issued an ultimatum, giving the mill men until 4 o'clock today to make some reply. Up to midnight last night no word had come from them and the call issued for a meeting today is the direct result.

The entrance of the American Federation of Labor into the great textile strike, now in its seventh week, means a vast change in the outlook, and citizens, strikers and others interested await today's decision with impatience.

A most determined effort to bring labor peace to Lawrence was made by Mayor Scanlon and Alderman O'Brien. They went to Boston early yesterday morning and were with the representatives of the Lawrence mills until 5 o'clock in the afternoon. After the conference, while not giving the names of the mill people with whom they conferred, the alderman did give out a statement, in which he said:

"We sincerely expect our efforts will bear valuable fruit in the near future."

What the mayor and the alderman sought to secure was the signature of the mill treasurers to the following notice and then post it in their respective mills:

"To the employes of this mill:

"The management announces that beginning Monday morning, March 4, all our employes will be conceded the two hours in dispute and that all employes who were receiving $8 or less per week prior to the strike will receive an advance in wages of 5 percent."

It was not given out just what the mill men will do with this proposition.

In direct defiance of the orders of Acting City Marshal Sullivan, the children's relief committee of the striking Lawrence textile workers will send 100 children out of the city Saturday to temporary homes in Philadelphia.

The attempt of the committee to send a delegation away last Saturday resulted in a clash between the police and parents, in which the officers used their clubs freely, and it is feared that there will be more trouble next Saturday.

Marshal Sullivan states that, providing the parents come to the police station and signify their intention of sending their children away, there will be no interference on the part of the police. The children's committee, however, maintains there is no necessity for the parents to run to the police beforehand if they appear at the station with their little ones.

AFTER YEAR IN JAIL

Woman Originally Charged With Murder Receives Year Sentence

Plymouth, Mass., Feb. 29.—Annie Tatosky of North Abbington, who has been awaiting trial in the Plymouth jail one year for the murder of a new born child, was brought into court late yesterday afternoon and pleaded guilty to a charge of concealing the birth. Judge Quinn sentenced her to one year in the house of correction.

The case has caused quite a little interest among the Lithuanian citizens, and much sympathy has been expressed in behalf of the young woman. When the sentence was announced she wept bitterly for a short time and then rejoiced to think that her sentence was a light one.

AMALGAMATION IS URGED

Shoe Workers' Unions May Thus Gain 150,000 New Members

Lynn, Mass., Feb. 29.—The substitution of one central union of shoe workers for the three existing national bodies, the Knights of Labor Cutters, the Boot and Shoe Workers' union and the United Shoe Workers of America, and numerous independent unions, was recommended in a report submitted by a committee of local shoe workers last night.

Nineteen unions in this city were represented at the meeting at which the report was made. A resolution urged the delegates to advocate that their respective organizations take steps to have the national officers meet and consider the matter of such a central union.

Two hundred thousand persons are employed as shoe workers in this country, of which number only one-quarter are organized. The object of the amalgamation is not only to unite these 50,000 organized workers under one head but also to bring the other 150,000 into the fold if possible.

ASSAILANT CONFESSES

Loots Widow's Flat After Beating Her Almost to Death

New York, Feb. 29.—Mrs. Johanna Huebenor, an aged widow, was murderously attacked during the night in the Harlem apartment where she lived alone, beaten into insensibility and jammed into a bathtub while her assailant leisurely looted her flat.

After ransacking the place, the burglar turned on sixteen gas jets. The escaping gas was detected yesterday afternoon and Mrs. Huebenor was found barely alive. She is in a critical condition. The police first reported that the woman was dead.

Frank Cooper, a negro elevator boy, employed in the building, was arrested and charged with the crime. According to the police, Cooper has confessed, saying that he had deliberately planned it. Thirty dollars in bills, stained by the blood of his victi, were found in his pockets.

ONE DAY SENTENCE FOR WOMAN BIGAMIST

Man Whom She Fooled Enters Plea For Mercy

London, Feb. 29.—Mrs. Deborah Jeffreys was sentenced by the London court of session at the Old Bailey to a day's imprisonment on a charge of contracting a bigamous marriage with Horace M. Parshall, the American capitalist engineer and chairman of the Central London Tube railway.

Parshall, through his counsel, entered a plea for merciful treatment of the accused, and the recorder adopted the view that Mrs. Jeffreys, in going through the form of marriage with Parshall, acted under compulsion of her real husband, Herbert H. Jeffreys.

DAMAGING TESTIMONY

Mrs. Wentzell Held on Charge of Causing Nephew's Death

Lynn, Mass., Feb. 29.—Mrs. Jennie Wentzell, charged with causing the death of her nephew, Charles J. Beaupre, aged 4, was arraigned in the district court and before all the witnesses called by the police had testified the court ordered the defendant held for the superior court in $5000.

Medical Examiner Pinkham testified that at the autopsy he found 100 bruises on the child's body and that he died from bruises, lack of care and blood poisoning.

Dr. Ira A. Darling gave similar testimony. He said the defendant refused to let the boy stay at the hospital on the day of his death after the witness had tried to persuade her of the necessity. After going away she returned with him and three hours later he died.

BRANDT FREE ON BAIL

Former Schiff Valet Goes From Jail to Office of His Attorney

New York, Feb. 29.—Foulke E. Brandt, the valet who was sent to prison for thirty years on the charge of stealing two stickpins from his employer, Mortimer L. Schiff, gained his liberty yesterday for the first time since his arrest in 1907.

He was released on $2500 bail on a charge of assault and in $5000 bail on a charge of burglary. The bail was provided by a surety company.

As soon as the legal formalities were complied with, Brandt was taken in a taxicab to the office of his attorney, M. L. Towns, where a consultation was held regarding the young valet's future.

Law of Averages

AS IT RELATES TO CLOTHES

While visiting a small hamlet on the Cape, a short time ago I met a judge who was then presiding at the local court.

The place was so peaceful and the citizens were so apparently law-abiding that I wondered why the necessity of Court to settle their difficulties.

Upon inquiring of the judge, I was informed that the Law of Averages was applicable in small places as well as large in proportion to the population.

And so it is with CLOTHES, we find that the average man pays fifteen dollars for his Suits, in a small town as well as in a large.

We are going this "Law of Average" one better by GIVING BETTER

THAN THE AVERAGE

We have selected an unusually large variety of fifteen-dollar Suits and marked them

MISS HOLLORAN HOLDS VERDICT

Supreme Court Sustains Verdict of $5,000 in Her Favor

INJURED IN 1908

TheS upreme Court has handed down a decision, sustaining the verdict of the lower court which awarded Miss Susan Holloran of Atlantic a verdict of $5,000 for injuries received in a railroad accident at South Boston Nov. 28, 1908. Miss Holloran, who is a daughter of Sergt. John Holloran of the police department, was a passenger on the Granite branch train which left Boston in the vicinity of 6 o'clock. Owing to trouble in the main yard, trains were switched about, and the confusion caused the accident. Miss Holleran was seated in the rear car of the branch train and just as it had started from the South Boston station the car was telescoped by an express train which was following.

Several persons were killed and many injured, including others besides Miss Holloran who were residents of Quincy. Miss Holloran was taken to the hospital and it was many weeks before she had recovered.

Previous to the accident she had been studying music at the New England Conservatory of Music, for four years, preparatory to becoming a public singer. In her suit for damages it was claimed that her voice had been injured for public singing. She was given a verdict of $5,000 by the lower court and the case was taken to the Supreme Court by the railroad.

Odd Nest.

A curious freak on the part of wasps was recently discovered in Maryland. The wasps were noticed going in and out of a lock that secured a workshop door. The owner of the shop had the lock removed to satisfy his curiosity about the doings of the busy workers. He found a nest inside. The cells were made of mud and were full of larvae. There were several dead wasps inside the lock. As the lock was in daily use, the wasps could not have had a peaceful home.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

CONCERNING CLAMS.

THOSE who are fond of clams will appreciate the fact that they are abundant and cheap at present. Many persons prefer clams to oysters, and there are many ways of cooking them.

Nearly every family that is fond of chowder has its own way of making it so a recipe for chowder would be like bringing coals to Newcastle.

In trying the following recipes it is well to say that where fresh clams are not to be had the canned ones may be used instead.

Thin shelled clams are the best and most easily opened.

Cooked In the Shells.

When clams are to be steamed or the shells figure in the cooking process they should first be well scrubbed.

Steamed Clams.—Place the clams in a vessel on the fire and without water. Cover and cook until the heat compels the clams to open their shells. Then take the clams out, pour the clam juice into another vessel and let it stand until it settles.

Now take the clams out of the shells, peel off the thick skin on the edges and cut off the black ends with scissors.

Rinse the clams in a little of the clam juice. When the rest of the juice is clear pour it carefully into a saucepan so that none of the sediment follows, add the clams and put on the stove to heat again.

The steamed clams should be seasoned at the table by each individual to suit taste. They are served with brown bread or toasted crackers.

Clams For Luncheon.

Clam Croquettes.—These are made with steamed clams which have been taken out of the shells and trimmed. With the scissors cut the clams into small bits. Mix these with a thick cream sauce and season. Shape into rolls, roll in fine breadcrumbs and dip in beaten egg, then roll in crumbs again. Fry in hot lard.

Escalloped Clams.—For this also the clams should be steamed. They are then placed in a shallow baking dish covered with white sauce and a layer of buttered crumbs and so on in alternate layers until the dish is filled. The dish is then placed in the oven and baked until brown.

GOOD GAME PROMISED.

Another treat of the rare variety is in store for those who attend the basketball game in St. Mary's hall, West Quincy, tonight, to be played between the team representing the St. Alphonsus association of Roxbury and the Quincy A. A. All who saw the teams in action here a short while ago, know full well just what is to be expected at this coming attraction.

The local players are now firmly established as leaders of the Greater Boston Basketball league, and a large crowd will surely be on hand to enable Manager Flynn's combination to end their season in glorious triumph. Only a few games now remain to be played. None of them bids fair to be more hotly contested than this evening's struggle.
